Costa Rican papers of April 8 contain letters from Gen. Morea to the Minister of War. He says Gen. Walker is shut up in the Plaza at Rivas, the Allies being entrenched within 400 yards of the lines. Walker and his men are subsisting on mule and dog flesh.

An American Slaver Taken—Dreadful Report.—Kingston, Ja., April.—An English man-of-war has carried into St. Anns an American schooner, from Africa for Cuba, with 378 slaves; 137 had died on the passage, and the remainder were in a starving condition. It was rumored that another slaver was off the coast, and a British steamer has started in pursuit.

Appointments.

Special Notice!

H. L. Hastings will hold a series of meetings at North Blandford, Mass., beginning Thursday Evening, May 7th, and continuing over Sunday. Let the Brethren in adjacent towns come up and help us. Pray for us—it is a new field of labor.

Bro. A. Ross appoints to preach in Boston, May 10.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Lowell, May 10. M. Grant.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Bridgeport, Ct., on Friday evening, May 22
Newark, N. J., Sunday, May 24
New York, Cor. of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, Sunday, May 31
During the week, at Newark and New York as may be demanded.
W. S. Campbell.

If the Lord will, and time continue, I will preach at Litchfield, (South Farms,) May 2
" " Sunday, May 3
Roxbury, Ct., " 10
Lanesville, " 12
Bridgeport, at the old Chapel, Sunday, " 17
C. Goodrich.

Missionary Tour Westward.

Buffalo, N. Y., Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings, May 5, 6, 7.
Seneca Falls, N. Y., Sunday, May 10.
Brewerton, N. Y., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, May 13, 14.
South Butler, N. Y., Sunday, May 17.
Edwin Burnham.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, May 24
Kennebunk, Me., Sunday, May 31
Salem, Mass., (for Bro. George Burnham's charge,) Sunday, June 7

Bro. T M Preble appoints to preach at West Boscawen, Pond school house, May 10th.

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach in Roxbury, where Bro. Haynes or Wyman may appoint, Sunday, May 10.
If these appointments interfere with others, brethren will inform me immediately by letter, directed to Manchester, N. H.
S. W. Bishop.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Friday Eve., May 1st
Roxbury, Monday Eve., " 4th
Boston, Tuesday Eve., " 5th
Lawrence, Wednesday, " 6th
Lowell, Thursday, " 7th River Point, R. I., " 8th
W. S. Campbell.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Church of Christ in Westford, Mass., the second Sunday in May, where the Brethren may appoint. Stow, May 17th, where the Brethren may appoint. Lee, N. H., May 24th, where Brother Dirgin may appoint.
B. P. Manning.

I will preach as follows:
Lawrence, Mass., May 13, 7 1-2 P. M.
Exeter, N. H., " 14, " "
Portsmouth, N. H., " 15, " "
Great Falls, Sunday, May 17th
Waterloo, " " 24th
S. W. Bishop.

Bro. Hemenway appoints to preach in
Thorndike, May 17th
Portsmouth, N. H., " 24th

Providence permitting, I will preach in
N. Dana, the first Sunday in May.
Brimfield, the second Sunday in "
Lynn, (Dye House Mill,) third Sunday in "
D. E. Morrison.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

A Smith 104, S Rudlong 114, S A Tanner 114, W T Eavens 113, J King 113, W S Deveraux 104, Z T Wood 107, M A Wilkins 86, C Dirk 114, M. Whitney 104, W Brown 108, C Cady 104, Laura A Rorabacher 110, H J Peck 106, Mrs. E Reed 104, John Tubbs 114, J Harlow 114, J P Babcock 128, Elvira S Fenn 114, N S Latimer 114, E R Southwick 114, P Hardy 87, W Bradbury 91, W Allen 111, D Bates 78, Mrs. E. Spencer 114, Sarah E Stevens 100, Seth Rogers 104, Geo. Whipple 102, B. McLain 114, J Perhams 114, D Ward 114, E Barnes 114, W Elmore 84,—$1 each.

B Williams 102, J Pulsifer 130, A A Webster 140, H. McCullock—$2 each.

Brn. in Albany $4; E Dexter $6; Lucy Carsley $1.30.

B Lord 101, C Fox 101, H Grinnel 101,—S Elliott,—50 cents each.

For Books.—M W Corliss $2.50; B Fifield 45 cents; N Hanson 33 cents.

For the Poor.—C C Bowker $1.

Books Sent.—N. Hanson, J. H. Stevens, B. Fifield.

Our subscribers in North Hermon, Me., and in other places, can pay the money to Bro. N. F. Nason, who will see it forwarded to the office.

To Correspondents.

B. Fifield—Having no bound tracts, we send the unbound.

M. Merrill—The money was credited to you in No. 6.

The P. O. address of Nathaniel Pease is Buchanan, Berrien Co., Mich.

Bro. Grant:—There was a letter in the Crisis last fall from some brother in the West, who could not preach in consequence of a palpitation of the heart. I have forgotten the place and name, or I should have written to him. The cure is Camphor Gum. Put some in a little bag, place it on the part affected, and confine it there until it all evaporates.
Seth Smith.
Sandy Hill, N. Y., April 24, 1757.

Bro. R. H. Clark's P. O. address is East Holden, Me.

Eld. S. W. Bishop's P. O. address is Warner, N. H.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State, and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

Church Debts By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A C Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

[☞ The above-named works can be obtained of H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.]

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 ct.

A Review: Giving the main ideas in Dr. Edward Beecher's "Conflict of Ages," and a reply to them. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word "Hell." Also, 200 texts quoted to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

OUR GOD SHALL COME!

Ps. 50: 3.

Our God will come,
And silence will not keep;
Awake and sing,
Ye saints who mourn and weep.
Our God will come;
His word proclaims him near,
And in the sky
His reign will soon appear.

Our God will come;
Go spread the sound abroad;
Let nations hear,
And wait their coming Lord.
Our God will come;
Ye saints, dry up your tears;
Lift up your heads,
Redemption now appears.

Our God will come;
O sinner now beware,
And for that day
With humble heart prepare.
Our God will come;
Now to the Savior flee,
Wash in his blood,
Which he has shed for thee.

Our God will come,
His enemies consume;
Sinner, prepare
To 'scape that awful doom.
Our God shall come;
The heavens and earth shall flee:
O sinner, haste!
While mercy waits for thee.

That day is near,
And soon the trump shall sound,
To wake the saints,
Who're in death's slumber bound.
Our God will come,
O let it quickly be;
Haste that bright day,
When we shall reign with Thee.

H. E. Felton.

For the Crisis.

THE EPITAPH.

When my last sun has 'lumed the west,
And evening gathers with its gloom,
I'd lean, my Savior, on thy breast,
While passing to the darksome tomb.

I ask not for a brighter hope,
My heart in that dark hour to cheer;
Than that my Lord will raise me up,
When in His glory He'll appear.

I ask no place among the great,
When I am laid beneath the sward;
But in some humble spot I'd wait,
Till I am wakened by my Lord.

I ask no monument to rear
Its sculptured form above my dust,
Nor flattering lines their tales to bear,
To place my name among the just.

But should some trav'ler chance that way,
And pause beside my humble stone,
And weeping, point beneath, and say—
"I knew him well—his work was done;

"He strove to walk the narrow path,
Hard in the steps his Savior trod,
Nor craved earth's smile, nor feared its wrath,
But sought alone to please his God;—

"He loved his race, and sought their good,
And to the cross the sinner led;
He clothed the poor, and gave them food,
And smoothed at last their dying bed;"—

This epitaph is dearer far
Than lines engraven deep in stone;
And brighter far it will appear,
When the great Judge ascends His Throne.

S. A. Porter.

East Boston, April 6, '57.

Extracts from Letters.

Eld. J. Merriam writes from Concord, N. H.:—"I hope ere long to be able to furnish a few short communications for the Crisis. My whole being would be engaged in it if I had sufficient health and sight.

My eyes are gradually becoming less painful, but are still exceedingly weak. I can neither read nor write, but if Providence opens the way for some one to write for me, you may hear from me ere long."

—:o:—

Bro. D. Wilson writes from East Shelburne, Mass.:—"I rejoice that God has a few chosen ones that are waiting for his Son from heaven. We hail with joy that day, when Jesus will come and take his waiting Bride. Let us see to it, that we have on the wedding garment, that spotless robe, white and clean, which is the righteousness of the saints. 'Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.' I expected before this to participate in this supper, with all the redeemed, in the kingdom of God; but all the jots and tittles must be fulfilled before the Lord comes. The saints must be ripened for glory, the wicked for destruction."

—:o:—

Bro. J. Wentworth writes from Tunbridge, Vt.:—"There are a few of God's elect in this part of His moral vineyard that are striving for the Kingdom. Glory to God, the time is not far distant when the saints will take the kingdom and possess forever and ever.

I thank God for the gift of his Son, by whom we can find remission of sins, and be made partakers of His grace, that we may be thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work.

I long for the time to come when "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall be taken away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, lo, this is our God we have waited for him and he will save us; this is the Lord we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in His salvation.'"

—:o:—

Bro. J. Gibson writes from Houghtonville:—"While surrounded with the unhallowed influences of the ungodly—while iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold, we have the comforting words of the blessed Jesus saying, 'but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.' How important it is then, that we struggle on a little longer, for I am confident that we are near the end of the gospel age—the end of the world."

—:o:—

Sr. C. Cole writes from Orange, N. H.:—"I live a lonely pilgrim here, and can find no help in Zion, only what I find in the spiritual communications I read in your excellent paper. I must say that it is the most devoted weekly paper that I ever read.

I praise the Lord that nothing unholy can enter that rest that remains for his people. I have been looking for that rest for a number of years, not through death, not through the grave, but at the coming of the Lord. I praise God for this precious hope set before us in the gospel.

'Praise him, all ye heavenly Host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.'"

—:o:—

Bro. M. Stuart writes from Chateaugay, N. Y.:—"I have read the Crisis with interest for some time past, and I can truly say, to me it is food in due season—it is just what the church needs in these last moments of time.

We have had a powerful revival of the work of God here, and it still continues. There have been some fifty hopeful conversions. We are strong in faith, and expect to be ready when Jesus comes, to walk with Him in white on the New Earth.

We should be glad to have some good brother, that can preach the whole truth, come this way. Such will find plenty of friends."

—:o:—

Sister R. G. C. writes:—"Holiness is much talked about, but little lived up to as God requires. He wants us to come out from the world. 'Be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing.'

Paul exhorted the saints to yield their members servants to righteousness, unto holiness. Let your 'fruit be unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.' Brethren and sisters, God requires us to deny ourselves. We must put on the Lord Jesus Christ in order to stand the temptations of these days. We must be pure in heart."

—:o:—

A Sister from Portland writes:—"I sigh for home. I am traveling to a city which has foundations, whose maker and builder is God. My longing heart beats high with anticipations of future prospects. A few more days of conflicts of this troubled life, and if faithful, we shall gain the victory through Him who conquered death and rose victorious over the grave. I long to be there with the pure and the blest and range the fair fields of our eternal home.

In the morning of the resurrection, when the light of eternal day shall break forth, then shall the prisoner so long bound by the cruel foe come forth clothed with immortality, to die no more. How sweet the thought, that in our Eden home the monster death will not enter.

While my ravished soul contemplates the future, and longs to enjoy the rest prepared for those that obey God and his word, the thought presents itself, can I face the storm of opposition from those I love so dearly, and breast the waves which so often threaten to overwhelm me? Yes, by the grace of God I will strive to gain an admittance into the new earth—our happy Eden home—the everlasting kingdom of the blessed Redeemer—the saints eternal home!"

For the Crisis.

Bro. Grant:—I admire Bro. B.'s remarks on "Short Articles," in the Crisis. I think if all that write long letters had to pay one dollar a column, they would be shorter. I think time is short; this life is short, and our prayers and sermons should be short. Our paper credit should be in advance. Amen.

N. F. Nason.

Choice Selections.

The Fashions—Follow the Fashions.

Why not? No matter how expensive, foolish, dangerous, ridiculous, soul-ruinous, follow the fashions—take the popular course! No matter whether the bonnet is trimmed with white, black, blue, red, or scarlet, turned up or turned down, on the back side of the head or on the front side, stuck on the forehead or the back of the neck, all right—it looks beautiful! No matter whether the dress be long or short, hooped or not hooped, Bloomer or not Bloomer, up to the knee or trailing in the mud and dirt, so be—it is in the fashion. If it is fashionable to wear tight shoes, pinching the feet and toes, wear them—corns or no corns, all the same. If it is fashionable to wear jewelry, wear it—on the breast, the arms, the fingers, in the ears, on the nose—load them down, Bible or no Bible, cost or no cost. If a dress or shawl cost fifty, a hundred or two hundred dollars more, instead of five or ten, on with them, bankruptcy or no bankruptcy—it's the fashion—we'd go it, sink or swim.

If high-crowned hats are in vogue, wear them—if low, low. If short brims, wear short brims—if long, long. If bob-tailed coats are the cut of the day, wear bob-tailed coats—if long, long. If stocks to choke the neck, and high collars become popular, buckle them on, tight as a drum-head, breath or no breath, bronchitis or no bronchitis, all the same. If the fashion comes round to wear long beards and moustaches, cover the face, chin, upper lip and lower lip, stop the mouth, look like a beast, a bear, a wolf, a goat, or an owl! All right, minister or no minister, church-members, deacons, class-leaders, all the same—it's the fashion.

If it is fashionable to write, puff and read novels, go to the theatre, the dance, and play the fiddle, follow the wake. "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined."

If it is fashionable to pay five, ten, twenty, or a hundred dollars for a ticket to hear Jenny Lind sing in a theatre or a church, to fill Barnum's pockets, hurrah for Jenny Lind, hurrah! On they go, ministers and people—it's the fashion, it's popular!

If it is fashionable to make holiday feasts, New Year's calls, load the tables and side-boards with wines, cordials, rich dainties, poisonous confectionaries, eat, drink, gormandize, play the glutton, the drunkard, and starve the poor, go ahead, it's the fashion—no matter, all right! "Like priest, like people." If it is fashionable to hold fancy fairs, tea-parties, soirees, oyster suppers, pic-nics, &c., to raise money to sustain the pastor, pay off church debts, cushion the pulpit, &c., have a jolly time of it, eat and drink to the full, return home before the morning dawns—no matter, let us do evil that good may come. Sometimes, also, sinners, men of the world, have balls, dancing parties, &c., for the benefit of the poor, the widows and the orphans, on the same principle—it's the fashion.

It is the fashion now to have high steeples, away up out of sight, that cost two, three, four, perhaps ten thousand dollars! It is the fashion, moreover, to have fashionably ornamented churches, costing one or two hundred thousand dollars, with fashionable choirs, organs, instrumental music, after the temple worship or popish worship—sing by proxy, pray by proxy, live by proxy. This is the fashion. Once it was customary to kneel in prayer before God or rise up before the King of kings, but now the easy sitting posture is the fashion. Once the house of God was open to the poor, but now the fashion is to sell the slips, rent the pews, knock them off under the auctioneer's hammer to the highest bidder, make God's house a house of merchandise. "Once, twice, three," "going, going, gone,"—two, three, five or ten thousand dollars for pew rents is quite an object these hard times, to pay the minister, the sexton, and church incidentals—no matter about seats for the poor. Christ, to be sure, remembered the poor, preached the gospel to them especially, but the times are changed. Ours is a progressive age. The rich man, with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, is told, "Set thou here in a good place;" to the poor, "Stand thou there, or sit under my foot-stool."

Churches once meek, humble, Christ-like, on which the candle of the Lord shone brightly, that looked upon the choir system, instrumental music in the house of God, building costly, ornamental churches, renting pew-seats under the hammer, sitting idly and indolently in prayer-time singing by proxy, &c., as little better than sacrilege or blasphemy, have gradually yielded the palm, fallen into the popular wake, said, "Give us a king also, like to the nations around us." All right! It is the fashion. Going to church now in silver slippers, with gold rings, gold studs, dangling watch chains, keys and seals, and itching ears, is the fashion.

No matter for the poor, the oppressed, the perishing; this is an age of progress, of steam, of telegraph. The Bible? Poh! What have we to do with the Bible? Luther, Wesley, Whitefield, Baxter, Bunyan, Doddridge—these were good men in their day, but we are in the advance. Our age is progressive, telegraphic. The old standard writers are now measureably obsolete, antiquated. Paul was a good man, no doubt. So was Wesley, Baxter, and many others at that period—but—but—but. Some parts of the Bible, of Wesley's writings, Baxter's, &c., will do—but—but—but.

"There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Prov. 14: 12.—Golden Rule.

Bro. Grant:—I have been requested to copy for the Crisis the following remarkable Dream, as it appeared in the "Midnight Cry," Jan. 25th, 1844. To many of your readers it will doubtless be new, and by others may be re-read with interest.

M. T.

A Warning Slighted.

The following article has been often published with the title, "A well authenticated Fact."

In the year 1814 the late Mr. and Mrs. Foster were acquainted with three sisters, residing in London, two of whom were serious, retiring women, and the third gay and volatile. They were all elderly, which rendered the gaiety of the third less becoming, and also inclined her the more easily to take offence at any remarks made upon it; she hated the piety of her sisters, and opposed it in many spiteful, petty ways, though they endeavored to render the differences of their opinions as little disagreeable as possible. One night, towards the close of the year 1814, she had been out at an assembly very late, and the next morning at breakfast was remarkably different from her usual manner. Instead of her usual incessant chatter about every person she had met, every thing they wore, and said, and did, she sat silent, sullen, and absorbed. The gloom upon her brow was a mixture of temper and distress, which seemed to indicate a fixed determination to pursue her own will, though it should lead her into trouble, rather than pursue the course she knew to be right, that would reduce her to submit to the control of another. As she ate nothing, one of the sisters asked her if she was unwell? "No." "What is the matter?" "Nothing." "Had nothing distressed her?" "She had no idea of people prying into what did not concern them."

The whole of the morning she spent in her own room, and at dinner the same scene as in the morning occurred. She ate little, never spoke but to answer uncivilly, and then with an appearance of depression and melancholy, that spread their influence very powerfully over the cheerfulness of her companions. She retired to rest late, and with the spirit of one who expects from sleep neither alleviation nor refreshment.

The next morning she again scarcely tasted breakfast, and seemed in the same distressed, uncomfortable state of mind as on the preceding day. Her sisters again renewed their inquiries. She said, "I am well, and nothing pains me." "Then you have something on your mind; why will you not tell us? Do we not love you? Have we not the same earthly interest as you, and can we seek any good but yours in our anxious wish to share your sorrow?" "Oh, you have superstitions enough of your own without mine being added; I shall not tell you what ails me, so you have no occasion to rack your curiosity. I dare say you will think it some spiritual triumph, but I laugh at such things. I am not quite old enough yet to be the victim of dreams and visions." "We do not believe in dreams and visions, Anna," was the reply. She answered harshly, "No, and I do not intend you shall." The sisters looked at each other, and remained silent.

The second day passed as the first. Anna was gloomy and moody, and her sisters, from pity and anxiety, were unhappy. The third morning she again entered on the day as one who loathed the light, who has no object in living, and to whom the lapse of time, in the prospect of futurity, brings neither comfort nor hope. As her sisters looked on her, one of them suddenly said, "Anna, what was your dream?" "Ha! what was it? You would give the world to know, but I shall not tell you. I thought you did not believe in dreams." "Neither do we, in general. We know them to be the offspring of a disordered stomach, confused images, and fancies, when reason is dormant, and the memory of them passes away as soon as we engage in our daily avocations; yet there is no doubt some dreams are no more sent in vain than any other affliction or warning. There is a verse in scripture which mentions God as speaking 'in the vision of the night when deep sleep falleth upon man.'" She laughed again. "You have a verse for every thing that suits you, but I do not choose to be warned in such a manner, and there is no doubt I shall get it out of my head in a day or two." "Anna, we do beseech you to tell us. If you really have a dream from heaven, you surely would not wish to forget it; and if not, we will help you laugh it off." She answered, "well, if I must tell you, I must; no doubt it was very extraordinary and very frightful; I should have thought it the effects of the ball, but that I never saw anything anywhere the least like it.

"I thought I was in the wide street of a great city. Many people were walking there beside myself, but there was something in the air which immediately struck me. They seemed thoughtful and cheerful, neither occupied with business nor with pleasure, but having about them such a dignity of repose, such high and settled purpose, such grace and such purity as never was stamped on mortal brow. The light of the city was also strange. It was not the sun, for there was nothing to dazzle. It was not the moon, for all was clear as day. It seemed an atmosphere of light, calm, lovely and changeless. The buildings seemed all palaces, but not like palaces of earth. The pavements were all alike of gold, bright and shining, as clear as glass. The large and glittering windows seemed like divided rainbows, and were made to transmit none but the rays of gladness. It was indeed a place to which Hope may bend, and wherein Charity might dwell. I could not help exclaiming, as I passed along, 'truly, these are the habitations of righteousness and truth.' All was beauty, bright and perfect. I could not tell what was wanting to make me wish for an eternity in such a place; and yet its very purity oppressed me. I saw nothing congenial, though looks of kindness met me in every face of that happy throng. I felt nothing responsive. I returned in silence their friendly greeting, and walked on alone, oppressed and sad. I saw that all went one way, and I followed, wondering the reason. At length I saw them approach a building, much larger and finer than all the rest. I saw them ascend its massive steps, and enter beneath its ample porch, but I felt no desire to go with them, further than to the foot of the steps. I approached from curiosity. I saw persons enter who were dressed in every variety of costume of the nations, but they disappeared in the porch, then crossed the Hall in white. O, that I could describe that Hall to you. It was not marble—it was not crystal—it was not gold, but light, pure light, consolidated into form. It was the moon, without its coolness, it was the sun, without its dazzling ray; and within was the staircase mounting upwards, all of light; and I saw it touched by the snowy feet and white and spotless garments of those who ascended. It was indeed passing fair; but it made me shudder, and I turned away. As I turned, I saw one on the lowest step looking at me with an interest so intense, and a manner so anxious, that I stopped to hear what he had to say. He asked me in a voice like liquid music, 'why do you turn away? Is there peace elsewhere? Is there pleasure in the works of darkness?' I stood in silence. He pressed me to enter, but I neither answered nor moved. Suddenly he disappeared, and another took his place with the same look and manner. I wished to avoid him, but I seemed riveted to the spot. 'Art thou come so far,' he said, 'and wilt thou lose thy labor? put off thine own garments, and take the white livery here.' He continued to press me till I got weary and angry, and said, 'I will not enter; I do not like your livery, and I am oppressed by your whiteness.' He sighed, and was gone. Many passed by me with looks of mingled kindness and pity, and pressed me to follow on with them, and offered me a hand up the stairs which led to their mysterious change, but I rejected them, and stood melancholy and distressed. At length, one bright young messenger came up to me and entreated me to enter, with a voice and manner that I could not resist. 'Do not turn away,' he said, 'where canst thou go? Do not linger, for why shouldest thou weary thyself for nought? Enter now and taste of happiness. Do not all tribes and colors enter into the Hall? Are they not clothed, and washed, and comforted?' He gave me his hand, and I entered along with him. Here I was sprinkled with pure water, and a garment of pure white was put upon me, and I know not how, but I mounted the white staircase with my happy guide. Oh, what a light burst upon me, when I reached its summit! Mortal words cannot describe it, nor mortal fancy conceive it. Where are the living sapphires? Where are the glittering stars that are like the bright radiance in which I stood? Where are the forms, or the looks of love that breathed in the innumerable company before me? I sank down overpowered and wretched. I crept into a corner and tried to hide myself, for I felt that I had nothing in unison with the blessed creatures of such a place. They were moving to the harmony of sounds that never fell upon mortal ear. My guide joined in raptures, and I was left alone. I saw the tall forms, all fair and brilliant, in their ineffable felicity, their songs and looks of gratitude forming the circumstances and differences of each. At length I saw one taller than the rest, one every way more fair, more awful—surpassing thought—and to Him every eye was turned, and in His face every face was brightened. The songs and the praises were to His honor, and all seemed to drink from Him their life and joy. As I gazed in speechless and trembling amazement, one who saw me, left the company, and came where I stood. 'Why,' he asked, 'art thou silent? Come quickly and unite in the praises.' I felt a sullen anger in my heart, and I answered with sharpness, 'I will not join in your song, for I know not the strain.' He sighed, and with a look of surprising, humiliating pity, returned to his place. About a minute after another came, and addressed me as he had done; and, with the same temper, I answered him in the same words. He seemed as if he could have resigned his own dazzling glory to have changed me. If Heaven knows anguish, he seemed to feel it; but he left me and returned. What could it be that put such temper into my heart? At length the Lord of the glorious company of the living forms of light and beauty saw me, and came where I stood. I felt my blood curdle, and the flesh upon me tremble, and my heart grew hardened; my voice was bold. He spake, and deep-toned music seemed to drop from his lips. 'Why sittest thou so still, when all around thee are glad? Come, join in the song, for I have triumphed! Come, join in the song, for now my people reign.' Love ineffable, unutterable, beamed upon me as though it would have melted a heart of stone, but I melted not. I gazed an instant, and then said, 'I will not join the song, for I know not the strain.' Creation would have fled at the change in His countenance! His glance was lightning and his voice was thunder. He said, 'then what dost thou here?' The floor beneath me opened—the earth quaked, and I sunk into tormenting flame. With the fright I awoke."

There was silence for a time, for the sisters were struck with awe. They considered the dream—the impressions it had made. "Anna," said they, "we cannot wish you to forget this dream; we surely believe it is from God. Your description of the holy city is much the same as we find in the Bible. 'The city hath no need of the sun, nor of the moon to lighten it, for the temple of God is there, and the Lamb is the light thereof.' All who enter there must put off their garments, that is their own righteousness, and must be clothed with linen, clean and white, even in the righteousness of the saints, and 'their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord.' Those that walk in the heavenly temple are 'those that have come out of great tribulation, and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.' Wisdom daily waits on the steps to call the sons of men into that temple, and the people of God try to persuade their followers to tread in their steps. O, dear sister, you know something of the way; do listen to the faithful warning. Join us, and walk in the path that leads to Heaven."

Anna's brow was darkened, and she answered, "I will do as I please; I do not intend you to preach to me." She continued in this state till the end of the week, and was found in her room, a corpse! No one knew the cause of her death. She died without disease, and without change.

—Christian Intelligencer.

Benevolence.

At a missionary meeting among the negroes in the West Indies, it is related, these resolutions were adopted:—

1. We will all give something.
2. We will each give according to our ability.
3. We will give willingly.

At the close of the meeting, a leading negro took his seat at the table, with pen and ink, to put down what each came to contribute. Many advanced to the table and handed in their contributions, some more and some less. Among the contributors was an old negro who was very rich, almost as rich as the rest united. He threw down a small silver coin.

"Take dat back again," said the chairman of the meeting. "Dat may be 'cordin' to de fust resolution, but not 'cordin' to de second."

The rich old man accordingly took it up, and hobbled back to his seat much enraged. One after another came forward, and all giving more than himself, he was ashamed, and again threw a piece of money on the table, saying:—

"Dar, take dat!"

It was a valuable piece of gold, but it was given so ill-temperedly, that the chairman answered:—

"No, sir, dat won't do! Dat may be 'cordin' to the fust and second resolutions, but not 'cordin' to de third."

He was obliged to take it up again. Still angry with himself, he sat a long time, until nearly all were gone, and then advanced to the table, and with a smile on his countenance, laid a large sum of money on the table.

"Dar, now, dat berry well," said the presiding negro, "dat will do; dat am 'cordin' to all de resolutions."

Reader, this simple narrative contains in a nut-shell the whole formula of benevolence. The first duty is to give—the second is to give according to your ability—and the third, which is equal to all the rest, is to give willingly.

The Jews at Jerusalem.—The late Samson Sampson, Esq., a Jew long resident in New York, bequeathed the sum of $50,000, the interest of which is to be applied to ameliorate the condition of the Jews at Jerusalem, "by promoting among them education, arts, and by teaching them mechanical and agricultural vocations."

There are twenty-six orphan asylums in the State of New York, in which nearly nine thousand little ones are fed, clothed and educated.

Eld. S. S. Brewer

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adams's Store. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1857. WHOLE NO. 89. VOL. V. NO. 11.

The World's Crisis.

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH HENRY TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

MY HOME.

It was on yonder mountain side,
Where wild flowers ever bloomed;
And they were plucked with childish pride,
As o'er the hills I roamed.
It was in nature's wild retreat,
Where groves in beauty stood,
And feathered songsters sang so sweet
Their anthems to our God.

My home, it is 'tween towering hills,
Upon the river's bank;
And pleasant flow the murmuring rills,
Whilst I the Giver thank
For such a dear and sunny spot,
To call my pilgrim home;—
O blessed is my happy lot,
My Lord is soon to come!

And then, I pray my home may be
Where flows the stream of life;
Permitted then his face to see,
Where ends the mortal strife;
Where bud and bloom immortal flowers,
Where mountains stand sublime,
All decked with Eden's lovely bowers,—
This glorious home be mine.

A. M. Stark.

Green River, Vt.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. II.

It will be well to notice, before we proceed any further in this investigation, that there may be no doubt respecting the priority of the predictions to the birth of Christ, because it is well known to every person, who is at all conversant in these matters, that the Old Testament was translated out of Hebrew into the Greek language, and dispersed over the world, many years before Christ was born, and that the latest of the predictions was upwards of three centuries before the birth of the Redeemer.

In my last I showed that he (Christ) should profess to be the Savior of mankind; that he should be described as one who was to come; be born under the fourth monarchy; while the second temple was yet standing; before the dominion of the Jews was entirely taken away; in a time of profound and universal peace; when there was a general expectation of some extraordinary person; that he should have existed with God before the foundations of the world were laid; been the companion of the Almighty; sprung from the Deity by an ineffable generation. And again,

The Messiah was not to be born according to the ordinary course of nature, but to descend from a pure Virgin,—Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary. Compare Gen. 3: 15, Isa. 7: 14, and Jer. 31: 22, with Matt. 1: 22, 23.

The Messiah was to be the son of Abraham, the father of the faithful, and the friend of God,—Jesus Christ was, and sprung from that illustrious Patriarch. Compare Gen. 21: 1–12, with Matt. 1: 1–16.

Messiah was to be the son of Isaac, and not of Ishmael,—Jesus Christ sprung from Isaac, and not from Ishmael. Compare Gen. 17: 16–21, with Matt. 1: 1–16.

Messiah was to be the son of Jacob, and not of Esau,—Jesus Christ did descend from Jacob, and not from his brother Esau. Compare Gen. 25: 24–34, Gen. 27: 27–29, Gen. 28: 13, 14, with Matt. 1: 1–16.

Jacob had twelve sons; Messiah was not to spring from any other of the twelve, but from Judah,—Jesus Christ claimed Judah as his ancestor in a direct line. Compare Gen. 49: 8–12, with Matt. 1: 1–16.

Messiah was to spring from Jesse, the father of David, king of Israel,—Jesus Christ was his descendant. Compare Isa. 11: 1, with Matt. 1: 1–16.

Messiah was to be born in a poor and mean condition, when the family should be reduced to a very low estate,—Jesus Christ, both on his father's and mother's side, was of very low and mean appearance, though descended from such illustrious ancestors. Compare Isa. 53: 2, Luke 1: 48, 52, Luke 2: 7, 24.

Messiah was to have a messenger go before him, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord,—Christ had a messenger going before him, who fully bare witness to his pretensions. Compare Mal. 3: 1, with John 1: 19–34, and John 3: 26–36.

The forerunner of Messiah was either to be Elijah himself, or one in the spirit of Elijah,—John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ, was altogether in the spirit of that great Prophet. Compare Mal. 4: 5, 6, with Mark 1: 1–8.

The forerunner of Messiah was to preach in the wilderness, and to prepare the minds of the people for his coming,—John the Baptist did preach in the wilderness of Judea, and professed himself to be sent to prepare the Jews for the advent of Christ. Compare Isa. 40: 3–5, with Matt. 3: 1–6.

The forerunner of Messiah was to be considerably successful in his office,—John the Baptist was treated with great respect by his countrymen, and made large numbers of disciples. Compare Isa. 49: 3–5, with Luke 3: 7–21.

Messiah was not to be born at Jerusalem, the Capital of his kingdom, but at Bethlehem, an obscure country village,—Jesus Christ was born at Bethlehem, by a very peculiar providence. Compare Micah 5: 2, with Matt. 2: 1, 2.

Messiah was to go down into Egypt, and to be called out from thence,—Jesus Christ went down into Egypt, soon after his birth, and was called out from thence by an angel of the Lord. Compare Hosea 11; 1, with Matt. 2: 13–23.

Messiah was to be a preacher to his countrymen in the great congregation,—Jesus Christ was indefatigable in his public ministrations, both in the temple, and in all other places where the people were disposed to hear him. Compare Ps. 40: 9, 10, with the four Gospels.

The tribes of Zebulon and Naphtali were first to be greatly distressed, and afterwards highly honored and exalted, by the appearance of Messiah among them. These tribes principally suffered in the first Assyrian invasion under Tiglath Pileser, and were afterwards among the first that enjoyed the blessing of Christ's preaching the gospel, and exhibiting his miraculous works among them. Compare Isa. 9: 1–4, 2 Kings 15: 29, 1 Chron. 5: 26, and Matt. 4: 12–16.

Messiah was to converse and preach the gospel in the regions of Galilee,—Jesus Christ lived and conversed so long in that obscure and despicable part of the land of Israel, that he was, by way of contempt, denominated the Galilean. Compare Isa. 9: 1, 2, with Matt. 2: 22, 23, and Matt. 4: 23, 25.

Messiah was to have a temple to which he should come, when he made his appearance in human flesh,—Jesus Christ, as the Son of God, claimed the temple of Jerusalem as his own, in a sense which no mere mortal could presume. Compare Mal. 3: 1, with Luke 2: 46–49, and Matt. 21: 12, 13.

Messiah was to be the servant of God, whose is the Branch,—Jesus Christ was emphatically the servant of God, and the Day-Spring from on high. Compare Isa. 4: 2; 11: 1; Jer. 23: 5; Zech. 3: 8; 6: 11; Isa. 42: 1; Matt. 12: 18, and Luke 1: 78. I would observe here, that the word translated "Branch," also signifies Day-Spring.

Messiah is spoken of by the ancient Prophets under the characters of an Angel, a Messenger, a Redeemer, an Interpreter, One of a thousand, a Plant of renown, a Captain, the Beloved of God, the true David; Jesus Christ was all these, and whatever else was peculiar to that august Being, as will more fully appear from the following instances: Compare Gen. 48: 16; 32: 24–30; Hosea 12: 3, 4; Exod. 23: 20–23;* Mal. 3: 1; Job 19: 25; 33: 23; Ezek. 34: 23, 24, 29; Josh. 5: 13, 14; Isa. 42: 1; Rev. 1: 1; Matt. 3: 17; Heb. 11: 10.

(To be continued.)

* I may differ with most of my brethren in the application of these texts, but it is the only reasonable conclusion I can come at.

For the Crisis.

Whom Will Christ Reign Over?

Will Christ come to reign over the saints? So think some of our friends—so I think not. The Bible does not teach me so. On the contrary, it teaches that the saints will reign with Christ. Rev. 5: 10;—"And has made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." 2 Tim. 2: 12;—"If we suffer, we shall also reign with him." Rev. 20: 6;—"But they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. 1: 6;—"And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father."

Christ was raised up to reign over the "house of Jacob," and "over the Gentiles." But there is not, to my knowledge, one single text in all the Bible that teaches that Christ will, in the world to come, reign over saints immortal.

Anciently, God promised the people of Israel, that if they would fulfill certain conditions, He would constitute them "a kingdom of priests." The conditions were, at length, broken. When the Lord was on earth He told them, that "the kingdom" should be taken from them, "and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." What nation is this? Let Peter answer. 1 Pet. 2: 9;—"But ye are a chosen generation, a ROYAL priesthood, an holy nation." The literal of "royal priesthood" is, kingly priesthood. So then, the nation of saints is a nation of king-priests. They have the right of being "a kingdom of priests;" and shall reign with Christ "over the house of Jacob," and "over the nations" of the Gentiles, even as He has received of His Father.

Error will do us no good: search and look!

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Questions.

1. Where is there one command of God to keep holy the seventh-day Sabbath prior to the time of Moses?

2. Where is there one command of God to any of the Gentile nations, either in this or any preceding dispensation, to observe the seventh-day Sabbath?

3. Where is there one command of God to any believer in Christ, to observe the seventh-day Sabbath subsequent to the crucifixion of the Son of God?

4. Where is there one text in the Bible that tells us that there was more holiness, spirituality, or sanctity attached to the seventh-day Sabbath, than there was to the sacrificial offerings? Num. 18; 8, 9.

5. Where is there one text in the Old or New Testament, stating that the ten commandments ALONE constitute God's moral, holy, or spiritual law?

6. Where does the Holy Ghost, which is to guide the church into all truth, command any one to keep the seventh-day Sabbath? Pet. 3: 15.

So anxious am I for truth upon these questions, if I have not got it, that I will award to any one a premium of $10, on condition that they will annex a plain "thus saith the Lord," to the affirmative of the above questions. Prov. 23: 23.

Alva N. Seymour.

For the Crisis.

LO! HE COMETH!

Soon the trumpet will sound, and the dead will arise
To hail their Redeemer descending the skies,
And we who are waiting shall join the glad song,
And sing hallelujah! to God and the Lamb.
O bright will the morning then dawn on us here,
When Jesus shall come—to his people appear,—
When he shall then reign o'er the world's wild domain,
And the earth be restored to its Eden again.
Hallelujah! Hosanna! to Jesus we'll sing,
While heaven's high arches with music shall ring;
Salvation! salvation! this song shall obtain;
Hallelujah! Hosanna! to God and the Lamb!

W. S.

For the Crisis.

The Three Angels in the Midst of Heaven.—Rev. 14: 6–12.

BY J. F. SWEET.

No. IV.

(Continued from Crisis Vol. 3, Nos. 34, 35, 36.)

Having shown in the three previous numbers,

1st, that the sealing message began with the Gospel in the days of the Apostles;

2nd, the 144,000 to be the believers from every nation, kindred, tongue, &c.;

3d, the fall of Babylon, the Apostasy of the Catholic Church, we will now consider an objection to these views. It is said, the first angel having the everlasting Gospel announces the hour of judgment has come; therefore he must be located in chronology in the last generation. This view has the appearance of plausibility, to say the least. We have heretofore taken for granted that the hour of judgment has reference to the time when God will judge the secrets of all men by Jesus Christ; but we now see that this view is not correct, for these reasons; viz., an angel or angels in the midst of heaven must be after the sixth and before the thirteenth century; an angel ascending from the east must be before the year 600; an angel coming down from heaven (chap. 20 exc.) always represents a class of messengers this side of the thirteenth century. As proof of this we call attention to the following Facts.

1. Paul tells us, that the saints were sealed by believing the gospel. Eph. 1: 12, 13; 4: 30. They could not have been sealed before the sealing angel ascended from the east; hence, as before shown, the angel ascending must represent those that first preached the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; and those that believed were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise.

2. The first we hear of an angel in the midst of heaven is after, or subsequent to the sounding of the fourth trumpet, when the sun, moon, and stars were smitten, so that the third part of them were darkened. This refers to what Gibbon calls the ruin of Arianism. A war, or controversy had continued from the time of Arius A. D. 315, (I write from memory,) up to the year A. D. 600; and was then terminated by the conversion of the Arian Lombards of Italy. The Nicene faith had triumphed within this period of time; the Vandals, Ostrogoths, and Alemani, Arian kingdoms, had been plucked up by Clovis, the King of the Franks, who was the eldest son of the self-styled Orthodox church. He said in an assembly of the chief men of his nation, "it grieves me to see the Arians possess the fairest portions of Gaul; let us march against them, and take and divide their fertile provinces."

Previous to the commencement of the seventh century, the Burgundians, Vandals, Ostrogoths, Alemans, Spaniards and Lombards, were either converted or subdued; and the Trinitarian faith triumphed, and has continued triumphant through the dark ages, to the present day. The sun, (Gospel) the moon, (Old Testament) the stars, (Epistles of the Apostles) have been smitten, and the third part of them were darkened; and in this darkness the doctrine of the Triune God has been in the ascendancy. After this smiting was completed, by the sounding of the fourth trumpet, an angel is seen "flying through the midst of heaven, saying, with a loud voice, wo, wo, wo to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!" Here we find the angel in the midst of heaven subsequent to the fourth, and previous to the fifth trumpet. The fifth trumpet introduces the Saracen invasion of the Roman Empire in the East; hence the chronology of the fourth and fifth trumpets determined the chronology of the angel in the midst of heaven. In perfect keeping with this arrangement, we find the angel of chap. 10, coming down from heaven after the sounding of the fifth and sixth trumpets, who lightens the earth with his glory; and referring to the seventh angel, tells us, in the days of his voice, "the mystery of God should be finished."

Here is symbolized a class of messengers living near the end of time, between the sixth and seventh trumpets; and these messengers are represented by an angel descending. Now we have positive proof that the messengers of our day are represented by an angel coming down or descending from heaven; while the messenger that announces the three woes is seen in the midst of heaven.

The sixth trumpet sounded nearly 400 years; the fifth, 150 years, commencing about A. D. 630; the sixth commencing about A. D. 1450, leaving nearly 700 years to intervene between the two, which proves the angel in the midst of heaven to have been some 1250 years or more before the end of time. Hence, the angel with the everlasting gospel, saying, the hour of his judgment is come, must be somewhere between the sixth and the thirteenth centuries. As the angel of the 10th chapter was seen subsequent to the sounding of the sixth trumpet, so the angel of the 18th chapter was seen coming down or descending, while John was in the wilderness, and after five of the seven heads had fallen.

In the 17th chapter we have an account of the woman seated on the seven-headed, scarlet colored beast; and on her forehead a name written, "Babylon the Great," &c. The angel tells John the mystery of the woman and the beast that carrieth her. As for the beast, he says it "was, and is not." As the beast was a symbol, we inquire what it symbolized? Ans. A kingdom or government. As the beast had seven heads, the kingdom which it represents will be found to have seven distinct heads, or governors; and these are consecutive,—five of them are in the past, and one now is, making six, when John sees the woman with her name in her forehead, her cup in her hand, and she was drunken with the blood of the saints. While John is beholding this representative of the apostate church, an angel is seen descending from heaven, and the earth is "lightened with his glory." And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, "Babylon (the woman that was on the beast,) the great is fallen, is fallen." He then hears a voice from heaven saying, "Come out of her, my people!"

The chronology of the sixth head of this beast will determine the chronology of the angel that was seen descending. It must certainly be this side of A. D. 800, for the beast could not have had but one head up to that time. It must be previous to 1798–1800, for then the beast came out of the abyss and made war on the witnesses; and when he came out he was the eighth king. But again, it must be before 1793, for then was completed the work which marked the end of the 1260 days; it must be within those days, for the woman was to be nourished and fed by the nations for that length of time, in the wilderness; and as John says she was boasting, "I sit a queen, and am no widow," it follows, her time of nourishment in the wilderness had not yet ended. In short, John was carried by the angel into the wilderness to see her, and there she was seen sitting on the sixth head, viz., the Spanish branch of the house of Hapsburg, the seventh head being the Austrian branch of the same house. Next to Austria is France, which makes the eighth and goes to perdition. The eighth is the beast himself, that was in the days of Charlemagne, when he revived the western Roman Empire. The beast "is not," while the western empire is Germanic, or under the dominion of the Saxon, Franconian, Suabian, and Hapsburg houses; but it "is," when the emperor of France once more obtains the supremacy. France, then, is the eighth and is of the seven; viz., the the second in order, for Charlemagne succeeded the Greek, which is the first head French second, Saxon third, Franconia fourth, Suabia fifth, Hapsburg sixth, Charles the V., emperor of Germany and king of Spain. And it was in the days of this emperor that the woman sat upon the sixth head, and the Reformers raised the cry, "Babylon is fallen!" and proved her to be the Apocalyptic harlot. They exposed her corruptions, and the earth was lightened by the teachings of Luther, Melancthon, and others of the Reformers of the sixteenth century. Luther was excommunicated from the church, or Babylon, and after that we have the cry, "come out of her, my people!" This leads us to consider the angel of Chapter 20, coming down from heaven.

The question will naturally arise, where shall we locate the angel of Chapter 20, as he was seen coming down from heaven? We answer; this coming down must be in the sense of falling from an exalted position; and this will be seen to be correct when we consider the fact, that the angels of Chapter 10 and 18 were invested with great power, and the earth was lightened with their glory. It is manifest that their coming down could be in no other sense than that which we have applied to them; they were not fallen, they were not apostates, and yet they were creatures of earth, preachers of the Gospel. If the angel of the 20th Chapter had been clothed with a cloud, a rainbow about his head, or had he lightened the earth with his glory, we should then conclude he was an angel of light, notwithstanding he is said to be coming down or descending. But when we contrast this angel with the other two that preceded him, we are inevitably led to the conclusion that he is an angel who has forsaken his high and holy calling, and hence he is seen by John in vision coming down from heaven.

Again, this angel was seen coming down "a thousand years" and "a little season" before the lake of fire which is the everlasting fire into which the Devil and his angels will be cast, with those goats at Christ's left hand, when he comes to be glorified in his saints. As he comes down more than one thousand years previous to the end of this world, it will carry us back to the time when the three angels were in the midst of heaven, viz., the ninth century. We find at that time the angel of the Thyatira church seated on the second head of the scarlet beast, "or image to the Leopard beast," which is the Western Empire. Pope Stephen II. received as a donation from Pepin, the French king, the Exarchate of Ravenna, in 756. This, with the Duchy of Rome, constitutes the government symbolized by the two-horned beast. This two-horned beast proposes to the men that dwell on the earth (Western Empire,) to make an image to the Leopard beast, that had been wounded to death by the Saracen invasion, which event was the first Wo under the sounding of the fifth trumpet. In the year 800, Charlemagne was crowned emperor of the Romans by the pope; this pope was the angel that bound the Dragon, and gave the Western Empire to the French King.

The fact that the second head of the Dragon was a Frenchman, shows the first head had lost its supremacy, and hence, the binding of the Dragon's first head. In 912, the Carlovingian Dynasty fell; and in 962 Otho, the Saxon emperor, constitutes the third head of the Dragon. Now the first head of the Dragon has been bound 162 years. The scarlet beast, or "image," goes into the pit, and continues while the Saxon (3d.) Franconian (4th.)

Suabian (5th,) and Hapsburg, Spanish branch (6th,) Austrian (7th,) all German heads, exercise their supremacy in the Roman Empire; after them comes up the second head of the Dragon out of the bottomless pit, viz., the French empire, in 1800, Napoleon at its head; and he is the eighth and the second of the seven; and France to-day is the representative of the Dragon that has been bound a thousand years, and is now deceiving the nations preparatory to the great battle when the Lord comes and takes the beast (Austria) and false prophet alive, and casts them into the lake of fire. The false prophet is the Papacy that works miracles before the beast, as did the Papacy in the ninth century, when at the head of the government symbolized by the two-horned beast. The Dragon, Devil, Satan and Serpent, will be cast into the same lake of fire, "where the beast and false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." (That is, to the end of this age, or Cosmos. Forever and ever is limited by day and night.)

But an objection will arise here. It is said the angel of Chapter 20 is our Lord Jesus Christ, and the Devil, Dragon, Serpent, or Satan, that is bound, is the personal Devil, which he will bind when he comes, and shut up a thousand years between the two resurrections; and then he will be loosed, and go out to deceive the nations after the second resurrection. As to this angel being Christ we remark, when he (Christ) comes, he comes in all the glory of his Father, and the holy angels with him. Now it is not admissible, for one moment, that earthly creatures should be attended with such glory as the Advent messengers are represented with, by the angel of Chapter 10, and the Reformers of the sixteenth century, by the angel of Chapter 18; and when our Lord is introduced in vision, that he should be symbolized by an angel unattended, either with glory, cloud, or rainbow. Our Lord is introduced in this book as the Lamb, Lion, King of Kings, Lord of Lords, Prince of the Kings of the earth, &c.; but he is never symbolized by an angel; angels are always symbols or messengers of earth. Again our Lord is seen by John coming with the armies of heaven upon white horses; and he is so described that there can be no mistake as to his character.

Now where is the Dragon, we ask, if the Devil, of Chapter 20, is the personal Devil; there was a Dragon on the earth when the sixth vial was poured out, a symbol of government, out of whose mouth went one of the frog spirits, whose work was to gather the nations to the battle of the great day of God Almighty. The Dragon, beast, and false prophet issued out of their mouths three frog spirits. They accomplished their work of deceiving the nations; the Kings of the earth and their armies were gathered together, and Christ comes and takes two of them, and they are cast into the lake of fire. Now we want to find that old Dragon, and see if he goes into the same lake of fire with his associates. If we do not find him in Chapter 20, then we have no account of his end; he must have escaped the judgment. If he was shut up in the pit one thousand years, then it was not the personal Devil, for the Dragon of this book had seven heads and ten horns, and we are told that these horns are seven kings, and these heads are seven kings, which reign in consecutive order. The scarlet beast having these appendages, same as the Dragon, was seen while the sixth of these seven heads was in the ascendancy; and at that time the beast was in the pit.

We learn this from the fact, that the angel tells John, "the beast that thou sawest" "was, and is not, and yet is.' Query. When? Ans. After one more head, or king has come and continued a short space, then the beast, himself shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and he is the eighth king, and goeth to perdition. Now we have, the fact plainly stated, that the eighth king is subsequent to the seventh, and previous to the day of perdition. The state, or place symbolized by the bottomless pit is proved also to be previous to the reign of the seventh or eighth king; consequently, the sixth and seventh heads of the Dragon are proved to be in the bottomless pit before the day of judgment, or, in other words, the Dragon is in the pit while these heads rule. We then inquire as to the heads preceding the sixth. We run back in the history of the Roman Empire, from the time that France came out of the pit, when Napoleon declared in the name of the French nation, "We are the successors of Charlemagne; the inheritors of Cæsar's power,"—and we find Austria (7th,) Spain (6th,) of the house of Hapsburg; Suabian (5th,) Franconia (4th,) Saxon (3,) all German houses as heads of the Dragon.

(To be continued.)

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MAY 13, 1856.

Thief on the Cross.

A Bro. wishes to know how Lk. 23 : 43, can be harmonized with the belief that the whole man is unconscious between death and the resurrection.

In answer we would say, we find no difficulty in harmonizing this passage with our views of the state of the dead. In considering this subject, there are several points that demand attention.

1. The question of the thief in ver. 42,—"Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Observe, the thief does not carry any idea that he thought of going with the Savior to a kingdom at death, but wishes to be remembered when the Lord comes into his kingdom. Where will the Savior's kingdom be located? After the seventh angel sounded, John heard "great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." Rev. 11; 15. This event is yet future, therefore the thief cannot be in the kingdom, yet, for the reason, that our Savior has not yet come to take possession of it. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5 : 5. When the meek shall inherit the earth, then Christ will have come into his kingdom, and the thief may then have his petition answered. The new earth, Christ's kingdom, and Paradise are evidently used in the Bible to represent the same thing; and we have yet to learn that the saints of the Lord will have a reward anywhere else than on this earth, after the curse is removed; consequently, the thief is not now with Christ in his kingdom.

2. The Savior's answer.—"And Jesus said unto him, verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Ver. 43.

a. We will notice first, the place where they are to meet—in paradise. Where is paradise? Some tell us, it is a concealed place in the earth, where souls go at death; that the good in that condition are happier than when here on the earth; that the wicked are more miserable, but the souls of both classes must wait for the resurrection of their bodies before they can enter upon their eternal state. This may do for heathen philosophy, but we do not see how the Bible student can adopt such an idea and adhere to the scriptures! We all believe that Adam was in paradise before he disobeyed his Creator, but we are as well agreed that no such beautiful garden is in the land of Eden at the present time; still we do find a promise to the faithful christian, that he shall yet partake of the fruits of paradise; or in other words be restored to the glorious state of the first happy pair, before sin entered. Jesus says in his last Revelation,—"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God." This scripture plainly shows that the "tree of life" will again bear fruit in paradise, which we cannot think is some deep cavern, or subterranean place, but the new earth which the meek shall inherit. We think this point is made plain in the Revelation to St. John. In the 21st chap., our Savior gives us an account of "a new heaven and a new earth," and of the holy city, the New Jerusalem, that is to be upon it; and in chap. 22 : 2, he says,—"in the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month."

We have now found that the tree of life is in Paradise, and at the same time, in the new earth, which is the kingdom of Christ, where the thief wished to be received when our Savior comes; and hence it follows again, that the thief is not now in paradise, because it is not yet prepared.

b. The punctuation of this verse demands attention. It should be borne in mind, that our system of punctuation was introduced by "Manutius, a learned printer, who lived at Venice in the 15th and 16th centuries," and that the scriptures were written originally without any pauses, hence any one has a right to punctuate the Bible as the sense may demand. We will instance some examples where the meaning is changed by the use of the comma. "But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God." Heb. 10 : 12. In many Bibles the comma is put after sins, instead of forever, which would make the passage declare that Christ had "forever sat down," and therefore will never rise up again, to return to this world to set up his kingdom; but such a view would be a palpable contradiction of the Bible; but if the comma is placed after forever, then the verse teaches that he is never to offer himself as a sacrifice again, but that this one is sufficient, which is the true meaning.

Again, in Matt. 19 : 28, is a passage where the power of the comma is shown.—"And Jesus said unto them, verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." We have frequently seen the comma placed after regeneration, instead of me; and when this is done, the passage teaches that Christ was regenerated, (which many understand to mean converted,) and that if we will follow him in regeneration, then we may all sit on twelve thrones, and judge the twelve tribes of Israel; but if we put the comma after me, then the verse teaches that the twelve apostles, who had forsaken all and followed Christ, shall, in the regeneration, or when they rise from the dead, sit with him in the throne of his glory, which gives the true idea.

Now we will return to our text,—Lk. 23 : 43. If we put the comma after to-day, then to-day qualifies the verb say, which makes this passage harmonize with the whole Bible, but if we leave it where it is, then it qualifies shalt be, and would go to show that the Savior and the thief both went to Paradise that day; but we have already seen that Paradise is in the new earth and yet to come, consequently, the present position of the comma gives a wrong idea to the verse. The Greek adverb seemeron, here rendered "to-day," may be translated by the word now, and we think the sense of the original would be much better expressed, if it read,—now I say unto thee, thou shalt be with me in paradise,—not between death and the resurrection, but when Christ comes into his kingdom. If our readers will observe the common use of language, they will notice that all classes of persons frequently use to-day, to-night, this day, and this night, in the same sense that to-day is used in the text, provided it qualifies say. I am informed that one of the best translators places the comma after "to-day." Some may object, by saying that to-day is superfluous in our arrangement; no more so than in many cases in the Bible. The Lord instructs Moses to say to the children of Israel,—"I command thee this day,"—"I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish." Deut. 30 : 11, 18. He does not mean that they shall perish that day, but declares the denunciation is that day, which fact was perfectly apparent without stating it, but it is a common mode of expression. Again, the Lord says in Deut. 15 : 15,—"I command thee this thing to-day." Here, to-day is used in the same sense as in Luke 23 : 43,—"verily I say unto thee to-day, thou shalt be with me in paradise." If the phrase, to-day, is superfluous in Lk. 23 : 43, if made to qualify say, it is equally so in Deut. 15 : 15, and in the following extracts from the speeches of Daniel Webster and Mr. Choate. Says Mr. Webster, on the 7th of March, 1850,—"I speak to-day for the preservation of the Union." All knew he was speaking that day, without his declaring the fact. Mr. Choate, at another time said,—"To-day, fellow-citizens, we also speak for the Union." These distinguished orators use to-day in the same sense as it is used in Luke 23 : 43, when the comma is placed after the phrase.

This verse is one of the strongest to support the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and is more frequently brought by our opponents to prove their position, than any other; but we see that their whole argument rests upon the very doubtful position of the comma. If the pause be placed after to-day, then this verse is in harmony with the whole Bible. Shall we make this doubtful comma the corner stone of our foundation, and set aside plain and positive scripture?

c. Again, if it could be proved that the thief went to heaven or paradise the day of the crucifixion, it was forty-three days before the Savior ascended. The Savior says, "thou shalt be with me in paradise." Three days subsequent to this, after the Savior had risen from the dead, he says to Mary, "touch me not, (the same me) for I (the same one) am not yet ascended to my Father." He remained on earth forty days longer, and then ascended to heaven.

From this brief examination, we conclude that the prayer of the thief is not yet answered, and cannot be, until Christ comes into his kingdom, when paradise will be restored; consequently this passage is in harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead.

Forty Questions on Immortality.

This little Tract of only four pages seems to be creating quite a stir for one of its size. One paper has already devoted some three columns and a half to a notice and review of it. We judge from this that there must be considerable backbone in the little thing; and no wonder, for the questions are all answered by passages of scripture, and the Tract contains all the passages in the Bible which speak of immortality. Let the Tract have a wide circulation—it will speak for itself and take care of itself. The Forty Questions are put up with five Ancient Landmarks, at 5 cts. per sett; $3.00 per 100 setts. The Questions are also put up with Landmark No. 4, at 2 cts. single sett; $1.00 per 100 setts. Send in your orders to this office or to H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

By the way, we recollect that one of the "Scripture Searchers" once made work for a Seventh day Baptist minister some weeks in his pulpit, and finally resulted in some preaching of life and immortality through Jesus Christ alone, in the neighborhood, and in stirring up the community and scattering tracts and Scripture Searchers all over the village. So mote it be!

Carmel!

Dear Brn. Howard and Damman:—I am very much pleased to see from you a notice, in the Crisis, of a Conference in Carmel, Me. I think the move is by the will of the Spirit. I hope there may be a general attendance. I am impressed that it is my duty to be there, and shall expect to attend. Let us come together and consult for the good of each other, and the good of all. Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Come Over and Help Us.

Bro. E. Whitney:—As we are destitute of stated preaching, we want you should come over and break to us the bread of life. Will you come?

Please respond through the Crisis, or by letter, and oblige M. L. Clark.

Barnston, C. E.

For the Crisis.

Shall I Believe a Report?

Yes! if it is well founded. How shall I know whether it is true or false? Or how determine what its qualifications, or modifications are, that I may know what to think and what to say, to answer questions, or to caution others? Investigate! Hear both sides! Look into the matter! But I have not sufficient interest in the affair to take the necessary trouble and labor. Then should you say anything about it? But a brother asks me if it is so. Possibly it is not his business to ask you; if so, you are under no obligation to answer. May I not tell what I heard? Doubtful. If you have heard only one side, better say you do not know, and leave it, for it is morally certain you do not understand it. And it is folly to judge a matter, as you would by passing it to another, before you understand it.

But if it is a report affecting a brother's character and position in the community and in the church, it may be duty to examine into the causes of the scandal—certainly it would before passing it on to others, even should you do it in that polite and seemingly innocent way,—"I heard so, but I don't believe it."

Shall we now illustrate? A year or two ago, I heard it stated with all the assurance of law and gospel, that such a sister—a woman of known devotion and earnest piety—had gone into spiritualism, attended the circles, received communications in writing from the dead, was a believer, &c. I called upon her soon, and found her afflicted that such a report had gained currency, but happy in the old faith of the gospel. She did indeed contend more fully than some for the power of the Divine Spirit. She had been at a circle or two, had seen some of the developments, but had not swerved from the faith of Christ. Is not this nearly parallel to Bro. H.'s case, who attended to investigate, but says he "did not get a ray of light upon Bible truth"—believes as he did before? Dr. J. experiments with the phenomena, and controls the manifestations, but I know he does not believe anything in it, as to spirits. The same is true of Dr. Y. Yet I hear that they favor it. Let us have charity!

Not long since I heard, with regret, of a brother, a man of years, and good standing and influence, and in the ministry, abusing his family, using improper language, &c. I knew it was not true, but being passed from one to the other, it might seriously injure him; and those who started and promoted the scandal, "abuse" him and his family too. I told him of it soon, and we looked the matter over.

Charity will not believe an evil report till it is compelled to. Delta.

For the Crisis.

To the Church.

Brethren and sisters:—I feel it a duty I owe to the church and my friends, to acknowledge publicly the receipt of timely aid from a portion of them, but as I have acknowledged the receipt of nearly all by private letters, and intend to the remainder as soon as convenient, I will not here give the names of any, only state the amount received in all.

I have up to this date received by letter and in person $31.00, and through the Crisis $8.00 making $39.00. I see that the last Crisis has credited $3.00 more for me which makes the whole amount $42.00.

This money has helped me very much in my almost helpless comdition, and I hereby tender to each donor my heartfelt thanks for his or her gift, and pray that the blessing of the God of the afflicted may rest upon and abundantly crown each one who has kindly remembered me in this my severe trial.

Nearly every dollar has been a gift from such as have already done their part to pay the old debt, and but one old debtor has heard my cry, yet, to my knowledge.

Some have written me and complained of a part of my previous note to the church saying I have tied the hands of my friends by requesting those who have given to pay the old debt not to feel called upon by Bro. Boutell's letter, as if I almost felt above receiving a gift at all.

I felt not thus dear brethren, but felt rather that I would be glad to evade the obligation such gifts impose on the receiver, being unable to labor for them now, and fearing I might remain thus for weeks—perhaps months to come. I am not ashamed to own that I am embarrassed—needy, nor ashamed to receive a gift, but I would rather have my dues and give to others. My sickness has added much to my embarrassment, and I may never rise above it, but I shall try.

Know therefore, brethren, that though I receive your donations as a christian gift from you to me, an unmerited gift, all I thus receive shall make that old debt just so many dollars smaller; but let the unrighteous debtor know, that their gifts will not cancel his debt at the bar of God, if he is able to pay it.

My health is gradually improving. I recover flesh faster than I do my strength, yet I am growing stronger, and hope in a few weeks more my lungs will so far recover that I can again preach. I trsut I feel thankful that I have thus far recovered. I wish to be able to labor on or I wish to sleep! I pray that I may not outlive my usefulness. Brethren, pray for me. J. Turner.

For the Crisis.

"Judge not that Ye be not Judged."

This passage of Scripture has often forced itself on my mind. And if all would look at it in its true light and always bear it in mind as well as practice it, they would find it better for themselves, and more pleasing to God. I believe it is taking away a part of God's authority, and that is a serious subject.

What! take away God's authority? You would not do that, my christian friends, no more than you would take his name in vain. And if you judge the judgment shall be measured to you again. "And why beholdest thou the mote that it is in thy brother's eye? . . . first cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." "Ye shall know them by their fruits." Jesus taught as one having authority, and would you assume that authority? Would you be his rival? No, my christian friends, you would not. Ever guard against such a disposition. And may God bless you.

E. W. Dickinson.

North Cambridge, Mass.

For the Crisis.

The Third Heaven.

WHERE, AND WHAT IS IT?

On this question there are but two positions taken.

1st. That it is the place where Christ ascended and is seated at the Father's right hand. This position is supposed to be sustained by certain texts of scripture, some of which I desire to notice. The following is quoted:—"he (Christ) that descended, is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens." Every one, I think, must readily discover that this proves nothing on the point. Instead of saying that he ascended above two heavens into the third, it reads that he "ascended up far above all heavens;" consequently, any construction put upon this text to prove a plurality of heavens would prove that Christ, instead of being in the third heaven, has ascended above them all, and therefore, is in no heaven at all. This would be similar to the heaven of which Dr. Watts sang,—

"Beyond the bounds of time and space,"

But what are we to understand by this text? I answer: not that God in using this language designed to number the place where Christ is gone, but simply to mark his glorious exaltation. This text is parallel with many others that speak of the same thing, among which I quote the following from Eph. 1 : 21, where we are told that God has exalted him "far above all principalities, and power, and might and dominion."

The next text I shall notice, tells us that God "rideth upon the heavens of heavens." It is claimed that in this text, heavens is used in the plural, therefore there must be more than one. That the one on which God rides is the next beyond the plural or second heaven, therefore the heaven here spoken of, where God sits, must be the third.

If we could prove, that because "heavens" is here used in the plural, therefore, there must necessarily be two and no more, this text would answer our purpose. But when we remember that any number above one is just as much plural as two, this text can just as consistently, and with as much show of argument, be quoted by spiritualists, and Mohammedans to prove the existence of seven heavens in that direction, as it could by us to prove that there are three.

The idea contained in this text is, not that God designs to tell us numerically where his glory dwells, but in language awfully sublime, he is describing the greatness of that glory. In the 18th Psalm, 10th verse, we find a parallel text and a similar expression.

But, lastly, we are told that the Bible tells us of three heavens. 1, The open firmament where the fowls fly; 2, That region occupied by the sun, moon, and stars; 3d, Where God and angels dwell; to which heaven Christ ascended from Mt. Olivet. Is the above strictly true? I answer emphatically, NO! The firmament, and the region of space occupied by the sun, moon, and stars, according to the unerring word, instead of being two, are one and the same. In proof, I refer you to the following scriptures. In Gen. 1 : 8, we are told that "God called the firmament heaven." In the 20th verse we are told that God caused the fowl to fly in this "firmament of heaven;" and in the 15th, 16, and 17th verses we are positively told that God formed the sun, moon and stars, and placed them as lights in this same "firmament of heaven." Thus, if we go here to reckon, instead of three heavens, we find but two. The conclusion is that no third heaven is spoken of in the word of God as existing in that direction. "But," says one, "it must be there." I answer if it is there it is not a matter of revelation.

But where is it? I answer: it does not now exist, but is to exist in connection with the New Earth, as brought to view in 2 Peter 3 : 13. In this chapter we have most clearly marked, the result of two great changes, which are specified in many portions of the word of God. The first change, namely, the flood, affected the entire creation of God, and a new order of things obtained. The second will do no less, and another and the last state comes into being. As a matter of course, if a thing passes through two different changes, it must exist in three different forms. To illustrate: if I were to take any iron body and cast it first into a stove, then into a globe, it would of course exist in three different forms. 1st. The bar of iron. 2. The stove. 3. The globe.

Now if, as we must admit, these two changes are to take place, and a new state of things is the result of each, and therefore the creation or universe of God is to exist in three different states, what name shall we give them each? I know of no way but to let Peter answer. He names them as follows: First, he calls the state before the flood, "the heavens" and the "earth" which "were of old." Second, the state next after the flood, he calls "the heavens and the earth which are now." Third, the state that is to come into existence after the general conflagration, he calls "the New Heavens and New Earth." We find, then, that Peter does give us just three heavens, that do actually exist in their successive order in the plan of God. Now it looks to me to be so exceeding simple, that any one may see, that if there are to be three heavens in regular succession, the last one in the series must be the third. Well, it was the third to which Paul was caught in vision. But was it to this one? I answer; this being the only third heaven named in the Bible I think this must be the one.

But it may be objected, that the heavens in Peter are plural, I think we have seen sufficiently clear from what has been said and many scriptures that might be quoted, that an argument based wholly on the number of a name of this character is very liable, on a close investigation, to be found faulty. Heaven and heavens are used interchangeably, and synonomously, in many portions of the word of God. Again, it may be said that the present heavens are called, in Rev. 21, "the first heaven." I reply, this word first does not mark its numerical existence, for if that were so, Revelation would contradict Peter. This text is parallel with Isa. 65 : 17, where the present heavens are called the "former" heavens—first in Rev. 21, is used simply in the sense of former.

Now for the conclusion. We have seen as above that the third heaven is to exist in connection with Paradise. Paradise is a word of Persian origin, and signifies "a garden of delights." See Dr. Clarke on this word. The Lord God planted a Paradise in Eden, (See Septuagint Version, Gen. 2 : 8,) and placed man in it in a state of trial, or on probation; and man was to have Paradise as a possession, or kingdom, just so long as he was found in the path of obedience. But man lost this goodly heritage by transgression. Christ came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost. He came to seek and to save Paradise, for Paradise was lost. He paid the price of its redemption with his own life. Inasmuch as Christ has died to purchase what Adam lost by transgression, Paradise must be restored; and when brought back it will be Peter's "New Earth." The heavens being restored in connection with the earth, they will exist in their third state in connection with the New Earth, or, Paradise restored. Thus we shall have in actual existence what Paul saw in a vision, viz., the third heavens, and Paradise co-existent forever.

It is in this Paradise that they that overcome will eat of the tree of life, for it is to grow in the midst of the Paradise of God. Remember what John and Paul saw concerning this matter. They saw in vision, not as then existing, but as it will exist in eternal perfection when God shall "make all things new." May the Lord help us to be overcomers, that we may inherit Paradise forever. Amen.

S. W. Bishop.

From Bro. C. F. Churchill

Bro. Grant:—I have received the Crisis from March 25th. My heart has been cheered from time to time to hear of the upbuilding of God's heavenly cause in other lands, though I feel to mourn that it languishes here. I mourn when I see so many living without God and without hope in the world—no hope of immortality beyond the grave—God's professed children indifferent to their awful case. O, God! what can I say? the day of God is at hand; the perishing inhabitants of time without a shelter from the approaching storm! O, could some weeping child of God come this way, feeling the good of his fellow men at heart, having the glory of his heavenly Master in view, much good might be done in the name of the Holy child Jesus.

Brother Spaulding was with us last winter. I think good has resulted therefrom. He labored with us faithfully, and since he has returned home, has sent us some books, which have been read with interest. The Lord reward him for his labors of love, and give him an admittance into his kingdom.

Before I close, I should like to speak a word to my brethren and sisters scattered abroad. I can claim them such. I have made them the people of my choice. O, ye weeping, waiting ones, press on a little longer, soon, soon the saints of the Most High shall possess the Kingdom. Soon your sorrow and grief will end; soon your trials will end in a great and eternal, unfading and glorious reward. O let us love one another, even as Jesus has loved us.

Pray for me that I may be preserved blameless unto the appearing and kingdom of our Lord and Savior. O how unspeakable and full of glory the reward which awaits the conquerers.

Your brother, looking for the coming of the Just One,

Christian F. Churchill.
Salmon Brook, Aroostook Co., Me.

From Bro. G. W. Barnes.

Bro. Grant:—Thinking that some of my friends in the East would like to know where I am, and what I am doing, I thought I would write a few lines for the Crisis.

I came out here about three years ago, and bought a farm about twelve miles west of Portage city, in Sauk Co., Wis., on which, by the blessing of God, I raise my living. I have not heard an Advent sermon since I came into this State, except I preach occasionally myself. Generally, I have a good hearing. I preach Christ and him crucified, his rising the third day his going up to the right hand of his Father, and his coming again in like manner as he went up. I preach that man is mortal, the whole of him, and that the righteous are made immortal at the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the just; and that the wicked are like sheep lain in the grave (Ps. 49 : 14) and brought forth in the day of wrath to suffer the second death. I preach all the time that I am in hearing of any one, until I am almost worn out; and never did I view myself so nigh the judgment as I do now. I never felt more of a realizing sense of the awful condition that man is in while out of Christ. I often feel that I must leave my farm and go out and warn men to flee from the wrath to come. I weep between the porch and the altar, and sometimes feel to exclaim, like Jeremiah, "O that my head were waters!"

But I feel as though I wanted to make one extra effort in this place to save men from the second death. If we can I think we shall see sinners converted and made ready for the kingdom of God. I therefore invite some one of God's ministers to come and labor with us a few weeks. I will not name any one in particular, but I will say what kind of a man I would like to have come. In the first place we need a man that is full of faith and the Holy Ghost. In the second place, we would like to have a man come that can sing. In the third place, we want a man to come whose main object is to glorify God and save men from the second death.

Who will respond to the call? who will say, "Lord, here am I, send me?" Is there no one between Maine and Minnesota?

Brethren, "say not there are four months and then cometh the harvest, but lift up your eyes upon the fields, are they not all white, ready to harvest? The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the field."

If there is any one that will come and labor with us a few weeks, please write to me, give me a little notice, and direct to Russell's Corner, Sauk Co., Wis.

George W. Barnes.
March 10, 1857.

From Bro. E. R. Southwick.

Bro. Grant:—It has been a long time since I have been privileged with reading the Crisis or any other (only perchance) of those little winged messengers which proclaim the everlasting gospel; not, however, because I did not desire them and long for their comforting influence upon my heart, but other reasons combined, such as being poor, and family greatly afflicted with sickness, trials, &c., have caused a delay or procrastination of this order for the Crisis. The Watchman and the Reformer were my favorite papers while they continued. The principles taught in the Crisis are equally as interesting to me as those of the Reformer and Watchman; But Bro. Turner had the oldest claim on me, and my heart was with him for his labors of love; but now they have ceased, yet Bro. T. has an interest in my becoming a subscriber to the Crisis—and I certainly have—therefore I gladly comply with the proposition in Bro. T.'s "Circular." May we all be benefited thereby, and my prayer is that God will sustain this little messenger of truth until Jesus comes. It will help me to preach the gospel to others, as well as comfort my own heart.

O how the truth languishes; how starved are God's little ones for the truth, and yet they find it not, save here and there a crumb. Dear Brother, I could spend all my time, and my life also, in preaching from my little store of knowledge in this region of country, and good could be done in the name of Jesus; but I am poor and have a poor helpless wife who has been so for six years out of the last nine; and I have sometimes thought God would not have his gospel proclaimed any more in this place. When the blessed truth was proclaimed here the people would not hear, and now they appear to desire to hear, and there is no one to teach them. I feel an interest in the truth, but I stand measurably alone in this place, only a few in this county, and they half-way believers.

I am frequently invited to preach and even by members of other churches, who desire to hear the ground of our faith, but they hear with their ears, and understand not; they cannot endure sound doctrine, they have heaped to themselves teachers, who only tickle their ears; their hearts are far from God, and though God's word is truth it is ofttimes like water poured upon the ground, when it is opened to their understanding with all the clearness, simplicity, and harmony that rational creatures could ask for. But the end of all things is at hand and nothing appears strange or uncommon to the Bible student. Not one jot or tittle of God's word will fail but according to divine inspiration and revelation all will come to pass as it is written.

Your Brother, in hope of immortality at the coming and kingdom of Christ,

E. R. Southwick.
Marysville, O., April 1857.

From Bro. Henry J. Peck.

Bro. Grant:—I feel like enlisting my sympathies with the dear Brethren and Sisters scattered abroad, in the soon coming kingdom of Christ, which theme is truly delightful to dwell upon. The Apostle Peter, in speaking of the day of the Lord, says it "will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." But to the children of God who are looking, and are ready for his coming, it will not come as a thief. Let us then, Brethren, be up and doing, and stand with our loins girt about with truth, our lamps trimmed and our light brightly burning, so that day overtake us not unawares. Let us give all diligence to make our calling and our election sure, and add to our "faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance," &c. For if we do these things, we shall not be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

And in view of these things, I am led to cry out,—O Lord, how long shall thy children toil on in this sin-cursed earth? how long ere our sorrows end, and thy kingdom will come, and thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven? Seeing we look for such things, let us be diligent, that we may be found of him, without spot and blameless, at his coming and kingdom, and be gathered with the righteous to swell the chorus round the throne, and range those blissful fields of the Paradise of God.

Blessed be God for the christian hope, and for the consolation which it affords the child of God while traveling on to his haven of rest. It is truly a "blessed hope," a hope that maketh not ashamed. Why? "Because the love of God is shed abroad in the heart." A hope that is sure and steadfast, and which entereth within the vail. Let us look forward to the consummation of this hope. Lift up your heads, ye desponding, and rejoice! hold on your way a little longer, and your reward will be given. Would ye endure unto the end? keep pure the wedding garment, so that when our blessed Lord shall appear we may appear with him in glory.

Yours truly, Henry J. Peck.
South Farms, Ct., Apr. 21, '57.

Serious dissensions have arisen among the Mormons at San Bernardino and Salt Lake.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

A. B. C.'S.
—OR—
LINES TO MY YOUNG FRIENDS.

All things, my friends, are fading fast,
You soon will hear the trumpet's blast;
Before your God then weeping bow,
Examine well your hearts just now.
Commit yourselves to endless keeping,
Where God has said shall be no weeping.
Drop on your knees before too late,
Vice, folly, all that God doth hate,
Eradicate from your young heart,—
Act wisely, and the noble part.
For God the city will destroy,
And burn to ruin base alloy.
Give him your heart, your all resign,
With christians' prayers your own combine.
How long delay, when mercy's free?
Return and live—like Jesus be.
In judgment, friends, 'twill be too late
To seek a part in God's estate;
Join then at once and with us go,
Lest Satan prove your overthrow.
Kind invitations you have had,
By loving ones now cold and dead;
Let not such warnings be in vain,
But strive eternal life to gain.
Make now your peace with God above,
Seek christian friendship, heavenly love.
Now let the promptings of thy heart,
Cause you to act the better part.
Oh! shun the path that leads to death,
And work for God while you have breath.
Prepare to meet thy friends at last,
Where weeping is forever past.
Quench not the spirit of your God,
But try the way your Savior trod;
Remember that it leads to bliss,
A path of God and holiness;
Search for no other one, but this;
But seek it now in love and truth.
Then seek, and you shall find it, youth;
And dwell with Christ at God's right hand.
United with his angel band.
There be a child He'll not disown,
View there the beauties of His throne,
There freed thy soul from every care,
Where crowns of glory you can wear.
God offers you such joy as this,
'Xalts you unto a Heaven of bliss,
And frees you from a world like this—
Yield them at once, do not delay,
While christians for your souls do pray.
Zealous now, for the Bible saith,
A sinner's wages sure is death!
But wages to God's people given,
Is joy alway with Him in Heaven!

S. C. K.

Domestic Summary.

Velocity of the Electric Current—Some early experiments on the velocity of electricity in high tension led to the assumption of an almost inconceivably high speed as that always natural to the electric fluid. The experiments lately made, to test the feasibility of the great submarine telegraph project, indicate about one thousand miles per second as the average velocity. It has also been proved that several waves of electricity may be traveling on the same wire at one time, a fact which will tend greatly to facilitate the rapid working of the great telegraph. In one case, where the ends of one thousand and twenty mile of wire were brought near together and a succession of shocks produced, three signals of a signal stroke bell were distinctly heard after the hand had ceased to transmit.

Another Bold Case of Garroting in Boston.—A Country Trader robbed of $1100. About 9 o'clock last evening, a man named Cyrus Smith, belonging in Piermont, N. H., was garroted by two men at the corner of Brookline and Tremont streets. The villains seized Mr. Smith around the body, and while one held his hand over the struggling man's mouth the other threw him down and robbed him of a memorandum book containing nearly $1100 in bank bills, on the Bradford Bank, Bradford, Vt.

Mr. Smith arrived in the city last evening for the purpose of purchasing goods, and was stopping near the scene of the robbery with a friend.

A Steam Stage Wagon has been constructed to run on common roads by a company formed of citizens of Cincinnati and Dayton, Ohio, which was recently tested, and is said to give complete satisfaction.

A New Volcano in Virginia.—A volcano has just burst forth in Virginia, at a point on the mountain directly between the dry fork of Cheat and the south branch of the Potomac rivers, at a place known by the name of the "Sinks," so called from the depressed condition of the mountain at that point. These "Sinks" are funnel-shaped, and each one embraces as much as an acre of ground. On the first of January the reports caused by the bursting forth of the subterranean fires were heard for a distance of twenty or thirty miles. Vast columns of flame and smoke issued from the orifices, and red hot stones were thrown up in the air several hundred feet above the mouth of the crater. The people in the vicinity are becoming alarmed at the pertinacity with which the flames are kept up and the red hot masses of rocks thrown out. A heavy, rumbling noise, like distant thunder, is continually reverberating through the deep cavern of the mountain, which at times seems to tremble from summit to base.

We clipped the following from the Christian Spiritualist:—

WORLD'S CONVENTION.

It is proposed to hold a World's Convention in the city of New York, to take into consideration the phenomena and philosophy of the wonderful manifestations of angels and of the spirits of just men made perfect, which it is alleged have been transpiring in our midst for a period now of nearly ten years. Some three millions of persons in the United States are now wholly deluded on this subject; besides many millions in Europe, unless they have facts and undoubted evidence to support their belief in man's immortality, and of his ability to communicate freely with the earth after it ceases to occupy the material body. It is proposed to discuss in this convention the entire subject in all its bearings—physical, mental, spiritual and philosophical; and bring to bear upon it all the light that science is capable of shedding from every source and from every channel, aided by the Divine light of Revelation. In this way it is thought great good may and will result to the human race in bringing out clearly the Truth. If these manifestations and revelations are from the source claimed for them by some ten millions of intelligent human beings living in almost all parts of the civilized world, it is high time the whole world in every corner was enligtened on the subject.

On the other hand, if they are false, it is certainly time that positive proof was furnished of their utter fallacy, and that the delusion be put down by the strong light of truth which shall show it is all a lie.

Such a Convention will awaken public attention generally from North to South, East to West, and land to land, and give all persons interested in the subject an opportunity of seeing, hearing, and expressing their views, either for or against; for the Convention invites all who wish to join in the discussion. The day of Pentecost will again come, and all men shall know the Lord as he is from the least even unto the greatest, for he will reveal himself again unto us in power and great glory.

Foreign News.

TWO DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Halifax, Wednesday, May 6.

The steamer Europa, from Liverpool April 25, arrived here yesterday morning. The Neufchatel question was in a fair way of amicable adjustment. The city of Sarawak, Borneo, had been nearly destroyed by Sir James Brooke, at the head of a body of Malays, and 2000 of the Chinese inhabitants killed. The attack was owing to the massacre of several Europeans by the inhabitants of Sarawak.

Persia.—The Persian accounts of the recent battle of Bushire are published. They state the English advanced until, meeting with the main body of Persians, they set fire to their (British) camp equipage, and retreated towards Bushire, where, being reinforced, the battle began and lasted four hours, both parties retiring in consequence of torrents of rain, which fell the whole time, rendering the ground unfit for cavalry. The Persians left some guns in the mud, but afterwards recovered them. The Persians estimate the British loss at 1000, and their own at 400.

The latest dates from Bushire are to the 6th of March. They bring no intelligence of fresh operations in the Persian Gulf.

Spain.—The troops destined for Cuba, are to be despatched from Cadiz at the end of this month.

Russia.—At Sebastopol the engineers have succeeded in raising 25 of the vessels sunk in the harbor, the greater part, however, of light tonnage. Upwards of 60 other vessels, of which some 25 or 26 are first and second rates, remain to be lifted. The divers employed affirm that, with some three or four exceptions, the whole of the operations can be crowned with success; so that, in the course of three or four years, the two old divisions of the Black Sea fleet may be as numerous as before the war. Some of the vessels, however, must be worm-eaten and useless.

Turkey.—The last ship of the British fleet which has been cruising in the vicinity of Constantinople, has passed out through the Hellespont, and has arrived at Smyrna. As soon as the Turkish government received the intelligence, it issued a circular to announce that the Dardanelles are henceforth closed to ships of war of all nations that are not provided with a special firman for going through, thus re-establishing the rule in existence before the war.

Appointments.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Bridgeport, Ct., on Friday evening, May 22
Newark, N. J., Sunday, May 24
New York, Cor. of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, Sunday, May 31
During the week, at Newark and New York as may be demanded.
W. S. Campbell.

Bridgeport, at the old Chapel, Sunday, 17
C. Goodrich.

Missionary Tour Westward.

Brewerton, N. Y., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, May 13, 14.
South Butler, N. Y., Sunday, May 17.
Edwin Burnham.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, May 24
Kennebunk, Me., Sunday, May 31
Salem, Mass., (for Bro. George Burnham's charge,) Sunday, June 7

Bro. Hemenway appoints to preach in
Thorndike, May 17th
Portsmouth, N. H., " 31th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Lynn, (Dye House Mill) third Sunday in May.
D. E. Moulton.

I will preach as follows:—viz.,
Nashua, N. H., Sunday. May 17th
Roby's Corners, Sunday, May 24th
By request, I will preach in Manchester, N. H., 79 Elm St., the first Sunday in June.
My appointments beyond Roxbury are withdrawn.
S. W. Bishop.

The Lord will, I will attend to the following appointments:
Freeport, (Swamp School-House,) May 24
" (Flying Point,) " 31
Brunswick, June 7
R. R. York.

Bro. A. Ross appoints to preach in
Exeter, N. H., May 30 and 31

Tour East.

Bro. Grant:—Let me say to those calls from the East that I purpose, the Lord will, to spend the most of June on the Penobscot, and will meet the brethren in Holden, Orrington, Exeter, or elsewhere, as they may arrange. I shall try and be at the Conference at Carmel.

Your Bro. full of hope, L. Boutell.

I will preach in Vernon, Vt., May 24, spending the following week there. Once at Northfield.
L. Boutell.

General Conference.

Bro. Grant:—Having consulted with many of the Brn. composing the different churches in this section, I find an interest, with many earnest requests, for a General Conference. We have therefore, after due deliberation, decided to hold a Conference at Carmel, Me., commencing Thursday, June 10th, at 5 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We hope, pray, and believe that this means of grace will prove a savor of life unto life. We invite all, whosoever will, to come and partake with us; and shall expect as many of the household of faith as consistently can, to come in the name of the Lord, and such as can will feel it a privilege and duty, with open heart and hand, to help forward the cause of truth.

Those coming by railroad, will stop at Carmel Depot, near the village, where the meeting is held.

In behalf of the Brn.,
I. Damman.
L. L. Howard.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

M M Flint 104, N Pease 115, S A Proctor 96, D Bunn 108, J Bunn 82, S Walker 134, W Hamlin 67, M A Cotton 110, Ida E Sherman 115, P S Taylor 115, C H Cotton 156, M Reed 104, A Hunt 104, H J Hammond 82, George Hayden 115, Mary Scammon 115, B Woodside 98, Anna Churchil 118, G B Lawrence 110, George Hale 104, A Bissell 115, Mary Keyes 115, M J Peirce 115, C B Wilson 115,—$1 each.

D Manderville 140, W J Ripley 104, J Brooks 119, W S Willey 130, Harriet Kingsbury 8,—$2 each.

W F Higgins, S J Eaton, $4 each.

M. Waterhouse 93, J Blaisdell 93,—50 cents each.

C W Hodges 104, $2.58; G D Hatch 104, $2.04; N Atkins 104, $1.75; C Fleming 125, $1.50; E M Haggett $ 3

To be used as Bro. Spaulding may direct,—$1.

For the Poor.—S R Eddy 61 cents; J. Morrison $1.

For Books.—S R Eddy $1.39; G D Hatch 96 cents; C Fleming 50 cents.

Books Sent.—M L Clark, J Whitman, G D Hatch.

For Bro. Turner—Joseph Pinkham, $3.00.

To Correspondents.

J. Crosby—The 2$ was credited to you in the Crisis of April 1st.

I C Welcome—The paper has been directed "W. J. Pean," and the back Nos. can probably be had by inquiring at the office for that name. We now send properly.

Married.

In Buffalo, New York, May 6, by Eld. Edwin Burnham, Mr. Gorham Umberhind, of Maine, to Miss Lucinda P. Rogers.

May 7, Mr. Thomas Toy to Miss Livonia A. Storms.

Query.

Why do Canada Postmasters require postage on the World's Crisis, a strictly religious paper, while the American Messenger, Child's Paper, and Sunday School Advocate go free? Answer who may.
M. L. Clark.
Barnston, C. E.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State, and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

Church Debts By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A C Judson. Price 33 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits; a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and the Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Poetry.

For the Crisis

ARE WE MORTAL?

Are we mortal, are we mortal?—
Go inquire of yonder tomb;
It may answer while some loved one,
Is enshrouded by its gloom;
Ask the inmate,
Of some circle-broken home.

Are we mortal? ask the records
Of the brave in ages past;
Who for joys faith saw before them,
Life upon the altar cast;
Ask yon warrior,
While his life-blood ebbeth fast.

Are we mortal? look within you,
Do you suffer "mortal pain?"
Do you shudder while before you,
Death presents his icy chain?
Do you often,
Of life's ills and woes complain?

Aye, we're mortal; yet a morning,
In the future doth appear;
When life's woes, its pains, its sighing,
Shall oppress God's people ne'er;
Faith beholds it—
Wipe away each falling tear.

But our "blessed hope" descendeth
To the dark, remotest tomb,—
Twines around our kindred dearest,
Bound by death low in its gloom,—
We behold them,
Raised to reign on earth, their home.

MARIA.

Danville, C. E.

For the Crisis.

THE JUDGMENT DAY.

Ah! hear the trumpet loudly roar,
The judgment trump of God;
Now mercy's day is surely o'er,
Sinners must feel his rod.

The day of wrath is truly here,
And judgment has begun;
The sinner's heart is filled with fear—
A voice proclaims, "'tis done!"

The sinful tribes of earth now mourn,
They see their doom is sealed;
The hope of life from them is torn,
And vengeance is revealed.

They wail, they shriek, they mourn, they cry,
Bid mountains on them fall;
But rocks and mountains from them fly,
Nor heed their anxious call.

Life's precious harvest now is past,
Its lovely summer spent;
The sinner's die forever cast,
No time now to repent.

The judgment trumpet sounds on high,
But saints rejoice and sing;
Lo! down from yonder opening sky
Comes their immortal King.

Living and resurrected saints
Ascend to meet their Lord;
They now are free from all complaints,
And have their sweet reward.

W. SHELDON.

Correspondence.

From A. R. Oakes.

BRO. GRANT:—Thanks be to God that I, an unworthy recipient of His bounty, am once more permitted to write a few lines for the Crisis, which is such a source of pleasure and comfort to me. I hail with unfeigned joy its weekly visits, for I derive much benefit from its contents. I pray God that it may have a large circulation, and be the means of doing much good, and that its publishers may have the satisfaction of knowing that, by the blessing of God, they have been the means of turning many from the paths of sin into the narrow way that leads to the better land.

I am still striving to press my way on towards the kingdom, hoping and believing that it is very near, and praying that I may be found worthy to share in its glories. I am firmly convinced that we are living in "the last days," when "perilous times" should come, and when men should be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of Godliness but denying the power thereof. O, it does appear to me that these are the times spoken of in the Bible; for when has iniquity so fearfully abounded as now? May God help us who are looking for His glorious advent, to be more earnest, more devoted, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the vain things of earth! Let what will come, I am determined to serve the Lord and follow in His footsteps until I reach the better land. I know that the nearer I live to the Lord, the more I shall have to endure; but I am willing to bear anything for the sake of Christ.

Since I embraced the truth and left the church to which I formerly belonged, I have been persecuted, tempted and tried, but the Lord has never left me; and although former friends shun and despise me, and say all manner of evil against me, I am happy and rejoicing in God. I care but little for the friendship of the world, knowing that it is enmity against God. I do sincerely thank the Lord that I have been permitted to join that little company of pilgrims who are striving to live just right. What if we are "everywhere spoken against," "despised and rejected?" We know that all these are but "light afflictions," which will work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, and also that the warfare will soon be over. O let us take courage, and with patience and faithfulness perform every duty assigned us, gird on the whole armor of God, fight the good fight of faith, and gain eternal life at last.

May the Lord bless all the readers of the Crisis—revive their drooping spirits, sustain and strengthen them, and give them the crown of unfading glory. Pray for me that I may be faithful, and when the Master comes that I may with all the pilgrims pass through the pearly gates and walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem. A. R. OAKES.

Yarmouth, Me., April, 1857.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord is still blessing the word here in northern Iowa. I have just returned from a two days' meeting. I baptized two—some more added to the church. I have baptized sixteen since the first of February. I feel to rejoice in the Lord, when I forget the things that are behind—the trials of a western life. I once in a while read a piece in the Crisis from brethren who live near me. I sometimes feel lonely and would like to get acquainted with them if I could find their whereabouts. There may be some preachers among them, if there are, let me know. I feel settled and grounded in the hope of the gospel that I am trying to establish in the West.

I do believe we are almost home. Were it not for this "lively hope" I should almost be discouraged, and think to die would be gain. O brethren, let us contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints—live godly—keep ourselves unspotted from the world, and soon we shall reap everlasting life, if we faint not. Brethren, pray for me.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

From Sr. B. Gould.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Although I am not personally acquainted with many of you, yet I trust we are all children of the same family, and shall soon meet around our Father's table at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

"O that will be joyful,
When we meet no part no more,
On Canaan's happy shore," and shout our sufferings ended in the kingdom of God. O how good the Lord is to his poor erring children. What precious promises! what a glorious reward is held out to those that endure to the end! Yes, we must endure all things, be willing to suffer affliction with the people of God, have our names cast out as evil among men, and perhaps by those we have dearly loved and taken sweet counsel together. If we love Jesus better than anything earthly, we can suffer the loss of all things even if it takes a right hand. Jesus has promised to go with us through all our trials even unto the end.

"With such a guide we'll never fear, but gird our armor on,
And trust our Leader to the end, and gain
th' eternal home."

I am tired and sick of wandering here in this vale of sin and death. I long to meet with dear friends where the weary are at rest.

Dear fellow pilgrims, let us take courage and not cast away "our confidence which hath great recompense of reward," but try and stir up each other's pure mine by way of remembrance. Do not let us forget what St. Paul told us should come in the last days. He said there would be perilous times, and that some would depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. We can see very plainly that we are living in the last day perils. Truly the love of many has grown cold, and they are eating and drinking with the drunken; the inhabitants of the earth are being made drunk with the wine of their fornication, and instead of adorning themselves in modest apparel, they are arrayed in purple and scarlet colors, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, holding out the captivating cup and inviting all to partake.

May the Lord help us to walk in the narrow way and live separate from the world; to be as a city set on a hill which cannot be hid. Then our light will shine so that others can see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. Your sister striving to overcome the world,

BETSEY GOULD.

Erving, April, 1857.

For the Crisis.

A THOUGHT.

What startling thought is this that fills my soul,
Enchanting all my powers with rapturous joy;
Eclipsing things terrene from Pole to Pole,
And all the splendors of the beauteous sky?

O! tis the thought, my God, I now recall,
That while eternal ages onward roll,
Thy glorious Self shall be my ALL IN ALL,
And fill with grateful joy my ransomed soul.

H. G.

For the Crisis.

A Request.

THE IOWA MISSION FREE LIBRARY.

Dear Brethren:—I wish to engage in spreading tracts and books. I have long been studying which was the best way to do it. I have plenty of them to sell, and the people want to read, but are not able to buy them. Now if the books can be paid for, (as I owe Bro. Hastings,) I will put them in a form to have them read and returned; that is, keep them in a library. In this way, the books can be read by more people than if given away. Now a few dollars will make a good assortment, and they can be kept going from one to another until they are worn out. I feel anxious about this, and if I had the means I would buy them myself and thus prepare them for doing good. But I cannot. In one place I have preached since last August, every two weeks, five miles from here, and the most of the time went on foot. I have received, $5.25.

Now you that have plenty of this world's goods, help us bear some of the burden. Friends here have hearts to do, but do not have the means, and the gospel must be preached to the poor. Will you help us? If so, send your letters to Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Cancer Notice.

My object in sending a receipt to cure cancers was to benefit the actual sufferers not speculators. It takes me one day in a week to answer all the letters that come. Those that send for receipts to speculate on, will please to mail me one dollar for the same. I will send two receipts for Cancers, one for Rheumatism and other pains. The last named receipt is worth what I ask. I cannot furnish paper, envelopes and time, in my poverty, to gratify the curiosity of everybody. All I get over enough to pay my expenses, shall go to send the Crisis to the poor.

N. F. NASON.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. J. S. STUART writes from Burke, N. Y.:—"It has been but a short time since I resolved to serve the Lord, but by his grace assisting me I am determined to serve him the remainder of my days. I hope to reign with him in his eternal kingdom.

I have often thought how delightful it will be when we all get home to glory, and are clad in white, with hearts to praise him through one eternal day. May we all be faithful.

'O how I long to see that day,
When the redeemed shall come
To Zion, clad in white array,
Their blissful, happy home.' "

—:o:—

BRO. H. B. BALDWIN writes from Bethel:—"I am still a firm believer in the glorious doctrine of the second, literal, personal coming of our blessed Jesus, to raise the dead, destroy the wicked, and give eternal life to the righteous. I am trying to live so as to be prepared for that event; my future hopes all centre there. Brethren and sisters, let us all strive to overcome the world, that we may at last have right to the tree of life, and be prepared to sit down to the marriage supper of the Lamb."

—:o:—

BRO. S. E. LEAVENWORTH writes from Woodbury:—"Truly, these are trying times. All need to be continually at the throne of grace, crying earnestly to God to stand by us, that we may keep the narrow way, and not turn to the right or left. Jesus will come again and receive us to himself, that where He is, there we may be also. Blessed promise! I sigh for home!

'O how I long to be there, where no sorrow or care
Can disturb that sweet heavenly rest.'
Where I shall be freed from all the trials and temptations of this life, and have pleasure without end; and anguish cannot enter, but all will be harmony and peace."

GOD.—Faith beholds God; devotion cleaves to him; love enjoys him; obedience serves him.

Choice Selections.

The Bible.

It is a book of laws to show the right and wrong.

It is a book of wisdom that maketh the foolish wise.

It is a book of truth that detects all errors.

It is a book of life that shows how to avoid everlasting death.

It is the most authentic and entertaining history that was ever published.

It contains the most remote antiquities, remarkable events and wonderful occurrences.

It is a complete code of laws.

It is a perfect body of divinity.

It is an unequalled narrative.

It is a book of biography.

It is a book of travels.

It is a book of voyages.

It is the best covenant that was ever made; the best deed that was ever sealed.

It is the best will that was ever executed; the best testament that was ever signed.

It is the school-boy's best instructor.

It is the housewife's best guide.

It is the learned man's masterpiece.

It is the ignorant man's dictionary, and every man's directory.

It promises an eternal reward to the faithful and believing; but that which crowns all is, the Author. He is without partiality, and without hypocrisy. "With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

"Men's books with heaps of chaff are stored;
God's book doth golden grains afford;
Then leave the chaff, and spend thy pains
In gathering up the golden grains."

Self-forgetful Love.

It is related of certain birds, that they pluck from their own breasts, the feathers with which they line the nests of their young.

What a beautiful type of a mother's love,—that most unselfish of all human affection.

I saw, not long since, an account of a mother who plucked the last hope of life from her own bosom, to insure it to her child.

A poor woman who had been deserted by her husband, set out on foot, with her infant in her arms, to reach her native village. She was overtaken by a snow-storm, lost her way, and after wandering about until nearly exhausted, sank down to die.

But even in that fearful hour, her own sufferings were all forgotten in care for her child. With her remaining strength she divested herself of almost every article of clothing, and carefully wrapped it around her babe.

A traveler passing by on the next morning, discovered them; the baby warm and well, but the loving heart of the tender mother forever stilled in death.

How our hearts throb as we hear of such instances of holy love. How we reverence the being capable of feeling it, and yet how strangely indifferent we are to that most self-forgetful, self-sacrificing of all love,—the love of Jesus.

The mother and the bird suffer, for the loving Jesus suffered for the hating, persecuting, and blaspheming; for the degraded, vile and ungrateful. Beautiful as is the affection of mother and of bird, they are but a faint shadow of that most wondrous of all love.—Sunday School Gazette.

Ye are not Your Own.

Rev. Wilbur Fisk, in Baltimore, in 1838, before the Preachers' Aid Society, rehearsed the following dialogue between a preacher and the Lord of the harvest, in which objections to entering into the ministry are plainly stated, and as plainly answered. It is understood he meant himself, as he had many struggles and inward conflicts before he entered into the ministry.

Christ.—Go preach my Gospel.

Answer.—But, Lord, I have other engagements.

C.—You are not your own, you are bought with a price.

A.—But, Lord, I have been preparing myself for another profession. I have been struggling for an education. I have high prospects before me, &c.

C.—What have you that you have not received?

A.—Lord, I have strong domestic feelings; I hope one day to have a family and home of my own.

C.—He that loveth house and lands, wife or children more than me is not worthy of me.

A.—Lord, I have aged parents, and I am an only son. Filial love and duty require that I should look after them.

C.—He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me.

A.—Lord, is there no excuse? May not another answer?

C.—The gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

A.—At least let me first stop and bury my father and mother.

C.—Let the dead bury their dead.

A.—At any rate I must wait awhile, and acquire some property, &c.

C.—He that putteth his hand to the plough and looketh back, is not fit for the kingdom of heaven.

A.—Lord, I cannot go.

C.—Wo unto you if you preach not the Gospel.

A.—But, Lord, wilt thou not pity a poor helpless wretch who begs for an excuse as one would plead for his life?

C.—Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

Here he said the dialogue ended. The young man covered his face with his hands, and bursting into tears, exclaimed,—

"Nay, but I yield, I yield,
I can hold out no more."

The bond was signed and sealed, and the youth was consigned over, soul and body, to the church. The next thing I saw of him he was treading a pathless forest among the Green Mountains bordering upon the Canada line, driving his horse before him, because of the roughness of the wilderness, cheerful as an angel on an errand of mercy. And I heard his song, with which he made the rugged mountain tops that hung over his path reverberate. And what, sir, do you think it was?

"No foot of land do I possess,
Nor cottage in this wilderness,
A poor wayfaring man;
I lodge awhile in tents below,
Or gladly wander to and fro,
Till I my Canaan gain.

Nothing on earth I call my own,
A stranger, to the world unknown.
I all their goods despise;
I trample on their whole delight,
And seek a city out of sight,
A city in the skies."

Direct Preaching.

A correspondent of the New York Observer, writing of Rev. C. G. Finney's preaching for some weeks past in Boston, remarks of his discourses, that they are "said to be characterized by simplicity, directness, great tenderness of feeling, and a fullness of the marrow of the Gospel. We certainly need such preaching. It is undoubtedly a fault with most of our New England preaching, that it is too predominantly rhetorical. The sermon is prepared with too much comparative reference to its finish and beauty as a mere piece of composition. Any one who has experience as a preacher and writer, can easily understand how a minister in his preparation for the pulpit may lose sight of the great end of a sermon, which should be the conversion of sinners and the edification of Christians, and fix his mind on the question, how he shall make a discourse which shall bear the test of the scholar's criticism, or gain for him the reputation of an accomplished and skillful writer. Ministers, like other men, are open to temptation, and at this day, when the intellectual is so much lauded, and the moral and physical left so much out of view, in the popular estimate of a preacher, there is surely danger that ministers will err on this score, and give their people scholarly and finished sermons, rather than sermons which shall convict of sin and lead to Christ. Indeed this evil has already come to pass in many places, and many churches in New England are under the sore affliction. I say not this in a spirit of fault-finding; I simply state the fact, which is patent to every careful observer, and of which intelligent laymen complain. They see, they feel, that our pulpit ministrations lack simplicity, the earnest simplicity which characterizes every intellectual effort that aims at a great and self-engrossing end. Style, ornament, classical allusions, glittering paragraphs, and it may be, a formal logic, all of which are well in their way, take the place of doctrine and of that affectionate exhortation in which lies much of the power of any sermon. The evil is widely deplored, but the difficulty is to get rid of it. We are, some, in the Sophomoric age, and such sophorism the intelligent and truly cultivated must endure for the sake of those who do not appreciate simplicity and real power in the pulpit, while others hope that a better time is near. One thing is certain, and that is, that a general revival of religion which should bring ministers and christians back to primitive ideas and feelings in regard to the true nature and design of the gospel and all evangelical ministrations, would work, in a good degree, the needed change. The truth of God would then be preached in greater simplicity and less of intellectual display, and the people would receive it and love it and sinners be converted, and the church be edified. And the Gospel preached in such simplicity will always be the most fitting and hopeful means of promoting a religious revival."
—Watchman and Reflector.

Life a Journey.

Consider heaven as your home; yourself as on a journey to it; the afflictions you meet with as a course of discipline to prepare you for it; and the treasures you may possess, as given to defray your expenses on the way, and to enable you to do something for those who enjoy not your blessings.

MUTUAL FORBEARANCE.—The use willob be kept in a turmoil where there is no toleration of each other's errors. If you lay a single stick of wood in the grate, and apply fire to it it will go out; put on another stick, and they will burn; and half a dozen, and you will have a blaze. There are other fires of a kindred nature. If one member of a family gets into a passion, and is let alone, he will cool down, and possibly be ashamed and repent. But oppose temper to temper; pile on all the fuel; draw in others of the group, and let one harsh answer be followed by another, and there will soon be a blaze that will enwrap them all.

Prayer is a key which unlocks the blessings of the day, and locks up the dangers of the night.

For the Children.

Are you Kind to your Mother?

Young reader, always, in everything obedient? Do you aim studiously to do all in your power to make her happy? Do you reflect frequently and thankfully on what she has done for you from early infancy? Has she not toiled day and night to make you comfortable, quiet, peaceful and happy? O children, do you know a mother's love? can you fathom it?

There's music in a mother's voice,
More sweet than breezes sighing,
There's kindness in a mother's glance,
Too pure for ever dying.

Never, never displease your dear mother by a cross look, an angry word, a disobedient action, never.

A mother is a mother, and no friend like her. Beware how you offend or grieve her heart. God will not hold you guiltless. "Cursed be he that setteth light by his father or mother; and all the people shall say, 'amen.' "

"Sweet is the image of the brooding dove!
Holy as heaven a mother's tender love!
The love of many prayers and many tears
Which changes not with dim declining years,
The only love, which, on this teeming
earth,
Asks no return for passion's wayward birth."

You know not, young friends, how soon God may take this dear friend from you, consign her to the cold grave; and Oh, how keen the anguish of past disobedience and unkindness to one so dear, so lovely, so patient, so forbearing. But she is gone, gone! The tear of scalding grief cannot wipe away the guilt; your mother is gone, her lips are silent in death!

"Could I so ungrateful be,
As to cause a mother pain?
She was always good to me,
Can I yield her ill again?

Heavenly Father, thou didst give
Such a gift as this to me;
Grant me ever as I live,
Gratitude to her and thee."

—Golden Rule.

DON'T WASTE anything, little friends, not a particle, not a crumb. Some children, we know, are very loose and wasteful in their habits, in almost everything. They go to the table, cupboard or pantry, between meals, and eat to the full, till ready to burst, then throw away choice bits of food, while thousands are ready to perish for lack of bread, and who would be thankful, even for a dry crust to eat or a bone to pick. Now, such wasteful, gormandizing habits are shameful, wicked in the sight of God, the bountiful giver. There is no necessity of wasting at all; even the crumbs that fall from our tables may go to feed the innocent birds.

What did Christ do, when he fed thousands miraculously, with the remainder that was left? throw it away? Nay. "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost."

"Good children will be careful never to waste a crumb of bread; for a crumb will be food for the starving birds in winter. The sparrows chirp to you, and the robin redbreasts sing, and this we will call their thanks for the kindness of their little benefactors."

That little red robin will sit here and sing
His thanks for the crumbs that in deep snows you bring,
And still for your pleasure, the whole summer long,
Will warble the notes of his own pretty song.

—Golden Rule.

Let Me Pray First.

A very intelligent little girl was passing through the town a short time since, when she came to the spot where several idle little boys were amusing themselves by the very dangerous practice of throwing stones. Not observing her, one of the boys, by accident, threw a stone towards her, which struck her a cruel blow in the eye. She was carried home in great agony. The surgeon was sent for, and a very painful operation was declared necessary. When the time came, and the surgeon had taken out his instruments, she lay in her father's arms, and he asked her if she was ready.

"No, father; not yet," she replied.

"What do you wish us to wait for, my child?"

"I want to kneel in your lap and pray to Jesus first," she answered. And then kneeling, she prayed a few minutes, and afterward submitted to the operation with the patience of a woman.

How beautiful this little girl appears under these trying circumstances! Surely Jesus heard the prayer made in that hour; and he will love every child that calls upon his name. Let every boy and girl learn to pray, and let idle boys be careful how they throw stones.—Ex.

THE Bible divides men into two classes: those who trust in themselves, and those who trust in God. One class walk by their own light, trust in their own strength, fight their own battles, and have no confidence otherwise. The other, not neglecting to use the wisdom and strength which God has given them, still trust in his wisdom and his strength to carry out the weakness of theirs. The one class goes through life as orphans; the other has a Father.

Eld. S. S. Brewer

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1857. WHOLE NO. 90. VOL. V. NO. 12.

The World's Crisis.

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH HENRY TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

A supper Jesus did prepare
For his disciples dear;
The elements they all did share,
While Christ himself was here.

He bade his church observe the same,
Till he should come again;
Now while in heaven he doth remain,
This custom we'll retain.

We celebrate the dying love
Of God's beloved Son,
Who for us left the realms above,
And died for sinful man.

His blood was spilt, his body broke,
For us, on Calvary;
What matchless love this act bespoke,
While dying on the tree.

W. Sheldon.

Vermillion, M. T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. III.

Let the sceptic, who has hitherto imagined the Old Testament writings to have been devised by knavish priests or kings for selfish purposes, and to keep the multitude in awe and subjection, account upon any merely human principle, for the scriptural prophecies concerning the kingdoms of Israel, Judah, and Egypt, or concerning the cities of Tyre, Nineveh, Babylon, and Jerusalem. Nay, not to take so large a compass, but to bring the matter to one point, I defy any sceptic under the canopy of heaven, on simple human principles, to account for the present state of the Jews. Let any, be they ever so sceptical, give themselves time soberly to compare the twenty-eighth chapter of Deuteronomy with the history and dispersion of that extraordinary people, they cannot fail having their minds strongly impressed with conviction. This one argument is invincible, and not to be fairly got over by all the wit of men.

Again, I would say, let any reasonable sceptic ponder the remarkable features pertaining to the Messiah in all their extraordinary contingencies; let him consider that this doctrine depends, not upon any one prophetic annunciation, but upon the combined exhibitions of several different prophetic writers, each of whom communicate particulars to the grand description not mentioned by the other; let him then consider that these prophetic intimations commenced, not with the Jews, but with the first parents of mankind, and were continually extended by the revelation of new particulars from time to time, until about four hundred years prior to the manifestation of the individual thus prefigured, when the prophetic vision ceased, leaving the recorded annunciations in the hands of the Jewish nation, by which they were to verify the fulfillment of the revelations of the prophets after the very last of these inspired messengers had been for four centuries numbered with the dead; and I would ask whether such a personage as the Messiah has made his appearance or not? I, as a christian, affirm, the Jews and the sceptic deny.

There is but one way to decide the question, and that is by the Scriptures, which furnish us with no evidence by which the Messiah may be known, but by the works he will do. Then, the Messiah was to be the Messenger of the covenant between God and his people, Jesus Christ was that messenger. Compare Jer. 33: 20, 21; Mal. 3: 1; Isa. 63: 9; Heb. 8: 7–13; 10: 9; 13; 20, 21.

Messiah was to sustain the office of a prophet, when he came to redeem mankind,—Jesus Christ sustained that office in all its extent. Compare Deut. 18: 15, 16; Acts 3: 22; Luke 24: 19; Matt. 24th chap.

Messiah was to sustain the office of a Priest,—Jesus Christ was a Priest, and offered, not indeed the blood of bullocks and of goats, but his own most precious blood. Compare Zech. 13: and 11: 14.

Messiah was, moreover, to sustain the office of a King,—Jesus Christ would have been King of the Jews at his first advent, had the Jews received him. Compare Zech. 9: 9, with John 18: 37.

Messiah was to be the Sun of Righteousness, which should arise upon the world with salvation in its rays,—Jesus Christ was the Light of the world, who illuminateth every man that cometh unto him. Compare Mal. 4: 2 with John 1: 5, 9; 8: 12; 9: 5; 12: 35, 46; Luke 1: 7, 8; Rev. 22: 16.

Messiah was to be emphatically the Just One,—Jesus Christ not only answered the description, but is repeatedly called by that name. Compare 2 Sam. 23: 3; Isa. 11: 5; Acts 3: 14; 7: 52; 22: 14.

Messiah, to whom belonged the land of Judea, was to be denominated Immanuel,—Jesus Christ was the proprietor of the Holy Land and was expressly called by the name of Immanuel. Compare Isa. 7: 14; 8: 8; Matt, 1: 23.

Messiah was to be a great Shepherd, and to lay down his life for the sheep,—Jesus Christ was the great and good Shepherd and shed his blood in defence of his flock. Compare Zech. 13: 7; Ezek. 34: 23, 24, with John 10: 1–18.

Messiah was to be like the lion, which is the king of animals, of a noble and generous spirit,—Jesus Christ was the Lion of the tribe of Judah. Compare Gen. 49: 9; Rev. 5: 5.

Messiah was to be anointed with the Holy spirit in a larger degree than any other man ever was,—Jesus Christ was favored in this respect beyond all other persons that ever lived. Compare Ps. 45: 7 with Matt. 3: 16, and John 3: 34.

Messiah was to be of a meek and lowly disposition, humbling himself for the redemption of the world,—Jesus Christ was meek and lowly in mind, and answered the prophetic description in every respect. Compare Zech. 9: 9, with Matt. 11: 28, 29; John 13: 1–17; 2 Cor. 8: 9.

Messiah was to teach mankind the doctrine of salvation without ostentation and noise,—Jesus Christ was quiet and unambitious in all his public as well as private deportment. Compare Isa. 42: 14–21, with John 9: 3–7.

Messiah was to be endowed with a peculiar degree of wisdom and understanding,—Jesus Christ, his enemies being judges, spake as never man spake, and taught a more pure and excellent doctrine than ever had been received among mankind before. Compare Isa. 11; 1–5; John 7: 46; Matt. 13: 34–58; Matt. 5: 6, and 7th chap.

The doctrine of the Messiah was to be of the most healing, encouraging, and consolatory kind,—the doctrine of Jesus Christ was peculiarly adapted to the healing of wounded minds. Compare Isa. 61: 1–3, Matt. 11: 28–30; John 14: 1–3.

Messiah was to be peculiarly kind and affectionate to young, distressed, and tender-spirited persons,—Jesus Christ was singularly attentive to all such characters. Compare Isa. 40: 11; 55: 1–3; 61: 1–3; Matt. 12: 10-20; Mark 10: 13–16.

In confirmation of his divine mission, Messiah was to display many wonderful works among the people,—Jesus Christ wrought an abundance of miracles in confirmation of his pretensions, and the doctrine he taught. Compare Isa. 35: 5, 6, with Matt. 8th and 9th, chap. John 21: 25.

Messiah was to have but little success in preaching the gospel among his own countrymen, the Jews,—Jesus Christ was almost universally rejected by them. Compare Isa. 53: 1; 49: 4; Rom. 10: 1–4, 21.

If it should be objected that several of these circumstances are trifling, and unworthy of the spirit of prophecy to reveal, it may be very justly answered, that, the more minute some of these circumstances are in themselves, the greater and more convincing is the evidence that Jesus is the Messiah.

For the Crisis.

Spring.

Spring, the balmy, gentle Spring has come again, and a halo of living beauty is flung o'er the renewed face of Nature. O, there's much of the beautiful in this world of ours, much to raise the reflecting mind in adoring love to its infinite Creator—much to inspire the pure heart with emotions of gratitude and joy. Beautiful is the softened azure sky, with its clouds of silvery whiteness; beautiful beneath lies the blue lake, with its sparkling mimic waves; beautiful are the gushing streams and the green vales, the bursting buds and opening leaves, and thrice beautiful the fair young flowers that look up to us in the gleam of the warm, light sunshine, that rests on their mossy beds. O the sweet flowers! We greet them as children of a fairer clime, wandered down to us from our lost Paradise. Yes, Earth has much of beauty, but it is beauty in ruin—bright, fading, transitory bloom. While we gaze, it is passing away. The worm is concealed in the rose-bud—change and decay claim all; and look where we will, despite atheistical philosophy and vain reason, the candid mind meets unmistakable evidences of man's sad fall and the dread curse, and feels that "the trail of the serpent has passed over all."

Earth has its many joys too. Glad tones are struck from Nature's countless harps—the murmuring rills, the warbling wild birds, the humming insects, the echoing forests tell of joys. But, hark! borne to us on the fragrant breeze come sounds of woe—the sigh of the breaking heart—the moan of the suffering—the groan of the bondman—the wail of the orphan. List again,—mingled voices—the Past and the Prophetic, breathing of sadness and hope, are whispering ever,—earth is not as it was—not as it will be.

Yes, the Spring-time comes, ever welcome, with its verdure, sunshine and gladness, restoring a thousand things of loveliness and joy. But it brings no light to the bosom shrouded by despairing grief; it imparts no bloom to the pallid, sunken cheek of the dying; it restores not strength and vigor to the trembling, wasted limbs of sickness and age; it gives not back the missing one to the broken circle; it brings not to us the loved and lovely, hidden away from our eyes in the damp, dark grave, beneath the springing grass and the budding flowers.

What wonder if, with uplifted eye, we pray for the promised "restitution of all things?" What wonder if we long for the uprising of the "Sun of Righteousness?"—to feel the immortalizing influence of his "healing" beams? What wonder if our ears oft turn away from all earth-music, while we long to hear that voice, that once pronounced all things "very good," uttering from the great white throne,—"Behold, I make all things new!" and at his mandate, new, and fair, and good shall the heavens and earth become, to "wax old" no more, to know no more curse, but wear eternally their primal purity, loveliness and glory. No note of sadness shall blend with Creation's song in that glad morning; no tearful eye shall look out upon the fair scenes of restored Nature; its healthful gales shall fan no pale and aching brow; no sorrow-stricken heart shall wander lone and joyless amid its unfading beauty and delight; no weary, trembling feet shall tread those bright plains,

Where everlasting Spring-time reigns,
And never-withering flowers.

Maria T.

Cold Spring, Mass., May, '57.

For the Crisis.

"The Last Enemy that shall be Destroyed, is Death."

"How long shall death the tyrant reign.
And triumph o'er the just;
While the rich blood of martyrs slain,
Lies mingling with the dust?"

Cruel death! what hast thou done? robbed us of all our earthly joys, and nature mourns her comforts fled. Thou art a common traveler through the length and breadth of the land. Thou mayest triumph now, but thou art to be destroyed; thy triumph is short, for He who has the keys of death and the grave will conquer thee at last. What hast thou done, and what art thou still doing? Thou hast entered the abodes of peace and happiness, broken their ranks, sundered earthly ties, and caused hearts to bleed. We esteem thee not as a friend, but as a cruel enemy, the greatest enemy mortal man has upon earth; but the word has gone forth from Him who cannot lie—"the last enemy that is to be destroyed is death." He will "destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil."

Thou hast slain fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, companions and children, yea, no age is exempt from thy ruthless hand; the aged, the middle aged, the youth, and the child, are alike subject to thy tyrannical power. And can we esteem thee a friend? no, never; we love thee not, and we rejoice the time is drawing near when thou wilt have run thy race, and destruction shall be thy portion.

We know it is often said, thou art a friend in disguise, yet we shrink from thee—we love thee not. We know the troubles thou hast caused us, will work for our good, but no thanks to thee, our cruel foe.

Behold thy cruel power as we enter the sick room of that dying man, the companion of our youth, the father of our children. See those children as they draw near the bedside of that dying father; hear them sigh, behold their tears—what is the cause? The beloved father is struggling in the agonies of death. They must soon be left, without a father to counsel them in their youthful days. Can they feel a friend has come to rob them of an earthly parent? Nay, they shrink from him and fear his cruel darts.

Look again. Behold that heart-stricken wife, as she softly moves by the bedside of the beloved companion of her youth, death stamped upon his brow—her best, her dearest earthly friend; hear her sighs, her groans, while she bends her face to his and bedews his pallid cheek and brow with her briny tears. Her heart-strings almost broken, she exclaims from the bitterness of her soul, "was there ever sorrow like unto my sorrow?" She looks up to her Father, God, and what is her fervent prayer in that sad hour? "O! my Father, pity and strengthen me now! Behold me in affliction, and give me strength equal to my day!" God sees, he listens, he pities, strength is imparted, and, like drops of honey and oil, his promises fall into the wounded breast. "Thy Maker is thy husband." "He shall deliver thee in six troubles; yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee." Faith takes hold of the promises, and buoys up the spirit; calmness reigns within the soul while she remembers, death is not a perpetual sleep, and the sure promise—"thy brother shall rise again." He breathes his last—he is clad in the habiliments of the grave—he is laid in the coffin—she takes her last look, and silently follows him to the lone prison-house. She sees him deposited in the cold damp grave—she weeps and mourns—a widow left in sadness to pass through life's uneven journey alone. Oh, thou enemy, thou hast done this; but she listens to the voice of inspiration;—"I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plague; O grave, I will be thy destruction."

Has the reader ever felt the pangs of sorrow caused by our common enemy? then look up with confidence, believing the promise sure—"thy dead shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake, and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

Full well does the writer know the sorrows of a widow's heart, for she has drank the bitter cup to the very dregs, and knows how to sympathize with the afflicted. O, ye that weep for your loved ones, trust in God! look upward! your friends that have died in the Lord are not lost. When Jesus comes, the graves will be opened, death will be conquered, the dead awaked, to die no more.

Abigail Mussey.

Lake Village, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Our Rule of Life.

"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." Eccl. 12: 13. It is confidently affirmed by some that the "commandments" here referred to mean the ten on the tables of stone, no more, no less, and that the ten precepts constitute man's whole duty. By what law or rule of theology any one affirms this, I am quite unable to determine, unless it be the law of inference or assumption. If I understand the Sacred Oracles aright, the above language was uttered in a previous dispensation, and the commandments of God here announced embrace all the precepts embodied in the law God gave to Moses on Mt. Sinai, and this whole law which was perfect, holy, spiritual, and righteous altogether, the observance of which constituted man's whole duty during that age or dispensation. So I understand the ten commandments alone never constituted man's whole duty in any dispensation prior to the crucifixion of the Son of God; and surely they (the ten) do not in the gospel dispensation, for in this we find many other duties. Now then, let me inquire, what are some of the duties enjoined upon the people living in the gospel age? and every commandment which I may adduce, that is not found on the tables of stone, will demonstrate that the ten commandments do not constitute man's whole duty.

1. Is it duty to have faith in Christ the Life-giver? Ans. 1 John 3: 23.

2. Is it duty to confess that faith? Ans. Rom. 10: 9, 10.

3. Is it duty to believe the record that God has given of his Son? Ans. 1 John 5: 10, 11.

4. Is it duty to repent of your sins and forsake them? Ans. Acts. 3: 19.

5. Is it duty to put on Christ in the act baptism? Ans. Rom. 6: 3–5.

6. Is it duty to observe the Lord's supper? Ans. 1 Cor. 11: 23–26.

7. Is it duty to search the scriptures? Ans. John 5: 39.

8. Is it duty to be filled with the Spirit? Ans. Eph. 5: 18.

9. Is it duty not to be conformed to the world? Ans. Rom. 12: 2.

10. Is it duty to prove all things? Ans. 1 Thess. 5: 21.

11. Is it duty to pray without ceasing? Ans. Heb. 5: 17.

12. Is it duty to resist the devil? Ans. James 4: 7.

13. Is it duty to go into all the world and preach the gospel? Ans. Mark 16: 15.

14. Is it duty not to be overcharged with surfeiting, drunkeness, and cares of this life? Ans. Luke 21: 34–6.

15. Is it duty for husbands to love their wives? Ans. Eph. 5: 22–23.

16. Is it duty for the wife to reverence her husband? Ans. Eph. 5: 33.

17. Is it duty for the saints to esteem each other better than themselves, and not to look every man on his own things, but upon the things of others? Ans. Phil. 2: 3, 4.

18. Is it duty to comfort one another with the words of the Lord's coming, resurrection, &c.? Ans. 1 Thess. 4: 18.

19. Is it duty to be sanctified, and be ready always to give a reason of our hope to every man? Ans. 1 Pet. 3: 15.

20. Is it duty to fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on life eternal. Ans. 1 Tim, 6: 12.

21. Is it duty to love your enemies, and bless them that curse you? Ans. Matt. 5: 44.

None of the above requirements are found in the Decalogue, consequently our whole duty is to be found elsewhere. May the good Lord lead his people out of all error into the truth, and, ultimately, into the kingdom of God, is my sincere prayer.

A. N. Seymour.

For the Crisis.

The Three Angels in the Midst of Heaven.—Rev. 14: 6–12.

BY J. F. SWEET.

No. V.

(Continued from Crisis Vol. 3, Nos. 34, 35, 36.)

When we come to the second head, we find the western empire under Charlemagne, A. D. 800. The empire now being under two emperors, one in the east, and one in the west, the western empire becomes an image, or likeness to the scarlet beast, or eastern empire. This answers to the scarlet beast of seven heads and ten horns, which continued for about one hundred years and then fell to decay, and was succeeded, in 962, by Otho the Great, of the Saxon house of Germany. The Roman empire is Germanic from this time onward through the reign of the four succeeding heads;—Franconian, Suabian, Spanish and Austrian branches of the House of Hapsburg. This completes the Dragon's seven heads. While the last five of the Dragon's heads were reigning, the second head, or scarlet beast, "was not;" the same is true of the Dragon, from the time of Charlemagne until the second head of the Dragon again succeeds to the supremacy in the western empire, and becomes the 8th king, which was one of the seven and goes to perdition.

Infidel France succeeded Austria, the seventh head, in the year 1800. The battle of Marengo, June 14th, 1800, decided the fate of Italy. France now is in the supremacy in the western Roman Empire; hence, the scarlet beast or Dragon's second head, that "was," from A. D. 800 to 912, and "was not," from the downfall of the Carlovingian Dynasty, now hath ascended out of the bottomless pit. France has fulfilled the prophecy concerning the beast that ascendeth out of the pit. She has slain the two witnesses, which were to lie dead three and a half days; this was fulfilled in the French Revolution, 1793–6.

We have now proved by these facts, that there has been a bottomless pit in the past; that the government which constituted the second head of the Dragon, was in the pit, or abyss, for nearly 900 years. We are told the Dragon was bound a thousand years, that he should deceive the nations no more, until the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season, and will go out to deceive the nations in the four corners of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them to battle, &c.

Let us now go back from the time that the French, under Napoleon, succeeded the Austrians, June 14, 1800, when the battle of Marengo decided the fate of Italy, to the time when the Carlovingian Dynasty fell into decay, in the year 912. This gives us a period of 888 years, from 912 to 1800. From 800 to 912, the French enjoyed the empire, under eight emperors; when Louis III. the last prince of the race of Charlemagne, dying without male issue, Conrad, count of Franconia, son-in-law to Louis, was elected emperor, but was not acknowledged in Italy, nor in France. Mosheim, Vol. 2, p. 155. When we add to the 888 years, (when the scarlet beast, or French Empire was in the pit,) the 112 years that they enjoyed the empire, under eight emperors, we have 1000 years from the time the French succeeded the Dragon's first head; and hence, the year 800, when Pope Leo III. crowned Charlemagne, is the year when the angel that came down from heaven bound the Dragon and shut him up, that he should deceive the nations no more until the 1000 years should be fulfilled. And then, France, in her infidel character, will come up as the representative of the Dragon, and out of her mouth will issue one of the frog spirits, and out of the beast (Austria,) another, and out of the false prophet, (Papal hierarchy,) a third; and these three spirits will go out under the sixth vial, to gather the kings of the earth to "the battle of that great day of God Almighty;" and they will encompass the beloved city, in the same sense as the Leopard beast trod it under foot forty-two months; and fire will come down from heaven and devour them. The Devil, Dragon, Serpent, Satan—"the French Empire"—that deceived them, will be cast into the lake of fire, where will be also the beast (Austria) and the false prophet, (Papacy) and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever; which will be the end of this present world, or age.

We have said the angel of Chapter 20 was a fallen angel, from the fact that he was seen to come down from heaven one thousand years and a little season before the judgment. Allowing half a century for the little season, added to the 1000 years, it will carry us back to the time when the three angels were in the midst of heaven—the commencement of the ninth century. The first of these three angels proclaims the hour of his judgment has come; the second, Babylon has fallen; the third cautions the saints against the worship of the Leopard beast, or image. Chap. 14: 6–11. The hour of judgment refers to the judgments of the seven vials of the wrath of God, the first of which was poured out on the earth, (western empire,) the second was poured on the sea, (eastern empire,) the third on the rivers and fountains of waters, (German nations,) the fourth on the sun, (the Gospel,) the fifth on the seat of the beast, (Spain, the sixth head,) the sixth on the river Euphrates, "and the water thereof was dried up." (The Euphrates was the mystical river, on which mystic Babylon sat for 1260 years, while she was nourished by the nations on which she sat, as represented by the seven heads, on which the woman sitteth. Chap. 7th.) "Austria was the last of the seven heads. In the latter part of the 18th century, the Catholic Church, or Babylon, began to experience that the support she had formerly received from the German nation was being withdrawn from her, and this prepared the way for the chastisement she received from infidel France. The revolutionary torrent overflowed the neighboring countries, and laid waste the Roman Church. Her priests were massacred, her silver shrines were turned into money, her bells converted into cannon, and her churches and convents into barracks for soldiers. From the Atlantic to the Adriatic, she presented one appalling spectacle. She had shed the blood of saints and prophets, and God now gave her blood to drink." (Marsh' Ecc. History, p. 300.)

The sixth vial also prepares the way for the kings of the east. This symbol refers to the ten horns on the scarlet beast; these are ten kings, which, with the beast, shall hate the harlot, and make her desolate. Chap. 17. But the sixth vial only prepares the way for the ten kings. Their work of eating the flesh of the harlot, and burning her with fire, is under the pouring out of the seventh vial; then great Babylon comes "in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of her wrath." The dates for these vials we understand to be,—first, 841; the second 1050; third, 1266; fourth, 1516,—the Reformation in Germany. This vial was poured on the sun, (Gospel,) and power was given to the Gospel to scorch men with great heat. This is, of course, moral heat, not literal fire, but refers to the great light brought out by the Reformers, which so disturbed the Catholic church, and wrought a great revolution in Europe, and produced a new christianity. (D'Aubigne's Reformation.) The date for the fifth vial is 1588; the sixth, the latter part of the 18th century; the seventh is yet future, and this will fill up the cup, and complete the indignation, which brings us to the time of trouble, Dan. 12, and the great earthquake, Rev. 16: 17, 18, when the four angels let go the four winds. The mystery of God is then finished, the last saint sealed, and the half hour ensues.

The second angel cried, "Babylon is fallen," referring to the moral fall, the falling away, or apostasy of the Catholic Church.

The third angel refers to the wine of the wrath of God which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation, (seven vials,) and says, those that worship the beast, or his image, shall drink thereof, and be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the Lamb and the holy angels. Here is the patience of the saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus. In Chap. 6: 9, this class is represented as being slain when the fifth seal was opened; on this class the Dragon went to make war. Chap. 12. We compare Chap. 6: 29, and 12: 17, with 13: 10, and we learn that the saints that were noted for faith and patience lived in the dark ages—the forty-two months—while the Leopard beast made war on them. They were seen, when the fifth seal was opened, crying for God to avenge their blood on them that dwelt on the earth. They were seen by John in the thousand years, when the Dragon was bound, (Chap. 20: 4,) and he gives us to understand they were beheaded as witnesses for Jesus and the word of God; which had not worshipped the beast, nor his image, nor had received the mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands.

In Chap. 13: 15, we learn that the image caused all that would not worship it to be killed; notwithstanding this, the third angel indirectly exhorts the saints not to worship the beast, or his image. Now if the saints keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus, they will not worship the image; and hence, they will incur the penalty of death, which the image says shall be inflicted on them that refuse to worship it. We see that this penalty was inflicted on those that witnessed for Jesus and the word of God, in the thousand years, while the Dragon was bound. And this is the very time for this work to be accomplished; for the making of an image to the Leopard beast was the very act that effected the binding of the Dragon. "The Pope, Leo III, had quarrelled with the Emperor of the East, and courted the favor of the French, who had, in 756, given the Exarchate of Ravenna to Pope Stephen II., who was already possessed of the Duchy of Rome. This donation of Pepin, the French king, was an augmentation of the Romish dominion, an extension of the Romish territory." Koch' Notes on Chap. 2, Note 26.

This is represented in Chap. 13, by the two-horned beast, which said to those that dwelt on the earth, (Western Empire,) "that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword and did live." The beast that had the wound by the sword was the Leopard beast. To make an image to the empire in the east would be, to make an empire in the west; and this was effected in A. D. 800, when Leo III. crowned Charlemagne Emperor of the Western Roman Empire. Here commences the history of the Dragon's second head; and when the second head obtains, the woman takes her seat thereon; and here commences the government symbolized by the scarlet beast, the second head, the image to the Leopard beast. Here the image beast and woman unite, and those that refuse to take the mark of the image are persecuted; and we are informed by History, that Charlemagne, "unsparing of blood, though not constitutionally cruel, and wholly indifferent to the means which his ambition prescribed, he beheaded in one day 4,000 Saxons; an act of atrocious butchery, after which his persecuting edicts, pronouncing the pain of death against those who refused baptism, or even who ate flesh during Lent, seem scarcely worthy of notice." Hallam's Middle Ages. Vol. 1st, Chap. 1st, p. 10.

From J. Brackett.

Bro. Grant:—Though I have noticed many appointments in the Crisis made last winter, and this spring, by the ministering brethren in other States, I have noticed none for Hermon.

We have been anxiously and patiently hoping to see some appointments in the Crisis, by some of the watchmen on the walls of Zion, to preach the word of life in Hermon, especially by Brn. Burnham, Berick, Couch, &c., who promised to visit us again soon, and whom it would make our hearts glad to see.

Our hearts are ever open to receive those who minister the things of the kingdom—who bring glad tidings, rightly dividing the word, and declaring the whole counsel of God. Appointments would be gladly received at any and all times in Hermon, whether made by those ministering brethren who have visited us, or others. I hope the day of small things is not despised, nor that we are forgotten because some of us have become poor by waiting and looking at time, instead of occupying till the Lord come. We have waited long in vain. We have hoped long in vain, until "hope deferred maketh the heart sick;" yet we continue to hope that the Lord of the harvest will send faithful laborers into this part of his vineyard. "Pure and undefiled religion" appears to be in a very low state in this place.

Will not some of the ministers of the Lord, who have visited us and promised to visit us, hear the voice from Macedonia,—"Come over and help us?"

In hope of the Kingdom of God, I am your brother in Christ.

John Brackett.

North Hermon, Me., April 13, '57.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MAY 20, 1856.

Spiritualists.

It will be seen in another column, under the heading of "The Great Coming Crisis," that Spiritualists are expecting great revolutions in the physical, moral, and political world, and that they are immediately to transpire. They tell us, man is about to return to his primitive state, and no longer subsist on animal food; that the millennium is soon to commence, and our race are to dwell together in peace and harmony; but, there is to be much distress and perplexity before this heavenly state is introduced. Instead of teaching that Jesus is coming to make this glorious change, they tell us that a new planet, proceeding from the sun, will be the instrument to produce the wonderful result. They tell us, in short, that we shall soon have a new heavens and a new earth; that the "Millerites" were right in the time, but wrong in the manner of Christ's coming. It was Spiritualism that they should have expected, instead of the personal coming of Christ. But we can thank the Lord and take courage, knowing from the signs around us, Spiritualism being a prominent one foretold in the Bible to indicate the last days, that the "same Jesus" which was taken up into heaven shall so come "in like manner" as he went into heaven, and that is, personally and visibly. We have no doubt about this matter. Praise the Lord, for a well grounded hope in these times of peril.

Spiritualists tell us that Christ is making the second advent to them in the various private rooms where they have their circles. Christ says in Matt. 24: 26, in connection with other signs of his second coming, "wherefore if they shall say unto you, ... behold he is in the secret chambers, believe it not," but tells us that when he comes, "every eye shall see him;" it will be as evident as when the glaring lightning shines from the eastern to the western horizon.

If it were not for the fatal results of this delusion, we should feel amused at the ingenuity shown by the devil and his angels (demons) in turning away the minds of the people from the truth. They know full well that Christ is soon to come, and should they tell the people that a distinguished personage was coming from heaven, then all would say at once,—it is Jesus; but instead of this, they inform us that a new planet is the object of expectation. They know also that "distress of nations with perplexity" will prevail just before the second advent of Messiah, for this is foretold in the scriptures, which they know to be true, and the fact is now so plain, that they hope to persuade people to believe their lies, if they tell them some truth; hence they speak of a new heaven and a new earth, where the children of God will happy. Our prayer is, come, Lord Jesus, come and reign. Thank the Lord, our pilgrimage will soon end in glory. Let us all be faithful.

The Herald of Gospel Liberty.

This is said to be the first religious newspaper ever published. The publication of this paper was first suggested to Elias Smith, in the summer of 1807, by Isaac Wilber, Esq., then a member of Congress.

The first number was issued in Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 1, 1808. It started with a subscription list numbering two hundred and seventy-four. In Sept., 1815, seven years later, it had multiplied its list to fifteen hundred. It was afterwards published, semi-monthly, in Portland, Me.; and later still, in Philadelphia, Penn.

In size, it was considerable less than one half of the Crisis, but it contained much truth. This paper is now published in Newburyport, Mass., under the editorial charge of B. F. Carter.

Elias Smith and his associates denominated themselves (as all followers of Christ should) christians, and took the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice.

He held to the doctrine of the future personal appearing of Jesus Christ, "when (as he says,) God will reward his servants, the prophets, his saints, and them that fear him, both small and great; when he will at the same time destroy them that destroy the earth, whose punishment will be everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, which destruction will be their end,—'whose end is destruction.'" These views he advocated through the Herald.

We would refer our readers to another column, for an extract from the above mentioned paper, under the heading—"Portrait."

If any one of our readers should have occasion to consult a very distinguished Oculist, one who is a complete master of this branch of surgery, and has performed with complete success the most difficult operations upon the eyes, we would refer them to Dr. H. W. Williams, 33 Essex Street, Boston. He has just taken a Ptergium from one of the eyes of the editor, in a very skillful manner. All who visit him, will meet an amiable gentleman.

Conference.

The Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Semi-Annual Conference stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, June 5th. A good representation is desired. Service at the Chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

P. B. Morgan, Chairman.

Tent Notice.

The brethren in the West will not forget that the New England Mission Tent is at their service for the Western Mission. Of the importance of Tent meetings during the summer, and especially where a house of sufficient size cannot be obtained, our brethren are fully informed. Bearing in mind the shortness of time, and the importance of the message we bear to the world, we earnestly hope the New England Mission Tent may be kept constantly in the field during the summer, should time continue. Brethren wishing the Tent, can write to myself or Bro. M. Chandler of this place. P. B. Morgan.

Cordova, Rock Island Co., Ill.

☞ Extract from a letter of Joseph Wolff, "To the Church of Christ in Great Britain and Ireland," dated Jerusalem, April 20, 1829:

"In short, I proclaimed for two months to the Jews the great truth—first, that Jesus of Nazareth came the first time on earth despised and rejected of men to die for poor sinners; and secondly, that he will come again with glory and majesty, and glorious in his apparel, and traveling in the greatness of his strength, he will come, the Son of Man, in the year 1847, in the clouds of Heaven, and gather all the tribes of Israel, and govern in person as man and God in the literal city of Jerusalem, with his saints, and be adored in the Temple, which will be rebuilt, and thus he shall govern 1,000 years; and I, Joseph Wolff, shall see with my own eyes, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in their own bodies, in their glorified bodies; and I shall see thee, Elijah, and thee, Isaiah, and thee, Jeremiah, and thee, David, whose songs have guided me to Jesus of Nazareth. I shall see you all here at Jerusalem, where I am now writing these lines! These were the topics upon which I spoke, not only with Jews, but likewise with some Mussulmen. The Scriptures beside us could testify of all this truth having been circulated publicly in the market-place of Jerusalem. We went to Bethlehem, and then in the open market-place I proclaimed the Gospel to the Christians of that place, not far from that spot where that holy Child Jesus was born."—Christian Watchman.

For the Crisis.

Good Nature.

There is nothing like it—nothing that can supply its absence. Where you see it there is sunshine, where you miss it there is gloom. It is the poor man's privilege to have it amid his poverty,—and the riches of the wealthy cannot buy it. It streams into the humble cottage, bright as the sunbeam that darts through the casement. It smoothes the couch of the suffering invalid. It cheers the desponding hearts of those whose earthly hopes have been wrecked upon the sea of time. It makes the patched garments look better, feel warmer, and wear easier than the purple that covers many an aching heart; the brimless hat of contented, honest, and good natured poverty feels better than many a mitre, and many a crown. It makes the "dinner of herbs" delicious—the rosy-cheeked children that gather to partake it do so with a greater relish than is experienced by many a fastidious heir of luxury around a banquet of royal dainties. Yea, and "the corner of an housetop," where all is peacefulness and good nature, seems to grow large, and quiet, and airy, and comfortable, and comely; while a wide house without it, is but a great prison — a place of torment and of brawls.

Good nature in the wife, the husband, the parents, the children, the servants, the master, the neighbor, the friend, the community, the church and the world, at all times, in every place,—it soothes the sorrows of time; it smoothes the asperities of life; it cheers the gloom of adversity; it sheds light upon the palmy hours of prosperity; it brings gladness to the tired and the afflicted; it pours oil and wine into the wounds which earth hath made; it spreads rills of consolation all about; it metes out gladness to all who come within its sphere, and it returns again to our own bosoms, in good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over.

All this, and more, good nature does. Let us try to cultivate it. Let us seek to exemplify it. Let us pray that the Living God may assist us by his grace, to follow the example of Jesus Christ who was so full of gentleness, mercy, goodness and compassion, that at last we may inherit the earth with the meek,—may see God with the pure in heart,—may be satisfied with those that hunger and thirst after righteousness, and may find with all the reviled and persecuted followers of Jesus, that our reward is great in heaven. Now let us try and see if we cannot be good natured. H. L. H.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 24, '56.

For the Crisis.

Evil Speaking.

What have you got to offer against that brother or sister? "Why, nothing, in particular!" Then say nothing. For Christ's sake, say nothing against one of his disciples, unless there is cause! Has your neighbor injured you? "No!" Then, why speak a word which should injure his feelings, if he knew it, or reflect upon his position or character among men, and do that which will give you a conscious inferiority and condemnation in his presence, which deprives you of his sympathy, or possibly of his aid when you may need it, unless he should prove to be a better christian than yourself?

But why do you tell it? He has done no harm to you!—You do not wish to harm him—do not know that what is said about him is true. "I did not originate it." Somebody did! "Such an one." Well, you repeat it, true or false. 'Tis speaking evil of him, for, it is an evil thing said concerning him, and if not true, injurious without any plausible justification, and you must not "take up a reproach against your neighbor."

If you had no desire to retaliate, (that were bad enough,) or to justify yourself, and still gathered up some trifles, and framed a story, which was true or false, as a whole, and then set the ball in motion, or took up "a reproach" and spake it to the confidential friend, and he to another, till it became common talk—and it lost nothing in going the rounds—you must still share in the responsibility of the result—'twas like the Alpine snowball—it becomes an avalanche. What is your object? What can it have been? Shame on your nature! What an object!! Merely to tell something new—to have a time of mirthfulness and amusement over some one's weakness, or folly, or sin. Had you no other news to tell? No other employment for the mind and tongue, but such simple gossip? and that not innocent, because trifling with the sacred treasures of another. No, indeed! I cannot trust you even there. There either was a definite motive arising from one of the basest elements of our nature—what is more base than envy?—and the motive, to stop the progress of the person traduced, even if it would not promote your own; but, generally, people suppose that by the hindrance offered to others they may themselves the better succeed; or, again, it mey be from the very love of evil itself. Examine yourself! closely question action, to determine its principle, will you? "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth." Look out for the tongue, that widening flame, ignited by the breath of hell! more difficult to control than the plunging ship in the fierce storm, or the war-steed in the battle-strife.

You will not admit it is to injure the one or benefit the other, not even to benefit another neighbor or the church. You dare not say that!! Well, what next? It will yet appear that many speak evil of others even if the things are true, (alas! how often they are entirely untrue) for the love of speaking thus—of thinking thus—of hearing things thus. Now this betrays a consciousness of being far below what God requires—of being allied to evil,—aye, in principle. Fearful condition! God pity all such as love the evil elements in our nature, and "evil communications" which "corrupt good manners," and good morals.

Either the one or the other has started the excitement—it has now become a great fire, and the humble child of God or innocent neighbor is suffering. All for what? Why, just to gratify your desire to tell something new! or to nourish your innate love of evil, which ought long since to have been rooted out of your poor heart, by the power of divine truth and love—to give you a grin of fiendish delight when you see another weep, and step upon another broken, bleeding heart, in your strides to success. Delta.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—I have just returned from a tour among the brethren in N. H. I visited New Boston, where there are but two families of Advent believers. They continue to meet together on Sundays, to stir up each other to hold on to the promises of the gospel.

I called on Bro. Manning at Goffstown, who, with his wife, seems fixed in his determination to serve the Lord and look for his Son. I thought of the text, "Mine heritage is unto me as a speckled bird; all the birds round about are against her."

I called on Brn. Preble and Locke, at East Weare. They are trying to live out religion, and I believe they are living epsitles known and read by all men. They have to contend with sectarianism, with opposition, and wickedness in high places. Bro Preble's health is very feeble, yet he preaches to the few who are willing to hear.

At Concord, I had a blessed season. I found a gathering spirit there. The brethren had been divided and subdivided, until hardly two could see alike, or meet together to worship. But I see them coming together again, worshiping God unitedly, although each had their own views with regard to what is truth; and there seemed to be no disposition to hold each other off, on account of their peculiar views. Praise the Lord! this is as it should be. I do rejoice that the judging, testing spirit is being laid aside, and brotherly love, charity, and kindness, taking the place of that unlovely spirit. I spent the State fast at Concord, and it was truly a day of prayer. After prayer, several cases of the poor brethren were presented for consideration, and discussed freely, yes, and unitedly too. Praise the Lord! O yes, these are some things which christians can all unite in, and if brethren would cease to talk so much about their differences of opinion on doctrine and talk more about their duty to God and their fellow men, they would find their hearts united in love, cemented into one; they would forget the little differences of opinion, in the great and noble duties of religion; then would they be more likely to convince each other of doctrinal truths. The brethren at Concord all took hold together, all were united in this thing, and immediately a collection was taken up of from six to seven dollars. This speaks well for the state of religion in Concord. God will bless them.

In Waterloo, I attended one meeting. There the brethren are holding on well.

I visited scattered brethren in Sutton, and New London, where they have no meetings. These scattered ones I have generally found in a good state, firm in the faith, waiting with patience the coming of the Just One.

In Goshen, I found a few living ones, where Bro. Burnham had been, and stirred them up exceedingly. There I experienced the hospitality of Bro. Cain and family. The Lord bless them is my prayer.

I visited Washington, where are quite a number of Seventh Day brethren. These I visited, for I am a Seventh Day Sabbath keeper myself, although I do not make a test of it. The brethren at Washington are quite engaged—firm in the faith—living epistles. Here I also found some who believe with me in the idea of a thousand years between the first and second resurrection, and of a work to be done in that space of time—prophecies to be fulfilled—the gathering of the saints with Jesus on Mount Olivet—the cleansing of the sanctuary, or the mountain of his holiness. Ex. 15: 17; Dan. 8: 14; Zech. 14: 4, 5. Here I spent several days very pleasantly, and, I trust, profitably. The Lord bless those kind-hearted saints.

Next, I went to Stoddard, where Bro. Dodge and family live, where I found a very hospitable house indeed. Then, through various of the towns on my way home, and called at Groton Junction, at Bro. Nason's, where they are having a stirring up time. The prospects in that place are truly encouraging.

I am rather worn down by continued labor, but my heart is fixed trusting in the Lord, and my faith lays strong hold of the promises of God to cleanse the earth from the effects of the curse, and restore man by the resurrection from the dead.

Yours, BENJAMIN SPAULDING.

Chelmsford, Mass., May, '57.

From Bro. Geo. Whipple.

BRO. GRANT:—While we are rejoiced to hear from our Brethren and Sisters in various places, through the medium of the "Crisis," it appears to me it would rejoice others to hear from the few in this place who are "waiting for the consolation of Israel." There are in this place some twenty, perhaps, who are believers in the immediate coming of Jesus, who are, probably, daily saying,—"come!" and who hear the spirit saying,—"Behold! I come quickly!" and respond as did John—"Amen. Even so, come Lord Jesus."

Our dear brethren and sisters, "we are as sheep without a shepherd"—have had no one to preach unto us the "gospel of the kingdom," since Bro. Edwin Burnham and P. B. Morgan visited us two years ago. It fills me with sadness when I read in the Crisis the appointments of the various preaching brethren in the Eastern States; really, it seems as if you "have enough and to spare, while we perish with hunger." I wish it were otherwise; perhaps it were better if we were able to place a missionary in every destitute field; but I don't know. I only know this much, if we are diligent in the use of such means of grace as we do enjoy, no necessary thing will be withheld from us. I know God does and will abundantly bless us, and we shall not lack any good thing.

O, what a blessed Master we have! He don't forget the scattered ones; yea, doth he not come himself with some precious and reviving cordial to those who are without a shepherd? Yes, indeed.

And now, dear Brother or Sister, whoever, or wherever you are, though you may be entirely isolated and alone, with no one to sympathize with you, don't mourn or repine, but keep about your Master's work; remember what he says,—"go ye also into my vineyard, and whatsoever is right, I will give you." Is He able to pay? Yes. Has He ever failed to pay? No. Do you think He ever will defraud one of his servants? No. Well, then, where will you find a better Master? Where can you lay up treasures and have them so safe? Finally, I think on the whole, that I have more reason to be joyful, than otherwise. Farewell, till we meet in the kingdom. Yours suffering for glory, honor, and immortality,

GEO. WHIPPLE.

Ottaway, Ill.

BRO. GRANT:—God is stirring the people. I never saw God work more powerfully upon the people than at the present. I have had a good time on this trip, have seen many break down under God's Spirit, and come out decided to start anew in his service.

There never was a time when experimental and practical religious subjects were needed as much as at this time. It works like meal in the pot of death. The whole moral atmosphere is tainted and poisoned with the wickedness of this age, and nothing but the individual knowledge of sins forgiven will answer the purpose in these days. Doctrines are good in their place, but will not be a guarantee for our salvation.

I find some very sound in the faith, and no fruits of the Spirit developed. To hold the truth in unrighteousness will be a great sin. Every man and woman can do something in the cause of God, and be the means of saving others, if they will work. Small talents are buried up to that extent, that the church of God is deeply suffering. I mean to encourage such to dig up the napkins, and scour up the coin, and let the image appear. Some of these doctrinal critics will have an awful account to give for stepping on God's lambs, and driving or frightening them away from their Father's crib. One third of Peter's work was to feed the lambs. Let us do it.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Manchester, April 29, '57.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I'M WEARY.

I'm weary, so weary, O when shall I rest
From the bondage of sin, the vain things of earth,
Its troubles, its sorrows, its labors unblest,
With flattering allurements, and vain, hollow mirth?

I'm weary of follies which lead me astray,
Which cause me to mourn and tears to be shed;
I sigh for the land that is holy alway,
Where tears and temptations forever are fled.

I'm weary of earth,—its hopes are untrue,
Its pleasures are short, its honors are vain;
I turn from them all, for by faith now I view
The kingdom of Jesus, which I hope soon to gain.

I'm weary, so weary, O when shall I rest
In that peaceful Kingdom, the City of God;
The fields of bright glory to range with the blest,
And dwell in the presence of Jesus my Lord?

E. M. JACKMAN.

Woodstock, N. H.

For the Children.

A Young Hero.

Master Walters had been much annoyed by some one of his scholars whistling in school. Whenever he called a boy to order for such disturbance, he would plead that it was unintentional—"he forgot all about where he was." This became so frequent, the master threatened a severe punishment to the next offender. The next day, when the room was unusually quiet, a loud, sharp whistle broke the stillness. Every one asserted that it was a certain boy who had the reputation of a mischief-maker and a liar. He was called up; and though with a somewhat stubborn look, he denied it again, he was commanded to hold out his hand. At this instant a little slender fellow, not more than seven years old, came out, and with a very pale but decided face, held out his hand, saying as he did so, with a clear tone and firm air of a hero: "Mr. Walters, sir, do not punish him—I whistled. I was doing a long, hard sum, and in rubbing out another, rubbed it out by mistake and spoiled it all, and before I thought, I whistled right out, sir. I was very much afraid, but I could not sit there and act a lie, when I knew who was to blame. You may ferule me, sir, as you should." And, with all the firmness he could command, he again held out the little hand, never for a moment doubting that he was to be punished.

Mr. Walters was much affected.

"Charles," said he, looking at the erect form of the delicate child, who had made such a conquest over his natural timidity, "I would not strike you a blow for the world. No one here doubts that you spoke the truth; you did not mean to whistle. You have been a hero, sir."

The boy went back to his seat with a flushed face, and quietly went on with his sums. He must have felt that every eye was upon him in admiration, for the smallest scholar could appreciate the moral courage of such an action.

Foreign News.

EIGHT DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, May 15.

Steamship Asia, from Liverpool Saturday afternoon, May 2d, 3 P. M., arrived at her dock at this port about 9 o'clock this A. M.

The Asia passed ship Tuscarora, from Liverpool for Philadelphia, putting back, having been in collision with ship Andrew Foster of New York; the latter sunk immediately; captain saved; no further particulars.

CHINA.—Le Nord of Brussels says the French authorities will formally demand a permanent embassy at Pekin, and, in case of a refusal, will endeavor, in concert with the English forces, to penetrate to the capital by water, and there dictate terms to the Chinese government.

From Shanghai it is stated that a band of rebels had burned Ho-How, in the province of Kiangse, and fifteen chops of tea were destroyed.

The Mandarin Governor of Whampoa had sentenced three Chinese merchants to death, for having carried on commercial relations with the English, contrary to his commands.

The accounts of the revolt and slaughter of 2000 Chinese, by Sir James Brooke, at Sarawak, are confirmed.

HONG KONG, March 15th. The Gulnare, Wardrop, from Swatow, which arrived on the 13th, on her way to Havana, left Swatow the 11th, with 432 coolies on board. The following morning the Chinese attacked the watch, wounding the third mate and a seaman, but after about ten minutes' fighting they were driven below. They then attempted to burn the ship by setting fire to her in three different places. Eleven coolies were killed, three drowned, and sixteen wounded.

With the exception of increased discontent in the Turkish Principalities, there is little European news.

The Queen of Spain's speech will announce the re-establishment of friendly relations between Spain and Rome, and hopes Mexico will apologize and pay indemnities, otherwise Spain will take hostile measures.

Reports are again in circulation that the King of Denmark will be forced to abdicate.

The Duchess of Gloucester, the last surviving daughter of George III., died April 30.

Obituary.

Died, in East Kent, Ct., April 5th 1857, Henry, son of Morgan and Fanny Morehouse, aged 7 years, 5 months, and 3 days.

Henry was the third and last child of Bro. Morehouse, an interesting and good little boy, very conscientious and tender-hearted, and most tenderly loved by his parents and friends. I have seldom if ever known the death of one so young to cause so much sorrow and sympathy among a large circle of relatives and friends. Yet his parents do not mourn as those that have no hope, for they believe that as "Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him;" and they are comforted with the hope of a better resurrection, when they expect to have their three little ones restored to their fond embrace, as they shall come from the land of the enemy unto their own borders, clad with immortal beauty, to die no more.

I. M.

Domestic Summary.

Gen. Walker lost two brothers by the Nicaraguan war. L. Norvell Walker was the name of the one who died lately on the steamer Empire City, between Aspinwall and New Orleans.

LOUSVILLE, May 12.—By late papers from Central Mississippi, we learn that a great hail storm had destroyed all the crops in that quarter.

A freshet had occurred at Jackson, Tenn., which washed away parts of the railroad and several cars.

In some places near Hinsdale, Berkshire County, May 11, the snow still lay in drifts several feet deep.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—New Orleans papers of Thursday, contain an account of a tremenduous hail storm near Camden, Arkansas, which destroyed the crops, one-half of the wheat crop being lost.

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—Gen. Walker had evacuated Rivas, and was on board a British man-of-war at San Juan.

IMPORMANT REPORT FROM UTAH.—A report was prevalent at Carson Valley (California,) that Brigham Young has been compelled to flee from Salt Lake, to save himself from the fury of his flock.

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—We have dates from the City of Mexico to April 29.—The filibuster expedition to Sonora, was creating great excitement; 4000 troops had been sent against it. It was reported that Crabbe, the leader of the filibusters, had captured several points.

LOUISVILLE, May 13.—Knoxville (Tenn.) papers say that provender is so scarce, that the inhabitants are obliged to cut down trees for the cattle to eat the buds. The greatest want exists among the poorer classes.

The Circuit Court at Jacksonborough, was obliged to adjourn without sitting, feed for the horses of the Judge and lawyers being unprocurable.

May 14.—Since the late rains, the grain crops, in a circle around here, within a radius of 100 miles, look quite promising. We have the same accounts from Louisana and Virginia.

Dea. Nathan Little, of the first church in Newbury, one of the most active and benevolent orthodox Congregationalists of Essex county, has been suspended for expressing a doubt of the eternity of future punishment. His probation expires in June, when he will be finally cut off and dropped if he does not recant. The entire honesty of the good deacon is admitted, but the routine of church discipline requires that doubt as to an article of faith shall be treated as a crime—Springfield Republican.

ST. PETER'S IN NEW YORK.—Among the incidents of the debate in the New York Assembly upon Trinity Church was the statement that the Roman Catholics are about building, and have made the necessary preparations for it, a cathedral at the upper part of the Fifth Avenue, of size exceeded only by St. Peter's and St. Paul's of the Old World, and the two towers of which are to rise one hundred feet above that of Trinity.

METEOR.—A most brilliant Meteor of large size and of intense silvery brightness (like the light of the moon,) appeared in the heavens last evening about 11 o'clock, moving from south-east towards the north-west. Those who were so fortunate as to catch a glimpse of the shining monster, describe it as the most wonderful spectacle which ever lighted up the firmament. By its light one could see to read.—N. Y. Mirror.

LOUISVILLE, May 14.—The four negroes, accused of murdering the Joyce family, some months ago, were tried and acquitted yesterday, notwithstanding one of their number turned State's evidence. The testimony of the latter, however, was not legally corroborated. There was great excitement about the court-house in consequence, and towards night, a mob, having a cannon, attacked the jail, and fired upon it. The firing was returned; but, finally, the jailor surrendered his prisoners, two of whom were hung by the mob. The third cut his throat, and died. The one who turned State's evidence was unmolested.

THE SUFFERINGS IN NORTH MICHIGAN. Detroit, May 16.—A meeting was held last night, at City Hall, to raise means for the relief of the destitute people in Northern Michigan. A citizen of Detroit county was present, whose wife and three children had died of starvation, and who gave a good many accounts of the sufferings in that region. People were dying for want of food. It was decided to raise $5000 in this city for the purchase of food for the immediate relief of the sufferers. $1000 was subscribed in the hall.

It is stated that thirty-nine Roman Catholics have publicly joined the National Church of Geneva; this was the result of a course of lectures on the errors of Popery, given by ministers of the Reformed faith during last winter.

UTAH NEWS—FLIGHT OF BRIGHAM YOUNG CONFIRMED.—Washington, May 16. Official dispatches recently received warrant the belief that Brigham Young has fled from Utah, as it is known that he was in treaty with the Indians for safe conduct through the country. Ex-Justice Drummond has arrived here for consultation on the affairs of the territory.

THE HOOSAC TUNNEL.—The new machine to work the Hoosac Tunnel, costing $25.000, is on the ground and being put together. It is expected to cut through 25 feet of solid rock in a day. At the eastern end of the tunnel 491 feet is completed; at the western end the whole length of roadway is 1200.

THE GREAT COMING CRISIS!

Soon to take place in the Earth and the Heavens; consisting of,

1. A GRAND EXPANSION OF THE WHOLE SOLAR SYSTEM, by the Birth of a New Planet from the Sun.

2. A MARKED GEOLOGICAL CHANGE IN THE EARTH, making a thorough Transformation of the Globe.

3. Corresponding, Political, Religious and Social Changes over the Whole Earth, accompanied by War, Pestilence and Famine—The whole to be succeeded by the GRAND DUAL HARMONY OF MATTER and SPIRIT, commonly called the MILLENNIUM.

A Course of Seven Lectures will be given on the above subject, at Fremont Hall, Chelsea, Mass., commencing on Sunday evening, May 10, at half-past 7 o'clock.

By S. C. HEWITT.

PROGRAMME.

LECTURE I.—PRIMARY BASIS OF THE WHOLE SUBJECT—The Positive Side.

The Organic God—A New View of the Infinite, God a Principle, also a Person, Pantheism and Anthropomorphism, Both True, Two Sides of the Subject, Providential Development of both Ideas, Analysis of Truth, The Divine Synthesis, God both Male and Female, Father and Mother, The Divine Blending, or Infinite Union of the Two in One, THE GRAND MAN.

LECTURE II.—SECONDARY BASIS, Negative Side.

The Organic Devil, or Grand Man Monster! Devil and Satan, Distinction between Them, Inverted Essence and Inverted Form, Satanic Personality, The Subjective and the Objective Universe, Analysis of Both, Dual Nature of Both, the Descending Movement of Both, Dark Side of the Universe, Shade and Shadows, Significance of the "Serpent" and the "Dragon," Symbolism and its Uses, Turning Point in Satan's Destiny, Satan Saved, Ascending Wave of the Spiral, Law of Progress, The Race made Divine.

LECTURE III.—TERTIARY BASIS, Creative Movement.

The Formation of Worlds, Generation of Nebulous Rings around Creative Centres, The Law of Generation and of Births, Mathematics of Nature, The Souls of Planets, The Greater Souls of Suns, Their Magnetic Nature, Each Sun and Planet a Battery, The Interior Positive, Exterior Negative, Love and Wisdom, Axial and Orbital motion of Suns and Planets, Primary and Secondary causes of it, Spheres and Focuses, Crises and their Uses, Transformations and Regenerations of Globes, Correspondences.

LECTURE IV.—THE GREAT CRISIS!

A Great Geological Change in the Earth, soon to be, Signs thereof now quite apparent, The Earth at present an unperfected globe, Reason of it, The Argument, In what the Change consists, Violent Commotions, Destruction of Life and Property, Where greatest Warnings, Preparations, &c., Grand Cause of the Crisis, New Planet, A Second Moon, Origin of Both, Nebulous Ring in the Sun's atmosphere, now rapidly completing, Same of the Earth, Zodiacle Light, What is it? Expansion of the Solar System, Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, &c., each thrown one orbit, Further off from the Sun, Grand conjunction of the Planets, Noah's Flood, "Fountains of the Great Deep broken up," "Windows of Heaven opened," Significance of these Scriptures, The Earth made finer, &c., by the Crisis, Boreal Crowns, The Physical Millennium!

LECTURE V.—EFFECTS OF THE CRISIS ON HUMANITY.

Great Agitation of the Human Race, Political, Religious and Social Changes, War, Pestilence and Famine, Final Death of all Political and other Parties. The Last Great Struggle, the "Devil comes down in great wrath," Philosophic significance of that Scripture, Satan "bound a thousand years," Meaning of that, Then "loosed a little season" What that means also, The Spiritual Millennium, Origin of these Ideas, Question Answered, Psiti ve Demonstration, What are thoughts? And Whence come they? Something entirely new, Simple as Nature, Address to common Sense.

LECTURE VI.—WORLD OF CAUSES, The Organizing Power.

The Spiritual Advent, or the Third Great Dispensation from the Heavens, Great Purpose of the Spirit World in its Manifestations, Organic Nature of the Movement, Superior wisdom Manifest in its Methods, Practical Spiritualism, a New Church and a New State, All Things made new.

LECTURE VII.—PRACTICALITIES, Conclusion.

Specific Plans, The Wisdom Age, Religion no longer merely Speculative and Sentimental, Philosophy no more an abstraction, Science no longer dead! A New Agriculture, Domain already secured and work begun upon it, New System of Commerce, Plans already revealed and Practically Matured, New Educational Institutions, Progressive and Philanthropic Institutions, The Divine Home on Earth, Embracing an entirely New System of Architecture, First Model already made, through Instructions of Spirit World, will be exhibited and explained to the audience. Great Hope now for the Human Race!

The above Lectures are a connected series, and each is so related to all the rest, that to be well understood and appreciated, the whole course should be heard by the same individuals. It is particularly requested, therefore, that all those desirous of listening to the main subject, should, if possible, be present at each lecture. I can assure the public, that this subject is no mere fancy of mine, but a sober, yet mighty REALITY! Of this, I shall give the most indubitable evidence, in the above series of lectures. I bespeak for my thought the listening ear, the willing, earnest heart, and such wisdom only, in judging, as such ear and heart may be able to command.—Chelsea Telegraph.

S. C. HEWITT.

Chelsea, May 8th, 1857.

HUME, the Spiritualist, has made a fortune in France. The Emperor and Empress have become converts to Spiritualism under his teachings—indeed, the Emperor has long been suspected of a leaning towards so much of the doctrine as encourages "free love." Mr. Hume, it is said, is to have an office in his Majesty's household, but rumor has not favored us with a particular description of his duties.

Married.

In Boston, May 14th, by Eld. M. Grant, Bro. Walter S. Woodbury (a blind Bro.) to Sr. Louiza H. Beers.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Bridgeport, Ct., on Friday evening, May 22
Newark, N. J., Sunday, May 24
New York, Cor. of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, Sunday, May 31
During the week, at Newark and New York as may be demanded.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, May 24
Kennebunk, Me., Sunday, May 31
Salem, Mass., (for Bro. George Burnham's charge,) Sunday, June 7

Bro. Hemenway appoints to preach in
Portsmouth, N. H., " 31th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Lynn, (Dye House Mill) third Sunday in May.

D. E. MOULTON.

I will preach as follows:—viz.,
Roby's Corners, Sunday, May 24th
By request, I will preach in Manchester, N. H., 79 Elm St., the first Sunday in June.
My appointments beyond Roxbury are withdrawn.

S. W. BISHOP.

The Lord will, I will attend to the following appointments:
Freeport, (Swamp School-House,) May 24
" (Flying Point,) " 31
Brunswick, June 7

R. R. YORK.

Bro. A. Ross appoints to preach in
Exeter, N. H., May 30 and 31

BRO. GRANT:—Let me say to those calls from the East that I purpose, the Lord will, to spend the most of June on the Penobscot, and will meet the brethren in Holden, Orrington, Exeter, or elsewhere, as they may arrange. I shall try and be at the Conference at Carmel.

Your Bro. full of hope, L. BOUTELL.

I will preach in Vernon, Vt., May 24, spending the following week there. Once at Northfield. L. BOUTELL.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. at
Vernon, Vt., June 4th and 5th
West Brattleborough, June 6th and 7th
Houghtonville, June 9th
North Springfield, June 10th
Wethersfield, near Bro. Fellows, June 11th
Taftsville, June 12th
Hartland, Dinsmore Hill, June 13th and 14th.
I can stop at two or three places coming back, if desired and informed. I hope some one will meet me at the depots, for I am a stranger in that section. Description—tall, coarse and plain looking man.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Will the Herald copy?

Bro. A. Fox will meet with the Brn. in
Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Sunday, June 21st
Cheshire St., Cheshire, Ct., Sunday, June 28th

Eld. J. Gouch appoints to preach in Boston, May 31st

Providence permitting, I will preach at West Winsted, in Humphrey's Hall, May 31st. Subject, in the evening,—"The cause of modern Spiritualism as viewed from a Bible stand point."

At the Annual Meeting of the Shinnecock Indians, Southampton, L. I., June 7th.

M. GRANT.

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at Lee, N. H., May 24th. where Bro. Dirgin may appoint.

General Conference.

BRO. GRANT:—Having consulted with many of the Brn. composing the different churches in this section, I find an interest, with many earnest requests, for a General Conference. We have therefore, after due deliberation, decided to hold a Conference at Carmel, Me., commencing Thursday, June 10th, at 5 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We hope, pray, and believe that this means of grace will prove a savor of life unto life. We invite all, whosoever will, to come and partake with us; and shall expect as many of the household of faith as consistently can, to come in the name of the Lord, and such as can will feel it a privilege and duty, with open heart and hand, to help forward the cause of truth.

Those coming by railroad, will stop at Carmel Depot, near the village, where the meeting is held.

In behalf of the Brn.,

I. DAMMAN.
L. L. HOWARD.

The General Convention.

By a vote of the General Convention at Providence, R. I., in Nov. last, it was adjourned to meet at the same time and place of the General Conference, in the spring of 1857; which has been called at Boston, at the Chapel corner of Hudson and Kneeland Streets, on the 28th inst.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

J. Emmons 104, J. Worthing 104, G. A Otis 109, J. A. Packard 104, Z. Grotier 169, C. Vaughn 116, Sarah Tilson 116, Amos Rowe 130, A. Pinney 104, Dr. A. Decker 88, A. H. Kidder 116, L. Hamilton 116, Nathan Fogg 116, Julia A. Barr 104, $1 each.

Miss Susan Barnum 141, Henry Little 141, Sarah Boothby 134, E. D. Reed 130, $2 each.

Salmon Cook 130, $1.50.

For THE POOR.—Abraham Flagg, $1.

FOR BOOKS.—W. Duren, 31 cents; E. Phelps, $1; R. R. York, $1; C. Bulkley, 1.50; S. Cook, 50 cents; E. S. Mudgett, $1.

BOOKS SENT.—E. J. Haggett, C. Fleming, R. R. York, E. Phelps, W. Duren, S. Cook, E. S. Mudgett, D. A. Jones, by express.

☞ The three dollars credited to E. M. Haggett, in our "receipts" last week, was for books.

To Correspondents.

BRO. EDDY—We have none of Bro. Grew's bound tracts.

J. COVELL—The money which we credit to you this week, pays for two copies till the commencement of the next volume.

H. J. E. PEIRCE—We regret that we have none of the CRISIS of the sixth of May on hand. Will try to get it for you. We pass the money credited in our last to "M. J. Peirce," to the credit of Benjamin Hall. It pays to No. 115.

☞ We hope that all our patrons will be particular, when sending for books or tracts, to send enough to pre-pay the postage. Don't forget this!

☞ Some one has sent us a dollar mailed at Cold Spring, Mass. Will the individuel send us his or her address, that we may know to whom it should be credited?

Bro. Bassett—I do not see the way open to come to your place immediately; if an opportunity offers itself, I would like to visit Williamsburg.

M. GRANT.

Bro. Lyle—Stamps are as convenient as money for us.

☞ Bro. J. A. Packard's Post Office address is Jamaica, Vt.

☞ Bro. A. Fox's Post Office address is Cold Spring, Mass.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State, and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

Church Debts By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A. C Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

☞ The above-named works can be obtained of H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.]

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3[illegible] cts. —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

SPRING MUSINGS.

Again on the storm-beaten earth,
The warm, glad sun-rays rest;
And hill and plain, and sky and sea,
In robes of light are drest.

It cheers the sick one's lonely room,
It lights the peasant's cot;
'Tis in the palaces of kings,
And where, where is it not?

'Tis where bursts forth the hidden shoot,
Where breathes the balmy air;
Go to the forest's deepest shade—
The sunlight hath been there.

The human heart its influence feels,—
Beguiled of half his woe,
Man greets the Spring-time's blessed light,
And smiles with all below.

But, ah! there is one spot to which
Not e'en its light may come,—
It knows no power thy dust to warm,
Thou cold, dark, silent tomb!

Oh! when shall that eternal sun
Arise, our world to bless?
When shall we greet thy healing beams,
O Sun of Righteousness?

Our Light, our Life, thy glory's rays,
Piercing the charnel's gloom,
Shall touch the death-chilled brow, and lo!
It wears immortal bloom!

MARIA T.

April 26, 1857.

For the Crisis.

MY HEART MUST BE PURE.

Yonder star, how fair its feature,
Beaming through yon azure blue;
May my heart as fair a picture,
To my God present to view.
Search me wholly, search me wholly,
Search me, Jesus, search me through.

May my inmost soul be holy,
Purified by truth and grace;
All sin's dark and baneful workings
In my heart, O bid them cease.
Purge me, Jesus, purge me, Jesus,
Purge my heart, and grant me peace.

Speak, and calm the wild commotion
Of my heart's unresting sea;
Like the placid lake at noonday,
Let its waters levely be.
Speak, my Savior, speak, my Savior,
Speak, and stilled my heart shall be.

And on its unruffled surface,
Shall thine image be imprest;—
As the lake reflects the sunlight
Beaming on its tranquil breast,
So shall I reflect thy likeness,
If but with thy presence blest.

SUSAN F. MUDGETT.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Unbelief.

"And he (Christ,) did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief!" Matt. 13: 58. Unbelief is infidelity, or distrust of any narrative, testimony, or doctrine. The universal sin of the world is unbelief of God's holy word! This causes disobedience to God's plain commands; and all persons must ultimately "perish in their own corruption," who allow this sin to prevail over them to the end of life. I think it is a dreadful crime to discredit God's testimony! as it virtually makes God a liar, and rejects Christ and his salvation, and is the root of all other sins.

Unbelief is either negative or positive; negative, in such as have not heard the gospel; as in heathen lands. 1 Cor. 6: 6; 2 Cor. 6: 14. Positive unbelief is seen in those who have heard the gospel, and profess to regard it as divine truth, yet they do not believe with their hearts. Such, are theoretical christians; and such individuals are made an easy prey to modern spiritualism, &c. See Luke 12: 46; Tit. 1: 15.

Secondly, unbelief is either particular, discrediting a part of God's word, or it is universal, having respect to all of the declarations of God, discrediting the whole. As for instance, Paul's declaration of himself,—"who," says he, "was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious; but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief." 1 Tim. 1: 13. O God, save me from the awful sin of unbelief!

SIGNS OF UNBELIEF.

1. Carelessness about Christ and his salvation.
2. Aversion to the duty of prayer.
3. Unbelief is not ashamed of itself.
4. It is not shocked at sin, except when very gross.
5. Unbelief has no ardent desires after union with Christ, or communion with God.
6. It does not try to get hold of the promises of God, or pray for their fulfillment.
7. Unbelief does not weep at the foot of the cross, nor rejoice to go to the mercy seat.

But belief in God and his truth, has a directly contrary effect. P. TANDY.

Question.

Why is not prayer enjoyed?

1. Because we carelessly hurry into the presence of God.

2. Because we hurry through our prayers.

3. Because we do not expect much sensible presence, or communion with God in the exercise.

4. Because we do not expect a speedy answer to our petitions. We should "draw near to the Lord in full assurance of faith;" then, the exercise of prayer will not only be pleasant, but profitable. P. T.

From Sr. M. H. Thayer.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—I have been thinking of how many objects we worship, and how few there are who worship God. The command is to worship God, not our friends, our brethren, our sisters, our ministers, our meetings, our place of worship, our theories, our duties, but God. One hardly knows whether he does this until he is tested. We are creatures easily influenced, and when all around us is leading to outward acts of devotion, and to devotional feelings, we hardly know our own strength. But let us be placed alone, away from all christian society, surrounded by influences of a downward tendency, for months attend no meetings where the gospel is preached in its purity,—if in these circumstances we can bow before the Holy One, and say from the heart, "My Father, thou knowest I am thine, thine to do, to bear, to be glorified in, by confessing thee in any way that thou shalt direct," then may we conclude that we are worshipers. Such worshipers God will accept. Blessed be his holy name! we can worship him every one from his place, and feel that sweet peace which the true worshipers only know. God will not share with a rival, he will be our God alone, or we have no part in him. He would not accept Israel, although they offered the sacrifices of fed beasts, so long as they took up the tabernacles of their Moloch and Chiun. He is the same, he changes not; what he hated then he hates now. His eyes are as a flame of fire. Then let us not say, our way is hid from the Lord, but rather with all our deformity, throw ourselves on his mighty arm, and by faith in the way he has provided obtain that righteousness that is lovely in his sight, and thus prepare for the time when the true worshipers will all unite and worship the King as no earthly monarch has ever been worshiped.

From your sister,

MARY H. THAYER.

From M. A. Moore.

BRO. GRANT:—I have for some time had the privilege of reading your excellent paper, and find it contains many rare and choice gems. Oh! to know there are a few in this wide, wide world who are looking and longing for the appearing of our dear Redeemer, is cheering.

It is but a short time since I experienced the joy and peace which is found in believing in Jesus; and to realize that soon I shall behold him who died for me, that I shall behold the babe of Bethlehem, in all the royal splendor of a King, is enlivening, and almost overpowering. What a hope is ours! it is indeed an anchor to the soul, which is sure and steadfast. I feel that we have not long to stay on this dreary earth where all is subject to death, but soon we shall reach that healthful clime, where the inhabitants shall never more say, "I am sick," where there is no more sorrow, pain, or death. Let us continue steadfast in the faith, immovable, and always abounding in the love of God, until he who is our life shall appear, then we shall appear with him in glory. Let us look to him in every emergency in life.

Let us not go forth to meet the trials and injuries which we are doomed to experience while here, in our own strength, (which is perfect weakness,) but let us look for strength from on high. We know that we must suffer persecutions, but let them come, if we can only have the assurance that Jesus is our friend, and that it is for his sake. We should rather rejoice that we are accounted worthy to suffer for Him, for we know that we must suffer with Him, if we would reign with Him. Then let us lift up our heads and rejoice in the hope of our soon coming King, for our redemption draweth near. We shall reign with Him, in those mansions that He has gone to prepare for us.

Then let us be faithful, and ever strive to obtain that holiness of heart which will fit us for His holy habitations. Let us be pure as He is, who is the source of all purity, and the fountain of all goodness. Let us be meek and lowly of heart, as He is. Let us be kind and gentle, and we will shortly have an abundant entrance into His everlasting kingdom. What a joyful meeting will that be when we all get home. There we shall meet that pure and spotless band who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. There will be our good old fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who will then receive their promised inheritance, and all the ransomed victors will shout glory to their King.

"In that pure home of tearless joy
Earth's parted friends will meet,
With smiles of love that never fade,
And happiness complete."

M. A. MOORE.

Conesus Centre, N. Y.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

CONFIDENCE.

Lord, my God,
To thee I bow in prayer,
On thee casting all my care;
Thou canst rid me of my load,
Lord, my God.

Through thy Son—
He who died the lost to save,
Giving hope beyond the grave;—
Lord, through his dear name I come,
Christ, thy Son.

Hear me now;
Cleanse my heart from every sin!
Let me a new life begin!
While I near thy footstool bow,
Hear me now.

Thou wilt hear!
Thou hast promised in thy word,
All petitions shall be heard,
Coming from a heart sincere,—
Thou wilt hear.

Thou hast heard;
All my load of care has fled,
Christ is now my living Head,
Now, most precious is thy word,—
Thou hast heard.

ALBERT.

Hebron, April 14, '57.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. L. SHELDON writes from Derry, N. H.:—"I thank the Lord, this world is not my home. Sickness, sorrow, pain and death, bid me look forward to that world so beautiful, so holy, so fair, so free from grief of every kind.

'The better land no sorrow knows,
There hushed is every sigh.'

I am a lonely pilgrim, sometimes overwhelmed with grief, when I receive so much opposition from one who should be my best earthly friend. Let me say to you who have christian companions striving with you to get into the kingdom, fall upon your knees before God and praise him for so great a blessing. I am thankful that amid all the toils and cares of life we can still press our way against the waves that roll upon us.

'When shall I cease to weep,
Oppress with earthly woe?
When shall I cease my watch to keep,
Where storms and tempests blow?'"

——:o:——

BRO. G. A. STREETER writes from No. Dana, Mass.:—"I have not been to an Advent meeting since the Wilbraham campmeeting. (Thank God for that blessed season.) But God has been with me. His promise is sure,—'lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world.' Amen.

There are three families of us in this place of like precious faith. We are surrounded by those who seem to be determined to believe a lie, that they may be damned. May God have mercy on them.

Dear Brn. in the ministry, come and see us. Send us an appointment; we are starving for truth. We are poor as to this world's goods, but are rich in faith. We will do all we can to promote the cause of God and sustain his truth. My house is a pilgrim's home; thank God."

——:o:——

A BROTHER writes from Bath, Me.:—"Brother Grant: I do sincerely thank you for your kindness in sending me the Crisis so long without pay. I think it is one of the best papers that I ever had, since I believed the Advent doctrine. I do want the paper so long as you can afford to send it to me, for it is the next comforter to my Bible. My family think they could not do without the Crisis."

Choice Selections.

Portrait.

"This their way is their folly; yet their posterity approve their sayings like sheep." Ps. 49: 13, 14.

This place of scripture is a severe reproof to such as believe and imitate unrighteous examples; being like sheep that follow each other—where one goes they all go. However foolishly people conducted in former days, it is now by their posterity considered right, and the only way to heaven. "My father did so," is all the scripture many have or wish; and all who do not approve of the foolish sayings of the ancients, are by them considered heretics, and on the way to certain destruction. Perhaps there is not a place in the United States where this scripture is more fully exemplified than in this city. It was a saying of some in ancient days, that three Gods are one God; and that the one God died; that he is a Demi-God, part God and part man; that though the one God died, yet he that died was the Son of the one God; this saying their posterity approve like sheep. It has been a saying that Adam sinned for all his posterity; that they are all born guilty—that sprinkling takes away sin, and makes them heirs of the kingdom; this they approve without examining the propriety of such sayings. It has been said that the greater part of mankind were made to be eternally tormented for that which they cannot avoid; this saying is approved without being examined. It has long been a saying, that a mortal is partly immortal; that a man who has no life in him, has a never dying principle; that a man as bad as the devil has in his possession something worth millions of worlds; and though there is no proof of these things in the scriptures, yet their posterity approve their sayings in the same manner as sheep follow after each other.

At this time there is a general attack upon these unscriptural doctrines, and this has caused a general alarm throughout the city; and from almost every pulpit the cry is—heresy and a false teacher! He denies the Trinity! He does not hold to the Divinity of Christ! He denies original sin! He is corrupting the minds of the youth with his books, and speaks against our large salaries. Dr. Staughton is sounding out—they deny the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ. Dr. Holcomb takes up another part; a Methodist preacher tells of some dreadful error; while the Presbyterian begins to talk of his God Trinity in the dark, who cannot be known, and yet ought to be acknowledged without evidence.

To prove to our readers the folly and unrighteousness of some of the ancient sayings now approved by their posterity, we will give one piece written by Doctor John Ryland, a Baptist minister in England, which he taught his scholars to learn and believe as the truth contained in the scriptures; which is in reality as contrary to truth as light is from darkness.

TRINITARIAN PARADOXES.

The astonishing extremes, or unparalleled opposites in the person of our LORD JESUS CHRIST, by John Ryland, of Northampton, England.

1. The eternal Jehovah once an infant of an hour old.
2. The immense God once a child of a span long.
3. The omnipresent God, filling all worlds, yet lying in a manger.
4. The Creator of all things once a creature.
5. The Lord of all worlds, once a servant to poor man and washed his feet.
6. The true God is reputed a deceiver of the people and a liar.
7. The mighty God, once weak as a worm, and, as no man, unable to bear his cross.
8. The only wise God is blindfolded and buffeted as a fool.
9. He that is God and none else, is treated as less than nothing.
10. The holy God reckoned a confederate with the devil.
11. God above all (Rom. 9: 5, in the original) is sunk into the dust of death.
12. God blessed forever is made a curse.
13. The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, is murdered by Jacob's children, the Jews.
14. The Lord of Hosts is forsook by every being, upon the cross, and hath not one out of all his armies to attend and comfort him.
15. The King of Kings sold for 3*l.* 15*s.*, the price of a slave among the Jews.
16. The God of the whole earth becomes as poor as a beggar. 2 Cor. 8: 9, (in the original.)
17. The God of absolute dominion over all worlds is made subject to his own law, both in its commands and curses.
18. The Supreme Judge of men and angels is arraigned as a criminal at Pilate's bar, and condemned by his own creatures, his own guilty and wretched creatures.
19. The great Giver of eternal life suffers death; the Author of all pardons himself condemned to death for guilt.
20. The Author of all resurrections in the vegetable and human world sinks down and dies.
21. The best beloved Son of God dreadfully punished by his own Father.—Herald of Gospel Liberty. Phil. June 5, 1812.

God a Satisfying Portion.

Do we desire affection? Who can measure the rich treasures of that heart that spans the universe in the grasp of its benevolence, and that has promised to withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly? Who can estimate that affection that knows no change or fickleness, that is permanent as God's own being, untouched by the icy chills of earth, undestroyed by the feebleness of our love to him, and undiminished by the long lapse of time or eternity?

Do we desire riches? He offers us "an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away."

Do we covet power? "To him that overcometh," says the Savior, "will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am sit down with my Father in his throne."

Do we desire stations of rank, and honor, and influence? He will "make us kings and priests unto God?

Do we desire rest from the pains, and troubles, and sorrows of life? "There the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest." And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

Do we long for freedom from sin? "There shall in no wise enter into it (that city) anything that defileth:"

"Its holy gates forever bar Pollution, sin, and shame."

Do we desire a blessed place of abode as our future home? In our "Father's house are many mansions," and there shall be no more curse, and the city shall have "no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God doth lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." And there is an abode of bliss that may be ours forever; for he that hath "gone to prepare a place" for us, "will come again, and receive us to himself."

The One Resting-Place.

The true goal, or one resting-place, where doubt and weariness, the stings of a pricking conscience, and the longings of an unsatisfied soul would all be quieted, is CHRIST himself. Not the church, but Christ! Not doctrines, but Christ! Not forms, but Christ! Not ceremonies, but Christ! CHRIST giving his life for ours; sealing the everlasting covenant, and making peace for us through the blood of His cross! Christ, the divine store-house of all light and truth, "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Christ, the infinite vessel, filled with the Holy Spirit, the enlightener, the teacher, the comforter; so that "of his fulness," may all who trust Him say, "have we received, and grace for grace." This, this alone, is the vexed soul's refuge—its rock to build on, its home to abide in till the great tempter be bound, and every conflict ended in victory. All other things are opiates, drugs, quackeries,—this is the divine medicine, this is the sole, the speedy, the eternal cure. It is not by "opinion" that we are to meet "opinion,"—it is the truth of God that we are to wield; and applying the edge of "the sword of the Spirit" to the theories of man, (which he proudly calls his opinions,) make him feel what a web of sophistry and folly he has been weaving for his own entanglement and ruin.

It is not opinions that man needs, it is TRUTH! it is not theology, it is GOD! it is not religion, it is CHRIST! it is not literature and science, but the knowledge of the free love of God in the gift of his only begotten Son.

In this day of increasing crime, philanthropists and regenerators of society, ignorant of the only panacea for human misery and guilt, are still pressing education,—education,—education, as though the most abominable crimes were not committed by the best educated as well as by the most illiterate of men. "He that hath the Son hath life," while "he that hath not the Son of God [whatever else he may vainly boast of having] hath not life;" (John 5: 12;) he is dead and dying; he is dying and is dead. His life is a vapor, his wisdom is folly, his health is sickness, his wealth is penury; moral or immoral, he is living to himself, and has no victory over the world, or his own passions, because he lacks the only power for it—living faith in a once crucified, but now living, Savior. (1 John 5: 4, 5.)

And oh, if he be a poor man that reads this, and yet has not Christ, he is poor indeed; and let him not think that his troubles here will secure him rest hereafter. Jesus knows the poor man's sorrows; He sees how some are pinched by poverty, bowed by sickness, weighed down by cares,—all these, however, will be but the beginning of sorrows if the cross of Christ be despised—if Jesus, the burden-bearer, be not known and trusted in. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission;" (Heb. 9: 22;) without the present forgiveness of sin, through faith in that blood, there is no peace, and no power to endure with patience the ills which flesh is heir to. To the poor the gospel is preached; it is the one remedy they need, a sovereign balm for every wound: but it is a believed gospel, and not a preached gospel merely, that saves; a gospel that comes not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance. (1 Thess. 1: 5.) There is no rest, no support under present care, nothing to cheer on a sick bed; no ease for the poor, any more than for the rich, but in the blood of Christ—"there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4: 12.) High and low, one with another, all, all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God. (Rom. 3: 23.) All, all need to be converted to God; for, "except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

If any who read this have, besides his worldly troubles, a burdened conscience also, then look to Jesus—He bids you. He has words of comfort for the miserable,—"Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Ho every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters." "Let him that is athirst come;" and "him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." (Matt. 9: 28; Isa. 55: 1; Rev. 22: 17; John 6: 37.) Jesus has died, "the just for the unjust." "Now once in the end of the world hath he appeared, to put away sin (which is the cause of all sorrow, Gen. 3: 17) by the sacrifice of himself." (Heb. 9: 26.) Everything necessary to make atonement for sin has been accomplished; divine justice is satisfied, the holiness of God has been vindicated—for the Man Christ Jesus, the fellow of the Lord of hosts, (Zech. 13: 7,) has glorified God to the uttermost; He has been obedient unto death; and now SALVATION through Him is preached to every creature under heaven, and "by him all that believe are justified from all things." (Acts 13: 39)

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be SAVED!" (Acts 16: 31.)—English Tract.

For the Children.

The Brown Towel.

We had a holiday, and a party of the girls were going to Pine Grove to spend the day, carrying a lunch to eat under the trees. The day was fine; and after the sun had dried up the dew, about a dozen little girls might have been seen streaming down the south road with baskets on their arms, chatting as merrily as swallows on a barn roof. Reaching the grove, we played and skipped about like squirrels until dinner time, when we were hungry enough; and each was anxious to know what each had stowed away in her little basket.

Two or three of the oldest proposed making a table of a flat rock, and to take upon themselves the business of spreading it, while we the smaller girls, they said, might go and play. None of us relished the plan, but none had courage to say so; so we unwillingly gave up our baskets, and were sent off—not so far, however, as not to see the baskets unloaded and hear all the great girls said. Pies, tarts, cookies, and cakes came forth in plenty. "O, O," we cried in the distance, "how good, how tempting!" "Who brought this?" and "Who brought that?" And of course every child who had anything particularly nice, was quite ready to say whom it belonged to. By and by a little basket was opened, and a brown towel full of cookies dropped out. My heart beat.

"A brown towel!" cried one of the large girls. "How vulgar! I couldn't eat a cooky out of a brown towel. Hadn't her mother a nice napkin, I should like to know?" "A brown towel!" echoed the other, throwing it down on the grass as if it had been a spider. "Whose is it?" eagerly asked the little girls, looking on. Trembling and mortified, I drew my sun-bonnet over my face, and turned away; for it was mine. "You are the brown towel," said Fanny Haven, twitching me by the sleeve; "I don't believe but you are." "Never mind if she is," said Hatty Stone, taking my hand; "they'll be glad enough of a brown towel sometime." But my enjoyment was gone. To be laughed at by the great girls, and perhaps to be nicknamed "brown towel." All lunch time I was frightened, and ashamed lest they should speak of it again. How I wished I was at home. And how anxiously I watched a chance to seize my poor towel, and cram it in the basket.

In the afternoon we went down to the river, and finding a pebbly strip of beach, some of the girls pulled off their shoes and stockings and waded into the water. When they came out, all dripping, their delicate little kerchiefs and nice napkins did not answer at all to wipe with. What should they do? "O, where's the brown towel?" cried one. "Yes, yes; I speak for the brown towel," cried half a dozen voices at the highest pitch, and all hands were stretched towards Hatty Stone, who was opening my basket to take it out. "Didn't I tell you so?" cried Hatty. Never was one towel in such demand. "Dear me," cried one of the large girls, "how soon the foolish little napkins are used up: there is some substance to this. It makes an impression."

Poor little me, I was pleased enough. Nothing proved more truly serviceable in all our walk, than my poor despised towel. Besides water, it took off mud and pitch also. Without its help some of the party would have cut sorry figures going home.

I have not forgotten the lesson of the brown towel—never to be ashamed of things because people laugh at them.—Brown hands—do not despise them; for they are the strong, toiling, busy hands which support the world. Give me the look of a good brown, honest face, not afraid to weather the storms of life. It is the substantial, homespun qualities of character, which make character worth anything. Do not despise, or be ashamed of them.—Child's Paper.

GOOD BEHAVIOR.—Little friends, rise early. Wash clean. Brush your teeth well. Brush your hair. Put everything in its place. Be kind to each other. Never tease. Never say, "I can't," or "I won't," or "I don't want to," when bidden to do anything. Always obey at once and with much pleasure.—Golden Rule.

SOME of the illusions of life are kept up to a great age, and nothing but death can extinguish them.

The best way to discipline one's heart against scandal, is to believe all stories to be false which ought not to be true.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adams's Store.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Number 107 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1857. | WHOLE NO. 91. VOL. V. NO. 13.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH HENRY TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

PRAYER.

BY THOMAS ELWOOD—A QUAKER OF 1660.

O, that mine eyes might closed be,
To what concerns me not to see—
That deafness might possess my ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue may always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought would ever rest
Or be conceived within my breast;
That by each word and deed and thought
Glory may to my God be brought.
But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
On thee is fixed; to thee I cry;
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part;
And when 'tis clean, Lord, keep it so,
For that is more than I can do.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. IV.

Before we proceed any farther with our investigation relative to the Messiahship of Jesus, I deem that it will be well to advert to some objections which are advanced by the skeptic, as a justification for rejecting the credibility of the scriptures. One of the main strongholds—which I generally adverted to as a pretext for rejecting the Bible—used by the skeptic of the present day, is found in Joshua 10: 12, 13, and reads as follows;—"sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon. And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies." Several nations have traditions relating to this phenomenon, resembling this miracle, particularly the Chinese, whose history speaks of Yao, their king, and declares that in his reign the sun stood so long above the horizon that it was feared the world would have been set on fire, and fixes the reign of Yao at a given date, which corresponds with the age of Joshua, the son of Nun.

I once thought this story of the sun not going down for the space of a day, one of the most incredible absurdities that could be invented to delude a weak minded people. For why? Because I had never consulted any work that contained any such record, neither did I believe that there was to be found in any history any thing to substantiate such statements. Because I had not seen any thing aside from the Bible statement, I could not give credit to any such statement. And so it is with thousands who are skeptical, whose information seems to extend almost everywhere; but of the Bible, and ancient literature connected with the Bible, they are uninformed, and the reason is, they choose darkness rather than light.

I will add another testimony—the Latin poet, Ovid. In his fanciful narrative of Phæton's chariot, this heathen author tells us, a day was once lost, and the earth was in great danger from the intense heat of an unusual sun. He likewise mentions Phæton, a Canaanitish prince; and we learn that the account originated with the Phœnicians, the same people whom Joshua fought. Thus we see that the account given in the Bible of the sun not going down for the space of a whole day, is corroborated by history handed down to us from time immemorial. And surely, God, who formed the sun and the moon, by his word, could by that same word say, stand still. I might give farther testimony respecting this phenomenon, by referring to the traditions of Egypt, Greece, and India; but for the present we will resume our investigation respecting the Messiah, because, if Christ has not come according to the scripture, our hope is a dead one;—"Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."

If this Jesus, whom we adore, was not despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief, he is not the Christ; but our Lord was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. Compare Isa. 53: 3–12, with Matt. 26th and 27th Chapter, and Phil. 2: 7, 8.

If the minds of the Jews were not veiled that they should not know the Messiah when he came among them, then Jesus is not the Christ; but the minds of the Jews were so sealed up, and enveloped in prejudice against our Lord, when he appeared, that he was treated by them as an impostor and deceiver. Compare Isa. 6: 9–13, 29: 9–14, and 2 Cor. 3: 5–18.

Our Messiah was to be the chief corner stone in the building of his church, elect, precious,—Jesus Christ was the chief corner stone, elect, precious. Compare Isa. 28: 16; Acts 4: 11, 12; 1 Pet. 2: 6–8.

This same Messiah was to be rejected by the builders, but yet made the head stone in the corner,—Jesus Christ was almost universally rejected by the great men of his nation, but yet he was made both Lord and Christ. Compare Ps. 118: 16; Isa. 8: 13, 14; John 7: 48; Matt. 11: 25, 26; 1 Cor. 1: 26–31; 1 Pet. 2: 7, 8.

It was to the poor this Messiah was to preach the gospel, and it was to be embraced by a considerable number of that description,—Jesus Christ preached the gospel to the poor, and many of that rank believed on his name. Compare Isa. 61: 1; Luke 4: 18; Matt. 11: 5; James 2: 5.

Messiah was to be seen riding into Jerusalem, sitting upon a young ass, as a token of the humility of his mind,—Jesus Christ answered this prediction, as well as every other that went before concerning him, in the most minute circumstance. Compare Zech. 9: 9, with Matt. 21: 1–11.

When the Messiah should enter Jerusalem in this meek and humble manner, great crowds of the common people should welcome him with shouts and rejoicings,—when Jesus Christ rode into that proud metropolis, in low disguise, the general cry of the mob was, "Hosanna to the Son of David; blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosannah in the highest." Ibid.

Messiah was to be actuated by such a burning zeal for the house of God, as even to be endangered by it,—Jesus Christ displayed that zeal upon various occasions. Compare Ps. 69: 9; John 2: 17.

Then again Messiah was to be betrayed into the hands of his enemies by the treachery of an intimate friend,—Christ was betrayed by one of his disciples whom he had chosen. Compare Ps. 41: 9; 55: 12, 13; Matt. 26: 27–50.

Messiah was to be sold for thirty pieces of silver,—Jesus Christ was sold for the sum predicted. Compare Zech. 11: 12; Matt. 26: 14–16.

Messiah's price, the thirty pieces of silver, was to be cast to the potter in the house of the Lord,—all this was done when Judas betrayed his Master. Compare Zech. 11: 13; Matt. 27: 3–10.

Messiah was to be condemned and suffer death under the color of public justice,—Jesus Christ underwent a mock trial, was declared innocent by his very judge, and yet delivered over to be crucified. Compare Isa. 59: 8, 9; Matt. 27th chapter.

The followers of Messiah were all to forsake him in the time of his greatest need,—when Jesus Christ was apprehended, and put upon trial, all his disciples forsook him and fled. Compare Zech. 13: 7; Isa. 63: 5; Matt. 26: 56; 27: 34.

Messiah was to be ignominiously scourged by his persecutors,—Jesus Christ was treated in this manner. Compare Isa. 50: 6, with Matt. 27: 26.

Messiah was to be smitten on the face in the day of his humiliation,—Jesus Christ was basely buffeted by the hands of vile persons. Compare Isa. 52: 14; Micah 5: 1, and Matt. 26: 67.

Messiah was to have his face befouled with spittle,—Jesus Christ condescended, for our sakes, even to this indignity, without complaining. Compare Isa. 50: 6; Matt. 26: 67.

Who can deny, with such conclusive evidence before them, that Jesus of Nazareth is not the true Messiah? for he has done all the work which the prophets have laid out for him to do.

For the Crisis.

Then, and Now.

A few days since, an anxious curiosity I have for a long time felt to visit the Rock where first our Pilgrim Fathers set foot upon this continent, was gratified. And while viewing the place made so sacred to our memory by the events of past time, the vast change which has taken place since that memorable day when first the anchor of the May Flower grappled our shore, made a deep impression on my mind. Where once the war-whoop made the wild woods ring, is now heard the hum of business and worldly enterprise. Where then the wild deer bounded, relentlessly pursued by the red man, is now heard the jarring tread, and unearthly scream of the locomotive. The dense forest, that then furnished only an habitation for the feathered kingdom, have long since bowed beneath the stroke of the woodman's axe, and in their stead is spread out a country filled with its stirring population, and chequered with cultivation. The habits and customs of the barbarian have given place to those of civilization.

The influence of that noble band of pilgrims who first honored New England with their prayers, has spread through the length and breadth of our land. Thousands upon thousands have been brought under the benign and saving influence of the gospel of Christ. To be sure, they had their failings, like all other good men, and to some extent manifested an intolerant spirit towards those who, for conscience' sake, saw fit to differ from them in matters of faith, yet, I can but look upon them as a people raised up in the providence of God, for a great and glorious purpose. The seeds of christianity were first planted by them in the wilds of America, where civil liberty was to be cradled, and human rights respected.

But, notwithstanding those blessings so dearly bought, and bequeathed to us, giving to this nation a prosperity rapid in its development, which past history fails to furnish us a parallel, yet, a vision dark is passing before my mind. As a nation, it appears to me, both in a moral and political point of view, we have reached the summit, and entered upon the descending grade. Human rights, by the ruling faculty, are disregarded; justice does not go forth; righteousness is turned away backwards; truth is fallen in the street. The trampling under foot of human and divine law is becoming the common order of the day. God was once respected, if not worshiped; but now, from the gray-headed sire down to the prattling child, his power is defied, and his name imprecated. In a land deluged with Bibles, infidelity is fearfully on the increase, not only among the professedly irreligious, but also in our popular churches its deformed head is seen covered by a gauze of religious profession. Many say, "Lord, Lord," but do not the things that he commands. Their forms of worship are imposing, but destitute of that power and divine energy which characterized the preaching of the gospel in olden times. In the management of ecclesiastical matters, worldly policy is substituted for the plain requirements of the gospel. To be sure, they boast of their thousands of pious communicants; but where is that groaning and travailing together in pain with the whole creation of God, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body, brought to view in the eighth chapter of Romans? It is not with the majority of the nominal church. The restitution of this earth to its pristine beauty—the literal resurrection of the body, compared with their ideal heaven, "beyond the bounds of time and space," "is too gross," say they, "for refined minds of the nineteenth century."

Thus Christ and the restitution by them are done away, and they are preparing themselves to be taken in by that strong delusion (Spiritualism,) which is now coming in upon the world like a flood. "Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame."

Pilgrim! the Lord will be here at length; too soon for the world, but no sooner than his church will be glad to see him, for "even now," as Rutherford said, "his absence seems almost a cruelty," while in agony we wait for the dawn of that day whose sun will never go down. O shall I, one so unworthy, so unprofitable, so destitute of merit, be permitted to gaze on the radiant countenance of the Son of God, when his face shall outshine ten thousand suns, while the heavens shall be rolled together, and say, I welcome thee back to earth again, Jesus of Nazareth? I hope, and while I hope I rejoice, but it is with trembling. We are upon the verge of the opening of a grand drama, in which kings and nobles, bondmen and free, will all be actors. No idle spectator there. Sinner! prepare thine heart for the end; it's coming! A. ROSS.

For the Crisis.

Self-Examination.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." 2 Cor. 13: 5.

In view of the positive injunction of the scripture above quoted, no argument is necessary to show that self-examination is a duty. The scriptures furnish abundant matter for self-examination. Am I a christian? All those who professes this title, should enter upon this answer with the solemnities of the judgment day before them, bringing the exercises of their hearts, the conduct of their lives, to the unerring standard of the word. "Cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils," and cling to the Word, and to the witness of the Spirit. Our Savior's reference when assailed was,—"It is written." The witness of the Spirit must not be sought in any sudden impulses of the mind, but in the real work of grace in the heart, conforming it to the image of God. Satan can counterfeit the brightest experiences of this kind. The professed follower of Christ, who knows not whether he is a true or false disciple, must be in a dangerous condition.

"Prove your own selves." The Lord knows the end from the beginning; but the christian is tried for his own benefit, that he may prove himself; not that the Lord did not know, but to impart that knowledge to us, candidates for life or death, acting upon our own free will as to the choice.

In studying the Word, in self-examination and the christian experience of others, I find that although we may be christians, without the assurance of our adoption, yet we are taught in the holy scriptures that such assurance is attainable. Job, in the midst of his afflictions, experienced its comforting support. "I know," says he, "that my Redeemer liveth." David says with confidence,—"I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Paul also expresses the same assurance, many times; and the lives and biographies of many saints, who have lived since, tell us they too know that their Redeemer lives. President Edwards, a man of great piety in his life, attained to the full assurance of hope. And does not the whole tenor of scripture show that it is the blessed privilege of all to attain to holiness and assurance, that when "Jesus appears we shall be like Him?" And will not those who are ready, waiting, watching for the Son of Man, know and say, "this is our God, we have waited for Him?"

I infer that the saints, who are found ready to be changed "in a moment," from mortal to immortality, will attain to that holiness and assurance that Paul had, when he had finished his work and was ready to be offered. O how important it is that as individuals "we make our calling and election sure!" Like David, pray;—"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." This examination should be a constant work. We should search into the motives of every action, and thoroughly examine every religious feeling; to know, if possible, whether it comes from the Spirit of God, or whether it is a fire of our own kindling. We must have an intimate acquaintance with the operations of our own minds, to enable us to distinguish between the exercise of gracious affections and the selfish workings of our own hearts.

I infer from the scriptures and self-examination that, in order to have certain evidence of our adoption into the blessed family, of which Jesus is the Elder Brother, all the fruits of the Spirit must have grown up to some degree of maturity. "And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end." "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith." "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in him." "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the children of God." "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption."

It is my desire to attain "to the full assurance unto the end;" to be holy in heart and life; to watch, and keep my garments; "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace," until the church of God will move in gospel order and faith, of one heart and mind, and attain to the full assurance that we can say when Jesus comes,—"This is our God, we have waited for him." T. F. S.

Concord, N. H.

For the Crisis.

"Melchisedec—Priest—King."

A correct understanding of the work of our High Priest is of the greatest importance; and as we are entirely dependent on divine revelation for such knowledge, it becomes us to examine with care those scriptures which speak directly on the subject.

Christ is a priest after the order of Melchisedec, and not after the order of Aaron. Heb. 7: 11. From this it appears that there are two orders of priesthood, and Melchisedec and Aaron are representatives of the two. In the letter to the Hebrews there are specified several particulars in the priesthood of Christ which were not typified by anything in the priesthood of Aaron. By these we learn that Christ's ministry differs from that of Aaron, in that it is an unchangeable, kingly priesthood; and wherein the type is incomplete in the order of Aaron, the order of Melchisedec makes up the deficiency.

Says Dr. Clark; "He who could not support his pretensions by just genealogical evidence, was said by the Jews to be without father. . . . This sort of phraseology was not uncommon when the genealogy of a person was unknown or obscure." That this remark is correct, may be proved by a great amount of testimony. Thus Macknight renders it,—"without genealogy;" and Whiting, also—"without a genealogy." The Syriac, according to Murdock's translation, expresses this most clearly, to wit; "Moreover, his name is interpreted King of Righteousness; and again, King of Salem, that is, King of Peace. Of whom neither his father nor his mother are written in the genealogies; nor the commencement of his days, nor the end of his life."

The argument of Paul is clearly this, that the lack of this genealogical evidence is what constitutes Melchisedec a type of Christ, whose priesthood is not reckoned by genealogy, and therefore is not hereditary, or changeable, as was Aaron's.

Paul says in Heb. 8: 1,—"We have such a High Priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens." See Rev. 3: 21. "Faith says there must be such a kingdom" as "God has promised to them that love him;" but the promise does not contemplate a priestly reign of Messiah beyond the present dispensation. True faith brings us to the enjoyment of a true hope, "which entereth into that within the vail, whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. 6: 19, 20. May we seek and find him there before he puts off the robes of his priesthood and puts on "the garments of vengeance." Amen.

J. H. W.

Addison, Mich., May, 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Three Angels in the Midst of Heaven.—Rev. 14: 6–12.

BY J. F. SWEET.

No. VI.

(Continued from Crisis Vol. 3, Nos. 34, 35, 36.)

We have shown (by reference to Rev. chap. 6: 9; 12: 17; 13: 10; 14: 9–12, and 20: 4,) that the saints, noted for their faith and patience, and for keeping the word, or commandments of God, and the faith, or testimony of Jesus, were in the days of the great tribulation—the forty-two months of the Leopard beast, and under the fifth seal; consequently, the image to which the third angel refers must be within the same period of time; and also the thousand years, within which John saw the saints beheaded, must be within the forty-two months.

Please observe here, that John saw those persons that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus, and for the word of God, and who had not worshiped the wild beast, nor his image, nor had received his mark in their forehead, or on their hand: and they lived and reigned with Christ the thousand years; and preferring the reign of Christ to the reign of the beast, or his image, they lost their heads by keeping his commandments.

I am aware of the objection that will arise in the minds of some of my brethren. It will be said that their reign was after they were beheaded, and consequently after their resurrection. But, dear brethren, this cannot possibly be, as you will see by a little reflection. If this thousand years be after the resurrection, then John saw the saints in their immortal state, and, as there will be no beheading in that state, we ask how John could designate those martyrs from others of God's saints that were slain before the beast or image had an existence? or even from those that died a natural death, or had not tasted death at all? The facts in the case are these: John saw in his vision the great tribulation through which the saints were passing: he saw them that were slain for the word of God, and the testimony of Jesus, when the fifth seal was opened; he saw them beheaded for refusing to worship the beast, or his image, otherwise he would not have known that they were beheaded; he could only tell us what he saw in vision, or what was told him; and he tells us that he saw these saints in the thousand years that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus and the word of God. He does not say that an angel, or an elder, pointed out to him this class in the resurrection state, but he tells us that he saw them, and he does not say that he saw any others beside those.—We say again, he must have seen them beheaded in the thousand years, and in this thousand years he saw the image

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number [illegible] Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1857. WHOLE NO. 91. VOL. V. NO. 13.

The World's Crisis. IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH HENRY TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

PRAYER.

BY THOMAS ELWOOD—A QUAKER OF 1660.

O, that mine eyes might closed be,
To what concerns me not to see—
That deafness might possess my ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue may always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought would ever rest
Or be conceived within my breast;
That by each word and deed and thought
Glory may to my God be brought.
But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
On thee is fixed, to thee I cry;
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part;
And when 'tis clean, Lord, keep it so,
For that is more than I can do.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. IV.

Before we proceed any farther with our investigation relative to the Messiahship of Jesus, I deem that it will be well to advert to some objections which are advanced by the skeptic, as a justification for rejecting the credibility of the scriptures. One of the main strongholds—which I generally adverted to as a pretext for rejecting the Bible—used by the skeptic of the present day, is found in Joshua 10: 12, 13, and reads as follows;—"sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon. And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies." Several nations have traditions relating to this phenomenon, resembling this miracle, particularly the Chinese, whose history speaks of Yao, their king, and declares that in his reign the sun stood so long above the horizon that it was feared the world would have been set on fire, and fixes the reign of Yao at a given date, which corresponds with the age of Joshua, the son of Nun.

I once thought this story of the sun not going down for the space of a day, one of the most incredible absurdities that could be invented to delude a weak minded people. For why? Because I had never consulted any work that contained any such record, neither did I believe that there was to be found in any history any thing to substantiate such statements. Because I had not seen any thing aside from the Bible statement, I could not give credit to any such statement. And so it is with thousands who are skeptical, whose information seems to extend almost everywhere; but of the Bible, and ancient literature connected with the Bible, they are uninformed, and the reason is, they choose darkness rather than light.

I will add another testimony—the Latin poet, Ovid. In his fanciful narrative of Phaeton's chariot, this heathen author tells us, a day was once lost, and the earth was in great danger from the intense heat of an unusual sun. He likewise mentions Phaeton, a Canaanitish prince; and we learn that the account originated with the Phoenicians, the same people whom Joshua fought. Thus we see that the account given in the Bible of the sun not going down for the space of a whole day, is corroborated by history handed down to us from time immemorial. And surely, God, who formed the sun and the moon, by his word, could by that same word say, stand still. I might give farther testimony respecting this phenomenon, by referring to the traditions of Egypt, Greece, and India; but for the present we will resume our investigation respecting the Messiah, because, if Christ has not come according to the scripture, our hope is a dead one;—"Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."

If this Jesus, whom we adore, was not despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief, he is not the Christ; but our Lord was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. Compare Isa. 53: 3–12, with Matt. 26th and 27th Chapter, and Phil. 2: 7, 8.

If the minds of the Jews were not veiled that they should not know the Messiah when he came among them, then Jesus is not the Christ; but the minds of the Jews were so sealed up, and enveloped in prejudice against our Lord, when he appeared, that he was treated by them as an impostor and deceiver. Compare Isa. 6: 9–13, 29: 9–14, and 2 Cor. 3: 5–18.

Our Messiah was to be the chief corner stone in the building of his church, elect, precious,—Jesus Christ was the chief corner stone, elect, precious. Compare Isa. 28: 16; Acts 4: 11, 12; 1 Pet. 2: 6–8.

This same Messiah was to be rejected by the builders, but yet made the head stone in the corner,—Jesus Christ was almost universally rejected by the great men of his nation, but yet he was made both Lord and Christ. Compare Ps. 118: 16; Isa. 8: 13, 14; John 7: 48; Matt. 11: 25, 26; 1 Cor. 1: 26–31; 1 Pet. 2: 7, 8.

It was to the poor this Messiah was to preach the gospel, and it was to be embraced by a considerable number of that description,—Jesus Christ preached the gospel to the poor, and many of that rank believed on his name. Compare Isa. 61: 1; Luke 4: 18; Matt. 11: 5; James 2: 5.

Messiah was to be seen riding into Jerusalem, sitting upon a young ass, as a token of the humility of his mind,—Jesus Christ answered this prediction, as well as every other that went before concerning him, in the most minute circumstance. Compare Zech. 9: 9, with Matt. 21: 1–11.

When the Messiah should enter Jerusalem in this meek and humble manner, great crowds of the common people should welcome him with shouts and rejoicings,—when Jesus Christ rode into that proud metropolis, in low disguise, the general cry of the mob was, "Hosanna to the Son of David; blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosannah in the highest." Ibid.

Messiah was to be actuated by such a burning zeal for the house of God, as even to be endangered by it,—Jesus Christ displayed that zeal upon various occasions. Compare Ps. 69: 9; John 2: 17.

Then again Messiah was to be betrayed into the hands of his enemies by the treachery of an intimate friend,—Christ was betrayed by one of his disciples whom he had chosen. Compare Ps. 41: 9; 55: 12, 13; Matt. 26: 27–50.

Messiah was to be sold for thirty pieces of silver,—Jesus Christ was sold for the sum predicted. Compare Zech. 11: 12; Matt. 26: 14–16.

Messiah's price, the thirty pieces of silver, was to be cast to the potter in the house of the Lord,—all this was done when Judas betrayed his Master. Compare Zech. 11: 13; Matt. 27: 3–10.

Messiah was to be condemned and suffer death under the color of public justice,—Jesus Christ underwent a mock trial, was declared innocent by his very judge, and yet delivered over to be crucified. Compare Isa. 59: 8, 9; Matt. 27th chapter.

The followers of Messiah were all to forsake him in the time of his greatest need,—when Jesus Christ was apprehended, and put upon trial, all his disciples forsook him and fled. Compare Zech. 13: 7; Isa. 63: 5; Matt. 26: 56; 27: 34.

Messiah was to be ignominiously scourged by his persecutors,—Jesus Christ was treated in this manner. Compare Isa. 50: 6, with Matt. 27: 26.

Messiah was to be smitten on the face in the day of his humiliation,—Jesus Christ was basely buffeted by the hands of vile persons. Compare Isa. 52: 14; Micah 5: 1, and Matt. 26: 67.

Messiah was to have his face befouled with spittle,—Jesus Christ condescended, for our sakes, even to this indignity, without complaining. Compare Isa. 50: 6; Matt. 26: 67.

Who can deny, with such conclusive evidence before them, that Jesus of Nazareth is not the true Messiah? for he has done all the work which the prophets have laid out for him to do.

For the Crisis.

Then, and Now.

A few days since, an anxious curiosity I have for a long time felt to visit the Rock where first our Pilgrim Fathers set foot upon this continent, was gratified. And while viewing the place made so sacred to our memory by the events of past time, the vast change which has taken place since that memorable day when first the anchor of the May Flower grappled our shore, made a deep impression on my mind. Where once the war-whoop made the wild woods ring, is now heard the hum of business and worldly enterprise. Where then the wild deer bounded, relentlessly pursued by the red man, is now heard the jarring tread, and unearthly scream of the locomotive. The dense forest, that then furnished only an habitation for the feathered kingdom, have long since bowed beneath the stroke of the woodman's axe, and in their stead is spread out a country filled with its stirring population, and chequered with cultivation. The habits and customs of the barbarian have given place to those of civilization.

The influence of that noble band of pilgrims who first honored New England with their prayers, has spread through the length and breadth of our land. Thousands upon thousands have been brought under the benign and saving influence of the gospel of Christ. To be sure, they had their failings, like all other good men, and to some extent manifested an intolerant spirit towards those who, for conscience' sake, saw fit to differ from them in matters of faith, yet, I can but look upon them as a people raised up in the providence of God, for a great and glorious purpose. The seeds of christianity were first planted by them in the wilds of America, where civil liberty was to be cradled, and human rights respected.

But, notwithstanding those blessings so dearly bought, and bequeathed to us, giving to this nation a prosperity rapid in its development, which past history fails to furnish us a parallel, yet, a vision dark is passing before my mind. As a nation, it appears to me, both in a moral and political point of view, we have reached the summit, and entered upon the descending grade. Human rights, by the ruling faculty, are disregarded; justice does not go forth; righteousness is turned away backwards; truth is fallen in the street. The trampling under foot of human and divine law is becoming the common order of the day. God was once respected, if not worshiped; but now, from the gray-headed sire down to the prattling child, his power is defied, and his name imprecated. In a land deluged with Bibles, infidelity is fearfully on the increase, not only among the professedly irreligious, but also in our popular churches its deformed head is seen covered by a gauze of religious profession. Many say, "Lord, Lord," but do not the things that he commands. Their forms of worship are imposing, but destitute of that power and divine energy which characterized the preaching of the gospel in olden times. In the management of ecclesiastical matters, worldly policy is substituted for the plain requirements of the gospel. To be sure, they boast of their thousands of pious communicants; but where is that groaning and travailing together in pain with the whole creation of God, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body, brought to view in the eighth chapter of Romans? It is not with the majority of the nominal church. The restitution of this earth to its pristine beauty—the literal resurrection of the body, compared with their ideal heaven, "beyond the bounds of time and space," "is too gross," say they, "for refined minds of the nineteenth century."

Thus Christ and the restitution by them are done away, and they are preparing themselves to be taken in by that strong delusion (Spiritualism,) which is now coming in upon the world like a flood. "Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame."

Pilgrim! the Lord will be here at length; too soon for the world, but no sooner than his church will be glad to see him, for "even now," as Rutherford said, "his absence seems almost a cruelty," while in agony we wait for the dawn of that day whose sun will never go down. O shall I, one so unworthy, so unprofitable, so destitute of merit, be permitted to gaze on the radiant countenance of the Son of God, when his face shall outshine ten thousand suns, while the heavens shall be rolled together, and say, I welcome thee back to earth again, Jesus of Nazareth? I hope, and while I hope I rejoice, but it is with trembling. We are upon the verge of the opening of a grand drama, in which kings and nobles, bondmen and free, will all be actors. No idle spectator there. Sinner! prepare thine heart for the end; it's coming! A. ROSS.

For the Crisis.

Self-Examination.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." 2 Cor. 13: 5.

In view of the positive injunction of the scripture above quoted, no argument is necessary to show that self-examination is a duty. The scriptures furnish abundant matter for self-examination. Am I a christian? All those who professes this title, should enter upon this answer with the solemnities of the judgment day before them, bringing the exercises of their hearts, the conduct of their lives, to the unerring standard of the word. "Cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils," and cling to the Word, and to the witness of the Spirit. Our Savior's reference when assailed was,—"It is written." The witness of the Spirit must not be sought in any sudden impulses of the mind, but in the real work of grace in the heart, conforming it to the image of God. Satan can counterfeit the brightest experiences of this kind. The professed follower of Christ, who knows not whether he is a true or false disciple, must be in a dangerous condition.

"Prove your own selves." The Lord knows the end from the beginning; but the christian is tried for his own benefit, that he may prove himself; not that the Lord did not know, but to impart that knowledge to us, candidates for life or death, acting upon our own free will as to the choice.

In studying the Word, in self-examination and the christian experience of others, I find that although we may be christians, without the assurance of our adoption, yet we are taught in the holy scriptures that such assurance is attainable. Job, in the midst of his afflictions, experienced its comforting support. "I know," says he, "that my Redeemer liveth." David says with confidence,—"I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Paul also expresses the same assurance, many times; and the lives and biographies of many saints, who have lived since, tell us they too know that their Redeemer lives. President Edwards, a man of great piety in his life, attained to the full assurance of hope. And does not the whole tenor of scripture show that it is the blessed privilege of all to attain to holiness and assurance, that when "Jesus appears we shall be like Him?" And will not those who are ready, waiting, watching for the Son of Man, know and say, "this is our God, we have waited for Him?"

I infer that the saints, who are found ready to be changed "in a moment," from mortal to immortality, will attain to that holiness and assurance that Paul had, when he had finished his work and was ready to be offered. O how important it is that as individuals "we make our calling and election sure!" Like David, pray;—"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." This examination should be a constant work. We should search into the motives of every action, and thoroughly examine every religious feeling; to know, if possible, whether it comes from the Spirit of God, or whether it is a fire of our own kindling. We must have an intimate acquaintance with the operations of our own minds, to enable us to distinguish between the exercise of gracious affections and the selfish workings of our own hearts.

I infer from the scriptures and self-examination that, in order to have certain evidence of our adoption into the blessed family, of which Jesus is the Elder Brother, all the fruits of the Spirit must have grown up to some degree of maturity. "And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end." "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith." "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in him." "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the children of God." "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption."

It is my desire to attain "to the full assurance unto the end;" to be holy in heart and life; to watch, and keep my garments; "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace," until the church of God will move in gospel order and faith, of one heart and mind, and attain to the full assurance that we can say when Jesus comes,—"This is our God, we have waited for him." T. F. S.

Concord, N. H.

For the Crisis.

"Melchisedec—Priest—King."

A correct understanding of the work of our High Priest is of the greatest importance; and as we are entirely dependent on divine revelation for such knowledge, it becomes us to examine with care those scriptures which speak directly on the subject.

Christ is a priest after the order of Melchisedec, and not after the order of Aaron. Heb. 7: 11. From this it appears that there are two orders of priesthood, and Melchisedec and Aaron are representatives of the two. In the letter to the Hebrews there are specified several particulars in the priesthood of Christ which were not typified by anything in the priesthood of Aaron. By these we learn that Christ's ministry differs from that of Aaron, in that it is an unchangeable, kingly priesthood; and wherein the type is incomplete in the order of Aaron, the order of Melchisedec makes up the deficiency.

Says Dr. Clark; "He who could not support his pretensions by just genealogical evidence, was said by the Jews to be without father. . . . This sort of phraseology was not uncommon when the genealogy of a person was unknown or obscure." That this remark is correct, may be proved by a great amount of testimony. Thus Macknight renders it,—"without genealogy;" and Whiting, also—"without a genealogy." The Syriac, according to Murdock's translation, expresses this most clearly, to wit; "Moreover, his name is interpreted King of Righteousness; and again, King of Salem, that is, King of Peace. Of whom neither his father nor his mother are written in the genealogies; nor the commencement of his days, nor the end of his life."

The argument of Paul is clearly this, that the lack of this genealogical evidence is what constitutes Melchisedec a type of Christ, whose priesthood is not reckoned by genealogy, and therefore is not hereditary, or changeable, as was Aaron's.

Paul says in Heb. 8: 1,—"We have such a High Priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens." See Rev. 3: 21. "Faith says there must be such a kingdom" as "God has promised to them that love him;" but the promise does not contemplate a priestly reign of Messiah beyond the present dispensation. True faith brings us to the enjoyment of a true hope, "which entereth into that within the vail, whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. 6: 19, 20. May we seek and find him there before he puts off the robes of his priesthood and puts on "the garments of vengeance." Amen. J. H. W.

Addison, Mich., May, 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Three Angels in the Midst of Heaven.—Rev. 14: 6–12.

BY J. F. SWEET.

No. VI.

(Continued from Crisis Vol. 3, Nos. 34, 35, 36.)

We have shown (by reference to Rev. chap. 6: 9; 12: 17; 13: 10; 14: 9–12, and 20: 4,) that the saints, noted for their faith and patience, and for keeping the word, or commandments of God, and the faith, or testimony of Jesus, were in the days of the great tribulation—the forty-two months of the Leopard beast, and under the fifth seal; consequently, the image to which the third angel refers must be within the same period of time; and also the thousand years, within which John saw the saints beheaded, must be within the forty-two months.

Please observe here, that John saw those persons that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus, and for the word of God, and who had not worshiped the wild beast, nor his image, nor had received his mark in their forehead, or on their hand: and they lived and reigned with Christ the thousand years; and preferring the reign of Christ to the reign of the beast, or his image, they lost their heads by keeping his commandments.

I am aware of the objection that will arise in the minds of some of my brethren. It will be said that their reign was after they were beheaded, and consequently after their resurrection. But, dear brethren, this cannot possibly be, as you will see by a little reflection. If this thousand years be after the resurrection, then John saw the saints in their immortal state, and as there will be no beheading in that state, we ask how John could designate those martyrs from others of God's saints that were slain before the beast or image had an existence? or even from those that died a natural death, or had not tasted death at all? The facts in the case are these: John saw in his vision the great tribulation through which the saints were passing: he saw them that were slain for the word of God, and the testimony of Jesus, when the fifth seal was opened; he saw them beheaded for refusing to worship the beast, or his image, otherwise he would not have known that they were beheaded; he could only tell us what he saw in vision, or what was told him; and he tells us that he saw these saints in the thousand years that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus and the word of God. He does not say that an angel, or an elder, pointed out to him this class in the resurrection state, but he tells us that he saw them, and he does not say that he saw any others beside those. We say again, he must have seen them beheaded in the thousand years, and in this thousand years he saw the image that was caused to speak by the two-horned beast, that gave life or breath to the image, that he should both speak, and cause as many as would not worship the beast, or image, to be killed. After this edict had gone forth, the third angel in the midst of heaven (between the 7th and 13th century,) is heard saying, "if any man worship the beast, or his image, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God," (referring to the seven vials of God's wrath.) Here is the patience of the saints; here are those that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus; here they are in chronology where the edict of the image is in force. Now if they keep God's commandments, they will not obey the commandment of the image; and consequently they will be killed—be beheaded. Hence, we find in chap. 20: 5, that John saw these saints beheaded while this edict was in force in the thousand years, which commenced with the history of the image; namely, the scarlet beast, or Empire of Charlemagne, in A. D. 800. And we find by history, to which we have already referred, that this mode of execution was practiced by Charlemagne.

We have remarked that the angel of chap. 20, seen coming down from heaven, must be an exception to the rule laid down for determining the chronology of an angel or angels ascending, an angel in mid heaven, or an angel coming down from heaven. Hence we have deemed it a duty to dwell so much on this subject, in reference to the angel of Rev. 20. There is nothing in the character of this Angel, in his apparel, or his work, that shows him to be of the royal family. Every other angel beside this that John saw coming down, was either attended with glory, or a cloud, or rainbow, and all the attending circumstances showing them to be messengers of truth. See chap. 10, and 18. The chronology of the angel of chap. 10 is after the introduction of the sixth trumpet; the chronology of the angel of Chap. 18, is after five heads are fallen, and the woman is seated on the sixth. The first is a symbol of the Advent messengers; the second of the Reformers in the 16th century. The first was clothed with a cloud, a rainbow was about his head, and in his hand a little book open, showing the book of prophecy that was to be sealed up till the time of the end was now opened, previous to the sounding of the seventh trumpet. The second lightened the earth with his glory, and he cried mightily, "Babylon is fallen, is fallen."

It will be evident to all that these messengers were in the latter part of the gospel day, and hence we prove that their coming down has reference to chronology; while the angel of Chap. 8: 13, was seen "flying in the midst of heaven," and his chronology is determined as being subsequent to the fourth, and previous to the fifth trumpet; viz., between A. D. 600 and A. D. 630.

We have endeavored to show that the angel of chap. 20 was seen coming down a thousand years and a little season before the melting of this earth, which is the lake of fire, into which the Dragon was cast, where the beast and false prophet are. Now if we need any more testimony in reference to the time when the Devil, Dragon, Serpent, or Satan, is cast into the lake of fire, even admitting the Devil of Chap. 20 to be the personal Devil, we have only to refer to the words of Jesus as recorded in Matt. 25: 41,—"Then shall he say also unto them on his left hand, depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Now we need not be at a loss to determine into what fire the Devil and his angels, or agents, go; for Jesus has forever settled that question. We have it plainly stated that the Devil is doomed to destruction by fire, and the fire prepared for him is the fire into which all the wicked shall be cast. When Christ comes on the great white throne, it is then that he will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. 2 Tim. 4: 1. Then "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Both classes come forth in the same hour. John 5: 28, 29; Dan. 12: 2.

Again, the resurrection of the wicked is proved to be in connection with the Lord's coming, from Matt. 26: 64. Jesus said unto the high priest,—"Hereafter shall Ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Again, Rev. 1: 7,—"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him," &c. It will be manifest to all, that they which pierced him, and that wicked high priest who condemned him, must have a resurrection while he is in the air of heaven, previous to the melting of this earth and the establishing of the throne of his kingdom in the new heavens and earth.

Poetry.

PERILS.

Oh! how perils are increasing
In the last days of our age;
Piety is fast decreasing,
And unholy demons rage.
Lord, uphold thy weak disciples,
Keep them by thy mighty power;
Perils thick now almost stifle
Weary saints in this dark hour.

Lukewarmness is fast increasing,
And the saints are growing cold;
Multitudes are now releasing,
All their claim to wealth untold:
They are falling by these perils,
And are turning to the world;
Even some of Zion's heralds,
From their sacred posts are hurled.

Lord, revive hy work, we pray thee,
Keep alive thy drowsy saints;
Let us feel thy melting mercy,
Wash us from all worldly taints.
O! remove all carnal relish,
Regulate our appetite;
Sweep away desires hellish,—
Give affections that are right.

W. SHELDON.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, MAY 27, 1856.

"The World's Crisis."

We chose the above heading for our paper, because we thought it appropriate. We think so still. Nothing is more apparent than the fact that we are rapidly approaching a grand crisis in the history of this world. No observing man can fail to see the downward progress of this generation, and yet it appears to be utterly reckless, and increasing its speed towards perdition every hour. Warning and entreaty seem to have no effect. The preaching of the startling truths of the Bible, that once stirred the hearts of men, as forest trees are moved by tempest winds, now fall powerless upon their ears. Fifteen years ago, one sermon would produce more effect than twenty will now, and the hardness of the people still continues to increase. We often hear the question,—"what do these things mean? to what are we tending." Let Charles Beecher answer:

"Dimly, does every one now and then, see that things are going wrong. With sighs, does every true heart confess, that rottenness is somewhere, but ah! it is hopeless of reform. We all pass on, and the tide rolls down to NIGHT. The time has come when men, having itching ears, and forms of godliness without the power, are heaping to themselves teachers; when they will not endure sound doctrine, but are turned aside unto fables. And the whole has come about stealthily, nobody knows how, among good men, out of good motives. Was not this the way things went with Rome? Are we not living her life over again?"

Paul said such a state of things should come, and the proof is not wanting that it now surrounds us. But when does Paul say the church should pass through such perils? Mark the language:—

"This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come, ... when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

Mr. Beecher truthfully says—"the time has come." Then certainly we are near the "Grand Crisis" of this world. We inquire, are there clear evidences that the harvest of this world is nearly ripe? If so, what are those evidences? What is to be the moral state of the world at the time of harvest? The prophet Joel is directed to give an answer,—"Put ye in the sickle for the harvest is ripe; come get you down, for the press is full; the fats overflow for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." We here learn, that when the harvest is ripe, the wickedness of the world will be great. This is in perfect keeping with the instruction of our Savior, who compares the wickedness of men at the time of his second coming, to the state of the world at the flood, and also to the Sodomites at the time of their destruction. From the present aspect of things, we cannot avoid the conclusion, that the cup of iniquity for this world is about full. It seems as if the flood gates of sin were wide open, and all efforts to close them, seem like an attempt to stop the waters of the Niagara with a mud dam. Paul has declared that, "evil men and seducers shall wax "worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." All efforts to reform the world, or convert the masses of this generation, will prove abortive; still, we should do all in our power to show people their danger, and, as Jude expresses it, "pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."

This is no time for idleness in the vineyard of the Lord; but for watchfulness and prayer. Now is the time to show that we are for the Lord, not with a half hearted service, but with all the energies of our whole being. We can make no compromise with the enemies of the cross. If there is but a single Caleb and Joshua left, let them be strong and stand up boldly for the Lord. Have the courage to do right, if the whole world is arrayed against you. Let your light SHINE if all the powers of darkness and demons in the universe stand opposed. We will soon be upon the plains of glory, rejoicing in triumphant victory.

REMEMBER to direct all letters, packages, &c., to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass. Write the given name in full, as there is another M. Grant in Boston, who is frequently troubled by receiving our letters and packages. Be particular.

For the Crisis.

Evil Speaking.

No. II.

HEAR ME FARTHER.

If all you have to say in an evil report gotten up by yourself, or begotten by another and adopted by you, were true, it may be you could do your duty much better, and be just as well off, and everybody else, if you should let it alone. "But the cause will suffer, and I must speak all the evil I know of the person and every one as fast as I find it, to keep the cause in good condition." For one, I should prefer to have any cause suffer all it may, rather than be sustained by talebearers, and evil surmisers; for such are, mostly, evil speakers. There is more danger to the cause from them than almost any other source.

The cause, forsooth! They would ruin any cause. Instead of doing the miserable scavenger work which is the best view now taken, find if the things are so in the proper way; i. e., by going to the persons who have reported, or to the person spoken of, —then let the proper action be taken, and all the good and faithful will find something else to do besides spreading the real faults of past or present brethren, abroad. It is true that evil will have to be spoken of, and examined; but "evil speaking" is to speak and spread that which is injurious to the person, whether true or false, before it is shown to be true; but in the scriptural sense, evil remarks concerning the innocent, even though they may be charged or suspected, is wrong.

There has been plenty of turkey-buzzard work done for the devil, by speaking evil of one another—if indeed it was intended the refuse should be removed—but alas! that only increases. What is to be done? It is to be presumed we mean to obey God! We say so. Let us do so! We are then to dismiss all evil speaking and guile. Positively! speak evil of none. "But some have faults." True. What will you do about it? Begin to speak of it to all your acquaintances, and so make it worse—injure yourself, and injure them more—conjure up friends and sympathy in sin? as you surely will if you resort to evil speaking, for all plain and sensible people naturally conclude that the subject of evil speaking is persecuted, partially, at least, so the enemy will gain his end if he can make you his tool to work with; he will lead you to abuse the innocent, and by re-action, to help the guilty. No! That is not the way. Let the action be to restore, and when the proper course is taken there can be no complaint, but may be much hope.

Stop then, brother, sister, neighbor—all stop! "Speak the truth" in love! ! "Be kindly affectioned one to another," but talk not to the damage of each other's reputation. What obligations we are under to Christ and his people. Cease speaking evil, and the strife will cease! DELTA.

For the Crisis.

Love One Another.

O how sweet it is that we have love one for another. How sweet to see christians dwell together in unity. "Union is strength." Where there is a body of christians who love one another with a pure heart fervently, they will exert an influence which cannot be told. O precious boon! Heaven-born principle! do not leave us forever. Where hast thou flown? We would implore thy speedy return. O come and gladden our hearts, thou uniting, enlivening, cementing, sin-killing, soul-stirring, vivifying, quickening principle! O what love has the Father bestowed upon us in the unspeakable gift of his Son! O my soul, I see in my imagination the blessed Son of God, not where to lay his weary head, at Pilate's bar, with a crown of thorns upon his celestial brow; then condemned by a murderous rabble, led away to Calvary's rugged summit, and stretched between the heavens and earth. O hear him in his last expiring moments, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." "My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?"

"O for such love let rocks and hills
Their lasting silence break!"

O brethren, let us awake to a sense of our obligations, when God has done so much for us. S. DWIGHT.

For the Crisis.

Take Care!

Hist, there, take care of that word. Be careful, or you may do hurt. Now isn't that a little stronger than the facts positively warrant? May be it is all true, but perhaps it isn't. Perhaps, now, the whole matter might be explained on a more charitable supposition; now just be very careful, that in trying to correct a little wrong you don't do a greater one. I know it appears much as you say, but then how often appearances deceive, and there have been times when some very excellent persons have been wrongfully judged on account of appearances.

Be careful—judge not lest ye be judged. You know you would not wish to be judged by appearances sometimes; well, remember that what measure "ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." Now you had better not go upon guesses or probabilities; go and tell the offenders of their faults, and perhaps they will be able to explain the whole matter, or, at least, to make it appear so different that you can forgive, and pass it all by. I think you had better try that. And now, by the way, while I think of it, have you ever been in humility and prayed about the matter, before you began to agitate it? And then, too, have you walked right up to the gospel looking-glass and taken a careful glance, to see if there wasn't a beam in your eye that needed picking out, quite as much as the mote does that's in your neighbor's eye? Come, now, walk right up to the light, and take a fair look at the matter.

Then, here is another thing;—are you certain that, put you in the same circumstances with your neighbor, you would have done any better than he has? Just recollect, too, that humanity is frail stuff at the best, and that if God was strict to mark iniquity against you, you could not answer for one of a thousand of your transgressions; and just think how hard it must be for a person really guilty of so many wrongs, to be accused of a single one which they do not really commit, and also how hard it must be to put the worst construction upon the faults of such erring creatures. Now, when you look this all over, may be you will conclude to be a little more careful.

I know you feel jealous for the honor of God's cause, and this is right; but recollect, you may dishonor God as much by an unchristian zeal, developing itself in unscriptural acts, as your neighbors may have done by their wrong courses. Two wrongs will never make one right. Now think of these things. "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between him and thee alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, take with thee one or two more, . . . and if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican . . . What ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Now this appears to be the Bible course; you take it, and you will come out right. But take care—be very careful—mind those words—don't let them slip, and do mischief. Now, remember, won't you?

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
And hide the faults I see;
What mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

H. L. H.

No. Blandford, May 9, '57.

For the Crisis.

Civil Government.

Civil government I believe to be of divine appointment, for the interests and good order of human society; and that magistrates are to be prayed for, conscientiously honored, and obeyed (if righteous,) in all things according to the will of God, who is the only Lord of the conscience, and prince of the kings of the whole earth. "To the law and to the testimony."

Rom. 13: 1–7;—Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers; for there is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained (or ordered) of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same; for he is the minister (ruler) of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain; for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. For this cause pay ye tribute also; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor." Deut. 16: 18,—"Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes; and they shall judge the people with just judgment. Thou shalt not wrest judgment; thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift; for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the words (or matters) of the righteous." 2 Sam. 23: 3,—"The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, he that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God.' Ex. 18: 21–23,—"Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands; . . . and all this people shall go to their place in peace." Matt. 22: 21,—"Then saith he unto them, render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Titus 3: 1,—"Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work. To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness unto all men." 1 Pet. 2: 13,—"Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether it be unto the king, as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him (the king,) for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well." 1 Tim. 2: 1–3,—"I exhort (or desire) therefore that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceful life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior." Acts 5: 29,—"Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said; "we ought to obey God rather than man!" Matt. 10: 28,—"Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." Read this passage also, Dan. 3: 15–18. P. TANDY.

For the Crisis.

The Gospel.

Jesus commanded his apostles to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved." Mark 16: 15. This is plain language and easy to be understood. We have only to turn to Jesus' own preaching, to find what it is the gospel of; and we hear him from the time he began to teach in the Jews' synagogue, preaching "the gospel of the Kingdom." Matt. 4: 23. "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom." And when he sent out the twelve apostles to preach to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, he said,—"go, preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand." This is the most blessed tidings to lost man, for Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost. Luke 19: 10. Man was lost, the kingdom and all was lost. The first Adam lost all by disobedience, the second Adam restores all by obedience to God. And shall we be disobedient and lose our part in the kingdom?

Jesus, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Let all that hear the glad tidings—the gospel of the kingdom—believe it with all their heart, and be baptized; and by obeying Jesus, and following his example, they shall be saved. Matt. 3: 13. And they shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost which will enable them to overcome the world, the devil, and the flesh. Jesus says, Rev. 3: 21, "to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." And he also says,—"This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24: 14.

Dear brethren, let us all preach the gospel of the kingdom, and not a gospel without a kingdom, a perverted gospel, as Paul calls it. Gal. 1: 7–9. Obedience to the gospel of the kingdom brings the gospel hope, which is a hope of the resurrection, and without a kingdom what use of a resurrection? But we look beyond to the time when "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom." Dan 7: 27. And the kingdom being under the whole heaven, we shall reign on earth. Jesus will say to his saints,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 34. This is our blessed hope—the resurrection, and then the glorious kingdom of Jesus; then he will sit on the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1: 33. This was the hope and expectation of the church in the days of the apostles. The saints universally looked for the coming of the Lord.

Paul, writing to the church at Rome, speaks of believers as groaning within themselves "waiting for the adoption, to wit; the redemption of the body;" and then comforts them with the assurance that their salvation was nearer than when they believed. To the Corinthians, he speaks of it as a matter of thanksgiving to God that they were "waiting for the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ." To the Philippians, —as looking for "the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his own glorious body." To the Collossians,—"When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." To the Thessalonians,—who turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." To Timothy,—there is a "crown of righteousness," to all them that love his appearing." To Titus,—"the grace of God," teaches us to live soberly, "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." To the Hebrews, he says,—"unto them that look for him shall he (Christ) appear the second time without sin unto salvation." James also admonishes the brethren, by the example of the husbandmen who wait for the harvest:—"Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Peter points the hopes of believers to praise, and honor, and glory, at the revelation of Jesus Christ,—to the elders "a crown of glory," when the chief Shepherd shall appear."

John cherishes the thought that when he shall appear, we "shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." And Jude, quoting the prophecy of Enoch,—"Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints," exhorted the brethren to keep themselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ.

These are but a few of the many quotations with which the scriptures abound; relative to the ancient expectation of the church; and how becoming and dignified an attitude it is for the children of God to occupy in an evil day, in the midst of a perishing world. This glorious hope is just as necessary now as it was in past ages, to cheer us in adversity, to sustain our courage and invigorate our faith amidst our manifold trials. Let us not cast away our confidence; it hath "great recompence of reward;" for yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." And how cheering the thought to the children of the kingdom, that the tarrying time is almost over, that we may soon say,—"Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

Brethren, let us not become weary in well doing, "for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

JOHN MERRIAM.

New Glasgow, May, '57.

SISTER WELLS writes from Saco, Me.:—"If ever there was a cause that my heart and soul felt bound up in, it is the Advent cause. What sound can be sweeter than the glad tidings, we are a going home. Yes, going home to die no more! How surely it gives the weary pilgrim peace and joy to think his heavenly home is so near. We are often led to ask, is sweet release so near at hand?

May our heavenly Father enable those dear brethren and sisters who write for the Crisis to be filled with the spirit of our dear Savior. O that all who profess to be believers in the immediate coming of our dear Savior, would arise and come forth anew, for it is time to awake out of all slumber and work while the day lasts. We have all reason to believe the time is not far distant when our dear Savior will be seen coming in the clouds of heaven. Glory be to his dear name! O let us pray fervently and sincerely,—'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven.'"

From Bro. Wm. Sutherland.

Bro. Grant:—I am still among the crying, but earnestly looking for the King to come. My health has been poor for some two years past, but God has blest my labors.

I have seen many brought to Christ the fall and winter past. Bless the Lord for that. I still feel that I must go on to the end. I long for home. When will it come? O when shall we see Jesus, and rest with him at home? I still feel a great desire to be of use in the cause of Christ, for which I believe I was chosen. I fear all are not like Jesus yet; they need more grace and Christ in their heart O when will they put him on, ann walk as he walked? Time is short, and what is done must be done soon. Farewell.

Wm. Sutherland.

For the Crisis.

Bro. Grant:—I find that many of our Brethren and Sisters who write for the Crisis receive circulars from a man in Philadelphia advertising a work entitled, "The Opening of the Three Books of Judgment, including the Book of Life," &c. &c. &c.; and I find that after sending their money and buying the book, they, on reading it, find that it contains, with some good truth quoted from the Bible, a number of the wildest fancies and most mistaken ideas imaginable; and, after puzzling their heads over it a long time, have given it up in despair, and wish that they had their money and the author had his book again. Therefore, I think it well to state the facts, and then those who wish to try for themselves can buy the book, and those who profit by the experience of others can let it alone.

P. P. P.

Obituary.

Bro. Osbert A. Ireland, of Athens, Me., calmly fell asleep May 4, 1857, in the 44th year of his age.

At his own request, his remains were carried to his father's residence in Newport, Me., where, amid the mingled grief of the solitary widow, five orphaned children, bereaved parents, brothers, sisters, relatives, and former associates, they laid him away, to wake not, nor come forth, till the heavens be no more. His hope rested in the resurrection of the dead; his faith embraced the Abrahamic promise. We might eulogize departed worth, but what will it avail? Suffice it to say, we have hope in his death.

Then cease, sad mourner, cease thy grief,
For oh! amid the gloom,
There is a light whose radiance throws
A halo round the tomb.

There is a joy for those who mourn,
A smile for every tear;
A balm for every wounded heart,
A hope for every fear.

Kneel at the cross, and thou shalt feel
A Savior's love divine;
And 'mid the shadows of thy path,
Its holy rays shall shine.

We would sincerely and prayerfully commend our sister to the widow's God and husband—her children to the Father of the fatherless.

Also, in Newport, Me., May 4th, 1857, of canker rash, little Clarence C., only child of L. G. and Louisa Ireland, aged one year and nineteen days.

Death! cruel death! thou hast robbed a young mother of a cherub boy. We regret that thou shouldst come to hush so soon the music of her home. She sought to arrest thine icy grasp—she did not want the little "Harp of thousand strings" so soon to forget its melody.

But it was vain, thy wing had cast
A shadow o'er its face;
And on each youthful feature left
Its dark and fearful trace.

Behold her! as beneath the sod
She lays her child alone;
How much of love and tenderness
Is mingled in her tone.

L. Damman.

Corinna, Me., May, 1857.

Fell asleep in Jesus, at Newark N. Y, April 18th, sister Nancy Christy, widow of Bro. Thomas Christy, deceased.

Our sister gave her heart to the Lord about forty years ago, and lived a true christian, as her life and conversation has shown, in the M. E. church; and it can truly be said of her, she was a mother in Israel—a sister in Christ.

When the doctrine of the coming of Jesus was proclaimed, she embraced it with all her heart. She could no longer remain a member of the M. E. church, but she remained steadfast in looking for the Lord to return and set up his everlasting kingdom on the earth. Her house was open for prayer and conference meetings, and also for female prayer meetings. She would often say, "have I done all that I could for the Lord?" The Advent cause has lost a friend.

She has been declining for a year past. She went to visit one of her daughters in the morning, and at eight o'clock P. M., she fell asleep in Christ, without a struggle or a groan. I conversed with her in the morning, previous to her going to her daughter's, and she told me that the Lord was precious, and was preparing her for himself.

She has left six children, with other relatives, to mourn their loss; but they need not mourn as those without hope, for our sister will rise again at the resurrection of the just.

She selected for her text the seventh and eighth verses of the fourth chapter of second Timothy, and also the following hymn, for her funeral service.

"I call the world's Redeemer mine;
He lives who died for me, I know,
Who bought my soul with blood divine.
Jesus shall re-appear below,
Stand in that dreadful day unknown,
And fix on earth his heavenly throne.

Then the last judgment day shall come,
And though the worms this skin devour,
The Judge shall call me from the tomb,
Shall bid the greedy grave restore;
And raise this individual me,
God in the flesh, my God, to see.

In this identic body, I,
With eyes of flesh refined, restored,
Shall see that self same Savior nigh,
See for myself my smiling Lord,—
See with ineffable delight,
Nor faint to bear the glorious sight.

Then let the worms demand their prey,
The greedy grave my reins consume;
With joy I drop my mould'ring clay,
And rest till my Redeemer come.
On Christ, my life, in death rely,
Secure that I can never die."

Mary A. Sum.

Domestic Summary.

MORMON LAW AND ORDER.

THE UNITED STATES COURT IN UTAH CAPTURED BY THE MORMONS.

[Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.]

Salt Lake City, March 5.—Prominent among the most recent occurrences here stands the breaking up and dispersion of the U. S. Court by a body of armed men, creatures of Brigham Young and the Priesthood, and commonly known here as the "Danites." The U. S. District Court for Utah commenced its session on Monday, the 9th of February, Judge Stiles, a seceding Mormon, occupying the bench. The U. S. District Attorney is Hosea Stout, an appointee, of course, of the government at Washington, and a noted member of the Danite Band. Upon the opening of the Court, he rose and stated that no Grand Jury would be empannelled, as there were no cases to be presented worthy of its notice! Thus, by one stroke of masterly policy, administered by an officer of the law and in the name of its majesty, were covered up a long catalogue of heinous offences, including murders, robberies and arsons, which had been committed since the last preceding term of the Court. A Petit Jury was then summoned and sworn, but every imaginable impediment that could be thrown in their way to obstruct the current of justice when running counter to the edicts of the Priesthood, were availed of.

All the members of the bar are Mormons, except Mr. David H. Burr, United States Surveyor-General, and Dr. Hurt, an officer of the United States Indian Department. These gentlemen were admitted by Chief Justice Kinney about a year ago, in order to attend to some controversies connected with their official positions, and to an important case that was then tried, and which involved a large amount of property belonging to a citizen who was not a Mormon. They have not practiced, however, since then, until the present term of the Court, when they agreed to do so at the earnest solicitation of Mr. T. S. Williams, who had some very interesting cases to prosecute.

It is contended by the Mormons that the United States Court has no cognizance of any but United States cases, and that all offences committed in the Territory, and all Territorial suits must be tried before the Territorial Courts and by the Territorial laws. Starting upon this pretext, while the Court was in progress on the 12th ult., the Mormon members of the bar and others of the Danite band inveigled Judge Stiles into a private room, locked the door, barred the windows, and then with revolvers at his head and knives within an inch of his throat, forced him to promise to uphold them in whatever they did, and to "sustain the laws of Utah!" Thus overpowered, threatened and intimidated, Judge Stiles yielded, dismissed the Jury and adjourned the Court, directing the Crier to pronounce it adjourned sine die.

Affairs in Utah.—A Washington letter in the New York Journal of Commerce communicates interesting intelligence concerning the affairs among the Mormons, said to be derived from gentlemen recently from Utah, and well acquainted with matters there. The population of Utah is estimated at forty thousand, though Governor Young says it is double that. One-half are foreigners. Formerly the proportion of Americans was much greater.

"The foreign population is said to be somewhat improved in material condition by the change, while that which is American, suffers privations to which they had not been accustomed. The foreigners are ignorant and fanatical, and are subjected to the absolute authority of Brigham Young. The Americans are more enlightened, especially as to civil rights, and have become insubordinate and dissatisfied, and threaten to overturn the power of 'the prophet, priest and King.'

Brigham Young has an army of twenty-five hundred men, under good discipline. They are drilled every day. They are mostly foreigners, and comprise the most ignorant, brutal and fanatical of the Mormons. Therefore they are fit instruments for the purposes of Brigham Young. They have no sympathies with American institutions, social or political, and will, when let loose hesitate at no atrocities."

At present there is nothing like an administration of justice between man and man, every question being resolved into one as between the parties concerned and Brigham Young. Assassinations are not unfrequent, and the seizure and confiscation of private property is a common occurrence. The American portion of the population are prepared for an insurrection against Brigham Young's rule, and if the federal government would send a sufficient number of troops to support them, would gladly assist in revolutionizing the affairs of the Territory.

THRILLING NARRATIVE OF FACTS FROM UTAH.

A correspondent of the New York Daily Times, writing from Great Salt Lake City, is laying before the country facts that have transpired in that leprous community, which make the flesh quake as we read them. His communications are given in the form of a diary.

Under date of March 9th, he records that an encampment of a party of four was surprised, and one Tobin, who was Orderly Sergeant in Captain Morris's command, U. S. A., which served as an escort to Captain Gunnison when he was killed upon the plains, was shot through the head, the ball entering close under the eye. Tobin had given in his adhesion to Mormonism, and as a reward for his conversion was sealed to Alice Young, daughter of the prophet. After a time he desired the second daughter and was led to believe he might embrace her, also, but he was deceived, and not only that, the fair Alice left him and took refuge in the arms of one Hiram Clauson, where three or four doves had nestled before. This induced Tobin to turn towards California. Unfortunately for him, however, he had been too deeply initiated into the mysteries of Mormonism to be permitted to leave the country. The Mormons proclaim publicly that no apostate shall be permitted to escape from their community to tell d—d tales about them.

Friday, March 13.—Last evening, "our peaceful city" was thrown into commotion by an attempt, on the part of some persons high up in the Priesthood, to get away from T. S. Williams his daughter, who is not yet fourteen years of age. His father is one of the old Mormons, having been with them from the beginning of their career, and is, moreover, a conspicuous member of the Danite Band. His grandfather, old as he is, has been "sealed" to three young women within the last few weeks. A few days since I met him coming from Brigham's office, with a young girl, apparently some sixteen.

Joseph Young, the not over bright son of Brigham, returned last fall from a mission to England. As the son of the prophet he was flattered, caressed, and almost worshipped by the faithful abroad, which inflated his vanity near to bursting. He left a young wife behind him when he went, whom he has entirely neglected since his return, except to keep her locked up in his father's seraglio. He has lately been "sealed" to two young women, one of them daughter of one Grant, a brother of the late Jedediah. She is about seventeen years of age, and represented to be very amiable and lovely. She was most bitterly opposed to the marriage, and begged her father not to force her into the arms of a man whom she loathed and abhorred; but he was deaf to her entreaties, for the son of the Prophet must be gratified. Since she was "sealed" she refuses to associate with him, and walks her room all night, her agony unrelieved by tears, in a state bordering on insanity.

A young woman, who forsook her friends in England and came to this country last Fall, under the delusion that if she could only reach "Zion" her happiness would be completely insured in this world and the next, was taken on her arrival into Brigham's family as his mistress, when the monstrous state of affairs were soon revealed to her. She anxiously inquired whether it had always been thus, and if there was no hope for a change. She was told that, instead of any hope of improvement, affairs daily were growing worse—when the poor woman in her agony exclaimed, "Oh! I am lost! lost!! lost!!!"

The Mormons pretend and assert it as a part of their doctrine that no man can take a second wife without the consent of the first. That consent is not unusually obtained by coercion, and the lash and starvation are frequently resorted to for that purpose, many instances of which have come to my notice. But Brigham has adopted another mode of insuring acquiescence. If the first wife evinces any repugnance to the addition, he deposes her, as he terms it, from her position as first wife and assigns the place to another.

There are some less grave stories told about this people. Elder W. W. Phelps, one of the very old Mormon rascals, who plays the part of the Devil in one of their ceremonies representing the Garden of Eden, persuaded one of the "hand-cart women" that she could not be saved unless she was "sealed" to him. She, not understanding exactly what was expected from the "sealed" ones, consented; but when night came on and he wanted to share her couch, she exclaimed: "Is this what you are after, you old covey? I'll seal you," and thereupon struck him in the face with her fist, giving him a black eye which he carried for several days.

A party of five apostate Mormons, having been stripped of all they possessed by Mormon process and open robbery, determined to leave the territory at all hazards. Unable to procure teams, they started on foot and passed out of Springville in the afternoon. They had been watched and were followed. The party had hardly proceeded a hundred yards when they were fired upon by a band of disguised Danites. Potter was killed outright, pierced by five balls. Parrish and one of his sons were wounded. The murderers then rushed upon them, cut Parrish's throat from ear to ear, and ripped open his bowels. His son, though severely wounded, ran about 80 yards before he was overtaken. His throat, too, was cut, and his bowels ripped open.

As soon as it was known that the victims of this terrible crime were making preparations to leave, an express was sent to Brigham, which performed the journey and returned in less than 24 hours, although the distance travelled was about 120 miles—bringing orders, the nature of which may be reasonably inferred from the horrible results. The Bishop laid his hands on the heads of some men (the supposed assassins,) previous to their starting out, blessed them and prayed the Lord to "give them strength to perform the work of the Lord."

We have reports of others being killed, but have no positive knowledge, as the Mormons take care to hide from us every dark deed. One of the Bishops, the other day, in preaching to his congregation, said that he "would cut the throats of the apostates with as little compunction as he would go into a pen of hogs and butcher them." One of the "Seventies" said that at first he shuddered at the idea of killing all the apostates—men, women and children—but had become reconciled to it; that he was satisfied he would be saving them and assisting in building up the kingdom.

March 30.—Mr. Mogo, a U. S. Deputy Surveyor, started out about two weeks since to commence his surveying operations, taking with him a strong party of 27 armed men. It had been said all winter that no surveys would be permitted. Since Mr. Mogo's departure these threats have multiplied, and it is openly declared that he and his party are to be killed. Mormons have been warned not to accompany or work for him, as they would thus endanger their lives.

A flying report has just come in that the Deputy Surveyor and all his party had been murdered.—Boston Herald.

Troops for Utah.—New York, May 21. (Correspondence Daily Times.) Washington, May 20. A large military force has been ordered for Utah to take their position on the government Reserve, within forty miles or so of Salt Lake City. The new Governor of the Territory has been selected, but has not yet been heard from, and his whereabouts is unknown. Whoever and wherever he may be, it is understood that he was recommended by Mr. Bright, of Indiana.

Warning to Tobacco Consumers.—A letter from Kentucky says, that tobacconists are using prussic acid to give an almond flavor to the leaf, and in consequence of this poison, a number of smokers have lost the use of their lower limbs.—Boston Journal.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE HEAVENLY CITY.

O let us sing the promises
Which God to us hath given,
For what is all this earth can give,
Without a hope of heaven?

Could we possess the whole of earth,
Yes, claim this floating ball,
Where sin and death as tyrants reign,—
Alas! what is it all?

Both sin and death shall pass away,
Earth shine with glory bright;
And all who love the Lord of life,
Will see that city bright.

That glorious city will descend
In beauty from above;
Such bliss no mortal eye hath seen,
For all therein is love.

Earth's riches are all vain compared—
Its streets are paved with gold,
Its walls are gems, its gates of pearl,
Whose value is untold.

The gates shall not be shut by day,
And there will be no night;
God's glory will outshine the sun,
The Lamb will be its light.

No suffering there from want or wrong,
There is no orphan band;
For Christ our Savior there will lead
Them, with a gentle hand.

And since he's said that youth may come,
O who would stay away,
And never taste those joys prepared—
The bliss of endless day?

E. B. L.

Blandford, April, 1857.

Foreign News.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

BY THE NIAGARA AT HALIFAX.

Halifax, May 19.

The steamship Niagara, Captain Wickman, from Liverpool, on Saturday, 9th inst., arrived at this port this forenoon. News unimportant.

Persia.—Further hostilities have occurred in Persia. A despatch announces that the city of Mohammerah was captured by the British, April 26. The Persians lost 200 killed and wounded, among whom was a Brigadier General, besides 17 guns and a vast amount of ammunition and military stores. The Persian army, under Shah Seavah, retreated towards Ahrvaz and Shasta in great disorder. The British forces are encamped near Mohammerah: their loss in killed and wounded is about ten.

The Arab tribes are friendly to the British, and are sending in their submission.

A telegraphic message from Sir James Outram (British) says: "The flying expedition to Ahrvaz returned to Mohammerah April 4th, completely successful. The large Persian army retired from their position, and retreated rapidly towards Dizful, before a British force not 400 strong. One gun was captured, and extensive military stores seized and destroyed."

France.—The Crystal Palace Stock.—The joint-stock company which built the Palais de l'Industrie, is winding up; and it loses 20 per cent of its capical. A great deal of discontent is felt with the Government, for the course it has taken with this poor company. The Government guaranteed a sinking fund and 5 per cent interest per annum, and now it refuses to pay more than 70f. per share, which were at par 100f. This bad faith falls very heavily on some of the shareholders, for there are a good many persons who purchased the shares when they were as high as 180f., so they lose 100f. on every share.

The capital of the Bank of France is to be increased to $40,000,000.

The Emperor Napoleon was 49 years old on the 20th of April.

The Chinese empire is said to contain about four hundred million inhabitants, and five million square miles.

Old Bible.—In Gironda, the public librarian has discovered a manuscript Bible, which is traced to the early part of the twelfth century. It is written on parchment of great fineness. The pages are divided into two columns, and enriched with arabesques and ornamented letters, painted with great taste.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. J. Gouch appoints to preach in Boston, May 31st

Providence permitting, I will preach at West Winsted, in Humphrey's Hall, May 31st. Subject, in the evening,—"The cause of modern Spiritualism as viewed from a Bible stand point."

At the Annual Meeting of the Shinnecock Indians, Southampton, L. I., June 7th.

M. Grant.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Springfield, Mass., Thursday evening, May 28th. Miles Grant.

Eld. J. Hemenway appoints to preach in Boston, June 7th.

Bro. W. S. Campbell appoints to preach in Springfield, Mass., June 7th.

Albany, N. Y., Tuesday evening June 9th.

Rochester, N. Y., June 14th. Particulars next week.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

New York, Cor. of Grand and Elizabeth Streets, Sunday, May 31

During the week, at Newark and New York as may be demanded.

W. S. Campbell.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at

Kennebunk, Me., Sunday, May 31

Salem, Mass., (for Bro. George Burnham's charge,) Sunday, June 7

Rye, N. H., third Sunday in June.

New Bedford, fourth Sunday in June, and first Sunday in July.

Bro. Hemenway appoints to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., " 31th

I will preach as follows:—viz.,

Roby's Corners, Sunday, May 24th

By request, I will preach in Manchester, N. H., 79 Elm St., the first Sunday in June.

My appointments beyond Roxbury are withdrawn.

S. W. Bishop.

The Lord will, I will attend to the following appointments:

Freeport, (Swamp School-House,) May 24
" (Flying Point,) " 31
Brunswick, June 7

R. R. York.

Bro. A. Ross appoints to preach in Exeter, N. H., May 30 and 31

Bro. Grant:—Let me say to those calls from the East that I purpose, the Lord will, to spend the most of June on the Penobscot, and will meet the brethren in Holden, Orrington, Exeter, or elsewhere, as they may arrange. I shall try and be at the Conference at Carmel.

Your Bro. full of hope, L. Boutell.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. at

Vernon, Vt., June 4th and 5th
West Brattleborough, June 6th and 7th
Houghtonville, June 9th
North Springfield, June 10th
Wethersfield, near Bro. Fellows, June 11th
Taftsville, June 12th
Hartland, Dinsmore Hill, June 13th and 14th.

I can stop at two or three places coming back, if desired and informed. I hope some one will meet me at the depots, for I am a stranger in that section. Description—tall, coarse and plain looking man.

Hiram Munger.

Will the Herald copy?

Bro. A. Fox will meet with the Brn. in Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Sunday, June 21st Cheshire St., Cheshire, Ct., Sunday, June 28th.

Conference.

The Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Semi-Annual Conference stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, July 3d. A good representation is desired. Service at the chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

General Conference.

Bro. Grant:—Having consulted with many of the Brn. composing the different churches in this section, I find an interest, with many earnest requests, for a General Conference. We have therefore, after due deliberation, decided to hold a Conference at Carmel, Me., commencing Thursday, June 10th, at 5 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We hope, pray, and believe that this means of grace will prove a savor of life unto life. We invite all, whosoever will, to come and partake with us; and shall expect as many of the household of faith as consistently can, to come in the name of the Lord, and such as can will feel it a privilege and duty, with open heart and hand, to help forward the cause of truth.

Those coming by railroad, will stop at Carmel Depot, near the village, where the meeting is held.

In behalf of the Brn.,

I. Damman.
L. L. Howard.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces, will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

A Edgecome 104, W Lyman 104, H E Wright 104, N D Babcock 123, B H Couch 74, J M Muklig 114, N Ring 117, James Foster 117, E E Traverse 117, J Wait 104, J Porter 111, C P Thorn 116, U A Wetherell 114, J P Longee 89, A Corey 104, E Tapley 116, $1 each, G W Gross 126' H M Kelly 104,—$2 each.

M M Evens 104, E F Brooks 104, Mrs. Sarah Bond 104,—50 cents each.

For Books,—S R Eddy $2; W H Parker $1; C B Turner $3; H Bassett 25 cts.; E F Brooks 50 cents; J Wait 25 cts.; C P Thorn 18 cents; J B Dodge $3.12; A W Lloyd 39 cts.

For Bro. Turner.—H. Bassett 84 cents.

For the Poor.—Friend $1.

Books Sent.—S. R. Eddy, W. H. Parker, C. B. Turner, H. Bassett, C. P. Thorn, L. Kendell, J. Hart, A. W. Lloyd.

To Correspondents.

Bro. Sweet—Bro. N. F. Nason's P. O. address is North Hermon, Me.

We would refer the brother who sent us an inquiry on Matt. 10: 28, to Crisis March 11, Vol. 5, No. 2.

Sr. Vankleek—J. Wendell's P. O. address is Edenboro, Pa.

U. A. Witherell—We cannot furnish all the back numbers, but send what we have. We mark you paid to 114.

G. A. Hawley—Your paper was sent to the Haverhill P. O., as directed. We now add the No. of your P. O. Box, which was not on the former address.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State, and one cent out of it.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A. C Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both, An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 6 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a biographical sketch, or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; full bound in gilt, $1—pos. 9 cts.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. —Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE SEVENTH VIAL.

REV. 16: 17-21.

Now the mighty of the seven
  Of the messengers of God,
From the awful height of heaven,
  From the presence of the Lord;
With the vial in its fulness—
  See! he empties in the air,
Causing darkness and a dimness
  Throughout all the atmosphere,—

While is heard the declaration,
  From the temple from on high,
In its potent acclamation,
  Pealing through the earth and sky,
Crying, it is consummated!
  Now proceeding from the throne,
Heaven's justice vindicated—
  "IT IS FINISHED! IT IS DONE!

Hark! the many voices, thrilling
  Like the angry ocean's roar,
When its waves upheave unwilling,
  By the winds from shore to shore.
List! the rolling of the thunder,
  Like Jehovah's chariot car,
When it cleaves the mount asunder,
  Coming from the distance far.

See! the lightnings glance, rebounding
  In their fearful anger flash,
Swifter than the wings of morning,
  Through the air resistless dash.
Hark! the rumbling, what portending?
  Lo an earthquake! O my soul!
Now the crisis, 'tis impending!
  Shakes the globe from pole to pole.

Now "great Babylon" the mystic,
  Up before Jehovah's come;
(Ever with him characteristic)
  Lo! she meets her final doom.
Every island, see in motion,
  From their moorings are unbound;
Sea and land all in commotion,
  "And the mountains are not found."

Now the hail in quick disruption,
  Full in weight a talent nigh,
(Fitting emblem of destruction,)
  Falls in torrents from on high.
Men blaspheme the God of heaven,
  And retort with bitter hate;
To despair and death are driven,
  For the plague thereof was great.

Awful day! O day of wonders!
  Day of retribution nigh!
'Mid the voice—ten thousand thunders,
  Pealing through the earth and sky.
Haste, then, watchmen, to your stations,
  Resting on Jehovah's arm;
Raise the banner to the nations,
  Blow the trumpet! sound alarm!

Sound the solemn proclamation,
  Warn the people far and near;
Sound aloud to every nation,
  Soon Messiah will appear.
He will come, his power assuming,
  Claim the kingdoms all his own;
He will come, in flames consuming—
  Day of wonders! day of doom!

WM. SHEPHERD.

Elizabeth City, N. J., 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Seek for Immortality.

In the midst of life we are in death. We see it on every hand. We feel its power, and shrink from its approach. We would shield ourselves, and those we love, from the tyrant death, but we cannot—none are exempt.

Every living thing is subject to death. Earth groans beneath its power, and all nature sighs to be free. Decay is written upon every thing, and will be, until God makes all things new. The pretty flowers that bloom, so fresh and fair in the bright spring time, soon fade and die. The stately trees, whose fresh green leaves weave a canopy for man, under which he may now repose, soon lose their beauty and verdure; their leaves fall silently to the ground, and the wind taketh them away. Fit emblem of the brevity of life—the mortality of man. He passeth away and is hid from our view. But there is a life that never ends—immortal life—it is given to all who will accept, "without money and without price."

Sinner, will you accept of it, and live forevermore, where there are pleasures that never die, and joys that never fade, in the Paradise of God, the Eden of rest?

Pilgrim, in this vale of tears, do not falter by the way; press on! the prize is yours, a crown of life is in store for you, immortality beyond the grave is thine; only be faithful. Temptations may surround your path; yield not to them, flee from them; remember, the grace of God is sufficient for you. Trust in Him. Temptations come in every form, therefore we should guard against them with all our might. "Watch and pray," is the command of Christ. Has prayer become a task? Think how Jesus prayed all night.

"Cold mountains, and the midnight air,
Witnessed the fervor of his prayer."

Think of his dying love for thee, how he sweat great drops of blood in the garden of Gethsemane; how he groaned and died upon the cross for thee. How great his love! remember it, keep your eye on Christ, and all will be well. Do trials and afflictions come? Murmur not, they are for your highest good; seek to profit by them; "set your affections on things above. Let thy desires be heavenward, thine aspirations be for holiness of heart, and purity of life; then, when Jesus comes, he will give thee a home on the fair shores of immortality.

O praise the Lord, ye christians, all,
  Trust Him, he is your friend;
Leaning on Christ, you cannot fall,
  He'll keep you to the end.

LESTINA ANN.

Lowell, Mass.

From Bro. N. L. Robie.

BRO. GRANT:—We are having refreshing seasons from the presence of the Lord in Auburn, and in the edge of Derry, N. H. About twenty have risen for prayers and have professed to find peace. I trust others will soon. We have prayer meetings every evening through the week. We go from house to house. We have three in Derry, and four in Auburn. Hold meetings on Sunday at the school-house in Auburn. We have not had any preaching for nearly three months. Will Bro. S. S. Brewer, or S. W. Bishop, or J. Hemenway, or D. Moulton, L. Boutell, or E. Burnham, come and preach the word to us? Please inform us through the Crisis when you can come.

Our Railroad Station is Wilson's Crossing, in Londonderry, N. H.

In behalf of the church,
N. L. ROBIE.

Feb., 1817.

[This letter should have been published before, but was overlooked.—ED]

For the Crisis.

Joy Cometh in the Morning.

For thousands of years, death has ruled in the land with supreme sway. All have bowed beneath his tyrannical sceptre. The king and the peasant are alike his subjects. The fairest, the strongest, the most robust, all sink at his foul touch. He enters the family circle, and there are tears where there was gladness—there is sorrow where was rejoicing—there is pain where was pleasure! Nothing on earth is too sacred for his withering breath—nothing so loved and cherished but he may trample it beneath his destructive feet. The silvery locks of age and the bloom of youth are alike subject to his momentary call. The earth groans with the burden of the millions he has slain. All men mourn over the destruction and waste he has created. Grief and sorrow, and sighing, and tears, and bitterness follow his footsteps.

But he shall not always reign. His dread hand shall not forever pluck up the fair, the innocent, and the good. Though he has triumphed thus long, with such unconquerable sway, yet he shall one day be compelled to yield, and throw down his sceptre forever. The dark night of ages has been lonely; the hours have hung wearily over earth, she has "travailed in pain until now;" but "joy cometh in the morning!" "He, whose right it is," will one day take "the keys of death and hell" and unlock the lonesome prison-houses which confine millions of the best of earth's sons and daughters. Then the morning will have come, and joy will reign supreme. Then earth will groan no more, but all the trees shall clap their hands, and from the hills, and the mountains and the vallies, rejoicing shall ascend forever more.

"Through all the long dark night of years
  Thy people's cry ascendeth,
And earth is wet with blood and tears,
  But their meek sufferance endeth;
The few shall not forever sway,
  The many moil in sorrow;
The powers of hell are strong to day,
  But Christ shall come to-morrow!

Though many hearts brood o'er the past,
  Some eyes with smiling futures glisten!
For lo! the day bursts up the skies;
  Lean out your souls and listen!
The world rolls freedom's radiant way,
  And ripeneth with her sorrow;
Keep heart! who bear the cross to-day,
  Shall wear the crown to-morrow!"

SEXTUS.

Boston, May, 1857.

From Bro. S. O. Welch.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord has been reviving his work in this place, and in Derry. We have been having prayer meetings every evening in the week for some time past, and we have now meetings five evenings in a week. Quite a number have professed to find peace, and others have been convicted. We feel that we need some preaching very much. We have not had any but twice for four months.

Will either of the Brn., S. S. Brewer, E. Burnham, J. Hemenway, S. W. Bishop, D. Moulton, L. Howard, or L. Boutell, come here and preach the word to us?

If any of them can come, please inform us through the Crisis; and do come as soon as you can. Those coming by railroad will stop at Wilson's Crossing, N. H., on the Manchester and Lawrence railroad. I live about two miles and a half from the depot. There are three down trains and three up trains. They go down at seven and eleven in the morning, and four in the afternoon; and up at nine in the morning, at two in the afternoon, and seven at night. Any one that can come will please write what train they will come in, and I will try and meet them at the depot.

S. O. WELCH.

Auburn, N. H., May 5, 1857.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. M. MAYHEW writes from Savoy, Mass.:—"I feel that the Lord has dealt miraculously with me the past eight months, in enabling me to be cheerful in the midst of afflictions, and providing for me and my fatherless children. And in addition to supplying food and raiment for our bodies, He has sent me the Crisis, weekly. I do not know unto how many it will be said, "well done," in that great day for being willing subjects in his hands in doing this, but my prayer is that I may be faithful, that this labor may not be in vain to me, but that I may meet such in that good land where there will be no lack.

May the Lord bless those that have helped me, and reward them at the resurrection of the just."

—:o:—

SR. M. LITTLE writes from So. Windham, Me.:—"My trials have been great for one year past. I have been called to part with my only brother, and beside him I had no earthly friend on whom to lean for help. But it has brought me to look more especially to Him whom neither death nor dividing hand can separate from us; and to cast all my care on Him who is able to sustain me. I know 'no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward, it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them who are exercised thereby.' Did I not believe the morning is very near, when father and mother, with those two loved brothers, and others who sleep in Jesus, would come forth clothed in immortality, I could hardly be reconciled. But time is short. Soon we shall greet our friends, if faithful, on Zion's happy shore, when the last enemy will be destroyed.

'Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
  And bring the welcome day!'"

—:o:—

BRO. Z. GROVIER writes from Walnut Grove, N. Y.:—"I love to hear through the Crisis from brethren and sisters of like precious faith, although we do not see each other's faces; but in spirit we are one in the Lord, begotten unto Peter's 'lively hope'—immortality when Jesus comes to be admired of all his saints. Glory, Hallelujah! Praise ye the Lord, for his wonderful works unto the children of men."

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE CHURCH'S REPLY TO THE ABSENT KING'S INQUIRIES.

AIR.—"Do they miss me at home?"

Aye, we miss thee on earth, Lord, we miss thee,
  And tho' our lone footsteps should stray,
Through flowery paths of pleasure,
  We would grieve at thy chariot's delay;
And ever on some wandering zephyr,
  A prayer from each heart would arise,
To tell thee thy wandering people,
  Would welcome thee home from the skies.

What tho' rays of glory unending,
  Now pierce through the dark "vault of night,"
Yet still there is lingering a shadow,
  That naught but thy presence can light.
O how can we join earth's sweet music?—
  It will chide us for mien here so sad,—
Or while thou, O, our Master, delayeth,
  O how can our hearts be glad?

Remote from the world's brightest pleasures,
  That ever will fade at their birth,
We wander;—are echoing voices
  Still sighing, "we miss thee on earth?"
Ah, yes! but bright seraphs attend us,
  They bear to those mansions above,
Each sigh and each heartfelt petition,
  To that absent ONE whom we love.

Aye, we miss thee on earth, Lord, we miss thee;
  Yet, Savior, we will not repine;
For faith would forbid while we ponder,
  Upon some sweet promise of thine.
We miss thee, but soon to our rescue,
  With Heaven's attendants thou'lt come,
And bid us thy weary, worn people,
  Forever dwell with thee—at home.

MARIA.

Danville, C. E.

Choice Selections.

Drops.

The ocean is composed of drops. Small in themselves, but united they cover two-thirds of the globe and bear on their bosom treasures untold. Despise not small things. A word alone may mean nothing; but a union of words carries joy or grief to a thousand bosoms. So small a word as "we"—a little drop only—might remain glued to the tongue through life and produce no good effect. But unite it to a few more words, such as "will do good," and suiting the action to the words, what may it not produce? Ten thousand hearts may leap with joy at the sound. Precious drops to millions! Are their hearts full of pain and sorrow? Speak—we will do them good—tears give place to smiles—pain departs at the sight of joy, and a world of happiness is born in a day. Precious drops! we repeat. Cherish and scatter them. Like the dew that refreshes the flowers, they will be drawn to heaven by the Son of righteousness, to be exhibited when your account is to be squared at the last day.

Names of the Days of the Week.

Is it not strange that Christians should be found in the universal use of names of days of the week first employed in honor of pagan deities, as the following interesting items of history show?

In the Museum of Berlin, remarks a writer in a Newark cotemporary, in the Hall devoted to Northern antiquities, they have the representation of the idols from which the names of the days of our week are derived. From the idol of the Sun comes Sunday. This idol is represented with his face like the sun, holding a burning wheel, with both hands on his breast, signifying his course around the world. The idol of the moon, from which comes Monday, is habited in a short coat like a man, but holding the moon in his hands. Tuisco, from which cometh Tuesday, was one of the most ancient and popular gods of the Germans, and is represented by his garment of skin according to their peculiar manner of clothing. The third day of the week was dedicated to his worship. Woden, from whence is Wednesday, was a valiant prince among the Saxons. His image was prayed to for victory. Thor, from whence Thursday is taken, is seated on a bed with twelve stars overhead holding a hammer in his right hand. Friga, from whence we have Friday, is represented with a drawn sword in his right hand and a bow in his left. He was the giver of peace and plenty. Seater, from whom is Saturday, has the appearance of perfect wretchedness; he is thin visaged long haired, with long beard. He carries a pail of water in the right hand, wherein are fruits and flowers.

The Lambs take Part?

Certainly—a very important part. The feeblest of the flock should participate in the exercises of our social meetings for prayer and praise. It is a sad, mischievous, ruinous mistake, to confine the services to a few principal prominent leading members. Meetings thus confined and monopolized become cold, formal, stereotyped, spiritless! The Holy Spirit is grieved. The sisters in every church, also, should take an active part in these devotional interviews—open their lips audibly—speak out, lift up holy hands, tell what the Lord has done for their souls. God is no respecter of persons.

Let the weak and faltering be called upon to take part in social meetings, and they will soon gain in confidence and power, and become so interested, as not willingly to stay away. Above all, instead of a spirit of captious criticism, let the spirit of brotherly love abound. Then will brethren, when called upon, so raise their voices and extend their lungs, that all present may hear, and no goodly counsel or praise be lost. A church fully imbued with these principles, will have full meetings, and great interest for the salvation of souls will be manifested.—Golden Rule.

The Lamb of God.

The most significant and remarkable type introduced into the divine ordinances, as well as into Israel's history and ritual, was the lamb. It even meets us at the threshold of Paradise in the sacrifice of Abel, as an object particularly acceptable in the sight of God. Later on, the lamb with its blood consecrates the commencement of the history of the Israelites. The sprinkling of the door-posts with the blood of lambs was the means of Israel's preservation in Egypt from the sword of the destroying angel, and the departure of the people from Pharaoh's house of bondage. From that time the lamb continued to be the most prominent figure by which God typified the future Messiah to the children of Abraham. Henceforward it acquired an abiding footing in Israel's sacrificial rites in general, and in the yearly passover in particular. In the latter, each house was enjoined by the Mosaic law to bring a male lamb, without blemish or infirmity, to the sanctuary, there solemnly confess their transgressions over it, then bring it typically burdened with their sins, to the court of the temple to be slain; and after it was roasted, consume it entirely, in festive communion, with joy and thanksgiving to Jehovah. That which was prophetically typical in this ceremony was so apparent, that even the most sinful mind could not mistake it. Every one who was only partially susceptible of that which was divinely symbolical, felt impressed with the idea that this divine ordinance could have no other aim than to keep alive in Israel, along with the remembrance of the promised Deliverer, the confidence and hope in him.

John the Baptist appears in the wilderness; and the first greeting with which he welcomes Jesus, which was renewed whenever he saw him, is, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world!" thereby directing the attention of the whole world to Jesus, as if there were thenceforward nothing else worth seeing in heaven or on earth than this Lamb of God; and by so doing he certainly directs us to the greatest and most beautifying of all mysteries, and to the pith and marrow of the entire Gospel. For if Christ had been only the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," and not at the same time "the Lamb," what would it have availed us! As "the Lamb," he is the desire of all nations, the star of hope to the exiles from Eden, the sun of righteousness in the night of sorrow to those whom the law condemns, and the heavenly lamp to the wanderer in the gloomy isle of death.

KRUMMACHER.

Would it not please you to pick up a string of pearls, drops of gold, diamonds, and precious stones, as you pass along the street? It would make you happy for months to come.

Such happiness you can give to others. How, do you ask?

By dropping sweet words, kind remarks, and pleasant smiles as you pass along. These are true pearls and precious stones, which can never be lost; of which none can deprive you.

Speak to that orphan child; see the pearl drop from her cheeks.

Take the hand of the friendless boy; bright diamonds flash in his eyes.

Smile on the sad and dejected; a joy suffuses his cheek more brilliant than the most precious stones.

By the wayside and the city's din, and the fireside of the poor, drop words and smiles to cheer and bless. You will feel happier when resting upon your pillow at the close of the day, than if you had picked up a score of perishing jewels. The latter fade and crumble in time; the former grow brighter with age, and produce happier reflections forever.

The Word of God.

The mother of a family was married to an infidel, who made a jest at religion in the presence of his own children; yet she succeeded in bringing them up in the fear of the Lord. I one day asked her how she preserved them from the influence of a father whose sentiments were so openly opposed to her own. This was her answer:

"Because to the authority of a father, I did not oppose the authority of a mother, but that of God. From their earliest years, my children have always seen the Bible upon my table. This Holy Book has constituted the whole of their religious instruction. I was silent that I might allow it to speak. Did they propose a question, did they commit any fault, did they perform any good action, I opened the Bible, and the Bible answered, reproved or encouraged them. The constant reading of the Scriptures has alone wrought the prodigy which surprises you."—Adolphe Monod.

NO GOOD DEED LOST.—Philosophers tell us that since the creation of the world not one single particle has ever been lost. It may have passed into new shapes—it may have floated away in smoke or vapor—but it is not lost. It will come back again in the dew-drop or the rain—it will spring up in the fibre of the plant itself or the rose leaf. Through all its formations, Providence watches over and directs it still. Even so it is with every holy thought or heavenly desire, or humble aspiration, or generous and self-denying effort. It may escape our observation—we may be unable to follow it, but it is an element of the moral world, and it is not lost.

For the Children.

The Way-Side Stream.

It was a fine morning in early summer, when a spring of water gushed up from the dark earth, and rushed headlong down a pleasant hill-side. A narrow little channel it had, but it was bordered on either side by the greenest of grass, and the yellowest of dandelions. White and gray pebbles lined the bottom, over which the water made pleasant music as it danced along. Willow trees bent over, and dipped their long branches in the water, while many birds sang among their boughs, and a flock of sheep came in white troops to drink from the stream. "What a lovely world is this!" cried the new-born spring. "How pleasant it is to live here—a great deal pleasanter than to be down in that cold dark place I came from! What beautiful creatures are drinking from the bank, and then those bright, golden things in the grass! What are they, I wonder, and are they, too, just born? But I dare say I shall soon know, only I am so very young now. What a sweet sound I make, as I ripple over the stones! Almost as pleasant as those little creatures up there make!" and he glanced at the birds in the willows. "But stop," he continued, "I mean to ask these white things their names, before I go any further, for how am I ever to know, unless I ask? Pray, what is your name?" he said to the sheep. "Baa! baa! baa!" replied the sheep, and the lambs repeated the sound in a fainter tone.

"How very silly!" exclaimed the stream; "what can they mean? they might as well talk sense, I think! No matter, I'll ask the yellow things their names!" But no answer came to his inquiry. "Evidently they don't know how to talk," he said, "Poor things! I'm sure I pity them, for it must be very dull indeed, never to make a sound in all one's life! Oh! oh! oh! how happy I am. I shall certainly never be tired of dashing over these stones, if I live forever!"

Presently, however, the course of our gay young stream was suddenly interrupted. A great wooden trough lay directly in his path, and instead of gliding on as before, between green banks, this merry water must fall perpetually, into this ugly basin, while what overflows lies in deep pools around the trough, or makes for itself a channel beneath the road. "Oh, dear, dear, what's this?" cried the poor little stream. "Have I come all the way down the hill just to run into this dirty place? Why, I wonder, am I not to flow on as I came down across that green meadow yonder, till I reach the great river which I see beyond? Ah, me! of what use shall I be in the world, and how disagreeable to be always running into this trough! What a miserable, unfortunate stream I am! I might as well have staid forever down in the deep earth, from whence I came! Yes, I see I shall never be happy or useful any more!"

Presently a trio of little voices was heard approaching the stream. "How pleasant!" cried a girlish voice; "here is some water; where could it have come from? and here hangs a new, bright tin dipper beside it, and now Jamie can have some water!" The child quickly seized the dipper, while another led a little boy gently by the hand. The thirsty lips were pressed eagerly to the dipper, and a smile brightened the face of the little one as he drank. "How good it is!" he said softly, as he gave the cup into his sister's hand. Then the sisters drank, bathed their glowing faces and trotted off on their way to school.

Our brooklet had no time to make any comments on this occurrence, for immediately the sound of carriage-wheels was heard, and a horse came in sight, slowly toiling up the hill, panting in the burning sun. No sooner did he catch the sound and see the gleam of running water, than he pricked up his ears with all the delight a thirsting horse could show. In a moment the driver springs out, the check-line is unfastened, and the head plunges deep down in the cool, delicious bath, while his long and heavy breathing testifies to his enjoyment. Meantime the driver enjoyed a draught from the dipper, then bestowing dashing shower-baths upon the hot, dusty limbs of the horse, they departed, equally refreshed, on their way. "Really it is not so disagreeable, after all," cried the stream, as he lost sight of them, and dashed with greater zeal than ever into his wooden prison.

At noon, an old way-faring man sat beside the trough and ate his morsel, and drank of this new "fountain by the way," and rose up refreshed and thankful. The cows, too, came and stood knee-deep in the pools around the basin; now and then dipping their tranquil, happy-looking faces in to drink, and when the sun was set, and the cows had been driven home, and the stars came out in the clear summer sky, then the little stream made the sweetest of music, which the birds heard as they lay silent in their nests, and felt they might as well be spared, since there was something else that could make melody as well as they.

Many summers and winters have come and gone, and still the brooklet flows on down the hill-side, always keeping the trough full to overflowing.

It has grown to be an old moss-covered trough now, and the dipper has been many times replaced. The children who first drank from it are men and women now, and their children drink at our way-side stream. But I do not see that the stream itself looks any older than he did the very day he sprang from the earth and sparkled for the first time in the summer morning sunshine. I think it must be because he is always so busy at work that he keeps so young and gay. He constantly remembers that if he should cease his labors there would be no water for the school children when they pass, and that the cows and horses would go thirsting, and weary travelers could no longer pause to drink beside the road. He never says now that he is a poor, unfortunate, useless stream that might as well have never lived, for he knows full well, and is very happy to think that the way-side stream could not be spared. The meadow beyond is just as green and pleasant as ever, and the great river which flows through it beckons still with its glancing waves, but he never longs to go there now, for his work and his reward are too precious to be lost for idle play.

I sometimes think there are many people who do not accomplish so much good as our little way-side stream. We cannot all be mighty rivers, watering broad tracts of country, and carrying wide-spread verdure and plenty along our way, but any one can be a little way-side stream, and give daily refreshment to thirsting hearts.

It is good to be living for a purpose, even though that purpose be only to fill a trough where cows and horses may drink, and the Lord Jesus has said that the giver of a cup of cold water shall not lose his reward.—Independent.

NOTHING sets so wide a mark between a vulgar and a noble soul, as the respect and reverential love of womankind. A man who is always sneering at woman, is generally a coarse profligate, or a coarse bigot.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1857. WHOLE NO. 92. VOL. V. NO. 14.

The World's Crisis.

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH HENRY TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the pa ers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

BEHOLD HE COMETH!

He cometh! he cometh! what pen shall portray
In language befitting the pomp of that day,
When Heaven's great King shall in glory descend,
To set up a Kingdom that never shall end?

He cometh! He cometh! the monarchs of Earth,
Unthinking, are snared in their jesting and mirth;
Then wildly they fly to the clefts of the rock,
A refuge to find from the last fatal shock.

He cometh! He cometh! on pleasure intent,
The worldling heeds not till the heavens are rent;
Too late he repents, mercy lingers no more,
Probation is ended and wrath is in store.

He cometh! He cometh! Earth quakes at His call!
From mountain, from valley, from marble tombs all,
The language of triumph and gladness is heard,
As saints clothed in beauty come forth at His word.

He cometh! He cometh! the lone pilgrims sing,
With rapture they greet Him, their long absent King;
They've watched for His coming, His signs they have known,
He'll give them a crown and a place on His throne.

He cometh! He cometh! the time draweth near,
The last notes of warning now fall on the ear;
The scoffers are mocking and proudly they stand—
The judgment is hasting—their doom is at hand!

MARIA.

Greenland, N. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. V.

Their is another objection often urged by the opposers of christianity, and many times I have used the same weapon, ignorantly, when contending with those who believed in the supernatural darkness said to prevail over the land at the crucifixion of Christ. I must confess, that some time after I had renounced my infidelity, and embraced christianity, I was very sképtical in regard to the phenomenon spoken of by St. Matt. (chap. 27: 45,) for this reason; I supposed, from reading, Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, that all writers, except the evangelists, were silent upon the subject. I am astonished that Gibbon should be guilty of making such false assertions in order to overturn the evidence of christianity. There would be some degree of force in the statement he has made (vol. 1, chap. 15, page 589, by Milman,) were it not for an individual circumstance, that is, IT IS NOT TRUE! I have another infidel work before me, harping upon the same string, [Taylor's Diegesis, page 195,] professing to transcribe Gibbon's paragraph entire; and in so doing he has only added thirty-two more words to the already false quotations. But it will all go down with the poor deluded infidel; so long as it is something against the Bible, and christianity, they will not stop to inquire whether those quotations are correct or not.

I would say to the skeptic, there is not a word of truth in Gibbon's account, although the falsehood is polished. That which he calls a distinct chapter of Pliny devoted to eclipses, (Pliny has no such chapter) is only a sentence, an incidental remark, as it were. It consists of eighteen words. The import of the remarks is as as follows: ECLIPSES ARE SOMETIMES VERY LONG, LIKE THAT AFTER CÆSAR'S DEATH, WHEN THE SUN WAS PALE ALMOST A YEAR. A Historian may hear of many things which he does not write, Pliny does not mention the darkness, but Polygon, a heathen astronomer, stated, concerning the year in which Jesus the Messiah was crucified, "that the greatest obscurity of the sun that was ever known, happened then, for the day was turned into night; that the stars in heaven were seen." And Celsus, a heathen philosopher of the second century, corroborates the same fact. And so do Thallus, Origen, Eusebius, Tertullian, and others, some of them christians and some of them pagans. Then, I would ask, is it reasonable that we should rely upon that author, (Gibbon,) although a splendid and talented historian, except when writing upon religious topics, when he sometimes will pen falsehoods without scruple? Reason dictates and answers.

I think that I have established the fact beyond contradiction, that the sun was obscured at the time of the crucifixion of Christ. We will again turn our attention to the predictions relative to the Messiah, and see if this same Jesus, whom we adore, has not fulfilled every jot and tittle of the word that pertains to him. Again, then:

The Messiah was to be wounded in his hands, even by his own friends,—Jesus Christ had his hands nailed to the cross by his own countrymen. Compare Zech. 13: 6, with John 20: 27.

The Messiah was to be so marred and disfigured in his visage by the ill treatment he should receive, that his friends would scarcely know him,—and was not Jesus Christ so disfigured and despoiled? Compare Isa. 52: 14, with Matt. 27: 29, 30.

The Messiah was to be oppressed and afflicted, and yet not open his mouth in complaint. He was to be brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers, so he was not to open his mouth,—"Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world," before Pilate, held his peace. "And when he was accused of the cheif priests and elders, he answered nothing." Compare Isa. 53: 7, with Matt. 26: 63, and 27: 12–14.

The Messiah was to be taken up with wicked men in his death,—Christ was suspended on a cross, between two malefactors. Compare Isa. 53: 9, with Matt. 27: 38, 60.

The Messiah was to be put to death at the end of four hundred and eighty-three years, from the time when the commandment should go forth to restore and to build Jerusalem,—Jesus Christ was "cut off" at the end of the sixty-nine weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three years. Compare Neh. 2: and Dan. 9: 24.

The Messiah was to be presented by his enemies with vinegar and gall during his sufferings,—in this manner was Jesus Christ treated, as he hung upon the cross. Compare Ps. 49: 21, with Matt. 27: 34, and John 19: 28–30.

The persecutors of the Messiah were to pierce his hands and his feet,—so did the Jews and Romans treat the Redeemer of mankind. Compare Ps. 22: 16, with Matt. 27: 35. Crucifixion was a thing not known among the Jews in the time of David, nor for many ages afterwards.

The enemies of the Messiah were to laugh him to scorn, and taunt and reproach him with satiricle language,—so did the Jews conduct themselves towards Christ in the day of his distress. Compare Ps. 22: 7, 8, with Matt. 27: 39–44.

When the Messiah was put to death, his enemies were to part his garments among them, and for his vesture they were to cast lots,—when Christ was crucified, these transactions took place. Compare Ps. 22: 18, with Matt. 27: 35.

When the Messiah should suffer death, not a bone of his body was to be broken,—when Jesus Christ was crucified, not a bone of him was injured. Compare Exodus 12: 46, and Numbers 9: 12, with John 19: 31, 36.

When the Messiah should be put to death, it was declared that his side should be pierced,—when Jesus Christ was crucified, his side was pierced with a spear. Compare Zech. 12: 10, with John 19: 34, 37.

It was prophesied of Messiah that he should make intercession for transgressors,—Jesus Christ interceded with God for his very murderers, and now ever liveth, and sitteth at the Father's right hand to plead the cause of the sinful children of men. Compare Isa. 53: 12, with Heb. 7: 25.

Jesus is the Messiah, who can deny? How slow and backward are men to believe anything on the side of truth, in matters of religion; but slight and superficial objections, weak, but plausible theories against the Bible, they learn speedily, they understand instantly, and they remember always. It is supposed on good evidence that no son of Adam ever was known to forget an ingenious and seemingly correct argument against christianity, once heard, so long as he retained his mind. The conclusion is, that men love DARKNESS rather than LIGHT.

For the Crisis.

The Meek.

"Blessed are the meek," said the great Teacher: and who that understands the weakness, infirmity, and sinfulness of human nature, and the mysteries of the plan of salvation, does not echo the divine sentiment? How very interesting and attracting a meek person is! I mean, interesting and attracting to those who love the christian virtues. Not to human butterflies. Not to speculators in fashion. Not to devotees of pleasure. Not to worshipers of mammon. Not to children of strife, blood, and confusion. These cannot be pleased with meekness.

The ancient heroes called a meek disposition cowardice. Modern heroes call it vulgarity. (I use the word hero in the worldly sense.) A man must be "fashionable," "nice," "reputable," "thought something of," "like other people," to please this world; and not only the nonprofessing world, but the larger portion of the professing church.

The meek disciple of Jesus must consent to be generally overlooked by the mass of his fellow beings. Must consent, did I say? he desires nothing otherwise. His care is, not to be overlooked or disregarded by his God, and beyond this he has no ambition. A meek person must be more or less odd from people generally. He—she—will not follow the vain and ever-changing fashions—will not manifest or feel a disposition to aspire to a condition of worldly distinction—will not seek to obtain the flattery of a sinful community—will not fret at evils which occur in the way of duty—will submit to God, cheerfully, in obedience and suffering, for the sake of what God is.

A meek person will not seek to be revenged on an enemy—will not long retain a vivid remembrance of an injury—will delight in covering the faults of others—will cheerfully receive and confess the claims of truth generally.

What of the meek? Why, "THEY SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH!" None but meek people in the new earth! I am glad of that. I love them here. I want, eternally, to be with just such society. "The meek will He guide in judgment; and the meek will He TEACH HIS WAY." "Seek meekness."

EDWIN BURNHAM.

"That thou mayest injure no one, dove-like be;
And serpent-like, that none may injure thee."

COWPER.

"High brows are calm—
Great thoughts are still as stars; and truths like suns,
Stir not."

"Thou mayest know if it be well with a man,—loveth he solitude or gaiety?

The troubled river rusheth to the sea, but the calm lake slumbereth among the mountains."

For the Crisis.

Evil Speaking.

No. III.

There! Stay that ebulition! Hold right on without another word! and let us hear what good you can say. There are redeeming features in almost every one, even if they are guilty of faults; and if those who are the subjects of flying reports, which generally prove to be baseless, though they may have, by the process previously presented, been found in everybody's mouth, received impartial dealing, and the good were told concerning them, how the apprehension of people would be qualified—for it might appear that there was more good than evil—and if the good should preponderate, how wicked to exalt the evil above the good. By all means encourage the good! If the good now prevails it is to be hoped it may succeed against its enemy, and overcome; but to leave the good out of sight in speaking of persons, and put the evil in prominence, is a poor way to encourage goodness. If we have the evil to speak, it would be better to speak to the person alone. That's Christ's way!!

When, therefore, you speak of the faults and failings, or weaknesses and sins of the brethren again, you would do well to think of all the good you can, and say that with the evil, so as to give, at least, an impartial view. And as our nature inclines to fault-finding, and evil exhibition, we should for our own good say as little evil as possible.

And who set you about this work to "separate very friends,"—to cast firebrands, arrows and death, and say, "am I not in sport?" Only said it to tell eh? Aye, to tattle! To hear yourself talk, and somebody else laugh, or express surprise!

I will notice some of the evils apparent in that work of the devil, denominated evil speaking.

In the first place you feel condemned; you know you have not done right! It is not upon the mind like some innocent amusement, or some good work; tis not like the satisfaction of having spoken well of a neighbor.

Again, you will injure your own mind, so that you will feel sour toward the person, whether the remarks are well founded or not; and you will either, because you have said it, avoid the person or seek some evidence of its truth—and that is a very unhappy work—or you will dissemble when you meet the person, and that is hypocrisy; all because you have been speaking evil. So one result will be hypocrisy! Well, having once become a hypocrite, which involves lying—lying in its worst form—lying in action—you will not scruple soon to lie to cover up your action, to sustain your position. All because you indulged in evil speaking. Better stop, now! and repent; if you have not already become hardened in hypocrisy; else you will soon have become a busybody—a mischief-maker—a backbiter—a poacher upon the sacred grounds of another's character.

But we will look at the result upon others. Come, now, face it! And if you have any feeling, any philanthropy and christian principle left, take a view of what you are doing. There is some ones's character blasted! and you have done it, or had a hand in it. There are prospects blighted, because you could not hold your little tongue. Your words have eaten as doth a canker!!

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

The Spring.

How beautiful is the spring! I love its sunny hours, its wealth of green leaves, and its perfumed winds as they waft fragrance from some garden of flowers. How unresistingly Nature, at this season, teaches the existence of the great and omnipotent God! We seem to see his name written upon all the objects around us. There is not a flower, a leaf, a spear of grass, or a green field, that does not teach us that there is an over-ruling power which brings them forth in their season. And how small seem the most sublime works of man when compared with those of God!

The poets tell us that in the new earth, "never-failing spring abides!" What a fairy-land! Flowers which will never fade—trees whose verdure shall never pass away—fields whose green carpet shall never wither—the chilling storms of life forever gone—and the earth ever filled with the sweet perfume of immortal blossoms, and the air ever melodious with the songs of birds! Who does not wish to be there!

J.

For the Crisis.

God Careth For You.

"I remember once," says that talented writer, Lamartine, "to have seen the branch of a willow which had been torn by the tempest's hand from the parent trunk, floating in the morning light upon the angry surges of the overflowing Saone. On it a female nightingale still covered her nest, as it drifted down the foaming stream; and the male on the wing followed the wreck, which was bearing away the objects of his love."

Even so doth God care for those who rely upon him. Let the tempests of doubt, and temptation, and trial, be never so strong, if their trust is in him, he will be ever near to protect them. Let the dark waves of worldliness and sin lash with the wildest fury about their storm-driven bark, He is ever near to stretch forth his omnipotent hand and say, "Peace, be still!"

SEXTUS.

For the Crisis.

The World's Enmity to the Church.

A DISCOURSE FOUNDED ON 1 JOHN 3: 13.

BY WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

"Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you."

The above passage of scripture, to our mind, contains very timely and cautionary instruction to the church now in waiting for the coming of her great Deliverer. It would seem here that the beloved apostle doth forewarn the church not to regard it as strange, neither to wonder nor be astonished at that malignity and bitter hatred which would most certainly be exerted towards her under various forms and folds, ever and anon, from the world. There are a number of passages in God's blessed word of the like import; such as "Fear not little flock," and which passage, from the nature of the context, (i. e., "for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," evidently shows that it is more particularly intended for the church's comfort, but a little while preceding her victorious triumph and glorification,—and in the language of her heroic Redeemer—"Let not your heart be troubled," and, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer." Agreeable to those words of Peter—"beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you, but rejoice," &c.; the address to "the church in Smyrna," by Him "which was dead, and is alive," forever, (praise God!) saying, "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation. . . . Be thou faithful unto death, (i. e., continue to prove faithful unto God and his truth even if you should suffer martyrdom for it,) and I will give thee a crown of life." Precious promise indeed! These all contain the sentiment which the apostle would convey in our text.

In the phrase, "Marvel not, my brethren," we have the caution; it is presented for our encouragement like unto the promises, and we observe there are promises coupled with this very subject. We advert to one especially, couched in the following language: "If we suffer, (with him) we shall also reign with him." 2 Tim. 2: 12. The sense in which we are to understand "suffer with him," seems obvious. We suffer with him when we are found strictly "walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless"—firmly cleaving to the "testimony of Jesus Christ." We suffer with him when we advocate his righteous cause; when we esteem his word in that eminent sense that the divine Father has magnified it above all his name; when we closely adhere to and teach the glorious doctrines contained in that word, admitting of no compromises, but boldly marking the distinctions which the unerring finger of God has so clearly pointed out; and when we "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," warmly repudiating the vain, with all human devices, creeds and systems, however fair and captivating they may appear externally, as subversive of the sublime teachings of Jesus and his apostles, and dishonoring to God and destructive to man, regarding it like the forbidden fruit which brought death into the world with all its woes. Yes, looking upon these miserable and corrupt systems, as upon that fruit—though in appearance "good for food . . . pleasant to the eyes" and "to be desired to make one wise"—as containing the seeds of corruption and death. (The temptations of the devil are no less alluring and insinuating now than they were then.) In a word, we suffer with Christ in proportion to our actual renunciation, for his sake, of all things contrary to the divine purpose. "If any man come to me, and hate not (i. e. hate not comparatively with the love we should cherish for him,) his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple. And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Here is the true criterion of discipleship. These are the evidences attesting that our "fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ,"—sure tokens that we are followers of "the Lamb withersoever he goeth." Occupying then this position we necessarily shall suffer with him.

But it is the latter clause of our text to which we would call your attention,—"If the world hate you." This seems to claim more than a passing notice. Let us look at it for a moment. The world here of course we are to understand as not only embracing the "vilest of the vile," not only such characters as the Atheist, infidel, bold blasphemer, moderate swearer, not only the drunkard, the last day scoffers, whoremongers, murderers and idolaters, but it also embraces another class who, in the violence of persecution and intensity of their hatred, exceed, perhaps, all those prieviously mentioned: and "marvel not" from the consideration that this class assumes the garb of religion, who "profess to know God, but in works deny him," possessing "a form of godliness" but are entirely destitute of the divine principle within. To be brief, "the world" here includes everything which is not of God and is in opposition to him, every principle, every system and power in existence that does not coalesce and act in harmony with his holy government and just plan. "Love not the world neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." "The carnal mind is enmity against God." 1 John 2: 15. 16. Rom. 8: 7. Here are a few of the leading traits which form the element that constitutes "the world" in the sense of the text, an element which is antagonistic to God and at variance with him, and when corporeanated and fully developed produces decided hatred to the people of his choice.

This disposition of the world to hate God's people is not of any recent origin, but we may trace it back through the various ages of the past, even unto the days of Cain, in whom we find it was first embodied and through whom it was fearfully developed in the murder of his brother Abel who was a "true worshiper of God," he (Cain) not being such, only a formal one, hence the enmity existing; and how may it have strenghtend and matured through the long period of so many centuries,—indeed we may feel assured that it has lost none of its life and vigor in the interim but rather gathered in force and potency. The past history of the church affords a striking exemplification of this, and we have no reasonable doubt to offer but what it stands ready at any moment to exert that same malicious power which it did in former ages, but for a counter and restraining influence.

"Ye shall be hated (says Jesus) of all men for my name's sake." Matt. 10 : 22. This prediction of the Savior has ever been realized by his true followers since it was first uttered, and it will continue to be until the end of the age. Again he says, in his farewell address to his disciples, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, the servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also." In his devout and pathetic appeal to his Father, respecting his disciples, he declares —"I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." John 5 : 18, 19; 17 : 14. It must be readily observed here, that the chief reason why the hatred of the world is cherished and fostered against the church of Christ is, from the fact affirmed—"I have given them thy word." They receive it in its beautiful simplicity and primal purity, devoid of every human invention; they heartily adopt it and reduce it at once to every day practice. It is no may-be or might-be-so with them, but the fadeless word of the ever-living, eternal, and omnipotent Jehovah, whose "word is truth," and they rejoice in it, like the holy David, "as one that findeth great spoil."

We remark then, and would have you bear in mind that this hatred is not in consequence of having embraced any of the many creeds and theories in Christendom, assumed to be the honest deductions of God's words, but it proceeds chiefly from the fact of receiving that precious word—if we may so express it—in its first edition, without any human amendments, not regarding it as a volume of such intricate mysteries that we are obliged to resort to some D. D., or graduate of some theological college in order to understand it, believing that it possesses two or three-fold meaning, or as many meanings as the ingenuity of the hireling priesthood may be pleased to put upon it; but receiving it mainly in its one and common sense import—a comprehensive revelation from God to man—"to be understood according to the laws of human language, and interpreted according to the laws of humam speech." Blessed be His glorious Name forever, for the unspeakable gift! and where is there a sainted pilgrim who does not feel to unite with the poet and sing—

"Father of mercies, in thy word
What endless glory shines;
Forever be thy name adored,
For these celestial lines.

O may these heavenly pages be
My ever dear delight,
And still new beauties may I see,
And still increasing light."

[To be Continued.]

For the Children.

God Will Take Care of Us.

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin. And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these."

Suppose a lazy boy should read over my text, and then say, that Christ teaches us that God takes care of the lilies, though they do not work, and therefore we need not work, and he will take care of us in our idleness. This would be to make the Bible favor our sins; but the Bible never does that.

Suppose you should go and visit a man who was so rich that he had his trees covered with silk of the most beautiful colors, and even his most ugly looking creatures covered with gold and silver, and adorned by the most curious art! Would you not think him a rich man? And if he were known to be a good man, and true to his word, and he should tell you that he would be your friend, and always take care of you, would you have any fear but he would do it?

God is richer than all this. He is so rich that he can put more of what is beautiful upon a single lily or tulip, than the great king Solomon could put on all his clothing. The peacock carries more that is beautiful upon his tail than the richest king could ever show. And even the poor butterfly, which is to live but a few hours, has a more glorious dress than the proudest, richest man that ever lived. God can afford to dress this poor worm up so, because he is rich. If, then, he can afford to take such care of the lilies, the birds, and insects, and to make them more beautiful than man can be, will he not take care of us, if we obey him?

Suppose you had a rich father, so rich that he had a hogshead full of gold, and a great barn full of silver. Do you think that if you were to be a good child, he would ever refuse to take care of you? But God has more gold and silver laid up in the ground, which men have not yet dug up, than would make a mountain—it may be a hundred mountains. Can he not take care of you?

Suppose your father had more oxen, and horses, and cattle than you could count over in a day, or a week. Would he not be able to take care of his child, and give him everything he needs? Yes. God has "cattle upon ten thousand hills," and "every beast of the forest" is his, and his are "all the fowls of the air." Can he not give you food from all these cattle, and clothe you, and give you beds from the feathers of all these fowls? Yes, he is able to do it all.

Suppose your father was so rich that he had ten thousand men at work for him every day, all at work, and all paid to their mind, and all happy in working for him. Would you have any fears but he could take care of you, and do you good? But God has more servants than these. He has all the good people on earth in his employment, and all the angels in heaven. He pays them all. And if you need anything, he can send one, or a million, of these his servants to you, to help you.

What did the Clock Say?

The clock upon the tower of a neighboring church tolled forth slowly and solemnly the knell of the departed hour.

As the last sound died away, Willie, who was sitting on the carpet at his mother's feet, lifted his head, and looking earnestly in her face, asked:

"Mother! what did the clock say?"

"To me," said his mother sadly, "it seemed to say, gone—gone—gone—gone!"

"What, mother? what has gone?"

"Another hour, my son."

"What is an hour, mother?"

"A white-winged messenger from our Father in heaven, sent by him to inquire of you—of me, what we are doing? what we are saying? what we are thinking and feeling?"

"Where has it gone, mother?"

"Back to Him who sent it, bearing on its wings, that were so pure and white when it came, a record of all our thoughts, words, and deeds, while it was with us."

"Were they all such as our Father could receive with a smile of approbation?"

Reader! what record are the hours, as they come and go, bearing up on high for you?

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JUNE 3, 1856.

The World's Conversion.

Many people seem to consider it a fact, established upon unquestionable authority, that the world will all be converted to Christ before he shall come the second time. Such persons will perhaps be surprised to learn that the idea of a millennium of glory before the coming of Christ was never heard of, so far as can be ascertained, for FIFTEEN HUNDRED YEARS from the times of Christ. The first mention of it, that I have seen, occurs in Luther's commentary on John x : 16; and he there mentions the idea "that before the latter day all the world shall become Christians," and says, "this is a falsehood forged by Satan that he might darken sound doctrine that ye might not understand it. Beware of this delusion."

The originator of the present popular doctrine of the millenium was the noted Daniel Whitby, D. D., who died 1726. He claims the credit of it, calling it a New Hypothesis, which it certainly is,—so new that the prophet's and apostles never heard of it. They taught that evil men and seducers should wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. That in the last days perilous times should come. That as it was in the days of Noah, and as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed.

The scriptures unquestionably reveal a state of future purity, and bliss, and glory, yet to occur upon earth. But Christ must come in person to introduce that scene of blessedness. This appears to be the teaching of the Scriptures, and this has most certainly been the faith of the church of God in all the ages of the Christian church. Proof on this point could be quoted to any desirable extent. Space forbids that we should pursue this subject further, but we would refer all our readers, who would like to see abundant proof on the point, to a volume entitled "The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ, or the History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor.

For sale at this Office, and by the Publisher, H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y. Price $1.00. Postage, by mail, 18 cents. We shall be glad to furnish it to any of our friends who may desire to search the scriptures on this important subject, and will assure them that they will receive more than an equivolent for their money if they candidly and carefully read the book.

☞ The General Conference at Carmel, Maine, commences WEDNESDAY, JUNE, 10, —not Thursday. See notice in the column devoted to "appointments."

Spiritualism.

We wish to urge our readers who have not already done so, to provide themselves with Dr. Ramsey's work on this subject. The delusion is spreading with great rapidity, and this work which proves it to be the work of the devil and his angels, is the only thing which we have seen that successfully combats and overthrows this strong delusion of the great adversary.

The price of this work is now reduced in consequence of its extensive sale. Let it be freely ordered and widely scattered. Price bound 40 cts., postage 8. Paper covers 30 cts.,—postage 5. For sale at this office, and by the publisher, H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., also by M. Cumming's, Irvington, N. J.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH.—A work which you ought to have if you have not got it already. Let all obtain it, and strengthen their faith by the testimony of so great a cloud of witnesses to the unpopular doctrines of the Bible. Price $1, postage 18 cts. For sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., M. Cummings, Irvington N. J., A. F. Porter, 20 Erie St., Philadelphia, T. J. Howland, 229 Broadway, N. Y., and at this office. Discount to those who buy to sell again.

TRACTS.—A Baptist minister from Maryland, to whom I sent some tracts writes:—

"I think your tracts excellent, and an excellent means of doing good. When able, I intend to get a few dollars' worth for distribution, but cannot for awhile. My dollars are very scarce. I have a wife and four children," &c. &c. J. D.

He is a kind of missionary in a new field, and waits for the kingdom of God. I shall send him what tracts he wants free. Who else will have some? Send in your orders—they are "free for the poor, also for the mean and stingy," and also free for those who would like to buy and pay for them and scatter them abroad. God bless the dear friends who have aided in this work already. Send in orders to this office, or to H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

SENDING TRACTS BY MAIL.—Persons who wish to send tracts to their friends at a distance, can send their address and have them mailed directly from the offices, saving the trouble and expense of remailing.

Postage on tracts must be pre-paid,—the postage is one cent on each tract,—but where eight ounces or more of small tracts, not more than 24 pages 12*mo.* are taken, the postage is very much less, it being only half a cent an ounce. It requires some 300 or 350 pages of tracts, to weigh eight ounces.

Hence it is much better to send for at least 8 ounces of tracts at once. Send to this office, or to H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

Tracts for the Poor.

DEAR BRO. HASTINGS:—I have long wanted some of your excellent Tracts, but have not had the money; but I see in the Crisis of April 29th, that you would supply the poor with tracts to distribute. I am a believer in the speedy coming of the Lord of glory, and my whole being loves his appearing. One daughter, her husband and myself, are the only ones in this place that believe the doctrine fully, but we have persuaded some by the help of the Lord to hear and read our paper, and we have shown them the Bible, so plain that they are convinced that there cannot be any Milennium this side of the coming of Christ. I have read "The Church not in Darkness" and "The Last Days," which were excellent, but I have not got any of them now. I thought there never was any thing so good and plain.

I want some of your best tracts for my own comfort, to read, and also to distribute in this village. O how I have longed to get some money to send for some of your excellent tracts, when I have read over the advertisements in the Crisis, but could not get it. My son-in-law is a poor man,—has to support a family of six by days' works. I am sixty-one years old, and have to live by my own labor, by the help of the Lord. My health is poor and my son-in-law has a daughter sick with symptoms of consumption. I mention this that you may know, dear Bro. Hastings, why I solicit your tracts without but little pay. My son-in-law takes the Crisis, and we love it next to our Bible.

Please send me the "Olive Leaves," and "The One Resting Place," and the rest such as you feel will be best to scatter. "The Church not in Darkness," if you have got it. May God bless all your labors, and may a blessing attend each tract to the good of some poor soul. H. D.

H——, Mich.

P. S. Dear Bro., I inclose thirty cents, if you feel as if you could send me 8 ounces I will spread them broadcast over this place, and further. Send just what you can, and pay the postage out of it, and oblige a sister in Christ, looking for the Lord from Heaven, till he come.

☞ In response to the above, I sent about a thousand pages of tracts &c., &c., for gratuitous circulation. If there are others in like circumstances, let them send in their orders. Come, tracts must be scattered with or without price. Let us be active and awake to our work. Those who wish to aid in sending tracts to the poor can do so, but the best way is to get tracts and scatter them yourself.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

TOUR WEST.—From my best apprehension of the subject at present, I propose to preach, as I proceed, in the following order:

Springfield, June 7. Albany N. Y. Tuesday eve., June 9. Syracuse, N. Y., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, June 10–11. Rochester, N. Y., with Bro. Marsh's charge Friday eve., June 12; and Sabbath forenoon, 14, with Bro. Cook's charge. Sunday afternoon, or evening 14th, and Tuesday eve 16. Buffalo, N. Y., as Bro. Peck shall appoint, Sabbath June 21, Detroit, Mich., Sabbath June 28. The brethren will give me information, to aid me in making arrangements, or alterations, which I shall receive thankfully. I cannot advertise the farther orders, or route I shall take as I proceed, till I have commenced the journey.

I hope to "come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel," and ardently desire to instruct, edify and awaken. Shall not hesitate to go into new places, as the way opens, &c.

Greeting— W. S. CAMPBELL.

Newark, N. J., May 29th.

For the Crisis.

The Truly Just.

There are many who profess to be good—many who profess to have religion—who, though they would not do a wrong action openly, for fear of the remarks that would be made by community, do not hesitate to depart from the great rule of right when they think they can do so without having their actions come to light. This is the fear of man, rather than the fear of GOD. The man who is truly just will not defraud another in the most insignificant matter, whether in word or deed.

"They are not just because they do no wrong,
But he who will not wrong me while he may—
He is truly just. I praise not them
Who in their petty dealings pilfer not—
But he, whose conscience spurns a secret fraud,
When he might plunder and defy surprise;
His be the praise, who, looking down with scorn
On the false judgment of the partial herd,
Consults his own clear heart and boldly dares
TO BE, and not be THOUGHT, an honest man!"

PHI.

For the Crisis.

Acknowledgement.

I am under great obligations to those friends who have been owing me for books who have complied with my request to pray earnestly that the Lord would provide means to pay my debts, so that I could live honestly, &c. And I would further request the prayers of good people in behalf of these same persons, that the good Lord would now enable them to pay their debts, or at least that he would provide them money to buy a sheet of paper so that they can write and tell if they are unable to pay, and so be freely forgiven. Let us remember these dear brethren at the throne of grace; who knows but God may hear and grant them the grace of punctuality. H. L. HASTINGS.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

AN EPITAPH.

Rest, weary one, whose life's short day
From earliest morn was shadowed o'er;—
As dark and heavy clouds, grief lay
Upon thy spirit evermore.

Low in earth's quiet bosom deep,
We lay thee down in hope to rest;
"In Jesus" soft and sweet thy sleep,
In Him—thy waking O how blest!

MARIA T.

Base envy withers at another's success, and hates excellence it cannot reach.

Personality of the Devil.

A great share of the professed christian world, so called, deny, in toto, that there is now, or ever was such a being as the Devil, either real or personal; and contend that all the idea designed to be conveyed by that word, is a personification of the principle of evil, in its various forms. It is applied in a metaphorical sense, they tell us, to various objects, such as human nature, the Roman government, wicked men, such as Judas, the lusts of the flesh, &c., but in every case it is to be understood as a figure of speech, and nothing more.

This figure was known in days of old, and designated by many titles expressing his character, attributes and offices. He was called Abaddon, Apolion, Belial, Accuser, the Beast, the angel of the bottomless pit, the Great Dragon, Beelzebub, Deceiver, the evil one, the god of this world, a murderer, a liar, the prince of this world, the prince of the power of the air, the old serpent, the devil, the father of lies, the tempter, Satan and the prince of devils. He must truly have been an extraordinary metaphor, possessing as many or more names as the Almighty himself!—and I will disprove the existence of God, as a real, personal being, upon the same principle precisely as those who disbelieve the personality of the devil—make him out nothing but a figure of speech, a personification of a mere principle of evil. If because Judas was called a devil (John 6 : 70,) and Peter, Satan (Matt. 16 : 23,) there is therefore no other devil, except Judas and Peter—then, according to this logic, because Moses was called a god, (Ex. 7 : 1.) and Abraham, lord, (Gen. 18 : 12,) there is therefore no other Lord God except Abraham and Moses! If because God is said to perform many wonderful and mighty works, he is therefore a real being, and not a personification of a good principle—then, according to the same logic, the devil must be a real being, and not a mere personification of an evil principle,—for many wonderful works in the scriptures are ascribed to him.

He appeared in the presence of God, and they held a conversation concerning Job. Mark the fact, they both conversed together,—and if it be consistent to say that one was a mere principle of evil, the other was nothing but a mere principle of good.

Again, He caused the wind to blow the house on Job's children and kill them; brought the Sabains upon Job's oxen, and took them all away—caused the fire of God to fall from heaven, and burn up all Job's sheep; and finally, he smote Job with sore boils from head to foot. If this was all done by figure of speech, they must have had rather a savage sort of metaphors in Job's time!

This same figure of speech conveyed the Savior around from place to place, conversed with him, quoted scripture, fell from heaven like lightning, broke chains and fetters, had power to cast men into prison, to walk about as a roaring lion, to work miracles, to overcome seven sons of one Sceva a Jew, to bind a woman eighteen years, to possess a herd of two thousand swine, drive them down into the sea, and drown them—is in possession of a kingdom, is to be judged in the last day—was conscious that there was a time coming when he had to be punished, confessed Jesus Christ to be the Son of God, and finally is to be destroyed in the lake of fire, which is the second death. Strange indeed, that all this is spoken of with reference to an eastern metaphor, a figure of speech, and not a real being, visible or invisible, neither in heaven above, nor earth beneath, nor the waters under the earth.

If the devil, possessing all the foregoing characteristics, and performing all these wonderful exploits, be nothing but a metaphor, a mere principle of evil,—then I defy those who assert this, to prove that God is anything more than a mere principle of good, the opposite of evil, and that the Bible is anything more than a mere principle of sophistry.

God and the devil are always spoken of in the scriptures as exact opposites, just as much so as are the principles,—good and evil. God is the Father of light, and the devil is the prince of darkness. Thus we read, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil." "The things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God." "What concord hath Christ with Belial?" He that committeth sin is of the devil—whosoever doeth not righteousness, is not of God." "If God were your father, ye would love me; ye are of your father the devil."

All good, as the reader can discover from the foregoing quotations, is ascribed to God; while the devil is spoken of as the author of all evil. Now as God is not merely that good principle of which He is the author, neither is the devil that evil principle of which he is the author. Is the principle of evil the author of itself? If so, then the principle of good is the author of itself, and consequently all the God in the universe! Just as certain as God, the author of good, is a real being, just so certain is Satan, the author of evil, a real being, and not that evil principle of which he is the author. Thus, upon the same principle that the devil can be philosophized into a figure of speech or personification of a bad principle, can the Almighty Jehovah be figured out of existence as a real being, and proved to be nothing more than an eastern metaphor or rhetorical flourish.

But let us look into some of the real significations of the devil, according to the theory we are reviewing, such as the wicked Jews, the Roman government, Judas, Peter, human nature, the lusts of the flesh, the carnal mind, &c. The best way of testing a doctrine, is to substitute the definition for the word itself, and see what kind of sense it makes. We shall thus give this doctrine a fair trial.

"And his fame went throughout all Syria, and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those that were possessed with Roman governments, and he healed them." Matt. 4 : 25. "Then shall he say also unto them on his left hand, depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the Roman government, and his angels." Matt. 25 : 41. "And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon: and after the sop, Peter entered into him." John 13 : 26, 27. Or, perhaps Judas entered into himself, since he was as much of a devil as Peter was, and of course before that he was out of himself! "Resist Peter, and he will flee from you." James 4 : 7. "Be sober, be vigilant, for your adversary Peter, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." 1 Peter 5 : 8. "And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold Peter hath desired to have you, that he might sift you as wheat." Luke 22 : 31. "And the God of peace shall bruise Judas under your feet shortly." Rom. 16 : 20.

"There was given me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Judas to buffet me." 2 Cor. 12 : 7. "And he was casting out a Judas, and it was dumb: and it came to pass when Judas was gone out, the dumb spake, and the people wondered. But some of them said, he casteth out Judas through Peter, the prince of Judas." Luke 11 : 14, 15. "Ye are of your father Peter, and his works ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there was no truth in him." John 8 : 44. "And he asked him what is thy name?" "And the human nature answered, my name is legion, for we are many: and all the human nature besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them. And forthwith Jesus gave them liberty, and the human nature went out, and entered into the swine, and they ran down a steep place into the sea, and were choked." Mark 5 : 9–13.

"As they went, behold they brought to him a dumb man possessed of a human nature, and when the human nature was cast out, the dumb spake, and the people marveled, saying it was never so seen in Israel." Matt. 2 : 33. No wonder the people marveled that a man could speak, after his human nature was cast out of him!

"Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven human natures." Mark 16 : 9. I wonder how many she had left? "And the Lord God said unto the carnal mind, because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life." Gen. 3 : 14. The carnal mind must have a singular mode of traveling, and live upon extraordinary diet!

"And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand; and he laid hold on the lusts of the flesh, that old carnal mind, which is Judas and Peter, and bound them a thousand years." Rev. 20 : 1, 2. "Then was Jesus led of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the lusts of the flesh: and when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterwards an hungered; and the lusts of the flesh came to him and said, If thou be the Son of God, command these stones to be made bread." "The lusts of the flesh took him on the pinnacle of the temple, and on a very high mountain, showed him the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, and then left him, and behold angels ministered to him." Matt. 4: 1-11. Had Christ no lusts of the flesh before the devil came to him? And after the devil left him, had he no more lusts of the flesh? If his own lusts, or his own carnal mind was the devil who tempted him, was he not sinful? He was, "because the carnal mind is enmity against God." Rom. 8: 7. His lusts were most unquestionably sin, if they constituted the devil which tempted him; for that which is holy will not try to tempt any one into wickedness.

When the Pharisees told Jesus he had a devil, it was looked upon then—and has always been by professed christians, in all ages—as sheer blasphemy, until very recently it has been found out that the Pharisees told the truth, and that Christ had a devil as much as anybody! If the devil that came to Christ and went away again, was not a real being, nothing but a figure of speech, then what were the angels which came to him after the devil left him? If they were nothing but metaphors, then how can any man on earth prove that Christ is a real being? He cannot do it, as we have two metaphors against the idea, and there is just as much reason in supposing that Christ was a metaphor, as either of the others! But if the angels were real beings, and Christ a real being, how can it be supposed that the devil was nothing but a figure of speech, when he had fully as much to do in the performance as any of them?

"And the seventy returned with joy, saying, even the lusts of the flesh are subject unto us through thy name. And he said unto them, I beheld the lusts of the flesh as lightning, fall from heaven." Luke 10: 17, 18. "And no marvel, for the lusts of the flesh is transformed into an angel of light." Rev. 20: 7.

From the foregoing we discover that the lusts of the flesh do not suit exactly as a definition of the devil; but we shall reverse the matter, and try it the other way. If the term devil means lust, of course then lust means the devil. "Now these things were our examples to the intent that we should not devil after evil things, as they also deviled." 1 Cor. 10: 6. "When the devil hath conceived, he bringeth forth sin." James 1: 15. "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that you may consume it upon your devils." James 4: 3. "Abstain from all fleshly devils, that war against the soul." Peter 2: 11. "All that are in the world, the devil of the flesh, the devil of the eye, and the devil of life, are not of the Father." 1 John 2: 16. "The world passeth away, and the devil thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Ib. 17. "The flesh devils against the spirit, and the spirit devils against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other." Gal. 5: 17. "But they that will be rich, fall into temptations and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful devils, which drown men in perdition." 1 Tim. 6: 9.

"That ye put off concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful devils." "For of this sort are they, which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women, laden with sins, led away with divers devils." 2 Tim. 3: 6. "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own devils shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears." 2 Tim. 4: 3. "How there should come mockers in the last time, who would walk after their own ungodly devils." Jude 18. "Flee all youthful devils." 2 Tim. 2: 22.

Thus according to this theory we have divers kinds of devils, such as foolish devils, ungodly devils, deceitful devils, fleshly devils, hurtful devils, youthful devils, &c. &c.

Thus the advocates of this theory defeat their own object, for in trying to disprove the existence of one devil, they make out almost as many devils as there were frogs in Egypt, and thus outdo orthodoxy itself.

I wish to answer a very common objection; it is this: "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lusts, and enticed." "Christ was tempted in all points like as we are." James 1: 14; Heb. 4: 15. Hence the conclusion is that the devil which tempted Christ was his own lusts. But we have examined Christ's temptation, and have found that the devil which tempted him could not possibly have been his lusts—for it is most absurd to suppose that his lusts were away from him forty days, came to him, stood before him, got behind him, and finally left him for good! hence this objection cannot be well founded. But says one, How will you dispose of it? Listen. "Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lusts, and enticed." Who is the tempter—who is the enticer? Not his own lusts certainly, for that is the principle by which he is induced to give way to the temptation, after it is presented. Who presents it?—this is the point. The answer is, the Devil. It is he who presents the temptation, and that principle which leads you to partake of it, is entirely distinct. James does not say that a man's lust is the tempter. Here is where those who hold the opposite view, mistake the whole matter. Let us illustrate.

Suppose, reader, a worthless and abandoned spendthrift comes to you and lays every possible inducement before you to entice or tempt you to leave your work, and go with him to the "grog-shop." You resist at first, knowing that such a course of conduct is utterly repugnant to your christian profession: but your adversary, the devil, through that wicked agent, (as all wicked men are agents of the devil,) still persists in his devices, and taxes the last copper of his sagacity, in order to lure you from the path of duty. Your old contracted love of ardent spirits—that lust of the flesh which you had once overcome, is now roused, and finally you yield the point, and are led away captive by the devil at his will!

Now any man can see that lust is not the tempter, or enticer; yet, when the temptation is presented by the devil, either personally or by human agency, and we give way to it, then is the time that we are drawn away of our own lusts and enticed.

Thus would the Savior have been tempted, had he yielded to the proposals of the adversary—he would have been "drawn away (not tempted) of his own lusts;" but "tempted of the devil!" The fact that Christ had all the lusts of the flesh before the devil came to him, that he ever had, and that he retained them all after the adversary left him, ought to be sufficient of itself to convince any man that the devil which tempted him was not his lusts; and this being so, it follows that the scriptural doctrine of the devil is against the theory we are reviewing.

In conclusion, we remark that there is not a text in the Bible which speaks of the devil as being the lusts of the flesh; no, not one. But suppose there was a text, which figuratively applied the term devil to the lusts of the flesh; if this proves that there is no real, personal devil, and that the lust of the flesh is all the devil there is, then it follows, according to the same logic, because Paul says, concerning some who were the enemies of the cross of Christ, "Whose god is their belly;" (Phil. 3: 19) that there is therefore no other God in the universe except the belly! If this was all the God the Bible held out, methinks atheists would be scarce. For all men believe in this god, and most men worship it. All of which is respectfully submitted for the candid consideration of all those who are sceptical to literal Bible testimony.—Expositor.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. A. Bayles writes from Great Falls, N. H.:—"When I behold the movements of the kingdoms of earth, so rapidly fulfilling the word of God, I begin to think we have got almost through. Yes, I love to read and hear of the light given by my brethren about the Lord's coming. There are still a few Advent brethren and sisters here, who love to hear of the coming of the Lord. We are but a few. We hold our meeting at Buffum Hall, High St."

—:o:—

Bro. G. W. Place writes from Kite River, Ill.:—"The cause of God is very low in this part of God's moral vineyard; the word—many called, but few chosen, is being fulfilled. But still there are some faithful ones. It grieves my heart to think what work the enemy has made here, but I believe that if some good brother, full of the Holy Ghost, would come here and stay with us, and make a faithful effort, with the help of the Lord, that the brethren would be comforted, backsliders reclaimed, and sinners converted.

There is a large field in this western world, and but few laborers. Pray ye, therefore that the Lord of the harvest may send more laborers to the field."

—o—

Bro. C. Fleming writes from De Kalb, N. Y.:—"My faith was never stronger in the coming kingdom of Christ than now. The Lord graciously poured out his Spirit here last winter, through the labors of Bro. Lent, a Methodist, local preacher, and a firm believer in the speedy coming of Christ. He says he don't see how any one can read the prophets and apostles and not believe that the signs are in the past.

There have been, as we hope, many souls converted. The Lord be praised! There is a good degree of the spirit of love and union manifested.

It would please me much if some of the preaching brethren would come this way. Their labors would be well received and blest."

—:o:—

Bro. S. H. Waldron writes from Portland, Me.:—"When and what shall be the end of 'these things,' is still a subject of inquiry among us, as it was with Daniel. I can say with Bro. Stockwell, I love the time still, and am growing stronger; and think with Bro. Humphries, that the passing of so many times should not in the least hinder any further investigation of the 1335 and 2300 days. Surely if these are not to be understood, this revelation is in vain to man. I think that we may one and all find it still profitable to search diligently the Scriptures as for hid treasure, remembering that we are to live and be judged by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. It becomes us as children of the Lord, to be more cautious how we shun the time of the coming of our blessed Lord, His kingdom, and the resurrection, or any other word of God given by inspiration."

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE RESURRECTION TRUMPET.

Tune.—Midnight Cry.

The resurrection trumpet sounds,
And wakes the saints beneath the ground;
Their dreamless slumbers now shall end,
Lo! upward they ascend!
The King of glory now they meet,
And all the holy angels greet;
The resurrection trumpet sounds,
And through the earth resounds.

The judgment day has now begun,
A solemn voice proclaims, "It's done!"
The earth itself now quakes and reels,
Terror the sinner feels.
What shrieks for mercy now ascend!
What cries of terror too attend!
The resurrection trumpet sounds,
And through the earth resounds.

But all the saints rejoice and sing,
To see their great immortal King;
Their hearts are filled with sweet delight,
While sinners wail with fright.
The righteous gain eternal life,
To live beyond the reach of strife;
The resurrection trumpet sounds,
And through the earth resounds.

Their tears are now all wiped away,
And they shall dwell in endless day;
All pain is gone, all sorrow past,
They are supremely blest:
Their trials are forever o'er,
They live again to die no more;
The resurrection trumpet sounds,
And through the earth resounds.

W. Sheldon.

Obituary.

Died in Chester Factories, March 31, of congestive fever, Julietta, aged twelve years. Also, April 1, Alfred C., aged five years, and Fanny A., aged one year and eight months, children of Zachariah and Eliza A. Longley.

The subjects of this notice were victims to the disease that has proved fatal to many in this place. Their deaths were all within the space of twenty-six hours. It was a distressed family indeed. Julietta died before 10 o'clock in the evening. I was called to attend the funeral the next day at 2 o'clock; but before the time arrived for the services, Alfred resigned his breath, and preparations were made for their being buried in one grave.

At the time appointed, we went to this house of mourning and death. Solemnly we looked upon those innocent sleepers, while in the same room were two prostrated, another in an adjoining room, and the fourth was sustained in the arms of a friend. After prayer had been offered in behalf of those grief-stricken parents, afflicted children, and sympathizing friends and neighbors, they were borne to their silent resting place.

Fanny Ann died the same evening, and the next day was buried by their side. On account of the sickness of the remaining children, the funeral services were deferred until Sunday, May 3, which was attended by the writer, who endeavored to comfort them concerning their dead in discoursing from Jer. 31: 16, 17.

In this hour of affliction they have something to lean upon. The mother especially, who is looking for the blessed hope with deep interest. Being acquainted with those children, and knowing their dispositions as kind and peaceable, we can say to the parents with all confidence, "thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy."

S. S. Brazee.

C. Factories, May 22, 1857.

Domestic Summary.

FROM CALIFORNIA AND THE ISTHMUS.

FILLIBUSTER WALKER GIVEN UP AND ARRIVED AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, May 28.

The steamship Empire City reached her wharf at 7 o'clock last evening.

Among the passengers on board the Empire City are Gen. William Walker and staff, who have abandoned their field of operations in Central America.

Gen. Walker capitulated on the 1st of May to Captain Davis, of the U. S. sloop-of-war St. Mary's, and with his staff and 260 men, the remains of his army, were brought to Panama by the steamer Mariposa. The Costa Ricans were not known in the articles of capitulation.

The government of New Granada has ceded an island in the Bay of Panama to England, in settlement of the McIntosh claim, which had nearly caused a war between the two nations.

Ten thousand people assembled to receive Gen. Walker on his arrival in New Orleans. He was accompanied by Col. Jacques, Mr. Pilcher, and Mr. Turner, Agent of the Associated Press, in a carriage, to the St. Charles Hotel, where Gen. Walker made a speech, expressing his thanks for the splendid reception given him, saying that in the mass before him, he recognized the American love of liberty, and assuring them that victory was still sure.

The greatest excitement prevails in the city, and the St. Charles is besieged by thousands, anxious and eager to see and hear the General. He was obliged to speak twice before the crowd were satisfied.

It is confidently predicted that Walker will return in ninety days, at the head of five thousand men.

ARRIVAL OF THE ILLINOIS.

Steamship Illinois, from Aspinwall, arrived at New York, May 28th, 4 P. M.

The California news is not important. Grain and fruit are suffering some from drought.

Ragtown, in Carson Valley, has been destroyed by fire.

Advices at Panama from Valparaiso are to April 16th, and Callao 26th.

Gen. Vivanco with two steamers and 500 men attacked Callao at midnight, April 20th. Vivanco was defeated, a large part of his force being made prisoners. He escaped with his steamers, and does not acknowledge final defeat.

Four days after the fight, during the funeral services of Gen. Plaza, in the excitement occasioned by a report that Vivanco's troops were again landing, Mr. Eaton, clerk of the American Consul, was shot dead.

The Custom House at Callao was closed and all business suspended. The Legislature adjourned on the 30th ult.

FUGITIVE SLAVE CASE.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 29.—Deputy U. S. Marshall Churchill and eleven assistants left this city on Tuesday last, to arrest four persons, in Mechanicsburg, Champaign Co., this State, charged with harboring fugitive slaves. The arrest was made on Wednesday, when writs of habeas corpus were taken out, but before they could be served, the U. S. officers were beyond the bounds of the county with their prisoners. Another writ was taken out in Green county, and was served by the Sheriff, assisted by a large crowd of citezens. The U. S. officers resisted, and several shots were fired, but they were finally overpowered and taken prisoners, and brought to Springfield for trial for resisting the Sheriff in discharging his duty. Great excitement prevailed. The parties originally arrested were discharged. The U. S. Marshal telegraphed to the Secretary of the Interior to-day, for instructions regarding the arrest and imprisonment of the U. S. officers at Springfield.

U. S. District Judge Leavitt has issued a writ of habeas corpus, and a Marshal has gone to Springfield to serve it in behalf of the officers in custody. In case of resistance, it is reported that the U. S. troops will be called out.

Washington, June 1. The government has no official account of the fugitive slave case in Ohio. The Secretary of the Interior has replied to the U. S. Marshal's telegraphic message as follows:

"Consult the District Attorney and execute the law. The President desires you to do your duty, and he will do his."

AN EUROPEAN ARMY ON THE ISTHMUS.

[Correspondence of the New York Herald.]

Washington, May, 26.—Gen. Herran, the New Granadian Minister, has for some time been concocting with other foreign ministers, a scheme to obtain a certain number of European officers, principally those belonging to the corps of engineers, and a standing army is to be organized on the Isthmus, with the approbation and concurrence of the great European powers.

Supposed Murder of a Free-State Judge in Kansas.—A letter in the New York Times, dated Lawrence, K. T., May 18, says:—

"There is a prevalent rumor for a day or two that Judge Cunningham is killed. He left Kansas City three weeks ago for his Court at Fort Scott, and has not been heard from since. He was the only free-state Judge in Kansas, and it is known that he has been somewhat obnoxious to the pro-slavery men since his appointment."

Judge Cunningham was from Pennsylvania.

A Month Later from Utah—All Quiet there, and Brigham Young in statu quo. St. Louis, May 18.—The overland Utah mail has arrived here, with Salt Lake City dates of April 2. The Territory was quiet. Preparations were making to send a large number of Mormon missionaries to all parts of the world.

The accounts of the movements of Brigham Young do not accord with those received via California. He seemed to possess the entire confidence of the people, and was planning a pleasure excursion to the Mormon settlement at Salmon river. For some unknown cause, the Mormons at St. Bernardine, and the surrounding settlements, have been summoned to Salt Lake city.

The Cheyennes (Indians) were becoming bold and defiant.

A trader arrived from Fort Laramie reported the Indians acknowledged a loss of 60 warriors, sent to commit depredations on the California road; in consequence of which, they had made prisoners of 16 traders, and have sent 100 warriors to the road to avenge the loss.

Cape De Verdes.—An official letter received at Washington from Cape Verdes Island, says the crops there, though not abundant, are sufficient to keep the people from actual want. More than twenty thousand inhabitants in the Islands and Archipelago have fallen victims to cholera.

Dred Scott Set Free by Dr. Chaffee.—St. Louis, May 26. Dred Scott with his wife and two daughters were emancipated to day by Taylor Blon. They had been conveyed to him by Mr. Chaffee, M. C., of Massachusetts, for that purpose.

Foreign News.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, May 28.

The Royal Mail steamship Arabia, Captain Stone, from Liverpool Saturday, 16th inst., arrived at this port at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Lord Palmerston has introduced a bill into Parliament, to amend Parliamentary oaths, omitting the words "on true faith of a christian," and thus admitting Jews.

Spain will send a special Envoy to China, to secure a share in the commercial arrangements.

A correspondent relates that the King of Spain is discovered in a conspiracy to dethrone the Queen, and is threatened with trial for treason.

The King of Prussia has sent a favorable reply to Napoleon's letter respecting Neufchatel, and that affair is now supposed settled.

Russia is fitting an expedition from Cronstadt with a special Envoy to China.

A son has been born to the Empress of Russia.

The Sardinian Government intend sending two vessels of war to China.

Accounts from Hong Kong of March 31, state that three English ships, with troops, had arrived there.

Four Days Later.—The steamship Canadian, from Liverpool, arrived at Quebec June 1st., bringing four days later news.

The Spanish invading squadron still remained at Cadiz.

Reports from Madrid announce that at an interview between the Mexican and Spanish Foreign Ministers, the basis of an arrangement of the Mexican difficulty was made.

The new Danish Ministry are apparently ameliorating the Holstein difficulty.

There had been another battle between the Turks and revolted Arabs at Damascus.

In India two native regiments had mutinied.

Appointments.

Bro. A. Ross appoints to preach in Biddeford, Me., at J. S. Libby's, on Bacon street, Tuesday evening, June 9th.

—o—

Providence permitting, I will preach at At the Annual Meeting of the Shinnecock Indians, Southampton, L. I., June 7th.

M. Grant.

—o—

Eld. J. Hemenway appoints to preach in Boston, June 7th.

—o—

Bro. W. S. Campbell appoints to preach in Springfield, Mass., June 7th.
Albany, N. Y., Tuesday evening June 9th.
Rochester, N. Y., June 14th. Particulars next week.

—o—

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Salem, Mass., (for Bro. George Burnham's charge,) Sunday, June 7
Rye, N. H., third Sunday in June.
New Bedford, fourth Sunday in June, and first Sunday in July.

—o—

I will preach as follows:—viz.,
By request, I will preach in Manchester, N. H., 79 Elm St., the first Sunday in June.
My appointments beyond Roxbury are withdrawn.

S. W. Bishop.

—o—

The Lord will, I will attend to the following appointments:
Brunswick, June 7

R. R. York.

—o—

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. at

Vernon, Vt.,	June 4th and 5th
West Brattleborough,	June 6th and 7th
Houghtonville,	June 9th
North Springfield,	June 10th
Wethersfield, near Bro. Fellows,	June 11th
Taftsville,	June 12th
Hartland, Dinsmore Hill,	June 13th and 14th.

I can stop at two or three places coming back, if desired and informed. I hope some one will meet me at the depots, for I am a stranger in that section. Description—tall, coarse and plain looking man.

Hiram Munger.

Will the Herald copy?

—o—

Bro. A. Fox will meet with the Brn. in
Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Sunday, June 21st
Cheshire St., Cheshire, Ct., Sunday, June 28th

Conference.

The Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Semi-Annual Conference stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, July 3d. A good representation is desired. Service at the chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

—o—

General Conference.

Bro. Grant:—Having consulted with many of the Brn. composing the different churches in this section, I find an interest, with many earnest requests, for a General Conference. We have therefore, after due deliberation, decided to hold a Conference at Carmel, Me., commencing June 10th, at 5 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We hope, pray, and believe that this means of grace will prove a savor of life unto life. We invite all, whosoever will, to come and partake with us; and shall expect as many of the household of faith as consistently can, to come in the name of the Lord, and such as can will feel it a privilege and duty, with open heart and hand, to help forward the cause of truth.

Those coming by railroad, will stop at Carmel Depot, near the village, where the meeting is held.

In behalf of the Brn.,
I. Damman.
L. L. Howard.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

J Cooper 127, E G Kingsbury 82, Sr. Gove 109, J C Wheeler 108, Laura Dudley 130, M L Tibbets 144, Dr. C O Towne 116, G W Johnson 118, S McCorrison 117, $1.

C A Hastings 143, S Trescott 143, E Pond 144, W Howard 130,—$2 each.

S Nichols 143, $2.50; C Winship 104, $1.32; A Coburn 104, 50 cents.

To Correspondents.

D. A. Jones—We have none of the "cheap edition" of Storr's Six Sermons.

B. L. Clark—All right—paid to 101.

J. F. Champlin—G. H. Sampson's paper has been sent to Fisherville; we now send to Fiskville.

J. Stockwell—All right.

Bro. Grant:—Let me say to those calls from the East that I purpose, the Lord will, to spend the most of June on the Penobscot, and will meet the brethren in Holden, Orrington, Exeter, or elsewhere, as they may arrange. I shall try and be at the Conference at Carmel.

Your Bro. full of hope, L. Boutell.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State, and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; full bound in gilt, $1—pos. 9 cts.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. —Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 10 cts—pos. 1 ct.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

BEREAVEMENT AND CONSOLATION.

It is not in the parting hours when those we fondly love
Have breathed to us their last farewell, and winged their way above;
Nor yet, when in the darksome grave we lay them to their rest,
The sharpest pang of sorrow rends the stricken mourner's breast.

'Tis when we seek our lonely home, and meet no more the smile,
Which could the darkest hour dispel, and every care beguile;
And when we meet around the board, or at the hour of prayer,
'Tis then the heart most feels its loss—the loved ones are not there.

And thus while days and months roll on, or mem'ry brings to view
The vision of departed joys, our grief is stirred anew;
Though faith may own a Father's hand, yet nature will rebel,
And feel how hard it is to say,—"He doeth all things well."

O mournful memories of the past! ye wear our lives away,
Ye haunt us in our dreams by night, and through each weary day;
The home which once, like Eden's bower, in blooming beauty smiled,
Ye make a barren wilderness, a desert waste and wild.

But why thus yield to fruitless grief? Are they not better far—
The sainted ones for whom we mourn—than we who linger here?
Our hearts should ever, ever flow with grateful love to Him,
Who saw their sufferings here, and called them from this world of sin.

Not long shall we their loss deplore, for soon the hour will come,
When we with those we fondly love shall see yon blissful home;
And may the remnant of our days be to His service given,
Who hid our idols in the grave lest we should fail of heaven.

Not willingly the Lord afflicts, nor grieves the sons of men,
'Tis but to wean our souls from earth and break the power of sin;
He saw us wandering from his paths, and sent the chast'ning rod,
To turn our feet from error's ways, and bring us home to God.

Shall we defeat his wise designs, and waste our days in tears,
Ungrateful for the numerous gifts that heaven in mercy spares?
Let faith and hope be cherished still, and brighter days shall dawn,
And plants of peace shall spring anew from seed in sorrow sown.

C. W. Higgins.

Worcester, Mass.

Correspondence.

From Bro. N. Pease.

Bro. Grant:—I am still in the land of the dying, and still looking for Jesus. It is now over four years since I came West. I have not heard from my brethren in the East. I don't know but they think that I am dead; but, thank God, I am alive, soul and body, and trying to preach his word as I have opportunity. Some have inquired for me through your paper; tell the brethren I love Jesus and his coming. I never was more determined to see the kingdom than now. We have got to be dead to this world. This professing to be looking for his coming and letting some besetting sin remain in us will never do; we must be dead. We, as ministers, have got to live and preach to win souls, for "he that winneth souls is wise."

I like the Crisis, with its stirring epistles from the brethren. I never felt more like living to save souls than now. We are near the judgment, and what we do must be done quickly. Heaven expects every man to do his duty. I think I have grown in grace a little. God help every one of us to grow in grace, that we may be found ripe when the great harvest comes. May God help us to fulfil the ministry, and do the work of an evangelist.

Brn. of the ministry, be of good cheer, the battle will soon be over.

The Lord is reviving his work here. God's long suffering waits in these last days. May He help us to save some. I would like to see you all. God grant that we may meet in the kingdom, to part no more. Oh! it will be sweet to meet all the saints in the kingdom, to part no more. I would like to hear from the brethren by letter. Brethren, pray for me.

Yours, in hope of soon seeing Jesus,

Nathaniel Pease.

Buchanan, Mich., April 26.

From Sr. Lucina Bliss.

Bro. Grant:—I like the Crisis. It is a messenger of truth to me. It helps me to understand God's word, and to live to his glory. It is truly sweet to feel that Jesus is near; then we feel our dependence, and also know where our strength lies. What if the world be against us? So long as our faith and hopes are fixed on Christ, they cannot harm us. I feel to praise the Lord that my eyes were ever opened to see the truth as it is. My former belief was at variance with what my Bible teaches. It appears a new book; now, it is plain. We read of no immortality except through Christ. I believe it. How it changes the character of God in my view. Now, I see justice, love, and mercy, which I never saw before.

I live in a place where there are no meetings, and but one sister of like precious faith near me; but I feel to praise God, I have the precious Bible, and thank the good brethren for sending me the Crisis. It cheers me on in my lonely pilgrimage journey. It is sweet to believe that Jesus is soon coming to gather his scattered children into his kingdom.

Take courage, dear brethren and sisters; soon our toils and sorrows will be ended, and we, if faithful, shall take possession of the promised kingdom.

Yours in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Lucina Bliss.

Monson, April 20th, 1857.

Letter from Sr. A. M. S. B.

Bro. Grant:—We still remain on this old earth waiting, I trust, for deliverance, for

"This groaning earth is too dark and drear,
For the saint's eternal home," while the wail of woe comes up and salutes our ears from every land and every clime,—"how long, O Lord, how long?" When will the power of the oppressor cease? when will earth's groaning millions from slavery be borne? When will the King of Kings come and reign on David's throne? The word of inspiration answers: "For yet a little while and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Then Jesus will come to earth again; then the tarrying time will cease. If all the prophecies concerning the first advent were literally fulfilled, why will not those of the second be also? I think they must, and

"The groans of nature in this nether world,
Which heav'n has heard for ages have an end.
Foretold by prophets and by poets sung,
Whose fire was kindled at the prophet's lamp;
The time of rest, the promised sabbath comes.
Six thousand years of sorrow have well nigh
Fulfilled their tardy and disastrous course
Over a sinful world;"
When
"What his storms have blasted and defaced
For man's revolt, shall with a smile repair.
O! scenes surpassing fable, and yet true,
Scenes of accomplished bliss! which who can see,
Though but in distant prospect, and not feel
His soul refreshed with foretaste of the joy?"

Crowns of never-fading glory, palms of victory, are in reserve for the children of God, though here they suffer and bear the mighty cross; it is but a short time, and though the seeming delay of Messiah's return gives courage to the enemies of our "blessed hope," yet the promised restitution will come, for Jesus says, "behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Have we not had the "midnight cry" sounded in our ears—"behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him?" I think we have, and the world has been stirred. Where then, are we in this world's history? In the time of the end, and very near its close. What scenes will open on our astonished visions! and who will be able to stand? only they that have pure hearts and clean hands. O, to be all ready and waiting, clothed with Christ's righteousness, that we may be received of him in peace! A. M. S. B.

From L. P. Hastings.

Bro. Grant:—While reading to-day in the Crisis communications from Brn. and Srs., and feeling that it was heart-cheering to hear from the dear pilgrims and tried friends, with whom I have been acquainted who are scattered here and there, to the East, West, North and South, it occurred to me that it might be my duty to write a word for the perusal of those dear ones. The friends we have left are not forgotten. No. How often are the sweet seasons I have spent with them recalled, and I long to be with them again. But I do feel thankful for the privilege of hearing from them through the Crisis, and also by more private communications. Although in a fruitful and pleasant part of the country, and where we find neighbors and friends, there are but few who love to hear the proof that there is another land promised, and that we may gain a title to that heavenly country. Most appear well satisfied with this world, if they can only get enough of it.

Oh! the unbelief and infidelity of this age! Wickedness of every kind seems to be rapidly increasing. Faith! faith! where can it be found? "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" I sometimes fear I shall be borne down by the almost overwhelming tide of unbelief that seems to sweep over our land and the world.

But I still feel that there is a God, and not only that, but that he watches over his children, and deals with them as a Father. I think he has been leading me in a way to learn me to trust in Him. As to the way in which the Lord has been dealing with his people, I think it looks very much like the leading of his typical people, Israel. And shall we doubt that it was the Lord who led us out? Although we may have to abide long in our tents, waiting for the cloud to be raised up, and move forward, yet it will be blessed for those who "wait." Truly we can say with the poet,

"We've waited long, we're waiting still,
Yet we expect to wait
Till thou thy promise shalt fulfil,
And earth anew create."

I hope the children of God, scattered abroad, will write for the Crisis as often as they think the Lord would have them. Remember, there are many like us, separated from any of like faith and hope, to whom such articles are particularly cheering. L. P. Hastings.

Galesburg, Mich. Apr. 1857.

From Sr. M. J. Withee.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—Believing it to be the will of the Lord, I take my pen to address you for the first time through the medium of the Crisis.

I feel truly like a stranger and a pilgrim on the earth—that I have no abiding city here, but that I with you am seeking one that hath foundations whose builder and maker is God. I thank the Lord with all my heart that I am with the despised company that are seeking their rest in glory, and that I have been led to see the difference between the traditions of men and the truth as it is in Jesus. I am aware that we are living in an awful, trying time, and I fear that many instead of trusting in that God who has promised to be with them to the end, will begin to look at outward things, which indeed present a sad picture, and by so doing will cast away their confidence which hath great recompense of reward, and will become lost in the destruction and confusion that exists, not only in the world, but among those that profess to be looking for their Master's return.

It is evident that all that is going at the present time termed light, cannot be the true light, therefore let us cease from man, and strive to live by the faith of the Son of God. Were it not for the cheering thought that we are almost home, I should have fears of despondency; but as I see perils thickening and dangers increasing at almost every step, it is an evident token that we are nearing the port. Ah! yes; in a little from this, if faithful, we shall bloom in immortal vigor; we shall have bodies fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body, and live to die more. Oh! consoling thought, that in that bright world, for which my heart oftimes beats high, there will be no sickness nor sorrow, no struggling and gasping in the arms of death, but the former things will have passed away, and immortality be stamped on every brow. For such a home as this shall we not trials well endure?

But when I call to remembrance that none but the pure in heart, none but such as have made a covenant with God by sacrifice, none but those who are willing to suffer with Jesus here, shall be inhabitants of that blissful world, I see there is a work yet to done ere there will be a pure and spotless company standing on the earth all ready for translation. And what is to bring about that fellowship, love and union that is so much lacking in the church at the present time, is a question that rests with deep and ponderous weight on my mind. Yet I can thank the Lord that the work is not left to human skill, and surely he will perfect what he has begun. Oh! let us who profess to be looking for the coming of the Just One, gird on the whole armor, cling close to God and his word, seek earnestly for that wisdom that comes from above, that we may be able to stand in this trying hour. It is high time for us to awake from stupidity, and look right to God, and not to one another, and have the purpose—I will go let others do as they may—deep in the heart.

Our Captain calls for valiant-hearted soldiers, and to all that prove themselves such he has promised to give a crown of glory that will never fade away. Then let us take courage, fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life. Surely we have nothing to fear, for our Leader is strong, and is sure of victory; and we know the warfare will soon be ended. Yes, glory to God! the crowning day cannot be far in the future. It soon will dawn to the joy of all the finally faithful. How important that we "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

Pray for me, Brn. and Srs., that I may stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made me free, and at last have a seat with you in the kingdom.

From your unworthy sister,

Mary J. Withee.

Madison, Me., May, 1857.

Poetry.

Selected for the Crisis.

THE BIBLE.

Lamp of our feet! whereby we trace
Our path, when wont to stray;
Stream from the fount of heavenly grace!
Brook by the traveler's way!

Bread of our souls! whereon we feed;
True manna from on high!
Our guide and chart, wherein we read
Of realms beyond the sky!

Pillar of fire, through ages dark—
Or radiant cloud by day!
When waves would whelm our tossing bark,
Our anchor and our stay!

Pole-star of life's tempestuous deep,
Beacon, when doubts surround;
Compass, by which our course we keep,
Our deep-sea lead—to sound.

Riches in poverty! our aid—
Our aid in every needful hour.
Unshaken rock! the Pilgrim's shade—
The soldier's fortress-tower.

Our shield and buckler in the fight;
Vict'ry's triumphant palm;
Comfort of grief—in weakness, might;
In sickness, Gilead's balm.

Childhood's preceptor—manhood's trust—
Old age's firm ally—
Our hope when we go down to dust
Of immortality!

Pure Oracles of Truth divine!
Unlike each fabled dream
Given forth from Delphi's mystic shrine,
Or grove of Academe.

Word of the ever living God!
Will of his glorious Son!
Without thee how would earth be trod,
Or heaven itself be won?

Choice Selections.

Directness in Preaching.

There should be directness of words. This idea precludes the use of numerous and high-sounding adjectives; "great swelling words of vanity;" a profusely ornamental style, in which the sword of the Spirit is so wreathed with flowers, that no one feels its edge or point; in a word, any style which attracts attention to itself, rather than to the sentiment it contains. How very simple and unostentatious the language of the Savior—how many monosyllables. How plain the figures he used—drawn, not from ancient myths, but from every day, familiar objects; such as hens and chickens, leaven, bread, meat, vines, trees, children, sheep, &c. It is a fact worthy of consideration, that the greatest, and holiest, and most useful men, with scarcely an exception, have been, and still are exceedingly simple and unadorned in their style; and that in almost exact proportion to their greatness and piety. For instance, Wesley. There may be pride in dressing a sermon, as well as in dressing the person.

There should be too, directness of point. It is sometimes difficult to tell what the preacher is endeavoring to make out. The subject is spread over so large a surface that it does not rest on any points. The congregation are too often confused with a medley, it may be, of very beautiful sentences; but the speaker has arrived at—no where. A hearer once said to his minister, "How is it that I can remember so much more of your sermons than those of others?" "I will tell you," said he. Calling his servant girl, he told her to go to the store and get some sugar, soap, allspice, indigo, ginger and starch. "O," said she, with a perplexed air, "you will please to write it down, sir; I cannot remember them all." "Susan," said he, "you know you are going to wash, and will want some soap, indigo and starch; and you are going to bake, and will want some sugar, allspice and ginger." "O yes," said she, "I can remember them now." This parishioner had his answer. He made points in his sermons, and his hearers could not only remember, but understand. But when the soap, and sugar, and other articles are all mixed together, it is difficult, not only to remember, but to make sense out of them. "Make out what you take in hand," is quite an important direction.

There should be also directness of aim. The mark to be aimed at, the citadel to be stormed, is the heart. In the revolutionary war, the British drew up their muskets breast high and fired. The American soldiers raised their guns to their eyes and took aim at the fifth button. We know the result. The English used to say, "They did not like that Yankee squint," but is took effect. Neither does the cold-hearted formalist, nor the backslider, nor the sinner, like that kind of preaching that centers the heart at every shot. It makes them feel bad, and they writhe under it, and often declare they will not stand it; but after all, it is the only thing that will do them good. They are wrong, and they ought to know it; and it is the preacher's duty to make them feel it. Such hearers can bear indoctrinating like salamanders; but take aim at their hearts, and tell them what they are, as well as what they must be, and there will be a stir. They will cry out lustily for the gospel. They want to hear the gospel preached; by which they mean, 'Let us alone." Nathan took aim at David, and brought him down. Peter aimed at the multitude, and pierced their hearts, and they cried out. Paul aimed at Felix and hit him, and he trembled; at Agrippa, and he "almost" fell. An effect was produced, a result occurred in all these cases. And so it will ever be, under the influence of a direct aim. All may not be converted, but some will. All will not be pleased, but God's work will be revived. All will not speak well of the preacher, but sinners will be saved. He may not get much money; but he will get souls for his hire. If he have a measure of Paul's success, he will be content with Paul's salary.

O, my brethren, this is not the time for self-seeking, nor the time for display, nor the time for building up a name, save that of revivalist. Souls are perishing. Preaching is an ordained instrumentality to save them from an awful hell. Is it not time to investigate our mode of preaching—our specific design—the effect produced—God's revealed will and expectations in the promises—and what the church and the world have a right to expect, as the result of our labors? If they expend their money upon us, they have a right to expect, God expects a return—a harvest of souls. "A workman that needeth not to be ashamed," is the workman that returns, "bringing his sheaves with him." An increase of only eight hundred and ninety-six members, as the resultant effects of the combined efforts of ten or twelve thousand ministers, traveling and local; and a membership of eight hundred thousand, for a whole year, is an alarming consideration, after giving due credit to "osculatory motions." How natural it is to frame excuse for our want of success. Let us confess before God, and humble ourselves in his presence, and seek the heart, and head, and "tongue of fire," and address ourselves anew to the work of saving the world from sin and Satan's power. Another Conference year is at hand. New stations, or a return to old ones await my brethren in all the N. E. Conferences. How shall the record stand at its close? Let us this moment resolve, relying on the strength which God supplies, that we will go forth to the work assigned us with a fixedness of purpose, and a oneness of design which nothing short of sickness or death can shake; and that purpose and design be, to have a revival in every charge in every Conference. Yes, my brethren, to have a revival. The thing may be done. It is our legitimate business. For this we entered the ministry. "Have they fruit? Are any truly convinced of sin, and converted to God by the preaching?" are the heart-searching, motive-trying questions that decided our call and consecration. Has this item in our commission been blotted out? Are "gifts" and a tolerable means of "grace," the only items left? No, no, the document reads as of old, "Have they fruit?" "Yes, dear brethren, we may have fruit—every year have fruit. The tree of life yields its fruit "every month," and we may stand under it, and call the multitudes to it, and some will come, and we may shake down its life-giving fruit, and they will eat and live. We ought to be alarmed, if a whole year pass away, and no souls are converted through our instrumentality. That soil must be very poor, or very poorly cultivated, that yields no annual harvest. Said a brother, now of a sister Conference, in his own characteristic language, to another brother who doubted the practicability of a revival every year, "Try me. Set me down anywhere this side of hell, and I will have a revival." That brother always does have a revival. And so may we, if we lay ourselves out for it, bend all our energies to it, make it the all-pervading idea, show it in our countenance, in our prayers, in our sermons, in our talk, in our visits; in a word let us be seen and read of all men, that this is our one, great, central idea; and the result must be, will be accomplished.—Itinerant.

[Zion's Herald.

Seek holiness rather than consolation. Not that consolation is to be despised, or thought lightly of; but solid and permanent consolation is the result rather than the forerunner of holiness; therefore he who seeks consolation as a distinct and independent object, will miss it. Seek and possess holiness, and consolation (not perhaps often in the form of extatic and rapturous joys, but rather of solid and delightful peace,) will follow, as assuredly as warmth follows the dispensation of the rays of the sun. He who is holy, must be happy.

Precept is instruction written in the sand—the tide flows over it and the record is gone. Example is engraven on the rock, and the lesson is not soon lost.

Youth's Department.

An easy way to settle a Quarrel.

Recently, in a thickly settled place, the boys of one portion became so much at variance with those of another contiguous portion, that they entered into a regular combination on each side, that if those of the one could catch a boy from the other part, they would whip him severely. Things went on so for a considerable time, and many were the fights that came off between these little bravoes. At length, Charles, a lad belonging to one of the neighborhoods, was one day at play with his kite. As it proudly mounted up, the wind grew too strong for the line, which consequently broke, and away went the kite down into the other neighborhood. Charles of course durst not go after it, for it had fallen among boys who were hostile to him. John, one of them, seized the toy and broke it up, and then sent a taunting word to Charles about what he had done, and that if he would come over he would serve him the same. This raised Charles' temper to a high pitch. But Mr. A., Charles' father, who had been watching the movements among these boys for some time, and studying how he might effect a reconciliation among them, thought that a favorable opportunity was now presented for him to make the attempt. Accordingly, he went to work on the following evening, and made Charles a very nice kite; and, calling him up early in the morning, told him to carry it over and make a present of it to John, instructing him at the same time to speak kindly to John, and to return just so soon as he had done his errand, and that, even if he might be imposed upon by him, not to reply, or do anything by way of retaliation. This was a hard task indeed for Charles' nature. He hardly knew how to come to the practice of such principles. But finally he concluded to comply with his father's wishes, and so away he went. He arrived at the house where John lived before he was up. But it being announced to him that Charles had called to see him, he was soon out of bed to meet him, and perhaps to fulfil the threat of the day before. But Charles said "Good morning" to him very pleasantly, presented him with a new kite, and then turned directly back.

This was a mysterious case for John. He did not know what to make of it. Nor did it in the least sharpen up his determination to whip Charles. In a few days, Mr. A. thought he would just call on Mrs. B, John's mother, and see what kind of spirit the kite was working out. So, after conversing a while on other things, he just alluded to the case of the kite. This was enough to stir up the ire of the mother furiously enough. She began on an elevated key to commend her son. "He is a good, peaceful boy, and will not meddle with others, if they do not injure him." "I do not doubt," answered Mr. A., "that my boy did very wrong, and imposed upon John. I know that he is sometimes very roguish, and does differently from what he should." "But," answered Mrs. B., a little cooled down, "for what reason did Charles give John that kite? I do not understand it. Did he not intend to impose upon John?" "No imposition," replied Mr. A.; "Charles thought that John would like to have a kite, and therefore he thought he would make a present of that to him." This conversation had the effect to cool down Mrs. B.'s ire altogether, and to change her about in favor of Charles. "Well," said she, "I know that John is an ugly, mischief-making fellow, and is often getting into quarrels with the other boys. He has now been and broken up Charles' kite, a good for nothing wretch? He ought to be whipped as long as he can see!" "Oh no," rejoined Mr. A.; "that would not be right. John is quite a good sort of a boy; and he would not have done so, if the others had not imposed upon him." "Well," replied Mrs. B., "John shall carry the kite back to Charles, and make an humble acknowledgment to him." "Charles does not wish for that," answered the father; "he can have kites enough. You had better let John keep it." But John being in hearing, had become about as much mellowed down as the mother, so that he could not refrain from crying. Then Mr. A. left and went home. But presently, looking out of the window, he saw John loitering about the house, not hardly daring to come in. He stepped to the door, and inquired, "What do you wish for, John?" "I wish to see Charles," answered John, in a very subdued tone of voice. So Charles was called, to whom John remarked, "I have brought your kite, and wish you to take it back." "Oh no," said Charles, "I do not wish to take it back. I gave it to you. Keep it yourself. You wish to have one, and I can get kites enough." But no, John cried, and insisted that Charles should take it back, which he finally did. From this occasion, quarrels between these boys wholly ceased. They are now as harmonious as any boys. The kite made peace among them. Such are the legitimate results of peace principles.

Indulge holy, chaste, and pious thoughts, considering that God is ever present. Converse frequently with him in thy mind, and endeavor to preserve the memory of him in thy thoughts, that thou mayest never be absent from him.

In the Christian Church there are about two females to one male. In the State Prison there about six males to one female. Which is the weaker sex?

The world twines itself about the soul, as a serpent about an eagle, to hinder its flight upward, and to sting it to death.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adams's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 [illegible] Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1857. WHOLE NO. 93. VOL. V. NO. 15.

The World's Crisis.

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH HENRY TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months - - - $1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - - .50
Five copies to one address for 6 months - 4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months - 8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months, 15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months, 22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

TRUST IN GOD.

'Mid sorrow and anguish, gloom and despair,
'Mid scenes bright and cheerful, all that is fair—
When the sun of prosperity yields to us good,
Oh! then let's be willing to trust in our God.

In sweet christian meekness resigned we should be,
To every fate that God may decree;
Should sorrow and sadness come in like a flood,
Oh! still let's be willing to trust in our God.

Should friends here, and fond ones whom our souls
hold most dear,
Unto the dark valley of death draw most near,
Let's thank Him in mercy for His chastening rod,—
Still let's trust in our Saviour! trust in our God.

And when the loud trump shall awake the saints
dead,
We then shall meet Jesus, our dear living Head;
And then in rich transport, in sweet, blissful mood,
We'll rejoice with great joy that we've trusted in God.

C. A. MOORE.

Conesus Centre, N. Y.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

A Hot Tongue.

"What! a hot tongue?" Yes, a hot tongue. "What do you mean by that?" I mean what I say, a hot tongue. "How hot?" Hot as fire; yes, it is a fire. "What does it burn?" Everything that comes in its way. It is not a fire of coals, nor a fire of zeal, nor a fire of love. "Well, what is it?" Why, hell-fire, to be sure. Now just listen,—"Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, . . . and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell." James 3: 5–6. Just remember that, my friend; just think that you may possibly have a little taste of hell-fire in your own mouth. Look out for it; it don't take much of that kind of fire to make an awful desolation in this world. Friend, just be mighty careful how you conduct yourself. Look out for that hot tongue!

When you are opening your lips to slander some one, if you would just look in God's looking-glass, you would see that your tongue is nothing but a coal of hell-fire; and be sure then Satan has all his breezes ready to speed the flame.

When there's a lie struggling in your mouth, and trying to make your tongue a highway to get out, just hold a minute, friend; that's no less than a spark of hell-fire! You had better quench it before it goes any farther.

When an evil report has come to you, darted out of the lips of some old, lying whelp of Satan, like a streak of blue flame from a lake of fire and brimstone; and when you are thinking whether to believe it and whether to repeat it or not, then look out for the hot tongue. Why, that is neither more nor less than a drop of hell's lava—a coal from the eternal fire. Can you touch it and not be burned? That single spark may burn up the fairest structure of human hope. It may wither the earthly prospects of some child of the Lord. It may burn like molten brimstone in some heart that even now has sorrows enough. It may provoke a cry that shall rise to the very heaven of heavens,—"How long, Oh Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our sorrows?" O man, take care. Drop that fire, it is hell-fire! Tread on it—crush it in the dust—put it out.

Look out for these hot tongues. They are always kindling a blaze. They are genuine Lucifer m[illegible]. The slightest friction, and [illegible] and [illegible] and st[illegible] fan the flame—it bursts forth in [illegible] terror—it spreads like the sheeted gleam of a burning prairie—it flashes like the lurid glare of a consuming city; hellish voices echo wild, unearthly sounds amid its roar,—its crackle is the laughter of demons,—its flash is the gleam of the pit. Alas! who can stop it? it is set on fire of hell!

O man of God, look about you. Look well to your tongue. Let your heart burn with holy love. Let other fires than those of hell kindle within you. Let charity glow on your tongue. But Oh! beware of tongues heated in the flames of hell. Beware of tongues that devour like flames. Beware of tongues that pierce like arrows, and that are sharper than two-edged swords. Avoid them. Flee from them as from a serpent; shun them as you would a nest of hissing adders. Believe not their words. Refuse to listen to their slanders. Can a man take coals in his bosom and not be burned? Beware, then, how you allow men to drop sparks of hell-fire upon your heart.

Would you allow men to scatter fire-brands about your dwelling? Would you allow a man to hurl red-hot irons into your family circle? Would you permit a maniac to fling coals of fire into your barns and your garners? But what are these compared to tongues, swift, sharp, forky, and tipped with the very fire of hell?

Man! Woman! have you a hot tongue? Well, for God's sake keep your mouth shut! Case it up. Put on the tongue-bridle. Shut the gates of your mouth. Keep quiet. Refrain your tongue from evil and your lips that they speak no guile. Don't be in haste to sin. You will meet the terrors of hell-fire soon enough unless you seek God, and there's no need of your making special efforts to kindle the flame before the time.

O flee from this accursed and desolating course. Escape for thy life. A flame, baleful as the fires of Sodom, glances luridly along thy way,—it follows thee in thy downward course,—it lies in wait for thee at thy journey's end! it shall destroy thee with a sore destruction there. Now you may make your escape. Now you may flee to the mountain. Now you may find refuge from the fiery tempest. O flee to Christ! Cleanse your hearts and lips. Quench the fires of lust, and hate, and wrath, and envy—these up-gleamings from the pit—in the regenerating waters of forgiveness and salvation.

Come, find peace in Jesus Christ. Then you may rejoice in reproaches, and glory in all manner of evil sayings which you endure falsely for his sake. And when the measure of mortal sorrow shall be full, and the tide of earthly grief shall have rolled in upon us in all its fury,—when the hate of Satan and the envy of his servants shall have done their worst, thou shalt have peace—peace like a river,—peace deep, wide, joyous and eternal. Then, when lying lips shall be put to silence, which speak grievous things proudly and contemptuously against the righteous, we may take up the song of David, and say,—"Oh! how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men! Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of man; thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.' Ps. 31: 18–20.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

The Work Reviving.

The Lord sent one of his faithful servants (Bro. A. Ross) to labor with us a few weeks, and we have had indeed a refreshing from the presence of God. Several have been converted, and a number reclaimed from their wanderings and made to rejoice again in their Savior, and the few faithful ones who have been toiling and striving, amid trials and discouragements for a long time, have been made to rejoice also, and, like Paul, they thank God and take courage.

T[illegible] blessings make us long the more for home where we can enjoy [illegible] which we only have a foretaste [illegible] O! when will the morning dawn? When will the day-star arise, and our hearts be made glad at the sight of our coming King—our long absent Lord? We want to see Him in his beauty, and the dear ones that are now sleeping in the cold, dark grave, awaiting the glad morning when they shall awake in the likeness of their Redeemer—when all the family of God will be gathered into one eternal home, to part no more, to die no more, to be forever free from temptation and sin. O, hail happy day! I long to be there!

THENA.

Lowell, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Our Latitude About Run Out.

We are a despised, way-worn pilgrim band, bound from this state of things to another which is far better; and, notwithstanding our poverty here, we are heirs to a kingdom that shall be filled with riches, to endure forever. While I contemplate the future, with its riches, its honors, its pleasures, (for in Thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore,) I quite forget my poverty. And is it a fact that we are almost there? Yea, we are nearly to the kingdom of God. For when I look over the signs of the times, I can come to no other conclusion.

The Lord said, when speaking of the signs of his coming, "the sun shall be darkened;" (it has been done,) "the moon shall not give her light;" (it has taken place,) "the stars shall fall from heaven;" (it has been fulfilled,) "the powers of the heavens shall be shaken;" which is now being fulfilled among the nations. And what next! And "then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." To my mind, this last is the only part in this line of prophecy which remains to be fulfilled, and must take place in connection with the coming of Christ; for I understand that when the sign appears, then all the tribes of the earth mourn, and "they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Again, we are now standing on the very end of every chain of prophecy that terminates in the coming of Christ. The sixth seal is open to our view. The next event in God's arrangement seems to be the rolling together of the heavens as a scroll. The sixth trumpet has long since finished sounding, and the seventh will occupy but a short space, and the mystery of God is finished. The sixth vial has done its work, and it is evident, to my mind, that the effects of the seventh are now being developed. Then, in the name of the Lord, where are we?

I answer; down, down within a few moments of the judgment. God help us, Brn., to be right. Let us watch and pray, for one misstep here and we may be lost forever. Here we are, having probation's last, lingering moments, and the world, that must soon witness the thunders of the judgment, are going on in their recreation, unconscious of their approaching doom. They stand with their affections placed upon the things of earth; some have their affections on fine houses and lands; some on gold and silver; some on horses and carriages; some on pomp and splendor, and fashions of the world; and others have their affections placed upon fine slaves and fine plantations; some are being disciplined in war, and few are being disciplined to meet Christ in the judgment. On, on we go in a mixed multitude, among cold-hearted, lukewarm, Christless professors, backsliders, hypocrites, liars, drunkards, thieves, murderers, slaveholders, idolaters, and all growing worse and worse. And who wonders at the sighing of the church of God to be freed from such a company? And when they have gone a little farther, Oh! what a change!

Our latitude is run out. Now comes the saints' joyful time. Those that have been poor, despised, neglected; those whose cheeks have often been bathed in tears; those who have been disappointed in the passing of the time, and of whom the scoffer has taken advantage, making no allowance for human frailty,—their joy has come, and they have no more tears to spare; their tears are dried up; they gaze into the heavens and the Son of Man is seen treading its starry pavements; they are rent in twain, and roll together with a noise that shall shake creation, and pass away, and in the presence of an astonished world the resurrection goes on. God despatches a convoy of angels from his blazing courts, and they go with a loud sounding trumpet to gather the saints from every clime.

BENJ. ROBERTS.

For the Crisis.

Evil Speaking.

No. IV.

Have not your words been envenomed darts, to poison far beyond what you supposed or intended? But if you had had wisdom, or kindness, to have kept still, no one would have suffered—no tears would have been shed—no feelings would have been lacerated—no hearts bruised. Now, who shall repair the wreck? And what do you care? Suppose it were yourself! And let me say here, that there would be but little harm done if, in regard to this question, we should "do unto others as we wish them to do unto us."

It is said of Josephine, that, when dying, she said, just then bidding the light of earth adieu,—"I have a consciousness of never having caused a single tear to flow." Happy privilege! To die feeling that our words have never grieved the humble.

But we go farther. Here is a whole community in a ferment. What is the matter? Why, a miserable story has been going over the place—perhaps a lot of them have got into circulation, and some good people have concluded that "to forbear is no longer virtuous," that they will not bear it, that the reports must be looked into! Well now, some are church members, and the church suffers; the humble and the faithful are deeply grieved; the innocent accused suffers, for somebody will believe when so much is said; and, in nine cases out of ten, the really guilty party will go free, and be ready to concoct other schemes of slander and sorrow. How much trouble to the minds and peace of innocent persons, by a few words spoken not in malice, it may be, but carelessly—just to talk—to interest a friend—to seem to be wise—to know what is going on—to have a little more insight of the mystery of other people's lives than some one else, and even than they themselves! There have been days of tedious inquiry, prosecutions, costs and damages, all for a little evil speaking.

The church has been cursed with such as have stirred up strife by this means, and who, at the same time, have often been foremost in speaking in meeting. It is one of the most afflicting curses within the whole range of ecclesiastical administration—has greater ramification—is more difficult of access.

I have known good societies and churches broken up by nothing but tale bearing, and at the bottom, nothing to justify any remarks of the kind. I have known others to go on crippled for years because cursed with a few restless, conniving, tattling, conjuring spirits, who must always be saying something about somebody else, whether right or wrong, true or false—who work the devil's copying press and carry his mail.

Truly, "where there is no tattler the strife ceaseth;" and "Wisdom is justified of her children."

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

The Sublimity of God.

The glory and sublimity of the great God of all the earth is heard and seen all around us. We hear his voice in the cataract, in the awful and majestic music of the thunder, and in the harpings of wind, and brooks, and forests. His glory glitters in the wave, the rainbow, the lightning and the star. There is not a moonlight or sunlight ray that comes down upon stream or hill, upon mountain or meadow, but teaches us of the glory of God. There is not a breeze calling from its blue air-throne to the birds of summer-vallies, or sounding through midnight rains its low and mournful dirge over the perishing flowers of Spring, but brings upon its wings the breath of God's goodness and mercy. There is not a cloud bathing itself like an angel-vision in the rosy gushes of twilight, nor a lake glowing in the bright starlight as if dreaming of Paradise, but bear to our heart the fact of the sublimity and love of God. He is the soul of our being. The earth and heavens are quickened by his spirit, and the heavings of the great deep, in tempest and in calm, seem but His secret and mysterious breathings.

PHI.

For the Crisis.

Sanctification.

What is it? and when is it attained?

1. What is it? Stillingfleet gives the following definition; viz., "The act of consecrating, or of setting apart for a sacred purpose; consecration." Thus making consecration and sanctification synonymous terms. Webster's definition is,—"The act of making holy." The word is used five times in the Bible and in each place will justify either of the above definitions. Sanctify is used about eighty-five times, and in every place but four it must of necessity signify simply, and only, to set apart. In the remaining four, it would seem to comprehend, not only the above named idea of setting apart, but also a freedom from sin and all its guilt. The question before us then is, when are we fully set apart, chosen vessels for the service of God?

2. When are we pure from all the guilt of sin? It is claimed by some that at conversion God but barely commences the work of cleasing from sin; and that before we are fully prepared to do God's will here, and to reign with him in eternal glory, we need, and must have done for us, another, and a far greater work than is done at conversion. I cannot adopt this position, because,

First,—it is contrary to reason. Sound reason would say that when God pardons, all our sins are forgiven: consequently, we are as pure from the guilt of sin as the angels of God.

Second,—the above position is contrary to the plain and positive teachings of the word of God. We read for instance in 1 John 1: 9, that "if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." I ask, is not this all that is comprehended in the term sanctification? I answer, if we abide by the word of Cod in the use of this term, it points to the accomplishment of this work; consequently, when this work is done, we are sanctified in the Bible sense of the word.

Is this work done at conversion? I answer, as no individual was ever converted without first confessing their sins; and as God has promised that when we do confess our sins he will forgive them, and not only so, but will cleanse them from all unrighteousness;—therefore the question is settled that at conversion we are sanctified. At conversion our feet are established in the narrow way; and now if we would keep the consecration good, we must run the race set before us with patience—we must fight the good fight of faith—grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth—keep ourselves pure by obeying the truth THROUGH THE SPIRIT, and by so doing we shall continually possess our vessels in sanctification and honor; always be found in this holy state, and be thus fitted to labor in the vineyard of the Lord acceptably, and to the accomplishment of good, and be fully prepared for the great salvation that is soon to be revealed. A church standing in this place will see their labors blessed, and souls will be gathered to the fold of Christ. Let us see to it, then, that we are walking in our first love—that we are now sanctified to God. The Lord give us grace that we may thus do, is the prayer of

A DISCIPLE.

For the Crisis.

Comets.

Comets have ever been considered, by the ignorant and superstitious, as harbingers of war, pestilence and famine. Nor has this opinion been, even to this day, confined to the unlearned. And when we take a survey of their magnitude, fiery appearance and wonderful velocity, some of them moving at the rate of a million of miles an hour, we cease to wonder that they produce universal alarm. But let us look at the past and judge of the future.

Forty-three years before Christ, a comet appeared which could be seen at noon-day, by the naked eye. This was just after the death of Cæsar; and by the Romans was believed to be his metamorphosed soul, armed with fire and vengeance. It appeared again in 1106, resembling the sun in brightness, but having an immense, long, and fiery tail—a singular appendage to an immortal soul—but perhaps it represented the long continuance of the divided state of the Roman Empire.

The number of comets seen since the commencement of the Christian era, is 700; their whole number is immense. According to M. Arago, there are 3,529,470. Of 97 whose elements have been calculated, 30 passed between the sun and the orbit of Mercury: 33 between Mercury and Venus; 21 between Venus and the earth; 15 between Ceres and Jupiter. The comet 1680 had a tail long enough to reach from the earth to the sun, ninety-six millions of miles. The diameter of the comet of 1811 was 2,617 miles, about the size of the moon; but the diameter of its envelope was 50,617 miles, making the whole mass of the comet 224 times larger than this earth, besides, it had a tail one hundred millions of miles in length. It crossed the track of the earth on the 29th of Oct., 52,000,000 of miles ahead of the earth. This comet was supposed to be the precursor of the war between Great Britain and the U. States, which was declared the next Spring. This comet moved, in its perihelion, (the point nearest the sun,) with a velocity 1500 times greater than a ball bursting from the mouth of a cannon.

According to Dr. Whirton's theory, a comet is the awful prison-house of the damned, in which, in its aphelion, (the point furthest from the sun,) it freezes the immortal soul with a degree of cold sufficient to congeal alcohol, or ether; and then in its perihelion, it heats them up 2000 times hotter than red hot iron. This is quite an improvement on the orthodox hell; for, between the extreme freesing and heating, there is comfortable thawing out and mild temperature, and another between the extreme heating and freesing, in cooling off. Such theories are ingenious, but they belong to the chimeras of the immortality of the soul.

Now the almost universal fear is, that one of these prison-houses, or wandering hells, will come in collision with the earth, and sweep with the besom of destruction the whole human race.

But science has not been asleep on this subject. The French government called the attention of her ablest mathematicians to the solution of this problem; that is, to determine mathematically how many chances the earth is exposed to a collision with a comet. After mature deliberation they reported as follows: "We have found that of 281,000,000 of chances, there is only one unfavorable,—there exists but one which can produce a collision between the two bodies." But they were not sure of the one; they only saw a possibility in the one instance. But a possibility is quite sufficient to give the fidgets to the timorous. But in case of actual collision, the result depends entirely on the nature and composition of the comet. Of this we know but little more than that they are highly attenuated bodies, so much so, that in case of actual collision, the earth would not be as much affected as a rifle ball shot through a soap-bubble; indeed, such cases have actually occurred. The comet of 1843 had an immense long tail, 90 degrees in length. I was then Recitation lecturer in a High school in Pennsylvania, and demonstrated to the class that the earth passed through the tail of the comet. And recently, I see it confirmed, by observations made, at the time in Europe. Also, in two or three other instances, in which comets have come in contact with the earth and left cometary matter in the upper regions of the atmosphere, which resembled nebulous clouds and gave a phosphorescent light.

But of all the comets ever seen, that of 1456 spread the widest terror, and produced the greatest alarm. The belief was very general among all classes, that the comet would destroy the earth, and that the Day of Judgment was at hand! At the time of its appearance, the Turks extended their victorious arms across the Hellespont, and seemed destined to overrun all Europe. This tended to increase the general terror. The Romish Church held at this time unbounded sway over the lives, and fortunes, and consciences of men. To prepare the world for its expected doom, Pope Calixtus III. ordered the Ave-Mary to be repeated three times a day, instead of two; and that the church bells should be rung at noon, which is the origin of the practice so common in Christian churches. To the Ave-Mary, the prayer was added,—"Lord, save us from the Devil, the Turk, and the Comet;" and once a day these obnoxious personages suffered a regular excommunication. The churches and convents were crowded for the confession of sin, and treasures untold were poured into the Apostolic chamber. But the comet, after suffering some months of daily cursing and excommunication, began to show signs of retreat, and soon disappeared from those eyes in which it found no favor. Joy and tranquility soon returned to the faithful subjects of the pope, but not so their money and lands. The people, however, became satisfied that their lives, and the safety of the world had been cheaply purchased. The pope, who had achieved so signal a victory over the monster of the sky, had checked the progress of the Turk, and kept, for a time, his Satanic majesty at a safe distance; while the church of Rome, retaining her unbounded wealth, was enabled to continue that influence over her followers, which she still retains.

The comet of 1680 would have been still more alarming had not science robbed it of its terrors, and history pointed out the signal failure of its predecessor. This comet was of the largest size, and had a tail 96 millions of miles in length. At its greatest distance, it is 13,000 millions of miles from the sun, and at its nearest, only about 130,000 from its surface. When nearest to the sun it flies at the rate of a million miles an hour, and the sun, as seen from it, appears 27,000 times larger than it appears to us; consequently, it is then exposed to a heat 27,000 times greater than the solar heat of the earth. This is several thousand times hotter than red hot iron. This is on the supposition that the sun emits heat as a fire; and from the fact that the intensity of the heat is inversely as the square of the distance. By this rule, a body whose distance is 1 from a heated body, receives one degree of heat; but if the distance be 2, the degree of heat is two multiplied by two, which is four times less than when the distance is 1, and if the distance be 3, the degree of heat is nine times less, &c. But as the comet of 1680 underwent no change when nearest the sun, it proves the comet had not density enough to receive and retain heat, or else there is no heat in the sun; the latter is the more probable. Yet comets are very rare, or highly attenuated bodies. This also appears from the fact that they exert no visible attraction of the planets, while they themselves are wonderfully attracted.

The remarkable comet of 1770 got entangled among the satellites of Jupiter, and thrown out of its orbit by the attraction of the planet and satellites, and has not been heard of since. It is said that a comet, in 1854 eclipsed the moon; it must have been very near the earth, yet produced no visible effect on the motions of the earth or moon. It must have been a very light body.

With regard to the comet of the present year, 1857, there is no cause of alarm. It is not coming as near the earth as others which have gone before it. And even if it should strike the earth, it will do no more than others have done, and that is, to leave the fact to be ascertained by accurate mathematical calculation, and to be published to the world after the fright is all over.

We close by a few general remarks. A few comets take their names from the astronomers who have determined the elements of their orbits, and calculated their periodical return. The famous comet of 1456, of which we have spoken, is now called "Halley's comet." It appeared again in the years 1531, 1607, 1682, 1758, 1835, and is now on its way again to our neighborhood; but it will not be seen until the next century, the time of its revolution being about 75 1-2 years. The comet of 1818 is called Eucke's comet. Its periodic return is 3 years, 4 months. The comet of 1772 turned out to be Biela's comet. It was not, however, determined until its return in 1826. Its revolution is about 6 years, 8 months. This is the comet which crosses the earth's orbit, and the one which was to come in collision with the earth and blot it out of the solar system. But we have shown that such an event is not possible. Besides, we have the evidence of Divine revelation that such is not to be the fate of the world. But in a renewed state it will exist forever, and be the happy abode of the righteous. That Being who made the machinery of the universe, has so made it that the action of one part will not prevent the action of another part, but all parts act in harmony with themselves.

Z. Campbell.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JUNE 10, 1856.

Our visit to Connecticut, though short, was a very pleasant one. We left the "City of Notions" on R. R. train at half past 1 o'clock, Thursday, May 28th, in company with Mrs. G——, and passed hastily through beautiful fields clothed in nature's most lovely dress, perfumed with the sweet odor of smiling flowers, while the merry songs of the happy birds of the wild wood cheered us on our way. Those, who spend their days among brick and stone walls 'mid the rumbling and clattering confusion of the crowded city, can form but a faint idea of the delightful scenery presented in the country at this season of the year. Every blade of grass, tree, shrub, or flower seemed laughing with joy, at the return of balmy Spring, and to be echoing the warbling notes of praise chanted by nature's harmless songsters. We felt like adopting the language of David when he called upon "mountains, and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars; beasts and all cattle; creeping things and flying fowl; kings of the earth and all people; princes and all judges of the earth; both young men and maidens; old men and children: let them praise the name of the Lord."

When we had rode a hundred miles, through varied and delightful landscape scenery, we arrived in Springfield, where we received an affectionate greeting from Bro. Mathewson, who informed us of the death of his sister Ann, in So. Coventry, Ct., expressing a wish that the writer should attend the funeral. We were also met by Bro. Ladd and others with that warm affection which ever characterizes the true christian. We assembled with a good congregation for the worship of God, in Central Hall, a pleasant and eligible situation on Maine Street, where we rejoiced together in the blessed hope of the gospel. The church in Springfield, enjoying the faithful labors of Bro. Ladd, are in a healthy condition, and resolved to endure to the end. We were refreshed while beholding their union and love, without which, there can be no genuine prosperity in any church.

Friday morning we went to Hartford on the cars, and then in company with Bro. M., in a private conveyance, we wound our way over hills and vales, enjoying again the delightsome scenery of verdant Spring meadows and the sweet fragrance of orchard bloom, to the quiet home in So. Coventry, Ct., where the sister of Bro. M. lay peacefully asleep in Jesus. It may be recollected that some thirteen years since, this same sister had a very singular experience after ten years sickness, when she was thought to be dead, but afterwards revived and lived forty days on nothing but a little milk and water sweetened, and frequently, for three or four days at a time, took nothing but a little water. During these forty days, her physician stated that she was free from disease, and those who visited her found her mind in the calmest state of christian repose. We had the pleasure of seeing her in this state, and felt conscious that we were conversing with one highly favored and honored of the Lord. We have never seen another who seemed so well prepared for translation, and who basked so fully in the sunshine of the Lord's glorious presence. We passed from that peaceful dwelling, as from holy ground, thankful for the privilege enjoyed, and firmly resolved to consecrate ourselves anew to the service of the dear Savior.

Some two years since she was taken sick again, and after much suffering, borne with christian patience, she fell asleep in Jesus, May 26, aged 46 years. She spoke of her approaching death with the greatest composure, giving full directions relative to her funeral, as calmly as she would were she only going on a visit for a few days with her friends. She firmly believed she should be unconscious until the resurrection of the dead, at the coming of the Lord, when she would be made incorruptible and immortal. She expected to sleep but a little while. We endeavored to comfort the mourners with the blessed hope that our sister in Christ will "live again;" and to convince the neighbors that the only hope of a future existence, if we die, centers in the resurrection of the dead. We found the afflicted mother, who will be 86 years of age the 15th of June, enjoying the sweet comfort afforded by the christian religion, and trusting in the Lord with childlike confidence. She expects to sleep soon in the grave, but has no fears but that she shall have part in the first resurrection and live forever in the kingdom of God. She has one daughter with her, whose health is quite poor, but she is a follower of Christ, and loves his appearing. We left the sorrow stricken family with an assurance that we should soon meet where we shall die no more. We wound our way back to Hartford, and thence to Winsted, where we met with a most hearty welcome and rested for the night.

[Concluded next week.]

Isaac Jackson, a Jew peddlar, of Hartford, Conn., was murdered in Hampden County, Mass., one day last week, by Charles E. Jones. Jackson was driving in a common peddlar's wagon when he was met by Jones in an obscure part of the road and shot dead. The object of Jones was plunder.

Jones is a hardened villain, and it was not long since that he finished a term of four years imprisonment in the Connecticut State prison, for theft. He was for a time an Episcopal clergyman, and, if we remember correctly, was officiating in Glastenbury about the time of his arrest for theft, four or five years since. The daily press have conveyed the idea that Jones was an Advent preacher, which is totally incorrect. He was never recognized as such by the Adventists.

The efforts to make it appear that he is an Advent preacher shows an ignorance on the part of some of the editors of the newspaper press which is wholly inexcusable in a public journalist.

Plain Speaking.—The Earl of Oxford, in reply to the application of the Secretary of the Norwich (England) Bible Society, that he would preside at their late annual meeting, wrote as follows:—

"Sir—I am surprised and annoyed at the contents of your letter; surprised, because my well known character should have exempted me from such an application—and annoyed, because it obliges me to have this communication with you. I have long been addicted to the gaming table, I have lately taken to the turf, I fear I frequently blaspheme, and I have never distributed religious tracts. All this was well known to you and to your society; notwithstanding which you think me a fit person for your President. May your hypocrisy be forgiven, but I would rather live in the land of sinners, than with such saints. I am, &c. Oxford.

Bro. Grant:—I cut the above from the Newburyport Daily Herald. Is not that a fair illustration of the times in which we live? The Church has become so corrupt and hypocritical that the very Devil cannot forbear to rebuke it! The above is only a small specimen of a great deal that exists. If a new chapel is built, an invitation must be sent to great Mr. Blank and Co. to come and help dedicate it to God (?) If a Missionary Society is formed, great Mr. Muchormore & Co. must be invited to become honorable, perhaps leading members of that society. If a Bible Society is formed, great Mr. Prominent & Co. must, as in the case above, be invited to lead off —be President! No matter about the piety, give us the money and the greatness! Why did not Jesus Christ invite old Herod to become a leading man among the apostles? How much better He and they would have got along!

Why had not Paul thought of entreating old Nero to become President of the Apostolic board? How much trouble he might have saved himself and others! and how much more popular the Gospel would have been in Rome! O dear! My soul sickens at the manifestation of the times. O, my dear Redeemer, let me find a place at thy blessed feet in the very dust of the earth, and there, with the humble few, who serve thee "in spirit and in truth," pass the remnant of my mortal days in adoring thee and despising the show, and pomp, and vanity of mankind. Edwin Burnham.

Exeter.—Preaching Brethren are invited to give appointments for Exeter N. H., as they may have opportunity. Strangers will please call on N Churchill, or Charles Haley. Let your appointments be given for the Advent Chapel as there are two Advent meetings held in Exeter. I mention this to avoid confusion in publishing appointments.

For the Brethren— A. Ross.

The following highly interesting and truthful article was recently published in the Newburyport Herald, and we would commend it to the perusal of our readers.

"THE SCRIPTURES AND THE SCIENCE OF GEOLOGY.

"Infidelity has given a severe blow to the onward progress of the science of Geology, in attempting to bring mistaken chimerical ideas of supposed evidences and testimonies in the volume of nature, as seen in the structure of the material world, to contradict the Mosaic account of the creation.

"The writers on this subject, who undertake to deny the Scripture record, overlook that which is the basis of everything existing in the visible world.

"The creation of our earth is not a question of time. The Almighty, the Infinite, the Adorable Jehovah, who 'in the beginning created the heaven and the earth,' could accomplish the great work in a single moment, in the twinkling of an eye, as well as in ten thousand times ten thousand years. It is not a question of time, but of power; and the earth is in existence, evidencing the execution of that power.

"I have spent years of my active life in Geological researches, not in books, but in studying the volume of nature as written in the earth itself, in its rocks and sands, in its atmosphere, and in the waters that are upon and that rise above its surface; and I have made these researches with the Bible in my hand and in my mind. They each testify of the other, and the testimony of this union is truth in all its supremacy, in all its harmony.

"The opposers of the truth of Scripture history attempt to pervert the plain language of the Bible, and insist that a day, as it existed at the time of the creative epoch, was another measure of time from that now used. There is no room for any argument for the rule of construction, for the measure is given in the very same book, and from the very same pen which made the record, in obedience to the word of Him whose word is power, infinite and unlimited.

"A day of the series of days which embraced the creative epoch, is the same measure of time as a day at the time Noah entered the ark, and as the day of that period when God delivered the commandments to Moses on Mount Sinai. The day was a part of a week, a part of a month, and the month a part of a year—the Bible says this.

"Geologists pretend to find in the progressive wear of the waters of Niagara, in forming its gigantic cataract, evidence that the falls have been ten thousand years in reaching from Lake Ontario to their present locality. I have been frequently at the falls, and made both minute and extensive geological researches there, and in all the country round about. I do not think that the falls are much if any over one thousand years old. In 1855 the volcano of Mauna Loa, in the short space of seventy days, sent out a river of molten lava seventy miles in length, five miles in breadth, and of unmeasured depth—twice the length of Niagara river and its mighty cataract, twenty times its width, and many times its depth, and all in ten weeks.

"Geologists talk about the crusts, the strata of the earth, and say these give evidence of slow and gradual formation. The crystals of Selenite formed in the Lockpit salt well, in pumping, resulted from the agitation of and in the commingling of two veins of water, and although the formation, or crystalization was instantaneous, still the stratification was complete, and the layers or strata vast in number. Had we not seen the instant formation we might have counted the strata by ages.

"In our memoranda of earthquake phenomena, we have two recent cases in which during the earthquake shock there came from the earth, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, a substance resembling human hair—on being burnt it had the same crisp and the same smell as human hair—and it had the same appearance. This hair came out of the ground in the highways, in the fields, in the market places, in fact everywhere—it was from six to ten inches long, and erect and straight, and had its roots in the ground, the same as the human hair has on the head. It disappeared in three days—this was a shadowing forth of the resurrection.

"I have materials on this subject before me, and gathered in my extensive researches sufficient to carry my pen through an entire ream of paper without stopping; but brevity is needed, that the subject matter presented may not crowd the storehouse of the reading mind.

E. Meriam.

"Brooklyn Heights, Jan. 10, 1857."

A Case for Antagonists.

"A wealthy merchant died: his body was dissected;
No symptoms of disease was anywhere detected,
Until they reached the heart,—which, to find, they were unable,
But in the place they found—a Compound Interest Table."

Just look out, will you, my friend, and see that you don't die of such a dreadful disease as that. What a death to die! The symptoms are alarming—lying awake nights, counting up interest; studying days upon per centum; charging the highest rates; shaving notes; grinding the face of the poor; heaping up treasures for the last days,—all these are among the symptoms of this dire disease. Look out for it. The end is death. H. L. H.

An old Soldier of 'Forty-three.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me to say a few words to my brethren and sisters in the Lord. I believe at the time appointed the end will be, and at the ending of the twenty-three hundred days, which it appears to me, will end in 1857. Now, we, as a people, believe in a literal fulfillment of the word of God, and that Christ will literally come again to the earth. Then may we not look for a literal battle to be fought? when the "beast" and the "kings of the earth," and "their armies" shall be gathered together to make war against Him that sat on the horse, and against his army, Rev. 19 : 19. This, I think, will take place when those ten kings who receive power one hour with the "beast," shall make war with the Lamb. Rev. 17 : 12–14.

Now, if this be prophetical time, it gives fifteen days for the gathering of the army and fighting the battle, when the "beast" and the "false prophet" shall be taken and cast alive into the lake burning with fire and brimstone. This will be in accordance with Christ's words in Math. 13 : 30. "But ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." Thass. 2 : 4. L. Tuttle.

Alabama, N. Y., May 6th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Twenty Sayings.

1. Goodness delights in doing good.
2. Love generally wins love.
3. Anger creates sorrow.
4. Malice kicks and goads its author.
5. Calling fools fools does not make them wise.
6. Defering matters that should be done now does not make the doing of them more easy.
7. It is easier to turn good to an evil purpose than to turn evil to a good purpose.
8. When God calls us into danger, it is the way of safety to go in the way of danger.
9. Meek Heart and Big Head never travel together!
10. The way to make others speak evil of you is to speak evil of them.
11. Express a good opinion of others, and they will be likely to cultivate a good opinion of you.
12. He that keeps his temper keeps hold of his most powerful weapon.
13. When a man gets into a passion with his enemy he opens the gate of his own castle to his arms.
14. Keep cool, and you may cool off your enemy.
15. Whoso wastes his property, treats the blessings of God with contempt.
16. The Bible never condemns consistent moderation, but haste is much condemned.
17. Haste is the mother of confusion and waste.
18. If you wish community to bless you, be a blessing to community.
19. Right faith and right principles create right actions.
20. If we love God, all that is God's will be lovely to us.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Sweet Home.

It is evening. The sun has gone down to his rest and pulled the sable curtain of night over the crimson glory of the western sky. The labor of the day is over, and, while the silvery light from the beautiful orb that God made to rule the night is dispensing in bright beams upon the streets, and roofs, and spires, the distant church chime is pealing forth the air of "Sweet Home."

"Sweet Home!" The music of those words call up many recollections, and as if by magic I see the loved circle of happy faces far away, and feel the sympathy of true hearts. But there is no permanent home in this world. We may enjoy for a season its influences, but the busy duties of life call us out into the world, and we have to sojourn as a stranger. But there will be a home where pleasant associations are never broken—where death cannot enter to sunder kindred ties—where parting can never come. That home is Paradise!

Here joy is fleeting, and sorrow is ever ready to fall upon us, and disappointments cluster thickly around us, but in that home here will be naught but unalloyed happiness.

O my soul, why long for the approbation of the giddy multitude—why cling to the fleeting pleasures of this earth—why linger in the paths of the worldling, while angels beckon thee, and Heaven urges thee, to seek the road which leads to the happy home in tParadise restored—the eternal "Sweet Home?" J.

From Bro. N. F. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—Through the tender mercy of God, I have this opportunity of opening my mind in defence of this blessed religion —the Advent hope. I have been taught from my youth up that we have an immortal soul to save, but by careful study of the scriptures I find it is all false. See 2 Tim. 6 : 16. Also, I was taught that when our bodies die our souls are wafted immediately to God.

I am thankful to God that he has in these last days enlightened my mind upon gospel truth, and to-day I esteem it a great privilege to be classed with the poor despised Adventists. The grave has lost its former terror. I am daily looking for that glorious appearing of our Savior, when we shall be crowned with immortality and eternal life.

I thank God there are a few of his true children in Shelburn Falls, who are willing to be called fools for Christ's sake. I sigh and cry, Jesus, come and reign upon thy throne. I am expecting to see Jesus soon, and be crowned with eternal life.

Your brother in Christ,

N. F. Smith.

From Bro. C. S. Barnes.

Bro. Grant:—I would like to speak a few words to the brethren and sisters, through the Crisis, who love the appearing of our Lord and Savior, and who know what the hidden life is which God imparts to his acceptable people. I believe it may flourish in solitudes and deserts; far from the societies of men and the din of cities. From the cave of the hermit, from the cell of the solitary recluse, the fervent prayer has often arisen, which has been acceptable in the sight of God. But it would be a strange and fatal misconception that religion, even in its most pure and triumphant exaltations, can flourish nowhere else. The home of holiness is in the heart, irrespective of outward situations and alliances; and therefore we may expect to find it, if there are hearts adapted to its reception and growth, in the haunts of business as well as in the silence of retirement; in the palaces of Rome, as well as in the deserts of the Thebais. It is a fatal mistake to suppose that we cannot be holy except on the condition of a situation and circumstances in life such as shall suit ourselves. It is one of the first principles of holiness to leave our times and our places, our going out and our coming in, our wasted and our goodly heritage entirely with the Lord. Here, O Lord, hast thou placed us, and we will glorify thee here.

Yours in hope of soon seeing Jesus,

Cyrus S. Barnes.

From Sr. C. E. Cole.

Bro. Grant:—Only a few weeks have elapsed since I became a reader of your valuable paper. To me it has been very beneficial. I feel as if it ought to be in the possession of every individual. To the flock scattered abroad, and owned by the meek and lowly Jesus, the chief Shepherd. I would say, it is but a short time since I embraced the way, the truth, and the life. But now your faith is my faith, your hope is my hope, your Lord is my Lord, and your God is my God.

When I meditate on the precious and glorious promises we have to encourage us in whatsoever situation our lot be cast, to resist temptation, to be pure in heart, to possess the purity of the Holy Spirit, I am ready to exclaim, Oh! how can any one refrain from crying earnestly to the Lord, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

Oh! how pleasing the thought that this mortal is soon to put on immortality, and this vile body soon to be fashioned like unto his glorious body. Let us grow in grace and in the knowledge and love of the truth. "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." "Let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for a helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him."

Yours in the hope of obtaining eternal life, Clarissa E. Cole.

Calhoun Co. Mich., May 11th, 1857.

From Bro. J. Pulsifer.

Bro. Grant:—I love the Crisis. I love it for the good spirit it exhibits. I love it because it advocates the truths of the Bible, and I pray the Lord it may continue to breathe the Spirit of Jesus, and that its columns may be filled, from week to week, with the blessed truths of the Bible, which are about to be realized in bringing the saints all home to the kingdom of God, and the eternal destruction of the Devil and all his host. This is my hope, and, blessed be God, it makes me not ashamed, for it is the "power of God unto Salvation to every one that believeth." It is a great consolation to know that we have got the faith of Abraham, that we are heirs with him to the same promise; and that we have not followed cunningly devised fables; though we have not yet been eye witnesses of his majesty and glory, as Peter was, yet, in a little while we shall behold him in all his glory and be made like him, for we shall see him as he is.

"Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." Here is the importance of obtaining this hope; it has a purifying effect. It is just what the Church needs to prepare her for translation. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The Apostle says,—"Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the Spirit," &c. I do thank God for this blessed hope; it is truly "like an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast, and entereth in to that within the veil," where where Jesus has gone. It holds the pilgrim unmoved amid all the forms and ceremonies, traditions, and fables of this day.

Brn. and Srs., I mean to see the end of this race, though the way is narrow and the gate is straight, it will end in eternal life. Our privileges here are limited. We have but little preaching, gospel preaching, I mean, we have plenty of fable preachers all around us; Bro. Pratt was here but a short time since. He preached the word, and planted a brother in the likeness of Christ's death, and sent him on his way rejoicing. There are a few children here scattered among the mountains that love the truth. A Bro. White, from Conn., has moved into the Village of Shelburne Falls, for which I thank God. His heart and soul are in the work, but he is in a wicked place. May God help him to be faithful. A few of us meet at his house, occasionally, to exhort one another and pray one for another, and the good Lord meets with us, and comforts our hearts with the assurance that if we overcome we shall sit down with him in his throne even as he has overcome and has set down with his Father in his throne.

We rejoice to know that we are in the fulfillment of the last fragments of prophecy; that the last scenes of this world are now being enacted, and that Jesus is very soon coming to raise the dead, to give immortality and eternal life to all his children. Children of God, suffer on a little longer, bear the reproach a few days more, and it will all end in eternal glory. Amen. Yours in hope,

Joseph Pulsifer.

"If a man die, shall he live again?"—Once a year have the daises answered it, and "Spring's little infant," the violet, has once a year given its fragrant testimony, and every day has the morning testified, and yet the world is murmuring still, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Choice Selections.

Husbands and Wives.

What a beautiful place is a home
Where the husband and wife agree,
Where the children are happy and glad,
And skip about blithsome and free!

Husbands, are you gentle, kind, attentive, affectionate to your wives at all times, especially in the hour of trial or affliction? A prudent, sensible, God-fearing wife, always appreciates the kindness of her husband, and returns into his bosom seven fold.

Would you hear a sweet and pleasing echo, speak sweetly and pleasantly yourself.

Be gentle and loving to thy wife.

Be gentle! for you little know
How many trials rise,
Although to thee they may be small,
To her of giant size.

Be gentle! weary hours of pain
'Tis woman's lot to bear;
Then yield her what support thou canst,
And all her sorrows share.

—Golden Rule.

A Good Man's Wish.—I would rather, when I am laid in the grave, that some one in his manhood should stand over me and say, "There lies one who was a real friend to me, and privately warned me of the dangers of the young; no one knew it, but he aided me in the time of need. I owe what I am to him." Or would rather have some widow, with choking utterance, telling her children: "There is your friend and mine. He visited me in my affliction, and found you, my son, an employer, and you, my daughter, a happy home in a virtuous family." I would rather that such persons should stand at my grave, than to have erected over it the most beautiful sculptored monument of Parian or Italian marble. The heart's broken utterance of reflections of past kindness, and the tears of grateful memory shed upon the grave, are more valuable in my estimation, than the most costly cenotaph ever read.—Dr. Sharp.

Worldliness of Good Men.—Whence comes all this pitiful worldliness among so-called "good men?" Whence among them those many "innocent weaknesses," those nice shrinking evasions when God requires a new burnt-offering on the altar of truth. Because they have made their virtue for themselves, that like a convenient and pleasant pillow they may shift it now to this side, now to that, to prop their earthly slumbers. Because they have planted a shady park in the desert at the foot of Sinai, which conceals the mountain from their sight, while they wander up and down through blooming paths, satisfied if they do not stray so far that their companions in the park can no longer recognize them as their fellows. Verily this generation requireth the burning mirror of the law, to consume to ashes the tares which they call good seed, but which cannot even hide the naked soil.—The Hallig.

Singular Theology.—A preacher said, that among the errors of the times, he often meets with opinions and sentiments about religion, and which when thrown together would compose the following creed: "If you seek religion you'll never find it; when you get it you'll never know it; if you know it you hav'nt got it; if you've got it, you can never lose it; and if you lose it you never had it."

Increase of the Jews.—In 1850 a man might count upon his fingers all the synagogues, in the land—now there are at least a quarter of a million of Jews, from eighty to ninety synagogues, and a multitude of smaller communities where a nucleus exists which will soon grow into a synagogue. The city of New York alone has twenty synagogues and thirty thousand Jews—about one twentieth part of the population being such. There are synagogues in all the chief cities of the sea board; two in Boston, five in Philadelphia, five in Baltimore, three in New Orleans, two in Charleston, and four in Cincinnati.

Use of Solitude.—Solitude is a great cherisher of faith. Were we more alone to look back upon ourselves, and to look into ourselves—not to find any good, but to observe more of the amazing blindness of heart, unbelief, selfishness, and idolatry, which so benumb our spiritual feelings; were we to be more alone for these purposes, we should enjoy more of the presence of God.—Exchange.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

IF I GO AWAY I WILL COME AGAIN.

While in this world we must suffer grief,
And sorrows cross our way;
While death, the great and dreaded foe,
Lay's low the form of clay.
But still remains the promise sure,
Death shall itself be slain,
By our Redeemer, Lord, and King,
When He shall come again.

How sweet the words fall on the ear,
Of those who wait their Lord;
His words once spoken never fail,
Our King shall be adored.
And there's a rest, an endless rest,
For His dear saints remain;
Hark! hear Him;—"If I go away,
I will return again"

Though Satan in full power and might,
Seems growing stronger now,
It but bespeaks that Jesus soon
Will crown the spotless brow.
Our hearts grow sick while gazing on
Earth's deeds of crime and shame;
But rise, look up, for lo! He says,
"I go, but come again."

Oh blessed hope! Oh glowing thought!
Oh cheering words to hear!
It bears us up through every storm,
To know our Lord is near.
Then let us watch, exhort, and pray,
And sound the thrilling strain,—
Our conquering King, our Life, our Lord,
He comes! He comes again!

H. E. G.

May 30th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

EFFECTS OF THE SPIRIT.

Blest spirit! thy empire is love,
Thy presence the presence of rest;
And the angels look down from above,
With delight from the courts of the blest.
The world, with its frowns and its charms,
No longer allures me from thee;
Dear Jesus, I fly to thy arms,
In thy arms I will ever be free.

No longer an alien I pine,
No longer I stray from my love;
My way shall be guided by Thine,
From realms ever blissful above.
I will roam in the vale of delight,
Where streamlets of happiness flow;
And thy volume shall be as a light
To my path, as I travel below.

I will muse on the charms of thy grace,
And admire all the works of thy hands;
Dear Jesus, a smile from thy face
Surpasses the glory of lands.
I will dwell by the fount of thy love,
And wash all my sorrows away;
'Till the beams of the day-star above
Shall usher in Heaven's bright day.

When the saints shall unite with a throng,
That inherits the land of the blest;
And the rescued will swell the glad song—
We've arrived at the sweet land of rest.
All sorrow shall vanish away,
And the tear shall no longer be known;
All nations shall yield to His sway,
And the will of the Lord shall be done.

M. R. Phetteplace.

Items.

—Haytian papers are received to May 9th. As usual, the people seem to be dividing their time between fetes and pompous ceremonials. On the 1st of May was celebrated the Fete of Agriculture, at which speeches were made by high dignitaries, solemn services held in the churches, and the agriculturists who were fortunate enough to gain prizes, were publicly crowned, amidst salvos of artillery.

—In Charleston, S. C., a Mrs. Braggiotti, having been separated from her husband in consequence of the latter preferring Catharine Welser, repaired early one morning to Mrs. Welser's rooms, and finding Mr. Braggiotti present, stabbed the mistress. At the trial for murder she made no defence, and the jury rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty."

—Henry O'Reilly, of telegraphic fame, offers to the United States government to build at his own expense, a telegraphic line to the Pacific, if military protection against Indians be afforded.

—A paper published at Olympia, Washington Territory, has an account of a tremendous fight between a young Scotchman named Stockend and a panther, in which the Scotchman kicked the panther to death in fifteen minutes.

—One of Adams' power presses, direct from Boston, was received at Honolulu, S. I., about the last of March, and was immediately put in operation by the proprietors of the Commercial Advertiser. This must have been an astonishing novelty to the natives.

—A German, residing in Schodack, N. Y., was taken with the measles. He suffered from the disease several days, and then fell into a deep sleep. He remained in this condition more than two days, all efforts to awaken him proving ineffectual, and finally died, without returning to consciousness.

—The Leavenworth (Kansas) Times says that the Sheriff of that county has omitted from the registry at least one hundred free State voters of Leavenworth alone, and that it has before it the names of one hundred free State men of the county that have been omitted.

—James Montrose, a shoemaker of Rome, Ohio, was killed by George F. Davidson, in an affray that grew out of a charge of illicit intercourse between the murderer and the wife of his victim.

—The New York Tribune says that sixteen murders have been committed in that city since the first of April.

—The Quebec Mercury says that an alarming disease prevails among the cattle in the parishes of La Beauce, on the south side of the St. Lawrence, the origin of which cannot be traced. Upwards of fifteen hundred animals chiefly cows, have perished.

Foreign News.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Halifax, June 2.

The steamer America, from Liverpool May 22, arrived at this port at 11 this A. M.

The London Gazette contains an order in Council, announcing the contract of marriage between the Princess Royal and Prince Frederick William of Prussia.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer produced a sensation in the House of Commons, by proposing that the Princess Royal should have a marriage portion of £40,000, and an allowance of £8000 a year. After some discussion the proposition was agreed to.

The growing grain crops in France are magnificent, and wheat and flour were declining in nearly all the French markets

The King of Bavaria had reached Fontainebleau and was received by the Emperor.

A dispatch received at Paris, from Spain, says there is every probability of a pacific adjustment of differences between Spain and Mexico.

Disturbances originating in the dearness of food, have taken place in the various districts of Spain, and, in consequence, a royal decree has been issued, prolonging to the 31st December next the free importation of corn.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says it is reported in various quarters that the King of Bavaria, at present the guest of the Emperor Napoleon, is endeavoring to effect a reconciliation between the King of Naples and the Western powers. The King of Bavaria came direct from Naples to France.

The Government of the Netherlands has signified its intention to send a ship of observation to join the Anglo-French squadrons in the Chinese waters.

The list of the new Danish Ministry has given great satisfaction, and it is thought in Germany that the question of the Duchies will very soon be arranged

On occasion of his birthday, the Emperor of Russia issued a further amnesty in favor of political and other offenders.

The crops in Hungary, Moravia and Bohemia are looking remarkably well, but they are less flourishing in Upper Austria.

A letter from Vienna states that the Emperor of Austria will not confine his measures of clemency in favor of the Hungarians to the amnesty granted to political prisoners and refugees, but will also restore them their landed property, confiscated after the revolution.

Letters from Germany state that the Emperors of France and Russia are to meet this summer at Berlin.

The American Minister at the Porte left Constantinople on the 15th for the Principalities. It is pretended that his visit has a political object.

In the treaty concluded between Russia and Persia, the former renounces all claims to the money which Persia owes, and, in return, obtains two pieces of land, one on the Caspian, and the other in the eastern part of Persia. Both of them, for strategical reasons, are of the highest importance to Russia.

Russian circles in Paris maintain that the Shah of Persia has not and will not ratify the treaty of peace with England, as sent to him.

The British steamer Hornet has destroyed seventeen piratical junks on the China coast.

The two native regiments which had mutinied in India, had been disbanded without much trouble.

The Bodzars, a tribe of Beloochees, occupying the hills near Peschawar, 15,000 strong, had been reduced to submission. Loss on the British side, 60.

Domestic Summary.

Election Riots at Washington.—Washington was the scene of a disgraceful and bloody riot on Monday, June 1, the day of the City election. A gang of rowdies called the "Plug Uglies" arrived there from Baltimore in the morning, and by their interference in affairs caused a row. The citizens turned out with arms, and drove them from the polls for a time, but the "Plug Uglies" were soon joined by the "Rip Raps" and "Chunckers" of Washington, and a terrible attack was made on the anti-Know Nothing voters, and several persons on both sides were killed. The rioters got a cannon into their ranks but Lieut. Henderson, of the Marines, ordered a charge, and the piece was taken just as it was about to be fired. Shots were fired on both sides from guns and pistols, and ten or twelve were killed and many wounded. There was much excitement in the city for a day or two, but no more fighting.

From Mexico.—New Orleans, June 4.—We have dates from the city of Mexico of May 16th.

The election in Mexico was progressing, and the results, so far as known, were generally favorable to the re-election of President Comonfort.

Heavy rains had fallen, and the inhabitants were alarmed at the prospects of an inundation.

Late Mexican papers confirm the execution of Gen. Crabbe and 58 of his followers.

It was rumored in the city of Mexico that a terrible revenge was being taken in California, by murdering all the Mexicans found there.

Gov. Walker's Inaugural Address.—St. Louis, June 9.—Gov. Walker's inaugural is received. It is long, conciliatory and persuasive; it recognizes the territorial enactments; says that all Constitutional laws must be executed; urges all parties to participate in the election; believes the Convention will submit a Constitution to the people, and, in that case, does not think Congress will reject it. He earnestly impresses the necessity of removing slavery agitation from the elections, from the halls of Congress, and from the Presidential elections.

Fire in the Woods.—A very disastrous fire has been raging in the woods, in the vicinity of Brasher Falls, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.—"In one hour, forty-three buildings, and from $95,000 to $100,000 worth of property were reduced to ashes, and forty families made houseless and homeless, without food or clothing. Women who were washing in their yards were compelled to fly for their lives. A large number of mechanics and laborers were thrown out of employment by this sad catastrophe; about 300 men were employed about the Iron Works of Mr. Skinner, whose loss was nearly $80,000. In addition to the forge and work shop he had a large storehouse filled with finished work, which now presents the appearance of a huge mass of iron some ten feet high.

Riot in Wisconsin.—Chicago, June 6.—A serious riot occurred at Medina, Winnebago county, Wisconsin, on the 4th inst., between the contractors and the laborers on the Racine and Missouri Railroad. The citizens were required to arm themselves against the rioters, two of whom were killed and a number seriously injured. The Sheriff of Winnebago county had been sent for, and the excitement was intense.

Exciting News from Utah.—St. Louis, June 2.—The Leavenworth Herald of the 30th learns from a person who left Salt Lake on the 15th that great excitement existed among the Mormons, and many outrages were committed by them. Brigham Young was driving all the "Gentiles" away. Judge Stiles, the U. S. Marshal and the Surveyor General, with their families, together with a large number of emigrants, had already left, and others were hurrying away.

Secessions from the Mormons.—New York, June 5.—It appears that Judge Stiles, U. S. Marshal Dodson, Surveyor General Burr, of Utah, H. F. Harrell, Postmaster of Salt Lake City, and others, came with the last mail train to St. Louis. One thousand seceders from the Mormons will, it is said, come to the States, and about 1000 more will go to California.

Exciting Meeting at Dr. Cheever's Church.—N. York, June 5.—At Dr. Cheever's church, last night, a very exciting meeting was held. The report of the committee, appointed to propose amendments to the standing rules of the church, was, after a bitter debate, adopted. The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place, and the meeting had not adjourned at midnight. The report fully sustained Dr. Cheever. The Cheever list of officers was chosen by a large majority.

The Slavery Troubles in Ohio.—Cincinnati, June 2.—The habeas corpus, issued by U. S. Judge Leavitt, in the Mechanicsburg slave affair, has been served, and the prisoners, (the U. S. Deputy Marshal and his posse,) brought here for trial. The examination was commenced yesterday, but the case finally adjourned for a week, to allow of the production of affidavits.

Appointments.

Bro. E. Whitney appoints to preach at East Haverhill, Mass., Sunday, June 14th

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at Rye, N. H., on the fourth Sabbath in June.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach in Salem to the Union Street Church Sunday, June 14.

S. F. Rogers.

Providence permitting, I purpose to be at the Carmel conference. Ed.

If the Lord permit, I will meet the brethren at Scitico, in Enfield, Conn., Sunday, June 14th, to give the word of life.

R. E. Ladd.

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at

Manchester, N. H.,	Sunday, June 14th
Auburn, N. H.,	Sunday, June 21st
Lawrence, Mass.,	June 24th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Exeter, N. H.,	June 25th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Portsmouth, N. H.,	June 6th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Great Falls, N. H.,	Sunday, June 28th
Kennebunkport, or where Bro. Elisha Mitchell may appoint,	Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H.,	Sunday, July 12th

If any of these appointments come in collision with others already made, brethren must let me know immediately by letter, directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. Bishop.

Bro. W. S. Campbell appoints to preach in Rochester, N. Y., June 14th. Particulars next week.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at

Rye, N. H., third Sunday in June.

New Bedford, fourth Sunday in June, and first Sunday in July.

Providence permitting, I will meet the Brn. at

North Springfield,	June 10th
Wethersfield, near Bro. Fellows,	June 11th
Taftsville,	June 12th
Hartland, Dinsmore Hill,	June 13th and 14th.

I can stop at two or three places coming back, if desired and informed. I hope some one will meet me at the depots, for I am a stranger in that section. Description—tall, coarse and plain looking man.

Hiram Munger.

Will the Herald copy?

Bro. A. Fox will meet with the Brn. in Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Sunday, June 21st Cheshire St., Cheshire, Ct., Sunday, June 28th

Conference.

The Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Semi-Annual Conference stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, July 3d. A good representation is desired. Service at the chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

Bro. Grant:—Having consulted with many of the Brn. composing the different churches in this section, I find an interest, with many earnest requests, for a General Conference. We have therefore, after due deliberation, decided to hold a Conference at Carmel, Me., commencing June 10th, at 5 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We hope, pray, and believe that this means of grace will prove a savor of life unto life. We invite all, whosoever will, to come and partake with us; and shall expect as many of the household of faith as consistently can, to come in the name of the Lord, and such as can will feel it a privilege and duty, with open heart and hand, to help forward the cause of truth.

Those coming by railroad, will stop at Carmel Depot, near the village, where the meeting is held.

In behalf of the Brn.,

I. Damman.

L. L. Howard.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

E. H. Jones 119, N. B. Sleeper 119, J. C. Libby 91, S. Woodruff 117, N. Woodruff 111, W. Nichols 130, P. Waterman 130, W. F. Leathe 104, A. Moses 104, Julia A. E. Lloyd 118, R. H. Clark 118, S. Ingalls 117, S. B. Saxton 121, C. B. Boynton 129, Julia A. Barnes 109, J. Frederick 118,—$1 each.

A. P. Hyde 104, J. Gray 106, A. Boothby 106, 50 cents each.

For Books.—P. B. Morgan $5; T. Huntington, $1.18; Julia Dodge $1; A. P. Hyde, 50 cents.

Books Sent.—J. F. Champlin, A. P. Hyde.

To Correspondents.

Bro. P. B. Morgan—E. French has paid to No. 108. We credit Bro. Blackman $2, which pays to 108.

J. P. Babcock—Your paper has been sent to Apponaug, R. I.; we now send to Natic.

Louisa Kendall—We have transferred the sum to your account. It pays to 114.

Bro. Jones—There are none of Bro. Storr's cheap edition of the six sermons in market.

Married.

In Fairhaven, May 24th, by Elder S. S. Brewer, Bro. Edward T. Gladding, of Bristol, R. I., to Sr. Priscilla Demoranville, of Fairhaven, Mass.

In West Winsted, Ct., May 31st, by Miles Grant, Bro. Ira T. Neal to Sr. Eliza A. Cook.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State, and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; full bound in gilt, $1—pos. 9 cts.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I LONG TO GO HOME.

I long to go home, to that radiant clime,
Where tears never flow from the eye;
Where hearts grow warm in the bright sunshine,
'Neath the light of an Eden sky.
Where the mourner that grieved in this vale of tears,
And tremblingly hoped for this rest,
Will triumph at last over conflicts and fears,—
Forevermore saved with the blest.
Brothers and sisters, would you not love to roam,
Where unfading flowers will garnish the bowers,
In the glory-lit vallies of home?

I'm sighing to go where the frost and the snow,
Never blanches the pilgrim's cheek;
Where no little green mounds will chequer the ground,
O'er the graves where the loved ones sleep.
I am weeping here in the wilderness,
For the world grows cold and drear;
And the cross to my bosom I closely press,
But I have no treasure-shrine here.
Brothers and sisters press with me to that shore;
Our lips we'll lave in the life-giving wave,
And never shall we thirst any more.

The stars nightly shine in the clear azure sky,
And the moon hastes on her bright way;
I gaze on their beauty to weep and sigh,
For the dear ones are far away.
The sweet flowers bloom in my mountain home,
And the birds warble wild and free;
But the feet of the watchman seldom come,
Bringing glad tidings to me.
Brothers and sisters how gladly would I go,
To the banquet sweet, where the pilgrims meet,
And watchmen the silver trump blow.

But the bright Sabbath morning I long to hail,—
I would rest from this toil and strife;
I am weary of earth's long piteous wail,
And groan for immortal life.
Oh the healing leaves of the life-giving tree,
I'd twine round my aching brow;
And from earth's with'ring curse be evermore free,
And never more whisper—Adieu.
Brothers and sisters haste with me to that land,
For earth grows old, like a tale that is told,—
Press for home, weary pilgrim band.

V. N. CUDWORTH.

Zoar, Mass.

I'M A PILGRIM.

I'm a pilgrim here below,
Wandering alone;
I must shun the paths of woe,
I must go on.
There's a land of pure delight,
Where all is fair;
There's no sorrow, woe, or night,—
Let me be there.

I'm a pilgrim, and I go
To see the Lord;
He will come again below,—
Thus saith His Word.
Then I'll see His lovely form,
And like Him be;
Pilgrim then no more I'll roam,—
My home I'll see.

G. L. TEEPLE.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The World's Enmity to the Church.

A DISCOURSE FOUNDED ON 1 JOHN 3: 13.

BY WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

[Concluded.]

"Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you."

Again, we cannot help but repeat, that, when the world is spoken of in the sense of our text, it only includes that class or those classes of individuals previously named, extending no further than unto all who make no pretensions to the christian religion; no, for there are many who claim to be the true "worshipers of God" and within the pale of the church of Christ, who are bitter "enemies of the cross," who cherish the most deadly hatred towards God's people, from whom the true church has ever received the most cruel and inhuman treatment. This may seem strange, but it is no less true, as past history doth abundantly affirm.

Look, for example, at the treatment of Cain, the first worshiper, toward his brother Abel, in whom was embodied the holy and righteous principle of the church. Here we see the spirit of the true and false church in their infancy—the first and early types of the same. One presents an offering unto the Lord, presumptiously looking for its acceptance upon its own merits; the other offers with faith, having respect to a coming Messiah, which renders it a commendable sacrifice and well pleasing to God. See the disposition which was made of the beloved patriarch Joseph, by his pious (?) brethren. Mark the conduct of Saul, the anointed (?) toward the holy David, pursuing him as he did with unmitigated hatred from place to place. And thus it will be seen the holy prophets were ever persecuted in all their arduous labors, and subjected to the most painful severities from the hands of a hypocritical multitude.

What class formed the most inveterate enemies of our beloved Redeemer? Who met him on every turn, constantly bringing false charges against him, impugning his motives, and endeavoring "to catch him in his words," that they might have wherewith to bring him before the Sanhedrim and have him condemned? And who was it that had him at last formally condemned and really put to death? Was it not those who "make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, and love the uppermost rooms at (what is called religious) feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, (modern conferences and synods,) and greetings in the markets, (public thoroughfares,) and to be called of men Rabbi, Rabbi, . . . "Doctors of Divinity,) and for a pretence make long prayers?" Was it not those who stood the highest in the estimation of the so called religious Anniversaries and Conventions? Who made the most dazzling profession of religion, and claimed to be God's favorites, and wholly devoted to his service, the high priest himself being the most prominent actor in the scene? From whence did the apostles meet with the most deadly opposition? and by whom were they persecuted, scourged and cruelly tortured, stoned, sawn asunder, and put to death in various ways? Was it by the really barbarous and uncivilized nations? No, verily; but from those who pretended to be very pious and to possess a most vehement zeal for God, such "who hold the truth in unrighteousness, handling the word of God deceitfully." The murderous and inhuman treatment alluded to in the eleventh chapter of the Hebrews, as experienced by the church in the earlier ages, no doubt emanated from this deceptive and wicked source.

It is this power which has ever been the most persecuting. It is the pretended and assumed church which has always been the deep designing and inveterate foe "to the children of the free woman." It is this Satan's power, clothed in the insinuating garb of "an angel of light," which has proved the greatest scourge of earth and accomplished so much mischief, and is continuing thus to do and will until the eternal God shall completely demolish and obliterate the entire false fabric, and this hypocritical system of things. And need we expect any abatement of this hostile feeling on the part of this power? We shall get disappointed, for it is decreed by Daniel, the prophet, that it will exist "even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolator." And St. Paul confirms the same, thus,—"But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now." Gal. 4: 29.

Well has one said,—"Those are the most deadly persecutors who are actuated by what they regard as a religious duty." While another quite as truthfully affirms,—"It is a truth, and one which the present age should lay to heart, that in nothing is Satan's power seen more than in religion. By it he accomplishes as an angel of light what he could never effect by open profligacy and wilful sin. The world, in its ignorance of God, is persuaded that any thing which is, or is intended to be religious, must be acceptable to Him. This is a fatal error, one that has ruined millions, and is now ruining millions more. And awful as it is to see the sinner a willing captive to his lusts, openly rebelling against an infinitely good Being, it is still more awful to see religious theories adapted, in the name of the Lord, to shut out truth from the conscience, to quench the Spirit, and to turn aside the sure promises of God."

The world, in the general acceptation of the term, has never been so great an enemy to the true church as those false ecclesiastical systems, assisted, time and again, by "the powers that be." It is those false and pernicious argumentations (the Papacy the most formidable,) which have ever proved the most effectual barriers to the advancement of a righteous state of things upon the earth, and the promulgation "of the truth of the gospel." These infernal systems have ever stood in the way of the dissemination of the truth, like the magicians with their incantations before Moses, and like the Apocalyptic Dragon before the sun-clothed woman, "pained to be delivered" of the "man-child," "to devour her child as soon as it was born." Yes, stood in the way, retarding the progress of the glorious gospel, proving, in too many instances, an impreg-interposition to man's receiving the truth as it is in Jesus. The beautiful simplicity and admirable symmetry of the divine plan of redemption has ever been obscurated by this bottomless-pit smoke of their dogmas and theories, tarnished, and deformed by them in such a degree that scores of men and women of intelligence and candor have rejected the system of christianity as unreasonable, hence, unworthy of their credence. These human (not humane) contrivances and organizations, under the garb of religion, have made awful havoc in all ages, and, we may safely affirm, have been the most powerful engine in the hands of the devil to deceive and destroy the children of men. We make these repetitions, and dwell thus long on this point, for the purpose, if possible, of impressing the mind of the church with a truth which we think is too much lost sight of in this present wicked, hypocritical and adulterous generation, which is fast filling up its cup and is about to meet its terrible doom in the outpouring of the seventh vial of God's wrath.

Every one knows who has espoused the cause of Christ, and labored to any extent to present the gospel of the kingdom, that their most active and inveterate opposers have been the popular clergy and those who stand the highest in the sectarian churches. They know that these are the ones who first stand in the way of God's blessed word. We mention these to put such on the guard that may be ignorant of them, and as a matter of encouragement lest the people of God might become disheartened in the pursuance of "the narrow way that leadeth unto life" eternal; that they should "marvel not" at this hatred of the world, understood in the sense we have here portrayed it, but be encouraged in the violence of the storm and the seeming darkness of a starless night, with the advice of the angel to the storm-bound Paul, "saying, Fear not!" Acts 29.

"Yea, let men rage, since God will spread
His shadowing wings around thy head;
Since in all pain his tender love
Shall still thy sure refreshment prove.

With but thy strength, O God of power,
Then let winds blow and thunders roar;
Thy faithful witness will I be,
'Tis fixed; I can do all through thee."

Beloved, persevere in your righteous course, knowing that the great day of reckoning hasteth greatly when there will be a "time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time;" at which time, blessed be God, his "people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book;" while "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life and some to shame and everlasting contempt;" when "the wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many (not to the reception of any of the false and theological dogmas of the day, but,) to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." Glorious promise! Dan. 12: 1–3. In view of this, then, we will cheerfully endure the world's hate.

Lastly, this persecution will come upon us unsought for. We have no occasion to seek or court it; all we have to do is, to denounce every thing which is not of God—go not with "the multitude which keep holy day"—subscribe not unto any of the numerous creeds and books of discipline—stand out in bold relief with the glorious Bible in hand, the love of God shed abroad in your heart through the Holy Ghost given unto all that obey him—acknowledging but one priest, and him, "the great high priest, Jesus, the Son of God, that has passed into the heavens," there to appear in divine presence for us—and but ONE God and Father of us all who is blessed forever. Amen. We must be found in "the WAY, the TRUTH, and the LIFE," advocating that truth to the best of our ability, and then, be assured, tribulation will come, and we shall realize the truth of what Paul declared to them of Antioch,—"That we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." Acts 14: 22. "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake." Phil. 1: 29. "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Tim. 3: 12. Only occupy this position, live godly, work righteousness, show to the world that you are really for God and his truth, then you may with just as much hope of success expect to escape persecution as you would be likely to evade the scorching rays of the summer sun upon the sandy deserts of Sahara.

Tribulation to the church is coupled and inseparable with duty; they are old associates and go hand in hand, and are designed by our Heavenly Parent (for so we learn from the general tenor of scripture,) as one of those instrumentalities of purification which ultimately shall "work for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." We have the promise that, "if so be we suffer with him," (Christ) then we shall with him "be glorified together," and that "the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Rom. 8: 17, 18. And why is all this? Let the apostle answer; "That ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer." 2 Thess. 1: 5. Then "marvel not," ye stricken, afflicted, and persecuted ones, but be ye strengthened, cheered and comforted on your way, and which holy prophets trod, by the glowing promises of God, and especially by the benediction of the Savior in his sermon on the Mount,—"Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." Matt. 5: 10–12.

How invigorating and delightful, to dwell upon this language of our great Deliverer and coming King! Let the church treasure it upon her heart as a rich legacy, and may she be enabled, like the "Apostle to the Gentiles," to "glory in tribulation," that "the power of Christ may rest upon" her, "knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope," &c. "Therefore, endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." Rom. 5: 3–5; 2 Tim. 2: 3. "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you." Be confident, then, "that these light afflictions, which are but for a moment," shall work out a rich behest, and that in a very "little while." He shall come, who will come and will not tarry, who shall crown thy labors with everlasting life and glory. Yes, praise God! these things are but of short duration; our suffering times will soon be over, then shall we weep and sigh no more. The long-expected Messiah is coming soon, with myriads of his mighty angels, to take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to establish his kingdom. Then, using a common expression to denote an entire change of things, "the tables will be turned." Yes, the tables will be turned, as indicated in the potent language of the Revelator, thus,—"Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double." Rev. 18: 6. It is then, when mystical Babylon shall fall and "the Lord God of the holy prophets" shall execute judgment upon her in the very heat of his wrath, and utterly burn her with fire—when attendant angels and saints, with all holy beings, will give one united shout, like the noise of mighty thunderings, that shall make the vast universe ring again with praise to God and the Lamb,—that the redeemed millions will strike aloud their harps, and "sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy; for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for THY JUDGMENTS ARE MADE MANIFEST." While the invited guests and "they who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb," will respond to the shout,—"Hallelujah! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth!" Amen.

Elizabeth City, N. J., May, 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Watchman.

Zion's watchman! See him, working, toiling, laboring in sunshine and in storm, in city and in country; patiently, willingly, perseveringly facing the scorn of the multitude and telling the hour of the night. His whole life seems to be devoted to the cause of his King. He cares not for the honors of earth, but seems truly to be a citizen of another country. He cares not for earth's pleasures. His manner seems to say:

"I take my harp and touch its strings
To 'Watchman, tell us of the night!'
And it such cheering music brings,
It fills my soul with sweet delight!"

Remember the watchmen. Their trials are many and their way is rough. Persecutions, buffetings and scoffs meet them everywhere. Remember them and care for them.

SAXTON.

For the Children.

Be Kind to Your Sister.

One morning, there was a little girl sitting on the door-steps of a pleasant cottage near the common. She was thin and pale. Her head was resting upon her slender hand. Her name was Helen. For several weeks she had seemed to be drooping without any particular disease; inconstant in her attendance at school, and losing gradually her interest in all her former employments. Helen had but one sister, Clara, a little older than herself, and several brothers. While she was most indisposed, they had expressed a great deal of sympathy, and tried to amuse her, and willingly gave up their own enjoyments, to promote hers. But children will too often be selfish; and when Helen for some days appeared better, and able to run about and amuse herself, they would foregt how peculiarly sensitive she had become, and the cross words which they occasionally spoke, and the neglect with which they sometimes treated her, wounded her feelings, and caused her to shed many bitter tears, as she lay awake on her little cot at night.

This day she seemed better, and it was something her sister had said to her just before, which gave that expression of sadness to her face, as she sat at the door of the cottage. Clara soon came to her again.

"Helen, mother says you must go to school to-day; so get up, come along, and get ready, and not be moping there any longer."

Helen. "Did ma' say so?"

Clara. "Yes, she did. You are well enough, I know, for you always say you are sick, at school time. Get your bonnet, for I shan't wait."

Helen got up slowly, and wiping with her apron the tear which had started in her eye, she made her preparations to obey her mother's command. Now Clara had a very irritable disposition. She could not bear to have Helen receive any more attention or sympathy than herself; and unless she were really so sick as to excite her fears, she never would allow her to be sick at all. She was determined not to go to school alone this morning, and had persuaded her mother to make her sister go with her.

In a few moments they were both ready; but now a difficulty presented itself. The distance at school was so great, that they seldom returned at noon. Their dinner had been packed for them in a large basket which stood in the entry. Upon whom, now, should the task of carrying this devolve?

"Helen," said Clara, "I've carried the basket every day for a week; it is your turn now."

Helen. "But it's twice as heavy now. I can but just lift it."

Clara. "Well, I don't care. I have got my geography and atlas to carry; so take it up and come along, Miss Fudge. I shan't touch it."

Helen took up the basket, without saying another word, though it required all her little strength, and walked slowly behind her sister. She tried hard to keep from crying, but the tears would come as fast as she wiped them off. They walked on thus in silence for about a quarter of an hour. Clara felt too much ill-humor to take the least notice of her sister. She knew she had done wrong, and felt uneasy, but was yet too proud to give up, and was determined to "hold out;" excusing herself by thinking, "Well, Helen is always saying she is sick, and making a great fuss It's just good enough for her." When she had reached the half-way stone, she had half a mind not to let her rest there, as usual; but the habit was too strong to be easily broken, and she sat down sullenly to wait for Helen to come up.

This was a spot which few could have passed unnoticed. The broad flat stone was shaded by a beautiful weeping willow, whose branches hung so low, that even little Maria could reach them by standing on tip-toe. Around the trunk of this tree ran a little brook, which came up to this rustic seat, and then turned off into the next meadow. It would seem as if the beauty of this place must have charmed away the evil spirit which was raging in Clara's breast,—but no! The cool shade brought no refreshment to those evil passions, and the little ripples which sparkled in the sunbeam did not, for one moment, divert her attention from her own cross feelings. As I said before, she sat sullenly till Helen came up, and then began to scold her for being so slow.

"Why don't you come along faster, Helen? You will be late to school, and I don't care if you are; you deserve a good scolding for acting so."

"Why, Clara, I am very tired, my head does ache, and this basket is very heavy. I do think you ought to carry it the rest of the way."

"Do give it to me, then," said Clara; and snatched it from her with such violence that the cover came off. The apples rolled out and fell into the water, the gingerbread fellowed, and the pie rolled into the dirt. It has been truly said, "Anger is a short madness;" for how little reason have those who indulge in it? Helen was not to blame for the accident, but Clara did not stop to think of this. Vexed at having thus lost her dinner, she turned and gave her little sister a push, and then walked on as rapidly as possible. O! could she have foreseen the consequence of this rash act,—could she have known the bitter anguish which it would afterwards cause her,—worlds would not have tempted her to do it; but Clara was angry. Helen was seated on the edge of the stone, and she fell into the water. It was not deep. She had waded there many a day with her shoes and stockings off, and she easily got out again; but it frightened her very much and took away all her strength. She could not even call to her sister, or cry. A strange feeling came over her, such as she had never had before. She laid her head on the stone, closed her eyes, and thought she was going to die, and she wished her mother was there. Then she seemed to sleep for a few minutes, but by and by she felt better, and, getting up, she took her empty basket and walked on as fast as she was able towards school.

It was nearly half done when she arrived there, and as she entered the room all noticed her pale face and wet dress. She took her seat, and placing her book before her, leaned her aching head upon her hand, and attempted to study, but in vain. She could not fix her attention at all. The strange feeling began to come over her once more—the letters all mingled together—the room grew dark—the shrill voice of the little child, screaming its A B C in front of her desk, grew fainter and fainter—her head sunk upon her book, and she fell to the floor.

Fainting was so unusual in this school, that all was instantly confusion, and it was some minutes before the teacher could restore order. Helen was brought to the air, two of her companions were despatched for water, and none were allowed to remain near excepting Clara, who stood by, trembling from head to foot, and almost as white as the insensible object before her. O, what a moment of anguish was this—deep, bitter anguish! Her anger melted away at once, and she would almost have sacrificed her own life, to have recalled the events of the morning. That was impossible. The future, however, was still before her, and she determined never again to indulge her temper, or be unkind to any one. If Helen only recovered, the future should be spent in atoning for her past unkindness. It seemed for a short time, indeed, as if she would be called upon to fulfil these promises. Helen gradually grew better, and in about an hour was apparently as well as usual. It was judged best, however, for her to return home; and a farmer, who happened to pass in a new gig, very kindly offered to take her.

Clara could not play with the girls as usual; she could not study. Her heart was full, and she was very impatient to be once more by her sister's side. The recess was spent in collecting pictures, notes, and little books; and the long study hours were employed in printing stories. In this way she attempted to quiet the still small voice, whose secret whispers were destroying all her happiness. O how eagerly she watched the sun in his slow progress round the school-house; and when at last he threw his slanting beams through the west window, she was the first to obey the joyful signal; and books, papers, pen and ink instantly disappeared from her desk. Clara did not linger on her way home. She even passed the half-way stone with no other notice than a deep sigh. She hurried to her sister's bed-side, impatient to show her the curiosities she had collected, and to make up, by every little attention, for her unkindness. Helen was asleep. Her face was no longer pale, but flushed with a burning fever. Her little hands were hot, and as she tossed restlessly about on her pillow, she would mutter to herself, sometimes calling on her sister to "stop, stop," and then again begging her not to throw her to the fishes.

Clara watched long, in agony, for her to awake. This she did at last; but it brought no relief to the distressed sister and friends. She did not know them, and continued to talk incoherently about the events of the morning. It was too much for Clara to bear. She retired to her own little room and lonely bed, and wept till she could weep no longer.

By the first dawn of light she was at her sister's bed-side; but there was no alteration. For three days Helen continued in this state. I would not, if I could, describe the agony of Clara, as she heard herself thus called upon, and deservedly reproached by the dear sufferer. Her punishment was, indeed, greater than she could bear. At the close of the third day, Helen gave signs of returning consciousness—inquired if the cold water which she drank would injure her—recognized her mother, and very anxiously inquired for Clara. She had just stepped out, but was immediately called. O how joyful was the summons! She hastened to her sister, who, as she approached, looked up and smiled. The feverish flush from her cheek was gone, she was almost deadly pale. By her own request, her head had been raised upon two or three pillows, and her little emaciated hands were folded over the white coverlet. Clara was entirely overcome, she could only weep; and as she stooped to kiss her sister's white lips, the child threw her arms around her neck, and drew her still nearer. It was a long embrace; then her arms moved convulsively, and fell motionless by her side; there were a few struggless—she gasped once or twice—and little Helen never breathed again!

Days, weeks and months rolled on. Time had somewhat healed the wound which grief for the loss of an only sister had made; but it had not power to remove from Clara's heart the remembrance of her former unkindness. It poisoned many an hour. She never took her little basket of dinner, now so light, or in her solitary walk to school, passed the "half-way stone," without a deep sigh, and often a tear of bitter regret.

Children who are what Clara was, go and now be what Clara is—mild, amiable, obliging, and pleasant to all.

PRESUME not upon thy own performances, but rely wholly upon God's goodness and mercy, by whose help alone thou art able to do thy duty in the station of life in which he has placed thee.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1857. WHOLE NO. 94. VOL. V. NO. 16.

The World's Crisis.

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I WANDER HERE.

I wander here, a pilgrim lone,
Oppressed with many a doubt and fear;
Through scenes of gloom and sorrow roam,
Through howling wilds and deserts drear.

I wander here, but oft my eye
Looks upward through the gathering gloom,
To catch a star-beam from on high,
A beam that guides the wand'rer home.

I wander here, but tread a path,
Long by the homeward pilgrims trod,
A way that leads from sin and wrath,
To rest and home, to peace and God.

I wander here, and snares betray,
And foes beset each dangerous place;
But through this dark and blood-stained way
My Savior's footsteps glad I trace.

I wander here, but ah! my home
Smiles in the nearing distance fair,
Angelic voices bid me come,
Courage! my soul, I'll soon be there!

H. L. H.

Peacedale, R. I.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. VI.

The skeptical of the present age are utterly unacquainted with Bible facts, which might be adduced to corroborate the credibility of the scriptures. And in the selection of such facts for exhibition, in order, if possible, to convince the skeptic, I am like the man who stands by an immense magazine of corn. I may take a handful and hold it out to view, but I cannot exhibit each grain in the mass to the eye of any purchaser. So, likewise, with the word of God. I may select one part here and another there, but to represent every part contained in the great granary—the Bible—it would be a task endless and painful.

The grain that I would select from God's store house, (but one out of thousands which might be adduced,) may be found in the latter clause of the 21st Chap. of Luke, 24th verse—"And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled."

The above text is worthy of the skeptic's consideration. I may venture to say, without fear of contradiction, that there is not one skeptic in ten thousand who is acquainted with the circumstances and facts relating to this wonderful prediction. There has been every opportunity for the infidel to defeat the declaration of the Messiah, and to show that Jerusalem should not be trodden down of the Gentiles. For this reason the Jews have been rich enough to build a hundred temples during any period of their widest dispersion, or of their deepest, heaviest oppression. But, says the objector, they have never had an opportunity of returning. If they could have had some sceptred potentate of earth to sanction, or countenance their return, they would have been there centuries ago, and their temple would have been rebuilt.

To such I would say, the Lord allowed them just such a man, one of the most powerful potentates of earth, one who sat on Cæsar's throne, who nodded and the nations trembled,—the accomplished warrior, Emperor Julian. Mark, he had been educated under the sound of the gospel, and knew the words of Jesus. He was familiar with the writings of the evangelists. He resolved that Jerusalem should be trodden under foot of the ISRAELITES, instead of the Gentiles. To corroborate the fact, I shall now give a few extracts from "Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

"While the devout Monarch (Julian the Apostate,) incessantly labored to restore and propogate the religion of his ancestors, he embraced the extraordinary design of rebuilding the temple of Jerusalem. In a public epistle to the nation or community of the Jews, dispersed through the provinces, he pities their misfortunes, condemns their oppressors, praises their constancy, declares himself their gracious protector, and expresses a pious hope that after his return from the Persian war, he may be permitted to pay his grateful vows to the Almighty in his holy city of Jerusalem. * * * * The vain and ambitious mind of Julian might aspire to restore the ancient glory of the temple of Jerusalem. As the Christians were firmly persuaded that a sentence of everlasting destruction had been pronounced against the whole fabric of the Mosaic law, the Imperial sophist would have converted the success of his undertaking into a specious argument against the faith of prophecy, and the truth of revelation. * * * But the prospect of an immediate and important advantage would not suffer the impatient Monarch to expect the remote and uncertain event of the Persian war. He resolved to erect, without delay, on the commanding eminence of Moriah, a stately temple, which might eclipse the splendor of the church of the resurrection on the adjacent hill of Calvary, and to invite a numerous colony of Jews, whose stern fanaticism would be always prepared to second, and even to anticipate, the hostile measures of the Pagan government. * * * At the call of their great deliverer, the Jews, from all the provinces of the empire, assembled on the holy mountain of their fathers; and their insolent triumph alarmed and exasperated the Christian inhabitants of Jerusalem. The desire of rebuilding the temple has in every age been the ruling passion of the children of Israel. In this propitious moment the men forgot their avarice, and the women their delicacy; spades and pickaxes of silver were provided by the vanity of the rich, and the rubbish was transported in mantles of silk and purple. Every purse was opened in liberal contributions, every hand claimed a share in the pious labor; and the commands of a great monarch were executed by the enthusiasm of a whole people.

Yet, on this occasion, the joint efforts of power and enthusiasm were unsuccessful; and the ground of the Jewish temple, which is now covered by a Mahometan Mosque, still continued to exhibit the same edifying spectacle of ruin and desolation. * * * The christians entertained a natural and pious expectation, that, in this memorable contest, the honor of religion would be vindicated by some signal miracle. An earthquake, a whirlwind, and a fiery eruption, which overturned and scattered the new foundations of the temple, are attested, with some variations, by cotemporary and respectable evidence. This public event is described by Ambrose, bishop of Milan, in an epistle to the emperor Theodosius, which must provoke the severe animadversion of the Jews; by the eloquent Chrysostom, who might appeal to the memory of the elder part of his congregation at Antioch; and by Gregory Nazianzen, who published his account of the miracle before the expiration of the same year. The last of these writers has boldly declared that this preternatural event was not disputed by the infidels; and his assertion, strange as it may seem, is confirmed by the unexceptionable testimony of Ammianus Marcellinus. The philosophic soldier, who loved the virtues, without adopting the prejudices, of his master, has recorded, in his judicious and candid history of his own times, the extraordinary obstacles which interrupted the restoration of the temple of Jerusalem. Whilst Alypius, assisted by the governor of the province, urged, with vigor and diligence, the execution of the work, horrible balls of fire breaking out near the foundations, with frequent and reiterated attacks, rendered the place, from time to time, inaccessible to the scorched and blasted workmen; and the victorious element continuing in this manner obstinately and resolutely bent, as it were, to drive them to a distance, the undertaking was abandoned. Such authority should satisfy a believing, and must astonish an incredulous mind." Gibbon, Vol. 2, pp. 431–440.

I perceive my sheet is already full. I had intended in this epistle advancing more evidence that Jesus is the Messiah, but I must give it in my next. I would say to the skeptic, if your curiosity be awakened by such incidents as the above, so as to lead you to further inquiry, ask yourself the following question; Why did the Christians leave the city of Jerusalem before it was involved in ruin and misery? Had they more political sagacity than their countrymen, the Jews? or why did not some fifty or a hundred thousand of the more prudent Jews retire to Pella, and share the safety which the Christians there enjoyed? How did the Messiah know how long the dispersion would continue, and that Jerusalem would never recover her Mosaic forms of worship? See if you can answer those questions, on merely human principles.

For the Crisis.

Willfulness.

Some persons are very willful. Well, what then? is a person of necessity wicked because willful? I think not. It is perfectly right to be willful, if we are willful only in the right way. Did not one of old say, "as for me and my house we will serve the Lord?" Was not that right? Does not David, in the 101 Psalm, declare nine times over what he will, and will not do? Is not that right? Does not our Lord teach, that if "any man will be" his disciple he must deny himself and come after Him? and, certainly, it is right to will to be a disciple of the Lord.

No man can repent until he fixes, or rather the Spirit of God fixes his will to repent. No man consecrates himself wholly unto the Lord until he wills to do so. No man perseveres "unto the end" without more than an iron will to "go through." No man overcomes the trials of a christian life, and rises above the temptations of this mortal condition, without a mighty will, set in grace, to do so. A man who is not willful is just about good for nothing.

The farmer must be willful, to cultivate and take care of his farm, in heat, wet, and cold, that both he and his may procure the comforts of life from the produce of the farm. The artist must be willful, to rise early, and sit up late, to procure a livelihood. The traveler must be willful, to travel on, many a weary mile, that he may reach his place of rest. The prisoner must be willful, that he does not sink down under the burden of gloom and sorrow that oppresses his spirit, and so make his grief more grievous. The sick man must be willful, to follow the directions of his medical adviser, swallow the disagreeable draught, and deny himself of what tempts his appetite, but would injure his feeble constitution. The minister of God must be willful, that he may preach the plain, simple truth to an unbelieving world, boldly. The christian must be willful, that he may run to the end of the race, and take the prize. Those looking for Christ must be willful, that they may continue to look, wait, watch, and pray till He comes.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

The following is from the pen of Walter Savage Landor: "The damps of autumn sink into the leaves, and prepare them for the necessity of the fall; and thus insensibly are we, as years close around us, detached from our tenacity to live by the gentle pressure of recorded sorrows."

For the Crisis.

Evil Speaking.

No. V.

Contemptible! Worse! A most unrighteous and inexcusable act—the making a person "an offender for a word." This is it. I have known the most objectionable conduct to be charged upon parties, for remarks made in mere playful exuberance of feeling, because some evil-minded speaker of evil chanced to be where that supposed security in the family circle, or other social union, obtained; or, possibly, like the serpent in the garden, came to turn the bowers of love into the tangled and thorny thickets of jealousy;—the beautiful green bank of peace and affection to the shaded, troubled pathway of contention and discontent. Such an one, with shining, affable address, with amusing wit and vivacity; or, perchance, with fairest seeming of piety—the charm of the company appears; their power is patent, the secret is out, or the weakness is seen,—and what is the evil? The speaking evil things—not fact! Serpent brilliancy played around our primeval tempter, and subtilty made his very presence a halo, to spread on every expiration of poisonous breath, the exhalation of death. Such an one, who could "smile, and smile, and smile, and be a villain," has talked to one, and he to another, until good and well disposed persons would come to their friends—to the minister, perhaps, with solemn faces and tearful eyes, complaining of the actions of others, which, when examined, proved only to have been remarks set a going by miserable minded speculators upon the characters and feelings of others,—increasing and widening like a prairie fire. (See James.)

Ah! There may be a sting in that little tongue of yours! Beware! Do not envenom the life and feelings of others. Do not throw the virus of scandal or evil suspicions, upon the neighborhood, family or church. I have known many discouraged in the path of virtue and religion, by evil disposed persons exhibiting their real or supposed faults. How grievous and provoking, that a whole community should be excited, when a few words from those who are vilely accused, or those who know them best, would dissipate the cloud of suspicion, tear off the vail of aspersion, and they could be seen again as they really are!

Be careful! lest the poison be treasured somewhere, and in the end your own folly recoil, and "bite like a serpent, and sting like an adder."

Here's one of your subterfuges of folly You are not inculpated! You have not fabricated any falsehoods about a brother or sister. But have you told all that you heard? Well! Then you have been telling falsehood while you have not been intentionally telling lies. What a medium is a tale bearer! Ah, think of it! Too much like a common sewer! Tale-bearing will properly come under the head of evil speaking; hence, if you carry news—peddle the stories which are afloat, you will have trouble; and surely you will make trouble. People will lose confidence. Soon they will use over you the old proverb,—"a bird that will fetch, will carry." You will lose respect for yourself, when people come to disbelieve what you say, and count you a hypocrite, because you are always talking about your neighbors, and minding other people's affairs instead of your own.

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

Deacons.

I have heard a great deal said about deacons in the church, and very frequent reference made to Acts 6: 1–8, as an apostolic precedent concerning the choice of deacons. Upon this point I have thought good to state a few facts.

FIRST: The Church at this time had and enjoyed a community of goods, and as they were soon to be persecuted and driven from Jerusalem they sold their possessions and distributed them.

SECOND: The multitude that believed were provided for by a daily ministration or distribution from the common purse or stock.

THIRD: There were in this multitude many, both of Jews and of Greeks, and there arose a little spirit of rivalry or perhaps of favoritism among them, or else they erred unintentionally in their apportionment of the daily allowance.

FOURTH: The Greeks began to murmur against the Hebrews that the Grecian widows were not as well provided for as the Hebrews; and hence, division was springing up.

FIFTH: The apostles, who had the money laid at their "feet," (not seeming half as anxious to get it into their pockets as some of their would be successors of later days,) refused to have anything to do with adjusting these conflicting claims, and would not be turned away from preaching the word to attend to dishing out soup, and distributing provisions and money.

SIXTH: They therefore proposed to the brethren to select seven men, who were to be (1,) of honest report, (2,) full of the Holy Ghost (3,) and of wisdom, whose business it should be to attend to this very matter, and see that the Grecian widows fared just as well as anybody else, and that the distribution was equitable among them all.

SEVENTH: This proposal pleased the multitude, and, as the complaint was among the Greeks, they chose seven men, all of whom appear, from their names, to have been Greeks, and they appointed them over that business, and the apostles prayed, and laid their hands on them.

EIGHTH: When the circumstances which caused this appointment were changed, the persons, having no more bread or provision to dispense, were discharged, of course, from their temporary office. Probably, Stephen retained it 'till his death, as he was soon killed, though this did not prevent him from doing great wonders and preaching as he did most ably before the Council, &c.

NINTH: Philip was afterwards an Evangelist—he baptized the Ethiopian Eunuch, preached in Samaria, in Azotus and in all the cities, till he came to Cæsarea, where he settled and brought up his family so well that he "had four daughters which did prophesy;" Acts 21: 8–9, and Paul, when he stopped there on his journey, never forbade their doing it, that I know of.

TENTH: These seven persons were never called DEACONS, at all, in the Bible. King James' translators, headed the chapter with—"seven deacons chosen," or something of the kind; but the Bible never calls them, or any one of them, deacons that I can find. Philip is called "Philip, the Evangelist" not Philip, the DEACON; he is called "one of the seven," not one of the seven deacons.

ELEVENTH: There is no official title or designation given to these persons who filled this position, because it appears that it was merely a temporary, prudential arrangement, to meet a special emergency which occurred under the then existing peculiarity of the circumstances.

TWELFTH: Therefore, this was not at all a permanent office in the Church, but simply a kind of special committee appointed for the occasion, and hence we have no account whatever of the appointment of seven such men by the apostles at any other time or place among all the churches which they planted, and in which they "set in order the things that were wanting."

THIRTEENTH: Therefore, whosoever undertakes to present the duties of deacons, from the selection of "the seven," needs first to find similar circumstances: as,

1. Apostles present.
2. Possessions sold.
3. All things common.
4. Daily distribution for their sustenance.
5. Grecians neglected.
6. Grecians murmuring at the unequal distribution, &c., &c.

Then, when all these, or analogous circumstances coincide, it will be according to apostolical precedent to look out "seven men" and appoint them over this matter, but not to call them deacons, even then.

FOURTEENTH: The Scripture does recognize an order of servants, both male and female, or deacons and deaconesses, in the Church, and points out with some degree of clearness their duties, which are not, especially, to distribute bread and sustenance among discontented Grecians, nor to pass around the bread and wine at communion seasons, but which may be learned from a careful perusal of the word of God, and by remembering that the word deacon frequently signifies servant, or minister, and is often thus translated.

Perhaps at a future time I may direct attention to a few of these scriptures. Meanwhile, if any one supposes me to be mistaken in the above statement, I give them perfect liberty to cherish that conviction, and am confident that it will not be any more strange than my conviction is, that the ordinary view is entirely unscriptural and erroneous.

PITH.

May 9th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Three Angels.

No. VII.

[Concluded.]

Having shown that the devil and his angels are cast into the fire prepared for them, in connection with the second advent of our Lord, it follows that the thousand years must be previous to the Advent. We have admitted in this article the existence of a personal devil, and proved his destruction to be at the Lord's coming. We also claim to have proved that the seven-headed and ten-horned devil or "Satan" of the Apocalypse is a symbol of Imperial Rome, which empire is represented by the fourth beast of Daniel. Daniel tells us that the fourth beast was given to the burning flame; and all this transpires before the saints take the kingdom. Dan. 7: 11, 14–27. Matt. 13: 41–43,—"They shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire. . . . Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their father."

We have also shown that the wicked dead will have a resurrection at the Lord's coming, even while he is in the clouds of heaven. Matt. 26: 64. Rev. 1: 7. The dead that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and shall come forth in the same hour, some to life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. See Dan. 12; John 5: 28, 29.

We are now prepared to consider Rev. 20: 11–15. John is here relating an account of the judgment scene, in perfect harmony with what we find in Daniel, in the Gospels, and the Epistles of Paul and Peter. Yes, we may say, in harmony with himself, but not in harmony with the interpolation that occurs in the 5th verse of chap. 20. In verse 11, we have introduced the great white throne, and him that sits thereon. This is an event that occurs under the sixth seal. Chap. 6: 16. It is the second advent. And now let us observe what transpires. John says the earth and heavens fled away from before the face of him that sat on the throne, and no place was found for them. This agrees with Dan. 2: 45; 7: 9, 11. 2 Peter 3: 7, 10. This is an event that occurs in the day of the Lord. Previous to this event he will judge the quick and the dead. 12th verse,—"And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; (this agrees with Dan. 7: 10,) and another book was opened which is the book of life: (this proves the resurrection of those within said book) and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell (grave) delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged, every man according to their works. And death and hell (grave) were cast into the lake of fire."

Observe, this is the same lake of fire in which the beast, and false prophet, the dragon, all liars, and all idolaters shall have their part. It is the fire of that day that burns as an oven, and this is the second death. Chap. 19: 20; 20: 10; 21: 8; Mal. 4: 1.

Ver. 15,—"And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." Now we affirm, and it is useless to contradict it.) that there is but one burning day in the future, and that is the day in which "all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up." It is the day in which the fourth beast shall be given to the burning flame. It is the furnace of fire into which the wicked will be cast. Matt. 13: 42. It is the everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels. Matt. 25: 41. It is the fire that melts this earth, and burns up the things that are therein. 2 Peter 3: 7, 10. It is the fire that burneth with brimstone, and is the second death. It is the fire in which the worshipers of the beast and his image will be tormented day and night, forever and ever. Rev. 14: 11; and it is proved by Chap. 20: 10, to be subsequent to the thousand years. Consequently, the advent is after the thousand years.

But we anticipate an objection. How can it be said of the wicked, that are living on the earth, that they die the second death at the Lord's coming? We answer, they will be an exception to the general rule, and the same is true of the living saints. It is said, "death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned;" and, "as in Adam all die," &c. Now, it is not a fact that we shall all die, but the saints that are living at that day "shall not all sleep." (Paul.) "He that liveth and believeth shall never die." (Jesus.) It is a poor rule that will not work both ways.

But it will be said that John saw those saints that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and they lived and reigned a thousand years; and consequently their living and reigning was after they were beheaded. But this by no means follows. Let us apply this rule or principle to the text in Chap. 6: 9, 10, where these martyrs are seen by John, slain, and under the altar;—"and they cried with a loud voice, saying, how long, O Lord," &c. John tells us, first, they "were slain," and then he says "they cried." Do we understand that they cried after they were slain? Certainly not. No more does it follow that they reigned the thousand years after they were beheaded. But he saw them slain, and he heard them cry, "how long, O Lord," while they were being slain. He saw them reign in the thousand years with Christ, in a spiritual sense, if they reigned at all. They could not reign in any other sense. The word expressly declares this thousand years to be in this age, wherein there is day and night; and the "little season" beyond the thousand years is while day and night continues, and the devil is tormented day and night after the thousand years have ended. But when we come to the new earth, (chap. 21,) we find there is no night there. The saints reign forever and ever in that new earth Chap. 1: 25; 22: 5. The forever and ever of Chap. 20, is limited by day and night; the forever and ever of Chap. 22: 5, is unlimited, for there is no night there. Of Christ's kingdom there shall be no END; and if we have a lake of fire in his kingdom, in which the devil is tormented forever and ever, it will be without end—it will burn as long as the new earth continues, and that will remain before the Lord forever, even forever and ever; and of his kingdom there will be no end. Dan. 7: 14–18; Luke 1: 33; Heb. 12: 28.

In the text last quoted, Paul is showing, upon the authority of Haggai, that there is to be one shaking of the heavens and earth, that those things that cannot be shaken may remain. He then remarks, "wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved," &c. This shows that the receiving of the kingdom is after the passing away of the present heavens and earth; and then we shall have a kingdom in an earth that cannot be shaken, for this shaking is to be but once more. Haggai 2: 6. And Jesus has told us that it will occur in connection with his coming. Matt. 24: 29.

We think we have now proved beyond the possibility of a doubt, that the thousand years and little season must be previous to the second advent. Observe, the devil is cast into the fire subsequent to the thousand years. Rev. 20: 10. There is day and night in that age in which he is destroyed, or tormented. In the next world there is no night, therefore, the lake of fire is previous to the new earth—previous to the reign of Christ with his saints therein. And when we take the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven, we shall possess it forever, and ever, in a world without end; and neither the devil, nor wicked men, shall ever set foot on the earth renewed, but we shall have an eternal Sabbath, or rest, and there shall be none to molest or make us afraid in all God's holy mountain. "For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

We think we have now proved all that we have affirmed; and we leave all to judge for themselves. No doubt we may have wearied the patience of some, but we have done what we deemed it our duty to do, for the truth's sake. We believe what we have written will stand the test in the burning day. J. T. SWEET.

Providence, R. I.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JUNE 17, 1856.

OUR VISIT CONTINUED. Winsted. Lord's day, we assembled at Humphrey Hall, a very elegant one, lately built, where we met a most hearty reception from many faithful friends, besides the dear children of the Lord. We felt at home, and were cheered to see the christian soldiers assembled again from the north, south, east and west, to sing the praises of the great Captain of our salvation. We found a goodly number who seemed determined not to desert, but to endure to the end, that they may receive a crown of glory and eternal life at the coming of the great King. We were mutually strengthened and comforted. At noon we had an interesting love feast, when our hearts were cheered by the testimonies of those who have resolved to exchange the short lived pleasures and vanities of this world, for the "eternal weight of glory" to be enjoyed in the world to come. The hearty shout and responsive "amen" were like sweet music to our ears. It seemed like days by-gone, when we met in Orion Hall, now in ashes, near the same place. We could say with a full heart—"it is good to be here."

In the afternoon a large congregation assembled to hear evidences that the whole man dies and remains unconscious between death and the resurrection, and that his only hope of a future existence depends upon the literal rising again of the material organism laid in the grave. We had a large and attentive audience, which appeared to be convinced that our hope was founded upon the Bible, and not upon the popular theology of the day.

At 6 o'clock we met again to consider the cause of Modern Spiritualism, as viewed from a Bible stand-point. The large and beautiful Hall was crowded to overflowing by very attentive listeners, among whom were noticed two clergymen, and many of the most intelligent citizens of the place. We endeavored to show from facts in harmony with the Bible, that the Spiritualism of these last days is the work of the devil and his angels, who are called demons, and are fulfilling the scripture which teaches us, that, just before the coming of the Lord, these demons will go forth over the earth working miracles, and will cause many to depart from the faith. We think it can be confidently said, this is that spoken of by the prophet. Many were astonished at the evidences which show that Spiritualism has appeared, in its present form, at the right time to fill up the prophetic chart, giving indubitable proof that our Savior will soon come to gather his waiting children. We are expecting greater and still more startling manifestations, until it is destroyed by the coming of Christ. If it were possible, they would deceive the very elect; but if we obey the Lord, we shall be kept from 'the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth." The good Lord is preparing his children in Winsted to withstand all the fiery darts of the enemy. They seem determined to be inhabitants of the new earth. May the peace of God rest upon them forever.

Monday Morning, June 1st, we visited our boyhood home, high up the verdant hills, where were spent our joyous days of innocence, culling the wild-wood flowers and in sportive play by the babbling brook, that still winds its way through the fields as gentle as ever. For a time, we were lost in thoughts of the past, while from every rock and glen, hill and dale, orchard tree and blackberry bush was presented to the mind in lively scenes the joys of other days, ere the spoiler tempted us astray. How little did we then know of this vain and wicked world, or the varied windings mid the labyrinths of time through which we have since wandered; but we can say with a full heart—thank the Lord, for his great mercy we have enjoyed all our days, and that we have been made conscious of his goodness for the last furteen years.

We must not omit to speak of our kind mother, now nearly eighty-four years of age, whose prayers have followed her son Miles when Satan employed all his arts to lead him in the downward road to destruction, where many of his associates are now rapidly tending, carelessly sporting upon the brink of eternal ruin. Those prayers have been answered, and the son now looks forward with longing hope to the time when, with mother, he may commence eternal life in the paradise of God. Thank the Lord for a praying mother, and her christian counsel. Thoughtfully, we wound our way from the home of our youth, enjoying a mother's parting blessing.

Monday afternoon we visited the pilgrim's quiet resting place, in Bakerville, "Pleasant Hollow," known as the residence of Bro. and Sr. Mathewson. This sequestered spot has been from the time of our first visit, some fourteen years since, a Bethel for all who were traveling to Mount Zion. Here sinners have had their sins forgiven, backsliders have returned from their wanderings, and saints have echoed the praises of our coming King. A beautiful sheet of water, near by, has often been employed by Bro. Mathewson for the burial of happy saints in baptism with Christ. During our short visit, it seemed as if all nature conspired to make the place as lovely as possible, for every species of vegetation wore its most tasteful spring attire, while the sweet fragrance of orchard bloom made the whole an enchanting scene.

In the evening we had an excellent meeting at the house of Bro. Harris, about half a mile from Bro. M.'s. We listened to some heart cheering testimonies, and then, between twenty and thirty sat down to the table to show their faith in a crucified and risen Savior. We felt the approbation of Him who ascended from Mt. Olivet, and parted with the fond expectation of soon meeting at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Tuesday, in company with Bro. Mathewson, we attended the funeral of Bro. Hezekiah Beach's child, in Winchester. We endeavored to comfort the afflicted family with the hope of the resurrection. While visiting "the city of the dead," where some of our dearest youthful companions now lie sleeping in peace, with a full heart, we felt like saying, "come, Lord Jesus," and raise our loved ones from the solitude of the grave.

On our return, we passed the place where I first learned the letters of the English language, and sported in joyous innocence with those whose voices are now hushed in the silent tomb. What changes have been wrought during the thirty years since passed! In much less than thirty more, I expect to be with some of those friends of my childhood in the kingdom of God, clothed with immortality, to enjoy with them an eternal weight of glory.

Wednesday, we went to Hartford and called on several of the Lord's friends, and spent the night at Bro. Rogers'.

Thursday Morning, we left Hartford at 8 o'clock on the steamer, L. Boardman, bound for Sag Harbor, Long Island. We floated pleasantly down the Connecticut, and were joined at Middletown by Bro. R. E. Ladd of Springfield, and his daughter, who accompanied us to the Shinnecock Indian settlement at Southampton. We arrived at Sag Harbor about half past 5 o'clock, where we found Eld. Lee waiting to convey us to the home of the native sons of America. After traveling about twelve miles we entered the quiet enclosure of that noble tribe, and were welcomed with a christian, heartfelt greeting, more earnest than when Samoset said to the landing pilgrims upon Plymouth Rock, —Welcome, Englishmen! Welcome, Englishmen!

Friday, June 5th. Our readers may be interested to know something of the history and character of this remnant tribe of "Native Americans." They are located about twelve miles from Sag Harbor, on the south side of Long Island, and number about two hundred. They cultivate the land, catch fish and clams in the Shinnecock Bay, and are a hospitable, honest, industrious people, living in good framed houses, which give the most satisfactory proof that they are managed by the best of housekeepers. They occupy a tract of land about four miles in length, and two in breadth, which they hold in common, each family cultivating as much as it thinks best to improve.

In the afternoon we were taken by the Indians and carried out upon their beautiful bay, to the beach, where old ocean sounds his perpetual roar. We gazed, awe-stricken, upon the heaving bosom of the boundless deep, while the huge waves dashed at our feet in angry foam. The sight was full of sublimity, well calculated to inspire emotions of adoration towards Him "who shut up the sea with doors;" and who said,—"hitherto shalt thou come but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." Resting upon this scripture, we enjoyed the feeling of safety, as when we stand before the iron cage of the huge African lion roaring in the full strength of his terrible voice. Every mountain wave, as it rolled high up the beach, bowed in humble submission, when it had reached the bound, marked—"no further." From the beach, we sailed to the opposite side of the bay, and ascended a sugar loaf hill said to be the highest point on Long Island. It rises nearly two hundred feet above the level of the sea, and its sides and summits were covered with the smooth sea pebbles and shells, thus showing most clearly that its tops was once upon a level with the ocean.

We returned to our quiet resting-place, and assembled in the evening for the worship of Him who made heaven and earth, and the waters of the deep. The season was one of refreshing, for the Lord smiled upon us. Saturday evening we met again, and felt it good to be there.

Lord's day.—It has been the practice for many years among the tribe to have a yearly meeting the first Lord's day in June, when the scattered ones gather home to visit their friends and worship the God of their fathers. At these annual gatherings, a large number of the white population from the surrounding towns assemble with the natives. In the morning, a little before the hour of meeting, the white sails might be seen in different directions steering their course for the Indian settlement. A goodly number gathered together to hear the words of life. We were thankful for the privilege of meeting the tribes on this occasion, to mingle our voices in thanking and praising Him who is no respecter of persons. The Lord blessed us during the day with the influence of the Holy Spirit, and although tear-drops oft trembled in the eye, they were not caused by sorrow, but by the additional love and peace which animated those noble christian hearts.

In the evening we assembled at the house of Bro. David Bunn to commemorate the sufferings of our dear Redeemer. It was a scene long to be remembered. We were seated around the table, and while partaking of the unleavened bread and the pure juice of the grape, we conversed freely of our relations to Him whom we adore as our Savior, and felt most sensibly that we were enjoying his love and approbation. We think it rarely happens that a company of disciples spend an evening more pleasantly and profitably than did those faithful, dark-browed sons and daughters there assembled. Our Indian brethren had never enjoyed a sacrament in that way before, but they all said it was the most solemn and comforting that they had ever attended. There was a reality to it, that we have never experienced when attending the sacrament in the afternoon, and administered in the ordinary method. Every one spoke of their attachment to the Savior, and their determination to endure to the end in the christian warfare. We sung—and parted with an ardent hope of soon enjoying a happy reunion in the everlasting kingdom.

"When shall we meet again?"

Poems:

By HELEN M. JOHNSON. Boston. Published by J. V. Himes, 46 1-2 Kneeland Street. 1855. 18mo. pp. 250.

This little volume makes no great pretensions—is quite modest and unassuming, but, I think, will bear a better acquaintance.

I am not a great lover of poetry myself, and never read much, excepting reading over my own "doggerel" to see if blundering printers have made it any worse than I left it; but there are persons who love to look in the "poet's corner" in a paper, and who love to read sweet sentiments couched in smooth and gently flowing rhymes. Well, then I think you'll like this book, which is written by one who waits for the consolation of Israel, and looks for the blessed hope of Jesus' appearing. I have observed that our young sisters like the book much, and I think all will read it with profit. The poems are part of them miscellaneous in character, but most of them are the outgushings of a devout heart and a well instructed faith.

There are, I presume, some expressions which may not be quite in accordance with my views of truth, and others not up to "Earth with all thy grief and sorrow,

And thy changes of to-morrow;
With thy woe and with thy parting,
With thy tears of anguish starting,
With thy countless heartstrings breaking,
With thy loved and lost forsaking,
With thy famished millions sighing,
With thy scenes of dead and dying,
With thy graveyards without number,
Where the old and youthful slumber;
Earth, O Earth! thus dark and dreary,
Cold, and sad, and worn, and weary,
Thou art not my home."

I understand that sister Johnson is now confined to her bed by a spinal disease and general debility. Perhaps her harp will soon be hushed in the silence of death,—if so, we will prize the few notes which have floated from it as "songs in the house of our pilgrimage," and we will hope to hear it again, tuned in glorious harmony and swept by her immortal fingers in the paradise of God.

Friends who wish these "Poems," can have them sent post paid by sending 50 cents for the book and 8 cents for postage to J. V. Himes, Boston, Mass. Or it may be ordered of Bro. Grant, or of H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

The profits of the book are appropriated to aid sister J. during her sickness. So those who purchase will do the authoress a good as well as themselves. Buy the bookt and read it!—contains more truth than in half a dozen "Hiawathsa." H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Do They Think?

As I turn over the leaves of the subscription book from day to day I am sometimes led to muse upon the affairs of the subscribers as they stand connected with the Crisis.

There are some who always pay in advance, ever prompt, and consequently I am led to think them very thoughtful of that beautiful rule laid down by the Savior, "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

There is another class, who, though they are doubtless good persons, and love the paper, yet, I fear, don't think enough, for their account is a little behind-hand—and they perhaps forget that there is something due the office from them, for which they have received full value in the fruit of toilsome hours, and, though it is apparent they don't think so, they are burdening the cause which the paper advocates by their seeming neglect.

It seems that if they would but think of the good the paper does by ministering to hundreds of weak ones who have no other preacher—if they would think of the cost of publishing—if they would think of the editor, as with tired brain, and pale brow, and many cares, he day after day toils to prepare the paper for them, and if they would think how much it would lessen his care if they would but send into the treasury what is due—I say it seems that if they would but think of these things, they would willingly and with pleasurable satisfaction, pay what they owe and adopt the advance system for the future.

Ah! I am afraid they don't think! What do you say, kind reader? Do they think of these things—these cares they might so easily lessen—the good they might so easily do? J. H. T.

Boston, May 5th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Queries.

BRO. GRANT:—I see that the seventh-day Sabbath question, after having been allowed its proposed rest, seems to have partially revived again; perhaps to the regret of some of your readers. how may no be particularly interested in the subject. But I hope such will be patient, and bear with those of their brethren and sisters who have a personal interest in the matter To me, it is one of the most important questions on which Adventists are divided, and one for which I have had cause to feel a deep interest for more than two years past. I have been pleased to see it so ably and fairly discussed, both sides of the question being admitted into the columns of the Crisis, which has been justly denominated a "free paper."

It seems as though enough has already been written to convince any one that under the New Testament dispensation, the Law does not demand the observance of any one particular day; yet, as there are a few texts that seem to favor the opposite view, and of which I have seen no explanation, I wish to present them, hoping that some one who may be able and willing to give light, will do so by answering through the Crisis.

Milton's standard of poetry, but there's fifty cents' worth of truth and poetry both, in the book, I'm quite sure.

Here are some sweet lines, entitled,—"Earth not the Christian's Home." We give the first verse.

First. In Matt. 5: 17–18, what law did Christ mean, which he came "not to destroy, but to fulfill?" and what is meant by fulfilling the law? In the 19th verse, what commandments are meant by these commandments? Did he mean simply the ten commandments of the Decalogue, or rather these which he was about giving them, and which are contained in the 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters?

Again, in Matt. 24: 20, why did Christ speak of a Sabbath day so far down in the future if it was no longer obligatory? And what does Paul mean in Rom. 3: 31, when he says,—"Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we establish the law."

These are the strongest passages I find in favor of the perpetuity of the law, or the obligation of the Sabbath; and any one who will favor me with a correct exposition of the same, will oblige one who is desirous of getting the whole truth.

MARTHA.

Woodstock, N. H., June 2nd, 1857.

From Sr. J. Vankleeck.

BRO. GRANT:—It is with much pleasure and edification that I receive the Crisis as a weekly messenger, bringing to me the glorious news of salvation, and the return of our Elder Brother, through whom alone eternal life is brought to light in the gospel. Next to the Bible do I search its contents, and those of the Herald, both of which are sent to me by the aid of kind friends, for which God will reward them at the resurrection of the just.

It is the only source from which I learn anything on the subject of our glorious hope in my lonely situation; for through misfortune and afflictions, I am deprived of the blessed privilege of meeting with my brethren in the house of God, to sing his praise, and worship at his footstool, as I once could. But, I must submit to the will of my heavenly Father, knowing that all things will work together for good to those that love God. My heavenly Father has seen fit to lay me aside for some purpose, which is only best known to him, who knows all things, and who orders all things according to his divine will. I feel willing that his will should be done in me, even if it should be to the loss of all things.

The course in which these two papers are conducted is pleasing to me, as I am not much of a friend to religious controversies, which often gender strife. My earnest prayer to God is, that their conductors may, amidst all trials and persecutions, be able to endure firm unto the end, and continue to give meat in due season to the house of faith, until our Lord returns to gather his people home. I am much pleased with the comforting and cheering epistles which come to me every week, laden with the glorious tidings of the salvation of souls, and that they are still stepping into the gospel pool, at the troubling of the waters. Thanks be to the Lord, for the glorious prospect, and that mercy still lingers, that precious souls can be saved. O Lord, carry on thy good begun work now, in this dark and discouraging time of thy church, while the cry of peace and safety has gone out into the world, and many are saying, "where is the promise of his coming?"

I wish to speak more particularly of the cheering writings, on different subjects, of Brother Elwin Burnham, under whose preaching I have sat many a day, and feasted on the glorious gospel truth that fell from his lips. When I read his epistles, I often wish to see the veteran of the cross,—how gladly would I welcome him to my lonely abode, and receive words of comfort and consolation, in an hour of pain and sore affliction, to cheer the weary pilgrim of threescore years, on her painful journey o'er life's uneven way.

Dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who are of like precious faith with myself, looking for that same Jesus, no doubt the eyes of many dear friends may rest upon these lines, with whom I have spent many happy hours, in conversing on the subject of our glorious hope, in its infancy, who have borne the burden and heat of the day:—let me say to you, and to all that love his appearing, watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. Beware of satan's devices to scatter and destroy the little flock. It becomes us to put forth extra efforts to resist the enemy. This can only be done by unfeigned love to the brethren, which is always in opposition to the works of the enemy. Let us all exercise that charity which covers a multitude of sins, for if we cannot love our brother whom we have seen, how can we love our Elder Brother whom we have not seen?

O, that we may be as wise as serpents, and harmless as doves, and have a conscience void of offence toward God and man; and when we speak let our words be spoken with truth and soberness. Then we shall see more love and union prevail, God's name and word honored, his cause more rapidly advanced, and more of the precious lambs of the flock saved from destruction.

If there ever was a time when we should be ready for the Lord, it is now. The blessed truth of our coming King has been precious to me from its first commencement in '43, until this present. I believe it to be the truth founded on the word of God. I have had many trials, both domestic and religious, to encounter since that time, and it is through grace alone that I am what I am this day. I feel to praise the Lord for the little light I have received, and I hope I shall be able, God assisting me, to improve to his honor and glory, and the good of his cause, which always ought to live nearest to our heart; and I hope that the feeble effort of my pen will not be thrown in the shade, but may that portion of it which has been written in the spirit of my blessed Master and Saviour be productive of some good in whose hands soever it may fall.

Dear brethren, pray for me, that I faint not under my trials and afflictions, which are not a few, although the apostle calls the afflictions of this life "light afflictions which are but for a moment;" yet, we have the comforting promise, they will work out for us "a far more exceeding, and eternal weight of glory," if we prove faithfdt to the end.

My prayer often is, with the beloved disciple, "come, Lord Jesus; and come quickly." Yet I wish to occupy until the Master comes. A sister, in the hope of eternal life at the resurrection of the just.

JOANNA VANKLEECK.

West Brook, Me.

From Sr. M. H. Austin.

BRO. GRANT:—On account of ill health I have not met with my brethren and sisters for two months. Last Sabbath morn I left home for the meeting, but my strength failed. I returned, disappointed and somewhat cast down. Then I thought I would write a few lines for the Crisis that all who read may know I am still on my way rejoicing—still looking for the glorious appearing of Jesus, our dear Savior, to come and commence a peaceful reign on earth, and when his dear children will reign with him, with none to trouble, none to molest or make afraid. I thank God I was ever permitted to hear the sound of the true gospel. To-day I can say,

"I stand upon His precious word,
My soul rejoiceth free;
The glorious light the gospel gives,
Is light that shines for me."

Within a few short years I have passed through the deep, dark waters of affliction. The cruel monster, death, has robbed me. He took my darling Rosa, my first-born, without a moment's warning. But He who is stronger than death whispered to me,—"Be still! and know that I am God!" But death was not yet satisfied. He crept over our threshold once again. It was in the silent watches of the night. We heard not his footsteps—we knew not until the morning dawned that he had taken dear Ada, but he had done his work, and the innocent lamb slept, to wake no more till Jesus comes and brings them all home at last—home at last!

So let death devour, if firm the word of God remain. O, I sigh for home, where, if there are tears they will not be left to dry up, for Jesus will tenderly wipe them all away. I sigh for home. I long to see all who sleep in Jesus—the survivors of the deluge—Moses, the lawgiver, and Joshua the leader of the host—the prophets, and apostles—Paul—John, and all the martrys. Mourning parents, is that all? Where are they who used to lisp, "Father," "Mother"—thy child? If any other than Jesus had said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," you would have said, Yes. Precious Jesus, He'll take care of those little brilliants, and gather them with his jewels.

"O, what a happy meeting,
When salvation is completed!"

There will be joy unspeakable, and glory, "an exceeding and eternal weight." Then let us lift our heads, and rejoice, for there remaineth a rest for the children of God.

Dear brethren, let us rejoice, even now, that we are not always to be on the journey. I believe we are nearing the port, the haven of endless rest.

"Let cares like a wild deluge come," we'll cling to our shield—"gird on the whole armor," and may God help us to try hard to be separate from the world.

"Anoint, O Lord, anoint our sight,
And robe us for that world of light!"

M. H. AUSTIN.

Charlestown, June 2nd, '57.

From Bro. E. A. Davis.

BRO. GRANT:—I have long felt a desire to pen a few thoughts for the perusal of your readers. I would say to them, I want to meet you where there will be no need of this way of communication, and of exhorting, and praying with and for each other. When we are redeemed, our prayer will be turned into praise. Praise the Lord! for his precious promises. Sometimes I think the Lord is unmindful of me, I am so poor and unworthy; but the promise is to me if I am faithful. Brethand Sisters, pray that I may have that grace in my heart which will teach me to "live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."—"Where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." O let us strive to be christians.

Some three years since I was asked by Bro. E. Burnham, the question,—"Ednah, are you a christian?" I answered, "no." I cannot express what were my feelings at that time. I saw myself unsaved. What if the great Judge should come at that moment, what could I expect my sentence would be? not, that I did not love to go to meeting, nor see christians engaged in the cause of Christ, for when but a child I thought I did; but I had not owned a Savior before a dying world, and the Savior has said, "whosoever shall be ashamed of me and my words, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels."—"Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." I prayed to the Lord that he would speak peace to my troubled soul, and promised the Lord that if he would answer my prayer, the first opportunity I had where christians were engaged and praying for the salvation of souls, I would let the world know I meant to strive to be a christian. I soon had an opportunity. I had a vow to pay. It was a cross, but by the help of the Lord and the kind invitations of friends—christian friends—those that were looking for and loving the appearing of Jesus, I began to bear the cross, and I mean, by the grace of God assisting, to strive to the end. O let us strive on; the enemy is mustering all his forces against us, but if we choose Jesus for our Captain and King, he will lead us through.

Yours in hope of redemption,

EDNAH A. DAVIS.

Grantham, N. H., April, 1857.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I am now visiting that part of the parish which I have not for three years past; and although many changes have occurred, yet "the faith" is found, and there is encouragement to labor.

Some, we, in days gone by, often heard speak of the love of Jesus and his glorious appearing, have fallen asleep in Christ, while others have turned back and are not fit for the kingdom of God. But a few, after all the squalls, shipwrecks and disappointments, are holding on to the FAITH, that works by LOVE, purifies the heart—OVERCOMES the world. This class are god-like, obedient, confiding, honest, consistent, peaceable, faithful, persevering, courageous, strong in faith, joyful in hope, and alive in Christ, with all upon the altar. They know Christ IS, has been, and will be with them to the end.

I spent the last Sunday, and certain other days, with the church in Vernon, Vt. And surely there was a large gathering from that region of those who had heard the sound, Behold he cometh! and with their heads uplifted were looking and waiting for redemption. And we had, what may be truthfully called, a heavenly, good time.

It was doubly cheering to see the original faith made operative by the Spirit of God and the truth. Heartfelt and soul-stirring testimonies were given in after preaching all day with increasing interest, they declaring that '43 had come again. But it was '57, after all, only the revival of the faith, love, spirit and zeal of our early days. Good religion had come to life again. Thank the Lord! It is comforting after storms of snow, wind and hail, with their chilling influence, to see the wind change, the sun shine out its refulgent heat, with showers, wetting and warming so that everything in which there is life is made green. O how refreshing! How welcome to the old battle-field soldier! Yea, it puts new life into the whole man. Ah! says he, Jesus still lives, and because he lives we shall live also. Then he is willing to bear reproach, and he chooses to suffer affliction with the people of God. He looks forward, a few more conflicts with the last deceptions, and the warfare is ended, peace is declared, the pension has come.

Dear Brethren, be faithful; be of good cheer; keep the faith, with eyes open, and the word abiding in us, and soon we shall have rest.

In hope, L. BOUTELL.

Northfield, May 29, 1857.

The Noble Island Boy.

A letter from a lady at the Sandwich Islands gives the following incident:—

A custom has long prevailed at the islands of giving away children to be brought up by others; and one little boy, who was the son of one of the Christian families, was thus disposed of to a man who was also a church member. But the foster-father became an apostate, and was cut off from the church. The little boy, now about five years old, went to his own parents and told them that they must be sure and not forget to pray for him, for his new father had "given up prayer," and there was nobody in the house to attend to his soul. He did not wish to leave his own parents again, but was finally persuaded to do so.

But the incident I was even more pleased with was this: Soon after his return, he joined the Cold-Water Army, for there, at the Sandwich Islands, they have the boys enrolled in bands, under the temperance pledge, and they have processions, addresses, and everything just as we do in this country. And their pledge goes further than ours. They promise not to use intoxicating liquors, and also not to use tobacco. A good pledge, a grand pledge; and well would it be, if every boy in the United States of America would promise never to use tobacco. It is a vile weed, and the use of it a filthy habit. A little while after this boy signed the pledge, he ran home again to his own parents, and told them he could not live with those people any longer, for they obliged him to violate his pledge.

"How did they oblige you to do so? Did they make you drunk?" "No," he said.

"Did they make you smoke?" "No," he answered.

"Well, what did they do?"

"Why, they made me bring fire to light their pipes with, and if it isn't right to smoke, it isn't right to carry fire to light their pipes!"

Obituary.

Died in Tingwick, C. E, on the 22nd of May, '57, in the 58th year of her age, Sarah, wife of David Stephens.

This sister, with many others in these parts, was brought to embrace the truth through the labors of Eld. E. Burnham. She was warm in her attachment to the interests of the church, lived a pious life, and after a few days sickness calmly fell asleep in Jesus, in hope of soon seeing a deathless morn.

Her companion feels his loss, and the children, taken by surprise, lay it much to heart; and it is wished that they may make the necessary sacrifice to secure eternal life in the day of His coming, and so stand an undivided family in the kingdom.

Being old settlers in the country, and in respectable standing in the community, the funeral was largely attended by all classes, who listened with attention to a discourse founded on Luke 20: 35-36,—"But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world," &c. J. PORTER.

Danville, C. E., June 4th, 1857.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in North Adams, Mass., May 23d, Loren Benton, aged 51 years, 2 months and 23 days.

Father was attacked with cramp convulsion in the worst form, which deprived him of his reason a part of the time; and although his sufferings were great he did not complain, but trusted in God, his only hope. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss. He was a good father and an affectionate husband; but we sorrow not as others who have no hope. Thanks be to God! he will live again when Jesus comes to unlock the tombs. Then the sleeping saints will come forth with crowns upon their heads. When they shall set their feet upon the immortal shore, what a song will be sung! It will be,—"O death! where is thy sting? O grave! where is thy victory?"

The funeral discourse was preached by the Rev. Mr. Colban, from Job. 14: 10. It was Father's request that Bro. Batchelor should preach, but as he was absent we could not comply therewith.

I have been called to part with a Mother, two Sisters, and a Brother, and now dear Father has left us! But, thank God, they sleep in Jesus. O what a hope! that brings the dead to life! We all feel deeply the loss of dear Father. That voice we heard in prayer to God is stilled in death—his seat is vacant. He has gone!

But Father and Mother will live again; "for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." It is a comfort to think that the time is coming when "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." We have one sweet promise; He has promised to be a Father to the fatherless and the widow's God. May these words of Jesus comfort us,—"I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

R. A. BENTON.

Died in Lawrence, Mass., June 5th, of scarlet fever and canker-rash, Cora G., daughter of George H. and Mary Churchill, aged 2 years, 8 months and 22 days.

For the first time cruel death has been suffered to make an inroad upon this family. The object of a father's and mother's tender affection has been torn from their fond embrace, yet they have hope in its end, and believe that the loved one will come again from the land of the enemy.

"Cora, thou wast mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer breeze;
Pleasant as the air of evening
When it floats among the trees."

A. ROSS.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, June 10.

The steamship Ericsson, from Liverpool May 27, arrived this evening. Her advices are four days later than those by the last European arrival.

Attention has been called to the increased importation of slaves into Cuba, and the inadequate British force on that coast. Lord Palmerston said that Lord Clarendon had renewed his representations to the Spanish government, upon this subject, and no effort would be wanting, as far as diplomatic negotiation could go, to induce the government at Madrid to take effectual steps to put down the trade.

The East India Company have taken possession of the Island of Perim, in the Straits of Babelmandel, and completely commanding the entrance to the Red Sea. The ostensible cause is, that, two years since, an English ship, which was wrecked on the coast of Arabia, was pillaged by the natives. An artillery garrison from India is already placed on the island.

FRANCE.—Although the Paris Bourse has exhibited firmness, private accounts from Paris are not encouraging. It is affirmed that the Bank of France continues to maintain its stock of bullion by artificial purchasers.

The French Commander-in-Chief on the coast of Africa, has seized, in the name of the French government, a tract of land called Dakkar, said to be one of the most important in Senegal.

The Paris Journal des Debats confirms the ratification of the Persian treaty of peace.

It is asserted that the protocol of the Neufchatel question was signed at Paris on the evening of the 26th.

THE REST OF EUROPE.—The relations between Sardinia and Austria, and between Naples and the Western Powers, continued without change.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER CANADA —THREE DAYS LATER NEWS.

NEW YORK, June 11.

The Steamer Canada arrived off Sandy Hook last night, and was detained below by a heavy fog. She left Liverpool at 2 o'clock P. M., on Saturday, May 30, and her dates are consequently three days later than those received by the Ericsson.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Some excitement has been created here by an attack made on an English merchant vessel, in the roadstead of Belle Isle, by a French war-brig. The English vessel was bound from Bordeaux to Liverpool, and was compelled to come to anchor by contrary winds, when, neglecting to hoist her colors, the French vessel fired two blank cartriges, and then a ball cartridge, killing one of the English seamen. The case is under consideration by the authorities.

In the House of Commons, Lord Palmerston mentioned that the treaty proposed for the settlement of the Neufchatel difficulties having been duly signed a few days ago, the dispute might be considered to be satisfactorily terminated.

Mr D'Israeli gave notice, that on that day (30th) week, he should put a question to the Ministry, with reference to the non-ratification of the treaty with America, in regard to Honduras.

Mr. Roebuck called attention to the subject of British relations with Brazil, and moved for a Select Committee to take into consideration those relations and report thereon. He urged that the government of Brazil had acted in good faith in endeavoring to extinguish the slave-trade; that their endeavors had been entirely successful, and that the steps taken by Great Britain, through her ships on the Brazilian coast, were highly offensive to the Brazilian government, and extremely prejudicial to Brazilian commerce. Lord Palmerston opposed the motion as entirely unnecessary, asserting that Mr. Roebuck had made exaggerated statements; that the British cruisers had only acted as they were bound to do for the prevention of the slave trade, and that no improper interference had taken place with the legitimate commerce of Brazil, and that the success of that motion would give encouragement to the slave trade in all directions. After some debate, the motions were rejected by 295 majority.

FRANCE.

The French Ambassador Extraordinary has sailed for China.

The death of Marshal Radetzky of Austria is momentarily expected.

TURKEY AND RUSSIA.

There is a report that the French, Russian, Prussian and Sardinian Commissioners threaten to withdraw from the Principalities, should the Porte persist in removing Vogorides from his post in Moldavia.

There are rumors of coolness between the Emperor of Russia and Count Morny, the French Minister, which is likely to interfere with the settlement of the commercial treaty between Russia and France.

CHINA.

A telegraphic despatch states that the position of affairs in Canton river was unchanged.

At Canton great distress is said to have prevailed, on account of the high price of rice.

Domestic Summary.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, June 11.

The Mexican papers confirm, to the fullest extent, the death of Gen. Crabbe and his associate California fillibusters. Only one youth, 12 years old, was spared.

It was rumored that Crabbe's friends were making horrible reprisals of all the Mexicans who fall into their hands.

The Trait d' Union mentions a rumor that the English squadron will soon make its appearance on the coast, to support that claim.

DISASTROUS FRESHET ON THE ALLEGHANY.—Pittsburgh, Pa., June 10.—The recent heavy rains have caused a sudden rise in the Alleghany River, and the destruction of property afloat has been considerable. An immense fleet of rafts have been destroyed, and a number of boats, loaded with coal and metals, lost, in consequence of breaking from their moorings.

The loss is estimated at from 40,000 to $50,-000.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 11.—There was a tremendous deluge at Dansville on the 9th inst. The canal is in ruins for three miles from Dansville, down the side cut. The locks have given way. The aqueduct remains, but has no embankment.

PENN YAN, N. Y., June 9.—A severe freshet this morning caused serious damage along the whole line of the Crooked Lake Canal. Navigation cannot be resumed before Saturday or Monday next. The storm was the most severe known here for many years.

CUBA, N. Y., June 11.—The Oily Creek Reservoir of the Genesee Valley Canal gave way this evening. The Canal is also somewhat injured.

UTAH APPOINTMENTS.—Washington, June 9—Col. Cummings, to-day, received the appointment of Governor of Utah. The other appointments for the Territory have not been agreed on. Ex-Gov. Thomas did not report for duty, as his friends had pledged he would.

The Secretary of the Treasury, I understand, will recommend the repeal of all laws requiring the coasting trade to be carried on in American ships. This restriction is a tax on trade, and violative of the spirit of the Constitution.—Cor. N. Y. Herald.

Appointments.

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at Rye, N. H., on the fourth Sabbath in June.

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at

Auburn, N. H., Sunday, June 21st
Lawrence, Mass., June 24th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Exeter, N. H., June 25th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Portsmouth, N. H., June 6th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Great Falls, N. H., Sunday, June 28th
Kennebunkport, or where Bro. Elisha Mitchell may appoint, Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th

If any of these appointments come in collision with others already made, brethren must let me know immediately by letter, directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at

Rye, N. H., third Sunday in June.
New Bedford, fourth Sunday in June, and first Sunday in July.

Bro. A. Fox will meet with the Brn. in
Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Sunday, June 21st
Cheshire St., Cheshire, Ct., Sunday, June 28th

Conference.

THE ROCK ISLAND AND EASTERN IOWA SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, July 3d. A good representation is desired. Service at the chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brethren in

Amherst, Thursday eve., June 25th
Northfield Farms, Friday eve., June 26th
Vernon, Vt., Sat. 27th and over the Sabbath.
Brattleboro, Monday 29th (eve.) and Tuesday, day and evening.
Shelburne Falls, Wednesday eve., July 1st, where Bro. Pulsifer may appoint.
Thursday, July 2d, Charlemont, or at Shelburne, as thought best.
Friday, 2 P. M, July 3d, commence a conference in the vicinity of Hawley, or Savoy, as the brethren may appoint, and continue over the Sabbath. Evening meetings commence at half past 7.

H. PRATT.

Wales, June 7, 1857.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Worcester, Sunday, June 21st
North Dana, Sunday, June 28th
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th
Granby, Mass., Sunday, July 19th

D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Buffalo, N. Y., Sunday, June 21st, and shall immediately visit Detroit, Mich.; Kalamazoo, Buchanan, Mich.; Laporte, and the region round about, Ind.; Chicago, Milwaukie, Wis.; mesville, Woodstock, Ill.; and shall keep at work, giving some particulars hereafter.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Rochester, N.Y.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

D. Randall 119, A. H. Bartholomew, 111, O Jones, 117, L. Andrews 119, N. Hall 108, N Pendleton 109, S. Martin 104, H. Barnard 104, Eld. J. Porter, E. Miller 119, R. Bedd 119, H. Babcock 121, F. Ferandes 112, M. Austin 143, Eli Pierce 143, M. Ferren 78, H. Burriday 104, J. S. Addis 119, J. H. Trufant 108, M. D. Gibson 78, A Spour 104, J. T. Langley 130, $1 each.

E. P. Beach 145, Mary Wentworth 145, Susanna Grant, 208, H. Champlin 145, D. Butler 69, J. E. Healey 108, S. K. Gibson 119, $2 each.

J. C. Munson 117, Mrs. A. Burnham 108, C. F. Churchil 93, J. L. Rich 104, M. Hobart 104, 50 cents each.

D. Kinsman $5; C H. Russ 123, $1.75; S. P. Hubbard 149, $3; J. Proctor 93, 58 cents.

FOR THE POOR.—From Cold Spring, Mass., $1; H. Champlin, $1; M. Hobart 50 cents; Silas Tucker $1.12.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—Mrs. Wise 53 cents; J. C. Wheeler 27 cents; C. F. Churchil, 50 cents; Silas Tucker $1 12.

BOOKS SENT.—C. F. Churchil, J. C. Wheeler, Silas Tucker.

To Correspondents.

C. F. Churchil—We have none of "Bound Tracts" on hand, therefore send the unbound.

A. Crabtree—Your letter was received.

W. Shepherd—We have not one copy of No. 14.

If any reader of the Crisis has a copy of the Crisis which was published sometime in June last year, containing an article of mine, entitled, "Faith, Hope and Love," they will confer a great favor by sending me a copy of the same to Vernon, Vt.

O. P. ALLEN.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State; and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, post age paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A C Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; full bound in gilt, $1—pos. 9 cts.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

CHRISTIAN LONGINGS.

Oh, but to look with long and ling'ring gaze
Upon thy scenes, thy fair scenes, "promised land,"
Where Heaven's own glory, in effulgent rays,
Dispels each shadow, bathing sea and strand.

Oh, but to plant my weary wand'ring feet
Upon thy tow'ring, everlasting heights;
To walk thy dazzling city's golden street,
Amid the gleam of its eternal lights.

Oh, but to hear celestial music's strains,
The "Hallelujah" of redemption's song,
The swelling notes that roll o'er heav'nly plains,
While ceaseless echoes the deep tones prolong.

Oh, but to mingle with the deathless band,
Where love unchanging beams in every eye;
In holy friendship clasp an angel's hand,
And taste exaltedjoys that never die.

Oh, but to sit 'neath Life's green, waving tree,
In that sweet hallowed rest earth may not know;
The tranquil spirit from all sorrow free,
Calm as Life's river in its peaceful flow.

Oh, but to gain thy shores, new, beauteous Earth,
But once to find in thee our "lot," our home!
Oh, but to waken to immortal birth,
And hail creation in its Eden bloom!

MARIA T.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

WRITTEN ON THE DEATH OF "LITTLE MARY WHITNEY."

Cease, stricken hearts, no longer mourn
For her whose spirit's fled;
The loved one in the grave is laid,
And she rests with the dead.

Those dear, loved lips have softly breathed
Their long, their last "good bye,"
And gentle hands have smoothed her brow,
And closed her faded eye.

Oh! weep not that your cherished flower
Has found an early tomb;
For in the Garden of our God
'Twill in full beauty bloom.

Then weep not for the dear lost one,
Whose earthly race is run;
But meekly bow before the Lord,
And say,—"THY WILL BE DONE."

JULIA A. B. CHAMPNEY.

Williamstown, Mass., May 13, '57.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Brotherly Love.

"Love as brethren!" "Let brotherly love continue!"

Let it continue! how long? During the time of the revival in which we became the subjects of grace and were made the brethren of Christ by the union of faith and love, of the members of the body of Christ by the same power of affection, or attraction, from like moral elements?—while "we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren?" Then, why should we not toil on, as brethren, that we may enjoy this one good evidence of our acceptance with God? Should it last while the "time" is being preached, and all feel that they are especially getting ready—in '44 or '54, or any other time, or in any place? Or, should it last forever? Forever let it abide.

But what is the use? I cannot entertain affection. Well, is it of no consequence that, "If a man love not his brother whom he has seen, how can he love God whom he has not seen?" Will you trifle with the great truth that we are to love one another as Christ loved us? And what did he behold to love? He saw what we might become by a manifestation of love! And, believe me! he wishes us to act as agents in securing faith in his name, that the world may believe, by our loving one another.

Sometimes proselyting begins before revivals end; but not long before, for that soon puts an end to them. Is this brotherly love, or the fruits of it? Sometimes a lamb is fed with too strong food; is this the wisdom of love? The "weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations."

Again, the convert, with weak faith, weak conscience, weak love, but good what there was of it, has beheld, and with disgust, the "vain jangling" and doubtful disputations which "gender strife," not love, but the opposite. Was that brotherly? Say, brother, was it? Will our being "contentious about words to no profit," establish, promote, perpetuate, Charity?

DALETH.

For the Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—My heart responds to the prayer of your correspondent, "May our heavenly Father enable those dear brethren and sisters who write for the Crisis to be filled with the spirit of our dear Savior." It is easy to write something, but we need more of the unction of the Holy Spirit, and a more single eye to the glory of God, the edification of his people and the conversion of dying and accountable men.

O that we could realize more fully the important import and reasonableness of the declaration, "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." Too little, alas! do we feel the blessed influence of redeeming love, inducing us to bear the cross and to occupy our time and talents to promote the well-being of our fellow-men, for which the Son of God suffered and died. O that we had more of his self-denying spirit, counting not our lives, or wealth, or ease, or honor, dear unto ourselves, but willingly consecrating all to the glory of God and the good of perishing men.

We lose sight too much of the true standard of christian duty and christian privilege. The true standard is not the example of professors of godliness who surround us. It is the example of Him whose constant meat was to do the will of his Father; who toiled, and prayed, and suffered, to redeem wretched men from everlasting death! We may bear a favorable comparison with many modern professors of religion, who are conforming to this present world and yet come far short of our high duty and privilege. "Looking unto Jesus," should be our motto. Onward, in the sacred path he has marked out for us, by his bright example of decision, of holy purpose and self-denying action, until we attain the stature of perfect men in Christ Jesus. Dear Father, grant us, for this blessed end, the sanctifying influences of thy Holy Spirit.

H. G.

From Bro. W. H. Wild.

Brn. and Srs.:—Cheer up, it is almost daybreak! The bright morn of glory is soon to burst upon us. The Good Shepherd is soon to come and gather his scattered flock into one fold. They are indeed scattered; you might hear them bleating on the mountains and through the valleys, sighing, and mourning for the Good Shepherd to come and call them together. The wolf comes, once in a while, and catches up a lamb, and runs away with it; but those that know His voice will not hear the voice of strangers.

O how the sheep love their Shepherd. He has laid down his life for them. I know that many formerly said, "he hath a a devil," and "is mad;" "why hear ye him?" Even so it is now; if we prove to them by the word of God that the Son of God is about to come in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels, then they say,—"away with him, away with him; we will not hear him—he is a deceiver—he is beside himself—he had not ought to be allowed to preach such doctrine." O, I would to God that people might see the truth. O, if they would only look back, and see that good old man, leaving his goods, yea, all things because he believed that the city would soon be wrapped in flames. He not only cared for his own soul, but we read of his going to bear the news to his sons-in-law. How do they receive him? do they thank him for the timely warning? No; but he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

Well, reader, do you know that Lot was a type of the children of God just before the Savior should appear, and even old Noah? But you ask me to prove this. I shall, and by Father's word, too. Now come with me to the 17th chapter of Luke, 26, 27, 28, and 29th verses, and indeed the whole chapter is very interesting to the pilgrim. If you have ever read of the advent people, you will find that they are not treated any better. You will find that they are scoffed at by the world,—even so the scriptures must be fulfilled.

O glory to God, with an eye of faith I can see the children of God arise, and enter the pearly gates of that fair city. Children, don't give up now, soon you will arise and meet your long absent and glorified Savior. Be faithful, a little longer, and you shall range the sweet plains of the new earth. Let not your hearts be troubled. Your pathway may be strewed with temptations, but, "blessed is the man that endureth temptations; for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." Wherefore, my beloved Brn. and Srs., let us lay aside "all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save" our souls.

Blessed be the God of heaven, for such a glorious hope! It fills my soul with joy. Hallelujah! to the Lamb! O, ye that are mourning and sighing for that blessed time to come, when ye shall see Jesus and be made like him, sing unto the Lord! let the hills and mountains echo with his praises! bless his name! Show forth his salvation from day to day, for he has begotten us unto a lively hope.

When I look out upon the world I can but join with the poet—

"Farewell, dreary earth, by sin so blighted,
In immortal beauty soon you'll be arrayed."

Brn. and Srs., many of you, no doubt feel what it is to be lonely, surrounded by cold-hearted professors, nothing to cheer you but God's blessed word; but thank God for that. Your brother looking for that blessed hope.

WM. H. WILD.

Lenox, Mass.

From the Christian Messenger.

Work.

Yes, work; not be an everlasting drone in the vineyard of God. You have something to do besides to plow, plant and dig; something to do besides to reckon interest and make entries; something to do besides note-shaving and speculation; something to do besides playing hide and seek with your creditors, and dodging about so as to make a show in the world; something to do besides buying farms and oxen and merchandize; something to do besides aping some great peacock that lives at the white house on the hill yonder; something to do besides flaunting in silks and satins, in cockle-shell bonnets and paper-soled shoes, in hottentotish jewelry and in coach-wheel hoops. Yes, something else to do!—Don't you know it?

"What is the chief end of man—
To gather up riches and cheat all he can?"

I trow not. Man! you have something else to do. Are you a Christian? A follower of Him who went about doing good? A servant of the "man of sorrows?" A lover of Christ? Well then, sir, you have something else to do! Something high, mighty and glorious! Away with this beastly life—this compound of hog, monkey and peacock. You have a higher destiny. Be a man,—yea, more, be a Christian. Live for the world to come. Do try and have a treasure laid up there; have an inheritance from which death can never snatch you, and which the fires of the day of judgment cannot consume. Up! get you out of this place! Away from the plains of destruction to the mountain of refuge and of safety. "Arise ye, and depart, for this is not your rest; because it is polluted and it will destroy you even with a sore destruction." There is danger lurking around you. There is poison in those flowers. Satan has his hook in that pile of gold. That tempting morsel is but the bait of an infernal trap. That profession of yours too may be a mere sham to ease your conscience and make you feel quiet in that lethargic sleep which precedes eternal death!

Man, awake! The righteous are scarcely saved. Such men as Abel and Enoch and Noah and Abraham and Samuel and John and Paul and Peter, and all the saints of the Most High, these men were scarcely saved—they but just escaped perdition through divine mercy, and if so where will you appear? You who only find time to pray Sundays?—Who think oftener of shillings than you do of souls? You who say "to-morrow shall be as this day and much more abundant?" You who pass the time of your sojourning here, not in fear, but in gaiety and joy? What account will you render for wasted time, for hoarded wealth, for luxury and flesh-pleasing? What can you say for neglected duties, for abused privileges, for neglected blessings?

O, sir, there is a solemn reckoning coming. The great day of God Almighty will make the things of this world appear very differently from what they do at present. And then can you stand before God and expect to be accepted of him? Jesus Christ who is judge knows by experience all the frailties and weaknesses of humanity, and can make all due allowance for them; but he also knows the abilities and capabilities of all, and he will not say "well done," if you have done nothing. He will not say "good and faithful," if you are evil and unfaithful. The great day will develop our true characters and assign to each the just award. Are we ready for its decisions? Can we meet its dread array of awful verities? O, are we in Christ? Are his commandments not grievous but joyous to us? Let us search ourselves and see. Let us try our ways. Let us turn to the Lord. Let us work while the day lasts. Let us labor with our eye on God and Christ and everlasting life. Let us get nearer the Savior. Let us seek to know the heights and depths of his amazing love. Then, standing within the ark of refuge, let us call upon a perishing world to enter ere the floods of desolating wrath descend. Let us work while the day lasts. "Wherefore, beloved, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God that worketh in you, both to will and to do, of his good pleasure. Do all things without murmurings and disputings; that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world."—Phil. 2: 12-15.

PITH.

Choice Selections.

PLEASANT WEATHER.

Thank God for pleasant weather!
Chant it, merry rills!
And clap your hands together,
Ye exulting hills!
Thank Him, teeming valley!
Thank him fruitful plain!
For the golden sunshine,
And the silver rain.

Thank God, of good the Giver!
Shout it, sportive breeze!
Respond, O tuneful river!
To the nodding trees!
Thank him, bud and birdling!
As ye grow and sing!
Mingle in thanksgiving,
Every living thing!

Thank God, with cheerful spirit,
In a glow of love,
For what we here inherit,
And our hopes above!
Universal nature
Revels in her birth,
When God, in pleasant weather,
Smiles upon the earth!

Apostrophe to Water.

BY JOHN B. GOUGH.

"Water! oh, bright, beautiful water for me!" Water! Heaven-gifted, earth-blessing, flower-loving water! It was the drink of Adam in the purity of his Eden home—it mirrored back the beauty of Eve in her unblushing toilet—it wakens to life again the crushed and fading flower—it cools, oh, how gratefully! the parched tongue of the feverish invalid—it falls down to us in pleasant showers from its home with the glittering stars—it descends to us in feathery storms of snow—it smiles in glittering dew-drops at the glad birth of morning—it clusters in great tear-drops at night over the graves of those we love—its name is wreathed in strange, bright colors, by the sunset cloud—its name is breathed by the dying soldier, far away on the torrid field of battle—it paints old forts and turrets from a gorgeous easel upon your winter window—it clings upon the branches of trees in frostwork of delicate beauty—it dwells in the icicle—it lives in the mountain glacier—it forms the vapory groundwork upon which God paints the rainbow—it gushes in pearly streams from the gentle hill-side—it makes glad the sunny vales—it murmurs cheerful song in the ear of the humble cottager—it answers back the smiles of happy children—it kisses the pure cheek of the water lily—it wanders like a vein of molten silver away, away to the distant sea. Oh, bright, beautiful, health-inspiring, heart-gladdening water! Everywhere around us dwelleth thy meek presence—twin angel sister of all that is good and precious here—in the wild forest—on the grassy plain—slumbering in the bosom of the lonely mountain—sailing with viewless wings through the humid air—floating over us in curtains of more than regal splendor—home of the healing angel when his wings bend to the woes of this fallen world—

"Oh, water for me, bright water for me!
And wine for the tremulous debauchee."

A Fact with a Moral.

A celebrated artist, in one of his rambles, met with the most beautiful child he had ever seen. "I will paint the portrait of this child," he said, "and keep it for my own; for I may never look upon its like again." He painted it, and when trouble came, and evil passions moved his spirit to rebel, he gazed upon the likeness of the boy, and passion fled, and holier thoughts entranced his soul.

Years passed away, and at length, within a prison's walls, stretched upon a floor of stone, he sees a man stained with blood, with glaring eyes and haggard face, and with demoniac rage, cursing himself and his fellow beings, and blaspheming God, as he lay waiting for the hour of his execution. The artist transferred his likeness, also, to canvass, and placed it opposite to the child's. How striking, how complete the contrast! The angel boy—the fiendish man!

What must have been the feelings of the artist, when, upon inquiry, he ascertained that both the portraits he had made were of the same individual! The beautiful, innocent child, had grown into the hideous, sinful man!

Love.

Love is the golden chain which binds earth and heaven together, which holds mortals in the attitude of reverence before God, and which raises man from the depths of his sin and pollution to a life of christian holiness. Love is the native element of heaven, the atmosphere of the angel world. God has breathed it upon the world. Jesus came at its bidding, lived in its constant fellowship and communion, and is still a living epistle of its excellence and power.

Love is the greatest power and force which exists. It conquers hatred and malice, melts icy hearts, and gives life to the spiritually dead. It brings in its train the bud, blossom and fruit of holiness. It lives with peace and departs from discord. It brings gladness to the home and heart, and makes the family circle a type of heaven. "Love one another."—Gospel Banner.

The Glory of the Heavens.

What emotions of wonder and sublime pleasure fill the soul when contemplating the beauty and glory of the physical heavens! As we behold the sun "walking in his brightness," the moon and stars moving in their order, and splendor and perfection appearing everywhere, we are compelled to exclaim, "Mighty God, there are no works like unto thy works!" No language is more appropriate, on such an occasion, by which to express one's thoughts, than that made use of by the ancient singer of Israel: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handy-work. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath He set a tabernacle for the sun, which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race. This going forth is from the end of the heavens, and His circuit unto the ends of it; and there is nothing hid from the heart thereof."—Newburyport Herald.

E. B.

Christ the Bread of Life.

AN EXPOSITION.

"I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."—John 6: 51.

These words are charged with the most precious meaning, and it is our intention to enter fully, though briefly, into an examination of them. Without any preliminary observations, we request the reader to observe first, the character in which Jesus here represents himself—"I am the living bread which came down from heaven." The parties to whom our Savior thus addressed himself, had required from him some miraculous display of divine power, as an evidence that he was in reality what he professed to be—a messenger from God; and they supported their demand by referring to the circumstance of their fathers having been miraculously fed in the wilderness by the hand of Moses—"Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat." Jesus replied to their request by asserting that God had given them a blessing of far superior value, and that he himself was this transcendant gift. "My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven: I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever."

The phrase, "from heaven" is equivalent to "from God;" hence he styles himself "the bread of God," the bread of God's providing. It was God who, in the fullness of his compassion, sent his well beloved Son into this world that we might not perish but have everlasting life.

When Jesus represents himself as "bread," he plainly intimates that one grand object of his mission was to give life. The only use of bread is to sustain life. The moment bread is deprived of its life-preserving quality—the moment it fails to communicate nutriment—that instant it becomes void of all worth. It follows, then, that the only proper mark of analogy between Christ and bread consists in his being the source of life to all who receive him as their Savior. It is commonly thought that the Lord Jesus is not the source of life to believers; that men will remain in being perpetually, let their conduct be what it may: that it is not as the communicator of everlasting life, but of everlasting happiness, that he is self-styled "the bread of life." Such a doctrine is not only unwarranted by the Savior's teachings, it is directly opposite to it. The property of bread is not to communicate happiness, for how many at this hour have abundance of bread, and continue in wretchedness! Life, not happiness, is the product of bread; and it is because Jehovah has constituted his Son the giver of Immortality to all who obey him, that, in the passage before us, he designates himself "the bread of life." This will appear more obvious when we attend to the remainder of the verse.

The expression, "living bread," may be understood as descriptive of the superior quality of this God-given food, to the manna referred to by the Jews as having been provided for their ancestors in the wilderness. This is evident from what we find in verses 49th and 50th—"Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die." The superiority of the bread of which Jesus discoursed, consists in this, that it not merely preserves life, it imparts everlasting being. The Jews addressed by our Lord thought only of supplies for the present existence; his grand aim was to elevate their aspirations to a life beyond this state of things—a life that would not end its periods in the horrors of dissolution; one, in short, that would be as enduring as the fountain of being himself. Hence the great Teacher declares, "I am the living," i. e., the life-giving "bread, which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever." In the remainder of the passage Jesus continues to speak of himself as the life-giving One—"The bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." We are not to understand by these words, that it was merely by rendering up a part of himself that he was to bring eternal life within the reach of dying men. By his "flesh" he evidently meant himself; for in verses 35 and 48, as well as in the one before us, he plainly affirms that he himself is the bread of life. This appears still more plain when we compare his language in the 54th verse, and what he delivers in verse 57. In the one verse he says that "all who eat his flesh shall have eternal life;" in the other, that "as the living Father had sent him, and he lived by the Father, in the same manner they who ate him should live by him.' The flesh of Jesus, then, is Jesus himself; and when he intimates that he would give his "flesh," he taught his hearers that he would give himself for the life of the world.

The two parts of the verse, then, exhibit the same truth, that Jesus is the bringer in of life to a death-doomed race. Still, we are inclined to view the second part of the verse as in some measure explanatory of the first part. Jesus in the first place states the fact, that he is life-giving bread sent from God, that all might eat and live forever; and then he describes the process by which he becomes the source of life, or endless being to guilty men, viz.,—by giving his flesh, rendering up himself to death, for the life of the world.

Herein, indeed, is love! Reader, will you contemplate it with earnestness? Jesus gave himself for you, and what more could he give? The whole world lies in wickedness, and on that account is worthy of everlasting destruction—for "the wages of sin is death;" but the Lord from heaven, in boundless compassion, "gave himself a ransom for all." He became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, from which God speedily raised him up and gave him glory. He rose victorious over death, the first fruits of them that slept. In receiving him as our Savior, and being reconciled unto God through the influence of his love, we become heirs of unending being: we may rejoice in hope of Immortality. This hope will be realized at his coming, when his people are to be ransomed from the grave, and fashioned like unto his own glorious person.

And now, reader, permit the inquiry, What think you of Christ? What think you of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ? Think, O! think of his love till your heart melts in tenderness within you, and tears of contrition and gratitude flow from your eyes! Listen how he calls you, in tones of the most moving accents, while pointing to the Son of his love who expired for your sins, he exclaims, "TURN YE, TURN YE, WHY WILL YE DIE?"—Expositor, [Edinburgh, Scotland.]

W. L.

A THOUGHT OF MARTIN LUTHER.—Luther remarked, that there were three things on which he could not bear to dwell, without Christ; viz., his sins, death, and the day of judgment.

Correction does much, but encouragement does more. Encouragement after censure, is as the sun after a shower.

One rose upon a bush, though but a little one, proves that which bears it to be a true rose-tree.

"The words that fall on mortal ear,
Like dew drops pure at even,
To soothe the breast or start the tear,
Are mother, home, and heaven."

A NOVEL PUNISHMENT.—In the middle ages, in France, a person convicted of being a calumniator was condemned to place himself on all fours, and bark like a dog for a quarter of an hour. If this custom were adopted at the present day, there would be some bowwowing.

For Children.

Signs.

Solomon said, many centuries ago: "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right."

Some people seem to think that children have no character at all. On the contrary, an observing eye sees in these young creatures the signs of what they are likely to be for life.

When I see a little boy slow to go to school, and glad of every excuse to neglect his book; I think it a sign that he will be a dunce.

When I see a boy in haste to spend every penny as soon as he gets it; I think it a sign that he will be a spendthrift.

When I see a boy hoarding up his pennies, and unwilling to part with them for any good purpose; I think it a sign that he will be a miser.

When I see a boy or girl always looking out for themselves, and dislike to share good things with others; I think it a sign that the child will grow up a very selfish person.

When I see boys and girls often quarreling; I think it a sign that they will be violent and hateful men and women.

When I see a little boy willing to take strong drink; I think it a sign that he will be a drunkard.

When I see a boy smoking or chewing tobacco; I think it a sign that he will soon be guilty of other filthy habits.

When I see a boy who never prays; I think it a sign that he will be a profane and profligate man.

When I see a child obedient to its parents; I think it a sign of great future blessings from Almighty God.

When I see a boy fond of the Bible, and well acquainted with it; I think it a sign that he will be a pious and happy man.

And though great changes sometimes take place in the character, yet, as a general rule, these signs do not fail.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1857. WHOLE NO. 95. VOL. V. NO. 17.

The World's Crisis.

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

BAPTISM.

Convert, arise, and be baptized,
For Christ has led the way,—
If by the world you are despised,
Yet thy dear Lord obey.

Yes, pass into thy watery grave,
Be buried with thy Lord;
He from the pow'r of death can save,
The OBEDIENT he'll reward.

Here end thy former life of sin,
And lay the "old man" by;
Here rise a new life to begin,
And carnal self deny.

Bid earthly pleasures disappear,
Taste only joys divine;
Then let the proud world scoff and sneer,
True pleasures now are thine.

W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, M. T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. VII.

In my last I adverted to Julian, the successor of Constantine, who, to belie, if possible, the fulfillment of prophecy, attempted the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem—to show the gazing world that the Jewish worship should be restored where the Messiah had said the Gentiles should continue to tread. But how vain and powerless is the arm of flesh when brought in contact with the almighty arm of Jehovah! Here was to be a trial of strength, by two mighty antagonists—the powers of heaven and the powers of earth—in determined contest. Jews and Romans, christians and heathens gazed to see whether the emperor could, or could not go contrary to the declaration uttered by the Man of sorrows, who had not where to lay his head.

Scoffer! behold the contest! See the mighty potentate of earth, at whose nod the nations tremble, with his cohorts and legions, with Jews and heathens, with all their gold at the Monarch's command, who are assembled from all parts of the world in Jerusalem. They commence the work. Men, women and children, in their festive garments, and with tools richly adorned with gold and silver, laboring at preparing the foundation. But Jehovah spake! "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no further." All at once, balls of subterranean fire burst forth from the spot, accompanied with an earthquake and hurricanes of wind, which compelled them to discontinue their work.

The skeptical of the present day we often find entirely unacquainted with such historic facts as the above, and which are but of a secondary consideration. The most and all-important question is, who is the true Messiah? And upon the right answer to it depends the knowledge of eternal life.

It is said,—"ye are saved through faith." Eph. 2: 8; Hab. 2: 4. But Paul in another place says,—"we are saved by hope." Rom. 8: 24. And the Lord, speaking by Hosea, says,—"My people are destroyed for lack of KNOWLEDGE." Hos. 4: 6. All these texts illustrate but one and the same truth, under different relations or aspects; for "THIS is life eternal, (as our Lord himself says,) that they might KNOW THEE the only true God, and JESUS CHRIST, whom thou hast sent." John 17: 3. Hence, we see the absolute necessity of KNOWLEDGE. We are saved by the KNOWLEDGE OF CHRIST, and we are to know Christ by the works that he did. Christ was to abolish the old and introduce a new dispensation. I would ask the skeptical, has Jesus, the Christ, done that? I think that I have given incontrovertible evidence that the Messiah has abolished the ceremonies of the law of Moses, and brought in a more perfect and rational economy. Compare Jer. 31: 31–34, with Heb. 8: 6–13, and 2 Cor. 3: 3.

Messiah was to be cut off, but not for himself,—Jesus Christ, who was holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners, was cut off by the hands of wicked men. Compare Dan. 9: 26; Isa. 53: 8, with Matt. 26th and 27th chapter.

When the Messiah should come there was to be "a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness,"—when Christ came he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, and by the shedding of his blood once for all. Compare Zech. 13: 1, and Heb. 9th and 10th chapters.

Again, the Messiah was to make atonement for the iniquities, transgressions and sins of the world,—Jesus Christ was a propitiation for the whole world. Compare Isa. 53: 5; Dan. 9: 24; 1 John 2: 1, 2.

The Messiah that we delight in was not to lie in the grave and turn to corruption like other men,—Jesus Christ did not continue in the grave, nor did he see corruption like the rest of mankind. Compare Psalm 16: 10, with Matt. 28: 6.

When Messiah should arise from the dead, he was to bring some token with him of his victory over death,—when Jesus Christ arose from the dead "he led captivity captive," unloosed the bands of death, and raised many bodies of the saints which were confined under his dominion. Compare Psalm 68: 18, with Matt. 27: 52.

Messiah was to send down from heaven the gift of the Holy Spirit, as a token and pledge that he was accepted, and that the Father was pleased with what he had done upon earth for the redemption of mankind,—Jesus Christ sent down the gift of the Holy Spirit, in the most conspicuous and miraculous manner. Compare Psalm 68: 18; Joel 2: 28–32, with Acts 2: 1–4, and Eph. 4: 8–12.

It is worthy of remark here, that when our Lord, after his resurrection, "beginning at Moses and all the Prophets," had expounded unto his Apostles in "all the scriptures the things concerning himself," and "opened their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures," (Luke 24: 27, 45,) then they saw plainly (and, if any one now, let him be ever so skeptical, IF HONEST, will but trace the whole thread of the Old Testament, may plainly see,) that there was one uniform analogy and design carried on for many ages by divine prescience through a succession of prophecies, which, as in their proper centre, do all meet together in Christ, and in him only.

But, again, the doctrine of the Messiah was to begin to be preached at Jerusalem, and from thence to spread itself through the nations,—the gospel of Christ was first preached in that city, and actually dispersed itself through all the neighboring countries in the course of a few years. Compare Isa. 2: 1–4; Micah 4: 1–4, with Acts 2d chap. and Rom. 10: 18.

The followers of Messiah should meet with great and severe trials and persecutions for their adherence to his cause,—the followers of Jesus Christ had the whole world in arms against them for several ages. Compare Isa. 66: 5, and Matt. 3: 1–3, with Matt. 10: 16–18, and 1 Cor. 4: 9.

It was predicted that the Messiah would make a great and visible difference between his believing and unbelieving countrymen,—when the Romans besieged Jerusalem, nearly two millions of unbelieving Jews perished, while every single believer fled out of the city and escaped in safety to the mountains. Compare Mal. 3d and 4th Chap., with the History of that remarkable siege.

The rejectors of Messiah should be rejected of God, and his followers called by another name,—the Jews, who would not have Christ to rule over them, were rejected by him, and his followers were called by another name, through divine appointment, as it should seem, to accomplish this prophecy. Compare Isa. 62: 2; Isa. 65: 15, with Acts 11: 26.

I have now given some ninety-nine predictions proving that Jesus is the Messiah; and every one pertaining to his nature, birth, life, doctrine, suffering, death, resurrection, and ascension, has been fulfilled to the very letter.

And, as I have stated before, there can be no doubt respecting the priority of the prediction to the birth of Christ, because it is well known to every person who is at all conversant in these matters, that the Old Testament was translated out of Hebrew into the Greek language, and dispersed over the world many years before Christ came; and the latest of the predictions was upwards of three centuries before the birth of the Redeemer of mankind. Such a variety of circumstances, therefore, predicted concerning one man, so many years before he was born, of so extraordinary a nature, and under such convulsions and revolutions of civil governments, all accomplished in Christ, and in no other person that ever appeared in the world, point him out with irresistible evidence as the Savior of mankind. I now call upon, and challenge the most hardened skeptic in Christendom to refute the conclusion.

For the Crisis.

The Two Songs.

I.—THE SONG OF LAMENTATION.

"Whose is now the requiem lone,
Pealing on the evening wind?
Whose is now the spirit gone,
Leaving hearts of care behind?"

Pause, careless passer-by! gaze on yonder group assembled in the lone churchyard. Enter there and behold the sorrowing scene. Over a newly dug grave mourning hearts are bending. Death has sundered the ties of earthly affection, and from a circle of doting friends has snatched a loved one of bright and promising years, who now slumbers beneath the dark coffin which is closed in sadness on a heart that once beat high with hope.

Ah! listen now to that song, to that requiem of sadness, as it rises mournfully above the silent slumberer. How tearfully the choir lift their trembling voices to chant the solemn notes of sorrow for the departed one. Oh! how that song of lamentation opens anew the fountain of grief in the hearts of the weeping mourners, as its deep and solemn strain rises on their ears and dies away in subdued echoes along the distant groves. How it awakens the scenes of other years, when the voice of the departed mingled with theirs, and joy filled their hearts.

At length the song for the dead is ended; the heart-saddening words—"Dust to dust, clay to clay," are pronounced, and the mournful train passes away from the scene of burial. Long years may gather around the pathway of those who wept at the recital of their loved one's requiem, but they will never forget the tearful strain, no, never; for at times its echo will come thrilling back on their memory and melt again their hearts to tears.

The great harp of life often echoes forth pleasan notes of soothing harmony, and for a time makes the heart forget its woes; but alas! how soon the breeze that bears the choaking sigh strikes again its strings, and causes once more the notes of grief to vibrate.

Amid the busy throngs of crowded cities, in the quiet homes of the country, in cottage and palace, we may, ever and anon, hear a melancholy strain swelling above the loudest echo of pleasure's song, and that strain is the voice of lamentation bursting from the hearts of earth's sorrowing children. It whispers in our ears the sighs of widows and orphans, of houseless wanderers, and outcasts of the world.

But the heart grows weary with the recital of sorrows, and eagerly asks if no song of triumph shall ever the tongue employ. Yes, rest assured, thou lonely dweller among the weeping willows of the tomb, there will arise a song of gladness, that will forever cheer the heart with its melodious harmonies. A day, a bright auspicious day will dawn, when no requiem of sadness will be heard, when no knell of departed friends will send forth its sad echo.

II.—THE SONG OF TRIUMPH.

"Hosanna! hark! the melody
Strikes sweetly on my ravished ear!
The constellations make reply,
In echoes from each distant sphere,
Till all the wide expansion rings
With 'Live forever, King of Kings!"

A new scene now bursts upon our view. The ravishing scenes of elysian fields stretch away into illimitable space before us, clothed with all the rich luxuriance of primeval Paradise. The long night of sorrow and pain has been dissolved by the radiant beams of the newly risen sun of immortal light. And now the glad song of triumph is about to begin—the victorious song of earth's redeemed. Around the heights of Zion, bathed with the effulgent light of Jehovah, gather the myriads redeemed from all climes and nations. The great jubilee anthem is about to be sung—the triumphant song of victory over the works of darkness.

Behold, yonder, the mighty ranks of seraphs around the throne of Emanuel! how their golden lyres glisten in the sunlight of heaven. Anon the seraph hosts awake their lyres to notes of harmonious music,—at first, so soft and subdued that it entrances every heart; then, as they raise higher their notes of victory, each rank catches up the strain and swells it from host to host, till from the glorious heights of Zion the deep volume of angelic song awakes the universe with the swelling echoes of its melody. Anon the jubilant strain dies away on the lips of some distant rank, when softly and sweetly it is commenced again by the melting symphonies of angelic choirs, and increases once more as the mighty anthem rolls along the street and through the portals of the heavenly city, till the distant hills of Paradise tremble again at the long exultant chorus repeated with the strength of myriad voices.

Behold, amid this gorgeous pageantry of heaven, the martyred millions, who bled and died for truth. Higher and loftier is the note they strike in this triumph song of redemption. There, too, are the prophets and patriarchs of olden years, and bolder is the music that their harps echo forth than when on earth they played. There behold the young, the early dead, now raised in their Master's likeness; how sweet and thrilling is their voice-music as it mingles with the grand universal hymn of praise to Jehovah.

Yea, there are all assembled who sought to obey their Master's will, and shrank not at the withering gaze of a scorning world. Now they reap their reward; now they can join in chanting the song of glorious triumph over their enemies. Now the hymn of gladness is on every tongue. No sound of sorrow is heard. No note of grief breaks upon the universal harmony that reigns over all, for now the breezes that sweep the strings of the great harp of heaven, bear sounds of unmingled gladness upon their wings. No cause of sadness now remains, "for former things have passed away."

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

Vernon, Vt., May 30, 1857.

"MANY," says Newton, "have puzzled themselves about the origin of evil. I observe there is evil, and that there is a way to escape it; and with this I begin and end."

For the Crisis.

Evil Speaking.

No. VI.

Finally; to speak merely of the method, will close the thoughts on this crying sin.

You may speak evil of a member of the church by an "inuendo." Don't know what that means? Well, I'd tell you, but I want you to look it out, and see how often you have done wrong.

By an allusion, when you have not a fact or a report, and dare not speak of anything you, or anybody else knows or has heard. But the relations of the neighborhood and church are so intimate, any allusion will sometimes be sufficient, because the speaker is supposed to know.

You also may do it by a sarcasm; by a supposition or parable; by a burlesque; by telling an untruth, or by speaking more than the truth; by telling but part of the truth. Oh, ye speakers of evil against others! "The poison of asps is under your tongue!!" You know not how you load the circulation—the very life-current of the church, with your abominable, virulent malaria!!

Brethren, let it alone! Will you? 'Tis a burning fire—a raging fever—a corroding poison—a slough of ruin.

Hark now! We may do ourselves and others a wrong, by speaking of what we know at an improper time, and for an improper purpose, or motive. Let the truth be spoken in the heart! We have written to make an impression of a very serious and growing evil. Do you understand the danger, and the remedy?

Heaven thunders some great sentiments upon us, which ought to be sufficient to correct this and other evils; and I shall urge you by reference to the Savior's own terms. "As ye would that others should do unto you, do ye." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my disciples, ye have done it to me."

I have spoken of facts; you cannot controvert. I have given an impartial view! Who is guilty? Let him repent! Who sees the evil, and would avoid the responsibility of injuring the feelings of a brother or a sister—of the breaking up of some little church—of fomenting trouble in a neighborhood? Let him refrain! "Let contention alone before it be meddled with!" If you go to carrying what you hear from one to another, you will be "like one that taketh a dog by the ears."

If Christ would not do it—if the church is injured by it—if the humble child of God is grieved—if a whole neighborhood is made unhappy at times by it—if the really pious and useful avoid all semblance of tattling—if you find that nothing of the kind will be found in the kingdom of God—if the last reflections of the dying man would be embittered by the remembrance of it,—then, I beseech you, speak evil of no man!

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

Elder.

Elder Paul, Elder Simon Peter, Elder Matthew, Elder Mark, Reverend S. Peter, Rev. J. Iscariot, Rev. Mr. Demas, Rev. Dr. Luke, Rt. Rev. Lord Bishop John, &c. &c. &c. How does it sound? Is it scriptural? "Well, but, Peter was an Elder, for he says—"who also am an Elder." What of it? he didn't say—"Elder Peter," or "Elder Simon Peter,"—it was simply, when needful, "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ;" or, "Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ;" or, "Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ;" or, "the Elder, unto the well beloved James;" (not John the Elder, nor Elder John,) or "Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ;" or, "Paul, a prisoner of Jesus Christ;" or, "Paul and Silvanus and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ;" or, "Paul an apostle of Jesus Christ."

James said in the council,—"Simon hath declared," &c.; not, Elder Simon. Peter says,—"our beloved brother Paul," not, Elder Paul. "But Paul was an elder;" well, so he was a tent-maker too, but there was no need of telling of it continually. When they wrote they gave the titles of apostles, to indicate their authority, &c.; when they were among strangers these offices might distinguish them, as Simon, the Tanner, was distinguished from Simon, the Preacher; or, as Saul of Tarsus, was distinguished from any other Saul; or, as James, the servant of God, was distinguished from other Jameses who, perhaps, served the devil. But these titles do not seem to have been regarded as permanent fixtures and handles to names. "Be not ye called Rabbi, Rabbi." "Let me not, I pray you, accept any man's person, neither let me give flattering titles unto man. For I know not to give FLATTERING TITLES; in so doing my Maker would soon take me away."

PITH.

May 9th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

A Voice from God.

BRO. GRANT:—I have an article before me, published in the Crisis, headed, "A voice from the West," the reading of which has impressed my mind with the importance ot writing a few lines for the benefit of the church. The article shows the wants of the West—what kind of preachers are needed, &c.

"First, we want gospel preachers, those who will preach pure, undefiled, wholesome truth—the kind the apostles preached." All right; God wants such.

"Second. Except they are Bible preachers they will not preach the good news of the kingdom of God." True. "But there are other things to be considered. They should be men that live right everywhere." This also is correct. "But the preachers that come west need something about them that we are not all blessed with; that is, a strong constitution, those that will by their own hands administer to their own wants; for if they come out here they must work."

This is all true so far, but there is another side to the subject. The excuse given is, the people are generally poor. No doubt this is true in many places, but it might also have been said, with truth, of many others, that they are covetous. The devil would make men believe they are too poor to support the gospel, too poor to do anything for the cause of God—we like preaching, but then, the preachers must support themselves; and so the devil will keep them always poor, and such will find themselves poor at last, not fit for the kingdom. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." If we have everything we want, where is the self-denial?

Now I want to write a little on the other side of the picture. I will head it—

A VOICE FROM GOD.

First. God wants an Elder to rule well. Of such, he says, they should "be counted worthy of double honor, who labor in the word and doctrine." 1 Timothy 5: 17. Again, he "must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre, but a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate, holding fast the faithful word, as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayers." Titus 1: 7–9.

Again, they must not be "Lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock." What must they do? "Feed the flock of God, taking the oversight, thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind." 1 Pet. 5: 2–3.

Once more; they are to "preach the word; be instant in season and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine." Reason given, why they should be so diligent is,—"the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (I think we are seeing this fulfilled.)

Here we have the qualifications and duty of the preacher. Now, I do not read any where in God's Bible that it would cost a preacher any more to get into the kingdom of God than anybody else. I find there is a duty for the church to do, and I am fearful there will be an awful account to give in the reckoning day by many who profess to be looking for the coming day of God.

Our Savior teaches us to "seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness;" but it would appear that in this age of the world the professed church has changed the order of Christ, and seek first the world and its honors—gratify themselves, and if they have anything left, they will give it to the Lord. They may have some marred sheep or creature they could spare, for it is of no value—it would probably die if they kept it, so they will sacrifice it to the Lord.

While God lays great responsibility on the preacher, does he not equally so on his hearers? "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn; the laborer is worthy of his reward." 1 Timothy 5 : 18. Again. "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things? Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." 1 Cor. 8 : 11–14.

How can a man love God with all his heart, and neglect to support his gospel? How can we love our neighbor as ourselves, and not extend to them the same blessings we wish ourselves. Let us look at these things in the light of the judgment; we are coming there soon.

O Brethren, do not let the devil deceive you; do not let your wicked lusts blind your understanding. A man is to reap in proportion to what he sows; if he sows sparingly he will reap sparingly. I do not wonder so many are starving to death—remaining, dwarfs, when they ought to be full grown men and women in Christ. God intends his people should each bear the burdens of the gospel.

Come, brothers, let us wake up to our duty. Let each member of the body fill its office, and the gospel will be preached and sustained, and God's cause advanced, sinners saved, and a people prepared for the coming of the Son of Man; having done well, he will say in that day, "well done, good and faithful servant." Amen.

MOSES CHANDLER.

Cordova, Ill., Apr. 1857.

From Sr. L. M. Collins.

BRO. GRANT:—I believe it is my duty while looking for the "Lord Jesus to be revealed from heaven," to do all that I can to encourage the humble few to hold on by faith until they shall see the "King in his beauty." I seated myself for this purpose, and on taking up my pen, I had nothing to write. I laid it aside and withdrew from the table. I meekly bowed before God and asked for a subject. My mind was soon directed to the experience of the little branch of Christ's church in this vicinity.

In the fall of 1853, Bro. Edwin Burnham came here and preached three or four evenings. The word spoken looked like the truth, and had a good effect on the minds of some. A few decided to make an effort to go into the kingdom. We started out, fearless of satan and all his combined agents, to meet the Lord. We established social meetings—met two or three times in a week, and the burden of our prayer was, that God would send us a faithful watchman to feed us with meat in due season. The Lord, as ever, was true to His promise. He witnessed our tears. He heard our prayers, our groans and sighs, and in the spring of '54, Bro. E. Whitney was directed this way. He remained with us for some time, laboring with untiring zeal. O that we could listen to his warning voice once more. We still cherish fond recollections of him, and his family. May the Lord reward him for his labors of love while with us, is my humble prayer.

We were out on time. We believed it; yea, more, we loved it. Some of us had no doubt in the matter. We lived out our faith just the best we could—marched up to the time like honest souls before God, expecting to be made immortal. But O the time passed, and great was our disappointment. What were we then to do? Return to the church from which we had come out? No, no. This would be death indeed. What then? Live for Christ and his Kingdom, and God would take care of us. Our feelings were somewhat benumbed, but, glory be to God, we were not discouraged. Our social meetings were kept up the most of the time until about a year ago. Some of our number had moved away. The rest of us were not on the march, neither were we standing still, but rather relaxing. We saw a gleam of light—we followed it, and by so doing we have not been overthrown by the wiles of the enemy. We grew hungry for food—wrote to Bro. Burnham. He came and spent a few days with us. The good seed was sown, and in some hearts it has taken root, and unless it withers beneath the scorching rays of immortal-soulism, I believe it will spring up and bring forth fruit to the glory of God. Our faith is strengthened—meetings are again established, and although our numbers are few, we feel that David's God is our God, and in him is our trust. O glory! Hallelujah! Praise ye the Lord, all ye that fear His name, and give Him glory, for glory is his due.

LYDIA M. COLLINS.

Bath, Me., May 2, 1857.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JUNE 24, 1856.

Conference at Carmel.

We left Boston Wednesday, June 10th, at 5 o'clock, P. M., and arrived at Carmel, Thursday P. M., at 8 1-2 o'clock. We went by cars to Portland and then took the noble steamer, Daniel Webster, for Bangor. We had a pleasant sail up the Penobscot, and an interesting conversation with several gentlemen on the boat upon Spiritualism, the sleep of the dead, &c. The Lord helped in the defence of his word, and we think the truth took root in some minds. We arrived at Bangor about 9 1-2 o'clock, A. M. At twenty minutes of 3 o'clock we started on the Penobscot R. R. for Carmel, a distance of fourteen miles, and arrived at the conference at the free Church just before the close of the afternoon meeting. We met again at 6 o'clock, and received blessings from the Lord.

Friday. We met at half past 8 o'clock and enjoyed an excellent social meeting, which continued until half past ten, when there was preaching by the writer. In the afternoon we were interested in a discourse from Bro. L. L. Howard, of Poland, Me., showing the importance of patient endurance unto the end, and of having true love for Christ and his appearing. In the evening Bro. A. Ross of Skowhegan, Me., preached on the importance of righteousness and prayer, showing that we must be good, if we expect to have our prayers answered.

Saturday. We assembled at 8 1-2 o'clock for a prayer and conference meeting, and all felt that it was good to be there. The exhortations were heartfelt and soul stirring. All seemed conscious that they were enjoying a great privilege in being thus associated with their dear Brn. and Srs., while their hearts were being knit together in love. No jarring note of discord was struck to disturb the sweet, heavenly peace. Preaching at half past 10 o'clock by the editor. In the afternoon we had a profitable discourse from Bro. Ross,—text Ps. 126: 6. At the close of the sermon, interesting remarks were made by Brn. Boutell, Damman and others, which made us feel more ardently than ever that we would bear each other's burdens, provoke one another to love, and go forth in the strength of the Lord with new energy to face a frowning world. Streaming eyes, shouts of praise, and the hearty response gave clear evidence that the blessing of the Lord was resting upon us. Evening. Bro. L. Boutell, from Groton, Mass., preached a comforting discourse on the plan of salvation, showing the people that Christ alone is the one to whom we must look for salvation.

Lord's day, June 14, will be one of grateful remembrance by those who participated in the Carmel conference. We assembled at half past 8 o'clock for a love feast, and felt that the blessed Savior had reserved the best of the wine for the last of the feast. Between fifty and sixty testified to the goodness of the Lord, and a strong determination to endure to the end; expressing, with tearful eyes and rejoicing hearts, their gratitude to the King of Kings for the privilege of attending a conference so like those enjoyed when they first saw the glorious truth, that the Savior is soon coming to gather his dear children to their paradise home. It was truly a heavenly place in Christ Jesus, like an oasis in the desert where the weary and thirsty traveler may find repose with his pilgrim companions, while he speaks of toils and dangers encountered by the way, and of the happy scenes to be enjoyed when the pilgrimage is ended.

The public services commenced at the usual hour, when we found ourselves surrounded by a large, attentive, and intelligent congregation. Preaching by the writer, who was comforted by the sight of joyful tears and cheering responses from those who love the King of Zion. In the afternoon we listened to a most interesting and instructive discourse from Bro. Ross, upon the world that was, is, and shall be, connected with evidences that our future home is near at hand. The people seemed astonished at the doctrine. Preaching by the writer at half past 5 o'clock, when we endeavored to show the cause of modern spiritualism, and what we may expect when it is fully developed. After an intermission we sat down with the dear saints to commemorate the sufferings of Him who died to give us life in the everlasting kingdom. The Lord smiled upon us, and poured into our hearts the peace that is like a river. Thus ended our conference, and we parted resolved, by the help of the Lord, to be at the general conference, when Jesus shall be crowned King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

During the whole conference there was an entire absence of the testing and judging spirit which has sometimes been witnessed, and which, when expressed, always results in evil, because it is contrary to the spirit of Christ and the teachings of the New Testament. We have never enjoyed a meeting where it has been practiced, and never expect to. We are exceeding thankful that the spirit of forbearance, kindness, long suffering and christian love is manifesting itself more and more, and as it is developed, our meetings become more heavenly, profitable and interesting. The brethren and sisters at the conference seemed anxious to help each other in love, and make character instead of doctrine the test of christian fellowship.

The consequence has been, that we have had a heavenly feast, the influence of which will be felt, we trust, until the Lord comes. Our better prospects are brightening.

"Cheer up, cheer up, the day breaks o'er thee," soon the land of glory will break upon our delighted vision.

The following preaching brethren were present at the conference.

Brn. L. L. Howard, I. Damman, I. C. Welcome, N. Reed, Tho. Smith, T. J. Dudley, H. Perkins, J. Morrill, A. Ross, A. Pease and L. Boutell.

A MISARRANGEMENT happened last week upon the second page of the Crisis, in the piece headed "Poems." After reading to the bottom of the fourth column, the next line may be found at the bottom of the fifth column, and continued in the sixth column to the word "first," commencing the sixth line from the top; then read at the top of the fifth column to the close. The last word should be, "Hiawathas," instead of "Hiawathsa."

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, I shall feel thankful to meet with a letter any day, directed to the Fairhaven Post Office, Mass., from any Bro. owing me. It would relieve me of a burden that presses heavily at present on your poor and almost worn out Bro. looking for the coming one,

S. S. BREWER.

Fairhaven, Mass., June 15, '57.

The Cross and Crown.

This little sheet was issued monthly during the past year, and is now suspended. The twelve numbers form a neat volume of near 200 8vo. pages. A number of setts are left on hand—they can be had of H. L. Hastings, Rochester. He will send the twelve numbers bound and prepaid for 87 cts,—or in sheets stitched neatly for 50 cents, post paid. The bound ones are also for sale at this office. This Book is good and will do good. A sister who is alone in the West writes—"I take up the Cross and Crown and never lay it down without fresh courage. . . . O that I had some of those dollars that I have wasted in needless dress and ornaments, in other days, to help you on your way after a goodly sort. But the past is not to be redeemed." In the letter was enclosed an ornament of gold which has gone to the melters and the price of it will pay for some tracts that were scattered yesterday.

But to the Cross and Crown; if you want a good book that will interest the whole family, from "grandpa" down to little "bub," just send for that and you will have it at once. It contains much to please, edify and instruct, and the few that are lying on hand ought to be scattered at once.

A SLAVE woman is advertised to be sold at auction at St. Louis. She is said to be so beautiful that $5000 has been offered for her and refused at private sale.

Voice of the Church!

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a History of the doctrine of the reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor.

We have already had occasion to speak of this work in terms of earnest commendation. We are glad to see that we are not alone in our estimate of its value. Both in this country and in Europe it has received the commendation of some of the most noted writers and preachers of the day.

The publisher showed us a letter from the renowned Dr. Cumming, D.D., F.R.S. E., &c. &c., long known as the most eloquent preacher in London. He writes as follows:

7 Montague Place, Russell Square, London.

My dear Sir—I thank you for sending me "The Voice of the Church." I think it eminently fitted to disarm prejudice and show there is no novelty in doctrines some think very new. I hope many excellent Christians, who do not yet see their way to "that blessed hope," will read it.

Yours truly, JOHN CUMMING.

Oct. 8, 1855.

We would advise all who wish to know the doctrines of the Bible and of the Church concerning the home of the redeemed—the kingdom of God,—the Millennium,—the coming of Christ, &c. &c., to read this book. I contains the views of some four hundred of the ablest Theologians who have ever lived, and is full of sound logic, scriptural argument, interesting history, eloquent and solemn appeal, and sweet and truthful poetry. To the student and common reader it is valuable as a dictionary of ecclesiastical biography, as there is hardly a noted Christian that can be named, the time of whose birth, death, and ministry cannot be ascertained by reference to this book.

Says the Rochester Democrat, "To those who have no desire to investigate the subject, it will yet prove a valuable manual of Reference, from its brief notices of the authors quoted.

To accommodate our friends who wish to obtain it, we have ordered a few copies and will send it by mail on receipt of the price, $1.00 and 6 stamps. Buy the book and read it! For sale also in Rochester by the publisher, 49 Arcade; Boston, M. Grant, 167 Hanover street; Philadelphia, Lindsay & Blakeston.—Christian Messenger.

For the Crisis.

Letter To "Martha" About the Sabbath.

MARTHA:—You ask, "In Matt. 5 : 17–18, what law did Christ mean, which he came 'not to destroy, but to fulfill?' and what is meant by fulfilling the law?"

He meant "THE law," Martha. Not a law, some law, one of the laws, but the one law of Moses and God. There is nothing said in the Book about a "moral and ceremonial" law; that division is, unhappily, in men's disordered brains. It is thought by some of our good brethren "that there are two distinct laws,—viz.: the law of God, and the law of Moses, and that these two phrases show that there are two laws," &c. That this position is groundless, we shall show from a comparison of the Scriptures.

LAW OF MOSES.

Neh. 8: 1. "And all the people gathered themselves together as one man, into the street that was before the water gate, and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the BOOK of the law of Moses. 1 Kings 2: 3; 2 Chron. 23: 18; 25: 4; Ezra 3: 2.

Luke 2: 22. "And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished," &c.

LAW OF GOD.

Neh. 8: 8. "So they read in the BOOK IN THE LAW OF GOD, distinctly," &c. Vs. 18. "Also day by day from the first day unto the last day, he read in THE BOOK OF THE LAW OF GOD." Neh. 9: 3; 2 Chron. 31: 3, 4; 1 Chron. 16: 40; 2 Chron. 35: 26.

Luke 2: 23. "As it is written in the law of the Lord: Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord."—Verse 24. "And to offer sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord," &c.—Verse 39.

From the foregoing collation of Scripture, it will be seen that the terms, "law of the Lord" and "law of Moses," are used interchangeably, and point out one and the same law; hence the position assumed by our opponents is incorrect, so far as this argument is concerned. A certain lawyer asked our Lord which was the "great commandment in the law?" "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul," &c. "And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Matt. 22: 35–40. Christ did not say that the ten commandments hang on these two principles, but all the law."

To "fulfill" means a good many different things, as the word is used under different circumstances, as you will see by consulting Webster, Calmet, and your Cruden's Concordance, with the Bible before you.

Here it seems to mean, to complete, or perfect. See Rom. 10 : 4. But I am disposed to admit more. Christ did OBEY the law, and was circumcised! shall we do so? He submitted to "the law" during His sojourn, before His circumfixion, and then on the bloody tree "TOOK IT OUT OF THE WAY, NAILING IT TO HIS CROSS!!!" During the time it was in force, till his crucifixion, it was criminal to break one of the least commandments of the law, or teach men so to do.

"In the 19th verse, what commandments are meant by these commandments? Did he mean simply the ten commendments of the Decalogue, or rather these which he was about giving them, and which are contained in the 5th, 6th and 7th chapters?"

I think He meant all the commandments of "the law," for the time then being—for He was talking to Jews, who were "under the law." Read the connection carefully, and you will see.

"Again, in Matt. 24: 20, why did Christ speak of a Sabbath day so far down in the future, if it was no longer obligatory?"

If you attempt to flee in the winter, you will suffer from cold and inclemency of the season—if you attempt to flee on the Sabbath, as held sacred by the Jews, they will not suffer you to do so unmolested—they will oppose you, and thus you may fail. It had nothing to do with the sacredness of the day, but with Jewish bigotry!

"And what does Paul mean in Rom. 3 : 31, when he says,—'Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we establish the law.'"

He means that in doing the work of faith we make it manifest that "the law" was a righteous instrument in its own place and order. Read the connection, and also Rom. 8: 1–4, Martha. In Paul's epistle to the Romans, in the seventh chapter, he positively tells us that a certain law, which says, "thou shalt not covet," is dead to us and we are dead to it!!! What law says, "thou shalt not covet?" Is it not the ten commandment law? Certainly. It is dead! What have we to do with a dead carcase? We are under the New Testament law. That says thou shalt not covet, kill, swear, lie, or do any other bad thing, but it says nothing about keeping a legal seventh day.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

From Bro. L. R.

BRO. GRANT:—I most sincerely thank you for your extreme kindness in sending me the Crisis so long without any remuneration. It is the best paper that I have read since I became a believer in the Advent doctrine. Amidst all the trials and poverty of my life I find much real happiness in reading the Crisis. It keeps my mind free from vanity and worldly desires, and points to another and better world, where sorrows will be no more.

During the past eight weeks one of our children has suffered from a severe sickness, by which the tiny thread of life has been almost broken; but through all the care, anxiety and night-watching, I have found the Crisis a real comforter.

I would be very thankful for the Crisis if you can afford to send it as you have done, and though in my circumstances I cannot pay, I hope divine blessings may repay you freely.

Yours truly, L. R.

Dunham, C. E.

From Sr. Mary A. Seymour.

BRO. GRANT:—I see in the Crisis a description of an amiable woman, by Bro. E. B. We often read similar essays, but they are confined to one sex. Why is this? Should not the head be the perfect exemplar in all that is pure and virtuous, guiding all the other members in the path of moral excellence? That the head has a very intimate relation to the body cannot be denied, and influences directly or indirectly all its varied movements; or, in other words, it is the chief moving power. From this fact arises the necessity of the perfect model in the seat of activity. The Bible gives man the preference by calling him the head of the woman, (and they are all quite willing to credit it.) 1 Cor. 2: 3. If continual smiling is so angel-like in woman, then husbands, fathers, brothers and sons, should assuredly take the lead in the matter.

Do you really mean to advocate the theory of perpetual grinning, and fall in with H. W. Beecher's idea expressed in nearly these words, "I had as lief my congregation would laugh as cry?" No indeed! I am not, in either man or woman. To do this would be very unlike Israel's weeping Seer, who could exclaim in agony, "O that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." There is a wish for perpetual weeping.

The church is nearly and dearly allied to Christ its head, as the branch is to the vine, and must, as a matter of necessity partake of his temper. Does any historian say of him that he ever smiled? but was he not, on the contrary, "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief?" Did he not weep with the lonely sisters at the grave of their brother, though he knew their sorrow would, in a few moments, be turned to joy, when by his word the dead should be restored to life and their society again?

If our Lord was sympathetic, and shed tears over Jerusalem, how can we, when we have any sense of the suffering of the oppressed sons of Ham, in our own land, refrain from tears? Then think of miseries caused by intemperance; of the poverty in our large towns; the sins of many grades under which old earth trembles, and of the heart-rending sorrows caused by that hydra-headed monster, Death, fixing his unrelenting fangs in the very vitals of our dearest, loveliest ones;—then wonder that we should smile at all! A woman who could always do this must be as void of sense as Paul's sounding brass, or tinkling symbol. Such amiable women as we often hear described are, in my opinion, as really creatures of fancy, and that only, as the fabled sea nymphs of the ancients.

In conclusion, let me enforce the teaching of Paul to the church of Rome;—"Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." And remember that, "by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better." Eccl. 7: 3.

MARY A. SEYMOUR.

From Sr. M. Crabtree.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—I feel it my duty to say a few words to you through the Crisis. I believe our time here is short, and we should be up and doing while the day lasts. Let every one improve upon what God hath given, that it may be said of us we have done what we could.

We are commanded to be wise as serpents. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." "He that winneth souls is wise." May we speak with the tongue of the wise, which is health. I want to see God's name glorified. I have felt encouraged to hope that I should yet see sinners converted to God. There seems to be an inquiring mind and a desire to know the truth. Let us pray to the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth more laborers into his harvest.

I feel to thank the Lord that he did not pass us by, but has sent many of his servants here, from time to time, to preach unto us the truth. We have had many blessed seasons. The children meet every Sabbath to comfort and exhort one another, and I have often felt that God's name was glorified. When I am away I know how to pity those who have not these privileges.

O, what a happy day it will be when we all get home. The whole family will be there. May I be there; may you, my dear brother, be there; may you, my dear sister, be there. O, let us follow Christ; let us take up our cross daily, and when he appears we shall see him as he is, and be made like him. Let us obey the word in all things, knowing that it is profitable unto all men.

Ye who believe in holiness of heart, preach it to the world by a holy life. May the Lord help me to do so. You who rejoiced with me in the summer and fall of '54, in the hope of soon seeing the Lord, and have got discouraged and given up, let me say to you, our salvation is nearer now than when we believed. O turn, backslider, for why will you die? "The wages of sin is death." Will you not turn again and follow Christ? Recollect how happy you was when walking in the way of your duty. O come back to Father's house, where there is bread enough and to spare. I never expect to see you all again in this world, but may we all meet in that better world where partings are unknown.

MARIA CRABTREE.

South Hope, May, 1857.

From Sr. A. P. Morrill.

BRO. GRANT:—I want to say to my dear brethren and sisters, though the Crisis, that I still love my blessed Jesus, and am looking and longing for his appearing. I still love the Second Advent doctrine. I bless the name of the Lord, that I was one among the favored ones that heard Bro. Miller proclaim the coming of the Lord near at hand; and I do praise the Lord that he has servants still who are echoing the mighty cry, and giving meat to the household.

My soul is comforted and made to rejoice, while I read the heartfelt communications from my dear Brn. and Srs. O how I long to be with you in some of your meetings, the appointments for which I read in the Crisis. But I expect, if faithful, to soon meet you all, with all my Father's family, in his heavenly kingdom. I am bound for the land of Canaan. This world of death and darkness is not my home. I am a weary traveler here, groaning and sighing for deliverance, and yet striving to be patient, under all the allotments of divine providence, and to endure to the end; for all such have the promise of being saved.

"When shall we hear that voice inviting,
'Ye blessed, come?'
When shall we joyful there uniting,
Praise God that we're are at home?"

Your sister in tribulation.

A. P. Morrill.

Danville, June.

Notice.

Brethren and friends living in the Western States, who wish for Advent books or tracts, are informed that Elder W. Pratt, having removed from this place from one to two hundred miles south, has transferred his books and tracts on hand to me. Brethren can have them sent as usual, by directing their letters containing their orders to

N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Ill.

There are now on hand some of the following kinds.

Books.

Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ, by D. T. Taylor. Future Punishment, by H. H. Dobney. Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times, by William Ramsey, D. D. Church Debts, by Wm. Ramsey. The World as it was, as it is, and as it will be, by Mrs. A. C. Judson. The Unity of Man, or Life and Death Realities. Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as taught by Paul. Bible vs. Tradition, by Aaron Ellis and Thomas Reed. The Old Paths, or the primitive doctrine of a future life.

Tracts.

Voice of Warning from the four Winds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—Noah, his age and ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Divine Testimony of the Son of God—Plain Truths—State of the Dead—The great Incentive—True Source of Life—Key of Truth—The Night cometh—Ancient Land Mark,—Scripture Searchers Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Tracts free to the poor.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, June 14.

The steamer Vanderbilt, from Havre and Southampton, arrived at 11 o'clock A.M., today. She brings Liverpool papers of 3d inst., and London advices per telegraph, of the same date.

The English Persian treaty is fully ratified, and on its way to London.

A conflagration at Constantinople had destroyed 1300 houses.

The British troops have evacuated the Persian town of Mohammerah, which they captured in March.

There have been serious political outbreaks in Brussels, Antwerp, and other Belgian towns, growing out of the anti-Catholic feeling of the citizens. Several convents, monasteries, and Jesuit colleges were attacked, as was also the bishop's palace at Liege. The troops interfered, and, at last accounts, order was nearly restored; but at Brussels the Civic Guard was kept under arms, and the troops were in readiness for any emergency. The mob commenced the outbreak with cries of "Down with the Priests!" "Down with the Catholics!" "Down with the Convents!"

The London Times, in an article on Mormon atrocities, says that the federal government should send a military force to Utah, and suppress the present territorial government.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA AT HALIFAX.

Halifax, June 16.

The Royal Mail Steamship Europa, from Liverpool, on Saturday, 6th inst., arrived here this morning.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Parliament resumed its sittings on the 4th, but the proceedings generally were only of local interest.

FRANCE.

The statement that, during the late visit of the Emperor to the Museum of Artilery, an attempt was made upon his life, is reiterated, and the fact that the English journals containing any reference to this matter, as well as to the government election plan, were intercepted at the French post offices, gives color to the story.

ITALY.

The Naples correspondent of the Daily News recounts a large number of continued barbarities on the part of the authorities, and says that a placard addressed to the citizens, calling on them to rise, had been put in circulation. Tri-colored bills, of an inflammatory nature, had also been freely distributed.

AUSTRIA.

The announcement of Marshal Radetzky's death appears to have been premature, as the official Gazette of Verona, of May 31, contains a medical bulletin that his health continued to be satisfactory.

RUSSIA.

Prussian papers say that the Emperor of Russia is about to reduceh is army; and it is stated at Vienna that the St. Petersburg government has made advances to Austria.

PERSIA.

The ratifications of the Treaty of Peace with England were exchanged on the 2d of May at Bagdad. Great ceremony and mutual congratulations passed between Mr. Murray (British Minister) and the Persian Plenipotentiary.

MOVEMENTS IN THE HOLY LAND.

A meeting was held in London on Friday evening last, at the house of the Rev. Ridley H. Herschell, to welcome the Rev. A. A. Isaacs, on his return from Palestine. Mr. Isaacs gave a very interesting account of the present position of Palestine, with an especial reference to the land which he has lately purchased (as a British subject) near Jaffa, on behalf of the Committee for establishing an agricultural settlement for Christian Jews in the land of their fathers. The object of this agricultural settlement is to give to converted Jews an opportunity of honestly earning their bread. Besides this primary object, however, a secondary one, perhaps not less important, will be accomplished, viz. to exhibit in that land the pure spirit and aim of the Gospel. It is hoped that by means of this movement the many Christian Jews now existing in different parts of the world, may be induced to unite patriotically for the welfare of their brethren without being ashamed of their nation. In the course of the evening Mr. Isaacs produced the title-deeds of the land, duly signed and sealed, conveying it to him as a British subject; a remarkable indication of the great changes which have lately taken place in the Turkish dominions. Great sympathy toward the object was manifested and expressed by those present. Among the speakers were the Rev. Dr. M'Caul, Rev. Dr. Keith, Rev. Capel Molyneux, and Mr. Hershon, who is shortly to proceed to Jaffa, with his wife and family, as superintendent of the settlement.

Items.

The recent fires in the woods in the northern part of New York are said to have spread over a territory fully two miles in breadth by four in length, detroying everything. The air was perfectly livid with flames, which consumed houses, barns, crops and all combustible matters.

A Lafayette (Indiana) paper says that two diamonds of the first water, one of the size of a small pea and the other that of a grain of wheat, were recently taken from an artesian well in that vicinity

For Lovers of Pork!—In New York the health authorities made a visit to some hog pens in the outskirts of the city, where they found large numbers of hogs that had been fed on dead rats, cats, dogs, offal of the vilest kinds, and poultices from the city hospital.

The Rev. B. S. Hobbs, Universalist clergyman at Webster, N. Y., has stopped preaching because he has, on several occasions, while in the pulpit, been seized by the mania or influence popularly termed Spiritualism, and made to utter sentiments utterly foreign to his own views and convictions.

An Indian Church.—The Wyandott Indians around Quindaro, Kansas, have subscribed and paid in seven hundred and fifty dollars for the erection of a new church in that place. This amount was all obtained in one day, and without any special effort. The Wyandotts removed from Northern Ohio to their present location in 1841.

A Poisoned Valley.—A singular discovery has recently been made near Batten, in Java, of a poisoned valley. It is about a half a mile in circumference, of an oval shape, and about thirty feet deep. The bottom of it appeared to be flat, without any vegetation, and a few large stones scattered here and there. Skeletons of human beings, tigers, bears, deer, and all sorts of birds and wild animals lay about in profusion. The ground on which they lay at the bottom appeared to be a hard, sandy substance, and no vapor was perceived. Dogs and other animals were thrown in and never moved their limbs after a few minutes.

Domestic Summary.

The Recent Riot at Washington.—Washington, June 8.—According to the statements of Captain Tyler, who commanded one of the companies of Marines last Monday, he gave the order after the capture of the swivel from the rioters to discharge from one platoon only, and irregularly, each of the Marines firing as they saw the flashes of pistols discharged at them by the rioters, who fired as they retreated. The company commanded by Captain Maddox, according to the same authority, did not fire until a Marine had been wounded in the cheek, the ball coming out in his mouth. It is confidently asserted that several of the "Plug Uglies" have recently died, while others in Baltimore are still suffering from their wounds.

Justice Hollingshead, (of the American party,) has refused the application for a warrant for the arrest of Mayor Magruder, on the charge of murder. The ground of application was that the Mayor had given the order to fire.

Utah Affairs—Gen. Burr's Statement.—Washington, June 8.—Mr. Burr states, in conversation with friends, that the Mormon Legion is poorly equipped, and that 10,000 United States troops would effectually overawe them. Before he left Utah, the Mormons had not heard of the intention of the government to send a force thither, but they frequently laughed at the idea of the government compelling them to obey the federal laws, and cited the failure of the government to put down the disturbances in Kansas, as evidence of its inefficiency. He supposes that one-third or half of the Mormons, who are disgusted with Brigham Young's tyranny, would rise against him, were they protected by the United States troops. Mr. Burr does not apprehend that the Mormons will show fight. It is the duty of every good Mormon to obey the church as the higher law, and hence the opinion is entertained that Brigham Young may leave the Territory with a large force of his deluded followers, provided he can find some other seat for his government. Mr. Burr says that Salt Lake is the meanest settlement that he ever beheld, every thing having the appearance of abject poverty. Young's word is law, and the oppressions of the Mormons are cruel and without remedy from the present rulers. There are about fifty Gentiles only in the Territory, and they are the objects of bitter persecution.

LATER FROM MEXICO.

Washington, June 10.

The New Orleans papers contain Vera Cruz advices to the 21st ult., and from the city of Mexico to the 10th. Extensive preparations were making at Vera Cruz, both at the fort and in the town, in anticipation of a Spanish invasion. The same alarm prevails at the capital, and a force of 25,000 men was to be raised and held in readiness to repel any attack that might be made.

From Peru.—Dates at Panama, from Lima, are to May 12. The revolution in Peru is ended. Vicanco is at Arequipa, with a small force, but no means. The Peruvian fleet, at the Chincha Islands, surrendered to the Government on the 19th of April, and were anchored at Callao.

Manifesto from Santa Anna—From Honduras.—New York, June 13.—The Herald publishes a manifesto, issued by Santa Anna, ex-Dictator of Mexico, at Carthagena, for private circulation among his adherents, partizans, and revolutionists generally in Mexico, Cuba, and elsewhere, denouncing the present government of Comonfort, the new Constitution, the law affecting the property and privileges of the clergy, etc., and announcing that there must be another sanguinary revolution, even though half of the territory should have to be sold to supply the sinews of war.

Indian Outrages.—St. Louis, June 13.—Sir George Gore and suite returned here yesterday, from a year's hunting expedition at the head waters of the Missouri. They report that the country has never been in a worse condition respecting the Indians. The Santees and Sioux were committing atrocities against the whites, and, since the removal of the troops from Forts Randall and Lookout, the Indians in the neighborhood have assumed a hostile attitude. A party of troops had marched against the Santees.

POLICE BATTLE IN NEW YORK.

New York, June 16.

Another serious riot between the two Police forces occurred in the Park to-day, in consequence of an attempt made by a body of the Metropolitan Police to arrest Mayor Wood and Sheriff Willett, on a warrant granted by Judge Hoffman, for assault on Mr. Conover, the Metropolitan Commissioner of Streets. The Metropolitan Police, while ascending in a body the steps of the City Hall, were beaten back with clubs by the Mayor's Police, and many of them badly hurt.

Captain Dikes is reported to be mortally wounded.

Evening.—The warrant upon Mayor Wood was served this afternoon. He surrendered himself to the Sheriff, and gave bonds in $5000 to appear and answer.

The Sheriff surrendered himself to the Coroner.

The National Guard were under arms for an hour in the Park, and were then released from duty.

The Twelfth Regiment is now under arms at the City Hall.

At the affray this afternoon, several of the Metropolitan policemen, besides Capt. Dikes, were so badly beaten that their recovery is considered doubtful.

A Policeman Dead.—New York, June 18.—Our city remained quiet at sundown. All the special Metropolitan police are discharged, and many of the Mayor's police withdrawn from the City Hall.

The Governor returned to Albany this afternoon.

Judge Russell has closed the proceedings in the habeas corpus case, by discharging the Mayor from the arrest.

The Grand Jury have under consideration the complaints against the Mayor and Judge Russell.

The Governor has ordered the calling of a special term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer in July, for the trial of the Mayor.

Mr. Crofut, one of the Metropolitan police, beaten on Tuesdry, died to-day.

MORE STORMS AND TORNADOES.

Last Saturday, the day the comet didn't come, was a noticeable day for all that. We have already given a full account of the most remarkable whirlwind which visited Schenectady, Oswego, and Herkimer counties in New York, on that day, destroying not only property but life; also a severe thunder shower in the neighborhood of Hartford, Conn., during which large pieces of ice fell. On the same day, a terrible tornado swept over Christian county, Illinois, carrying death and destruction in its course. At the village of Pena, says the Chicago Journal:—

"Buildings were swept from their foundations, and some of them carried into the air, others unroofed, and others torn into atoms. A number of new stores that had just been completed were scattered into fragments; the Presbyterian church, a large frame building, was moved some six feet from its foundation; the Illinois Central freight depot was unroofed; a train of freight cars was blown from the track; and worse than all, five persons—a woman and four children—were killed by being struck by falling timbers, or carried into the air and thrown upon the ground. Several other persons were more or less injured, some of whom may die from the effects of their injuries. We have no information as to the extent of the damage done in other places, by the tornado, but farmers and others in various parts of that and the adjoining counties must be heavy sufferers."

Extraordinary Phenomenon.

MYSTERIOUS MOVEMENTS OF AN ATMOSPHERIC BODY—LOSS OF LIFE.

Under this heading the Utica, N. Y., Herald, of Monday, gives an account of a most remarkable phenomenon which made its appearance in that neighborhood on Saturday afternoon, June 13th. We condense the Herald's statement.

A tunnel-like column of cloudy or nebulous substance was seen on Saturday afternoon, extending from the heavens nearly to the earth, where it seemed to diminish almost to a point, but expanding gradually as it ascended, until the peculiar form was lost in the clouded sky. It passed over the city accompanied by a rushing, buzzing noise, and soon passed from sight, occasioning in the people of Utica only sportive conversation for the hour. Its effects, however, were afterwards ascertained to be most wonderful. It first settled to the earth near the residence of Milo Root, in Deerfield, where one or two fences were torn down. Between here and Mr. Nathan Budlong's, in Schuyler, trees and fences were prostrated. At Mr. N. Budlong's, the mysterious agency settled to the earth, and in an instant scattered a barn to pieces, and tore up several trees on the opposite side of the road; next the well-house of Mrs. Richardson was demolished, and quite a number of trees and fences were destroyed; the path of destruction then tended in a direct line to the southeast, as marked by numerous prostrate trees and riddled fences, until it approached the Baptist parsonage house, occupied by a Mr. John Warren.

Mr. Warren gives the following account of the sad disaster at his house:

"Mr. W. informs us that he was engaged in his garden at about 4 o'clock, and saw the approach of the cloudy object, as it threw up the trees. As its course pointed in the direction of his own house, he ran to the dwelling, caught two of his older children, and called to his wife to save the other three and herself by following him to the cellar. The husband had descended two or three steps with his charge, and the wife, with an infant and two older children had reached the cellar door, when the house was struck. The whole framework was lifted from the stone foundation: the entire wood work above the first floor, with the sleepers attached, which caught in the foundation, was finally turned roof-like over the entire mass. Mr. Warren, with two of the children, remained in the cellar enclosure, without injury; Mrs. Warren was found on the ground about ten feet from the cellar door, almost entirely stripped of her clothing, and so severely injured about her neck and body that she died within an hour after the calamity, although entirely conscious; her infant was found near by, and almost entirely free from injury, yet utterly destitute of clothing; a little boy who was following his mother to the cellar is now lying unconscious from the wounds he received in the common wreck; his recovery is very doubtful; an older girl escaped without any injury. The dwelling was two stories, 18x26 feet, and substantially built. In rear of it was a barn, distant about five rods, 25x32 feet, which was literally shivered into splinters.

Next it uproofed several large trees, scattered the fences, crossed the road and demolished a new large and substantial barn, 35 by 50 feet upon its base, scattering large timbers about the fields at a distance of from five to fifteen rods, distributing portions of the roof in various directions, and actually taking up an iron cylinder threshing machine, weighing perhaps four hundred pounds, and depositing it at least eighty feet from the barn. A cow belonging to Mr. B., standing near the barn, was killed, without any apparent outward wound. About eighty rods further on in a right line, a smaller barn belonging to the same gentleman was demolished. and what is very singular in this instance, but little of the material of which it was constructed is to be found anywhere. The dwelling of Mr. Budlong had a narrow escape. A shingle or two torn from one corner of the roof indicate how narrowly it escaped destruction.

Beyond the premises of Mr. B., for about a mile, prostrate trees and fences evidence the track of the destructive messenger. It however seemed to have released its hold upon the earth soon after leaving the farm of Mr. B., for it was distinctly seen to rise from the surface and dissolve its conical shape into a general cloudy form. The phenomenon was followed by violent rain and wind. Two men at work in a field saw the strange apparition approach, and took to their heels, barely escaping its track as it passed on. It seemed to rise from the earth in four or five minutes from the time it was first seen, and the evidences before us of destruction, lie in a district not over four or five miles in extent, in a due southeasterly direction from where its first touch was felt, and in a track about 15 rods in width. Whatever of material substance presented itself in this track was swept away, and the ruin presented is certainly fearful to behold.

Had the mysterious body settled upon this city and passed down Genesee street, there would not at this hour remain a vestige of its present formation. Of what the destructive power was composed we are not prepared to affirm; but of its force we can truthfully attest. Huge trees were tossed from their deep-rooted resting places as readily as a gardener would pull a radish from the sandy earth; fences and even fence posts were scattered in all directions, as if they were chips, and buildings offered no more resistance than a clapboard to a forty horse power engine. The moving mass of ruin is represented by all who saw it to have been a vapory substance; it was not accompanied by any wind or storm, but it seemed an independent agency, traveling on its own account, at a speed of perhaps a mile a minute. In its motion there was a constant revolution, and when it was rising this whirling peculiarity became more terrific and violent. The peculiar buzzing sound which was noticed in its passage by our own citizens was also remarked by the people along its course in Deerfield and Schuyler.

The lady who was killed was thirty-one years of age; the child so badly injured is about five years of age. The building which the family occupied was known as the Baptist parsonage, and is about five miles from the city, on the road leading through Schuyler Corners. Yesterday several parties visited the scene of disaster, and all agree that no description of the utter ruin wrought can suffice to convey any just conception to the public mind.—Traveller.

Obituary.

Died in Hatley, C. E., May 24, Sr. Wata Ann, daughter of Seth and Sarah True, aged eighteen years, five months and fourteen days.

The subject of this notice was converted in '54, with some four others, and was baptized. From that time onward she maintained a well ordered life, and a godly conversation in Christ Jesus, until the day she fell asleep in Christ.

In the month of February last, our sister had an attack of the measles. They left her in a state of decline, and she fell into a quick consumption. She bore her sickness with patience and christian resignation. As she drew near her end she conversed freely with her friends upon the subject of religion, and earnestly solicited them to prepare to meet her in the kingdom of God. She left an earnest request for those who were converted with her to continue faithful, so that they may be re-united on the new earth, and dwell with Christ in endless day. A few moments previous to her death she revived, and the Spirit of Christ gave her utterance. She spake with a strong voice, exhorting her friends, and bidding them farewell.

An interesting discourse was delivered by Elder J. M. Orrock, from 1 Thess. 4 : 18.

Bro. and Sr. True mourn not as those who have no hope. May God so enable them to live that they may meet their two children when they shall come again from the land of the enemy. [The Advent Herald please copy.]

Sylvanus Griffin.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Campmeeting.—It is proposed to have another general campmeeting conference at North Wilbraham, on the old consecrated ground, commencing either the 24th or 31st of Aug. More about it next week. Will Brn. inform us which date will best accommodate those who wish to attend.

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach in Portland, Me., July 12th.

Providence permitting, Bro. L. L Howard will preach in Portland, Me., June 28th.

The Lord willing, I will preach the word as follows:—

Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, July 12th
Exeter, N. H., at the Advent Chapel, July 14th
Lawrence, Mass., July 15th
Auburn, N. H., where Brn. Welsh or Robie may think best, July 16th
Roxbury, Mass., July 17th
Boston, Mass., Lord's day, July 19th
Providence, R. I., July 20th
River Point, where Br. H. Taylor appoints, July 21st
Fairhaven, Mass., July 26th

Elder S. S. Brewer.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Boston the first Lord's day in July.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., the first Lord's day in July.

M. Grant.

Bro. Whitney appoints to preach in East Haverhill, June 28th.

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at Rye, N. H., on the fourth Sabbath in June.

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at

Lawrence, Mass., June 24th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Exeter, N. H., June 25th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Portsmouth, N. H., June 6th, 7 1-2 P. M.
Great Falls, N. H., Sunday, June 28th
Kennebunkport, or where Bro. Elisha Mitchell may appoint, Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th

If any of these appointments come in collision with others already made, brethren must let me know immediately by letter, directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. Bishop.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at

New Bedford, fourth Sunday in June, and first Sunday in July.

Bro. A. Fox will meet with the Brn. in Cheshire St., Cheshire, Ct., Sunday, June 28th

Conference.

The Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Semi-Annual Conefrence stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, July 3d. A good representation is desired. Service at the chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brethren in

Amherst, Thursday eve., June 25th
Northfield Farms, Friday eve., June 26th
Vernon, Vt., Sat. 27th and over the Sabbath.
Brattleboro, Monday 29th (eve.) and Tuesday, day and evening.
Shelburne Falls, Wednesday eve., July 1st, where Bro. Pulsifer may appoint.
Thursday, July 2d, Charlemont, or at Shelburne, as thought best.
Friday, 2 P. M., July 3d, commence a conference in the vicinity of Hawley, or Savoy, as the brethren may appoint, and continue over the Sabbath. Evening meetings commence at half past 7.

H. Pratt.

Wales, June 7, 1857.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

North Dana, Sunday, June 28th
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th
Granby, Mass., Sunday, July 19th

D. E. Moulton.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If no, prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Duty.—Let him who gropes painfully in an uncertain light, and prays vehemently that the dawn may ripen into day, lay this other precept well to heart, which to me was of valuable service. Do the duty which lies nearest thee, which thou knowest to be a duty; thy second duty will already have become clearer.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

R. Boston 130, B. Ester 120, Susan E. Teeple 117, N. C. Wolcott 120, D. Seymour 112, L. Farrington 115, S. Tibbetts 109, J. S. Bundlett 120, G. H. Waterhouse 104, B. H. M. C. Murphey 120, E. R. Wormwood 122, J. Hall 104, A. Jordan 107, J. R. Bean 117, J. Raymond 91, Smith & Miller 105, Mrs. Duell 117, C. H. Smith 117, R. Patton 120, J. K. Cobb 120, P. White 111, S. Potter 140, L. C. Wood 109, A. Crabtree 137, James Chickering 120, Wm. Chapin 104, L. C. Glazier 104, Asa C. Hurd 120, $1 each.

A. Farron 147, E. Piper 156, J. Morrel 104, $2 each.

C. Doane 107, J. Gay 104, Mrs. McNelte 96, H. Finn 104, J. Rofe 101, L. Monk 104, Jane Stephens 105, G Horton 96, P. H. Parmer 109, A. H. Liswell 109, 50 cents each.

E. R. Merril 94, 80 cents; A. B. Tracy 130, $3; E. Merril 99, 45 cents; L. Houghton 110, $1.25; L. K. Gaines 104, $2.70; B. Herrick 104, $2.50; S. Hale 62, 80 cents.

For Books and Tracts.—J. Hanson 63 cents; J. H. Piper 51 cents; A. P. Morrill $1.18; Lucy A. Lang 35 cents; Susan E. Teeple 36 cents; J. Harris 50 cents; J. O. Baker 21 cents; H. Bassett 39 cents; P. White $6.

For the Poor.—L. D. Allen $1 00. John Holden $1.

For Tracts for the Poor.—A Sister $5.

Books Sent.—A. P. Morrill, J. H. Piper, Lucy A. Lang, Susan E. Teeple, Julia Dodge, T. Huntington, J. Harris, J. O. Baker, H. Bassett.

W. H. Wild's P. O. address is North Lee, Mass.

Bro. C. Goodrich's P. O. address is South Farms, Ct.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Harvard, Mc. Henry Co., Ill.

To Correspondents.

S. Hale—H. R. owes $2.44 up to No. 104. S. H. owes $1.64 cents up to the same time.

Sr. Leonard—You have paid to 118.

Married.

In Buffalo, June 8th, by Rev. Mr. Depuy, Mr. William C. Peck to Miss Mary J. Tumor, both of Buffalo.

Books and Tracts.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bound Tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Nearly 200 pages. Price 40 cents—postage 6 cents.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The World as It Was, as It Is, and as It Will Be. By Mrs. A. C Judson. Price 38 cts.—postage 3 cents.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

This World and the Next: The impossibility of making the best of both. An interesting English work. Price 25 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The First Fruits: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and season of the First Resurrection, and Change of those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "[illegible] raphical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; full bound gilt, $1—pos. 9 cts.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—[illegible] State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy, $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the [illegible] of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

WHAT IS FAITH?

Faith is the Christian's prop,
Whereon his sorrows lean,
It is "the substance of his hope,
His proof of things unseen."
It is the anchor of his soul,
When tempests rage and billows roll.

Faith is the polar star,
That guides the Christian's bark;
Directs his wand'rings when afar,
To reach the holy ark.
It points his course where'er he'll roam,
And safely leads the pilgrim home.

Faith is the rainbow's form,
Hung on the brow of Heaven,
The glory of the passing storm,
The pledge of mercy given.
It is the bright triumphal arch
Through which the saints to glory march.

Faith is the mountain rock,
Whose summit towers on high,
Secure above the tempest's shock,
An inmate of the sky.
Fixed on a prize of greater worth,
It views with scorn the things of earth.

The faith that works by love,
And purifies the heart,
A foretaste of the joys above
To mortals can impart.
The Christian's faith is simply this—
A passport to immortal bliss.

For the Crisis.

WE ARE TRAV'LERS HERE.

AIR.—Will you go, Sinner, go to the highlands of Eden?

We are trav'lers here o'er a way rough and dreary,
Sad and lone grow our hearts, and our footsteps are weary;
They are passing away—all the loved and the cherished—
And the hopes that were bright from our bosoms are perished.

But the heart of the Christian can know no repining,
For one "blessed hope" still through the darkness is shining;
While we follow its beaming our crosses grow lighter,
And the path we are treading with glory is brighter.

And while onward in haste Time his swift flight is winging.
We are numb'ring the hours, still joyfully singing,
For our hearts may not cling to the scenes we are leaving—
The home we are seeking in full view is heaving.

O, the light of those plains where the Am'ranth is waving,
And the pure crystal waters the green shores are laving,
Where we'll meet the immortal whom death cannot sever,
And each face that we greet we shall look on forever!

But no theme in that world shall our hearts so inspire,—
The loud chorus of joy swelling higher and higher—
As salvation by grace, love, with life-blood that bought us,
And through sorrows and sins to a kingdom hath brought us.

MARIA T.

June 1st, 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Awful Admonition.

THE EXAMPLE OF JONES, A SOLEMN WARNING TO YOUNG MEN.

The importance of attention to the moral qualities of our own thoughts and emotions, while young, cannot be overrated. This indicates, in fact, the true power of the control of habit. Moralists urge continual guard over the habits—the christian teacher insists upon the control of the heart.

Jones, it appears, had most respectable connections; a brother, sisters—a mother—ah! that word, mother! I have seen her, and conversed with her, while her son was in the State Prison—a most amiable woman, with a mother's yearning heart still; and now, what must be her condition? We shrink from even the fancy!

The history of his thefts and punishment at Hartford is well known, and the failure to secure reformation apparent, notwithstanding the sanguine hopes of his friends. He has been proceeding from bad to worse, till he figures as the actor of a most cold-blooded murder! The great power of evil over him lies in the principle. I will not quote any more facts than are necessary—they are before the world. Nothing could exceed the atrocity of the "Russell Tragedy." But this poor suffering murderer (and if insane, what is the cause but sin?) might have been useful and happy, and might have made others happy—might have lived to do good and found a portion in the Kingdom of God. Now where is he?

Would he attend to his work and earn what he needed? Would he attend to his books and acquire knowledge, abiding by the counsel of friends? Would he be faithful as a christian? No. He wanted to steal, to be a public man—to get along without patient study or work. He determined, at an early age, upon seeming to be a man, a christian, a minister of the gospel, while he was, in fact, a burglar, a thief, a liar, and brought up in crime, disgrace, the State Prison, the awful murder of Jackson—the gallows! Young man! it began in the principle to do wrong—lying, stealing, deceiving—covering up his action from wiser and older persons. He succeeded in effecting his crimes, as if aided by infernal forces; but he rushed, in either case, upon detection. And where is he now? Beware of doing wrong in little things, and think not that your connections or religious experiences will be shelter. Take warning by poor Charles, who must be pitied, deplored, as well as execrated.

'Tis only that you may see the danger to which you are exposed, by beginning to do wrong, by having a will to do wrong to others, which principle of evil I refer to, that I write.

We exclaim with wonder,—how could he have been so hard-hearted? How could he have been so wicked? Only from the accumulated power of evil, in thought, will, action, habit. You see an awful result!—the path which leads to it—the steps taken to the end! Take the other road and all will be safe. Study this example, to be warned of the danger of ruin, which lies ahead of transgression and disobedience.

C.

Albany, N. Y., June 10, '57.

For the Crisis.

All For Jesus.

Life, health, time, talents, property, everything and anything that I possess, I will it, consecrate it, sacrifice it totally, unreservedly, and eternally all for Jesus! Can you say so? I mean, can you say so and feel so while you say so? Why not? Has He not given his life, health, ease, comfort, pleasure,—given Himself, entire, all for you, when He came down from heaven and suffered, groaned, wept, sweat, and died for you? Can you do less than make Him this return, to give all for Him. Think, too, what He has promised to give you, in the future: life, light, joy, crowns, robes, psalms, songs, smiles, pleasure, glory, a kingdom, immortality, all eternal blessedness.

O ungrateful one, to wish—to have the least desire to keep back anything from Christ. What is that gold and silver in comparison with a city whose very streets are paved with gold? What is that farm iu comparison with "new heavens and new earth?" What is that furniture in comparison with the beauties of the new creation? What is that profitable business in comparison to entering upon an eternal life of serving God in the presence of His burning glory? What is that tempting pleasure in comparison to pleasures at God's right hand forevermore? What is that great name among men in comparison to a name among angels and saints immortal in the better state to come? What is earth with all its enchantment and glitter, in its present condition, in comparison to the condition of things when the glory of God shall fill the earth as the waters fill the sea?

O tempted, shrinking one, make a full, free, and entire sacrifice of all you have and are. Do it cheerfully. Bring all to the altar now. And lest you should be tempted to recall some part of it, "bind the sacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar"—thus—O Lord, my Redeemer, I do now, henceforth, even eternally consecrate unto thee totally, unreservedly and perfectly, all that I am, or have, or ever shall possess. Receive me, I pray! Amen.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Religion of the Closet.

"When thou prayest, enter into thy closet."—MATT. 6: 6.

In unfolding to the mind this command of our Savior, we do not expect to present novelties. The subject should be treated with holy seriousness and devout affection, which we should cultivate in the closet. Let us ever remember that without secret prayer public services are but splendid hypocrisy! In the closet christians may call upon God unencumbered with the shackles of a form of prayer. Here, the language of an overflowing heart offends no one's ear, however ungrammatical. Here, we have no desire to quench the emotions of the Spirit, conscious that He who "searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God."

In the silence and solemnity of the closet, we should commune with our own hearts and try our ways—prove our sincerity. Oh! what delightful communion with his Savior the believer enjoys, when, in the silence of the closet, he hears the still small voice! How freely he pours out his whole soul into the bosom of that God who is to him a more intimate, unreserved confidant than any earthly friend. He lays all at his feet. His burden is gone. He goes on his way with cheerful steps to perform duties which are devolving upon him.

Self-examination is a duty of the closet. Paul urges this. His language is,—"examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" We have many examples in holy writ.

Our Savior left us an example: we should follow in his footsteps. He spent whole nights in prayer, arising "a great while before day" for this purpose. His devotions in the garden were so constant that Judas selected it, wherein to betray his master. David loved secret devotions. His psalms are the expressions of his private meditations. Elijah retired into his chamber and shut his door, and poured out his soul to God. Jacob wrestled all night till the break of day. Daniel prayed, and, in answer, received the knowledge of the King's dream. He prayed in secret when he was sure of being put to death for it. The excellent of the earth have loved secret prayer. Yes, it is blessed! In keeping this command there is great reward.

I never knew how to appreciate this privilege of retiring from every thing around me, to make my wants known to him who seeth in secret, as I have for the few months past. I feel disposed to praise the Lord, that he is still the prayer-hearing and answering God. Jesus is soon to reign over his enemies. His reward is with him. The glories of that reward set language at defiance. "Pray without ceasing." His ear is open to hear the cries of his tried and waiting people. The day hastens when our prayers, which have lain buried in obscurity, will, as well as our bodies, receive a joyful resurrection. Our Father, who hath seen in secret, will reward us openly. The Lord shall come, "who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall every man have praise of God."

"When the diamond drops of morning,
In the soul-deep of their eyes,
Flower, and tree, and wood adorning,
Like an angel through her sighs;
When the day-god's rays are stealing
O'er the eastern hills away,
Charming earth with their revealing,
To my God I'll kneel and pray.

When the fervid glow of summer,
With its noon more sultry still,
And the zephyr's faint-like murmur
Sports along the babbling rill;
When the flowrets droop and languish
'Neath the scorching glare of day,
When my soul is filled with anguish,
To my God I'll kneel and pray.

When the deep'ning shades of even
Gather thick and dark o'er all;
When the starry gems of heaven,
Gleaming through the sable pall,
True and holy vigils keeping
O'er the kind departing day;
While earth's weary ones are sleeping,
To my God I'll kneel and pray."

PAULINA D. CAMPBELL.

New Britain, Ct.

For the Crisis.

Brotherly Love.

No. II.

"Love is the fulfilling of the Law." "He that loveth not his brother, abideth in death."

Love is an element, latent, or active. It is also a sentiment. As an element it should exist in respect to God and his people; and, consequently, be found active by excitation, or cause sufficient to produce it. The love of God itself does not exist in our nature; hence, there is no love of the brethren, at least, such as there ought to be, but the principle to love is there, and will be developed by the cause the divine wisdom has chosen for this purpose.

As a sentiment it depends upon imagination, fancy, or caprice. Many may have this, and it will last about as long as the goodness of Ephraim and Judah did—"as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away."

The active element is secured by appropriate causes; then let the causes work, and the result still follows. Do you see that? What, then, is the conclusion? Just this, my brother; God brought us by his grace to love him and one another. Then his grace keeping us, we shall be found in the love of God and the charity of the gospel.

"But he does not come near me now!" Still you can "be kindly affectioned one to another"—can pray for him—do him good—reprove in kindness, rebuke, exhort, &c.

Long suffering! What's become of it? It is almost an obsolete term in the church vocabulary. But, I tell you, it may be found in the old gospel rudimental lesson!

A brother or sister keeping away! does that necessarily destroy affection? Ask thousands of the afflicted! The testimony of all is—"it is unbrotherly and wicked."

What is more noble and good than the labor and patience required? • What? The prevalence and continuance of charity! It "never faileth."

DALETH.

For the Crisis.

Travels and Perils.

BRO. GRANT:—I have not as yet contributed a view of my last tour, which has been from the press of labor, and yet I usually have leisure to write all I wish to, while I have just as much as I can do. I will now briefly say, that I found the brethren in a much more prosperous condition than I have seen them often times, and mostly striving for the faith and life of the gospel.

In Roxbury, we had an interesting season. In Boston, a good one, where I was taken to task for not having sent appointments before, for a long time. This was an agreeable rebuke! (I have not been idle.) It was refreshing to my weary, pilgrin heart to greet anew my old friends in the gospel.

At Lowell, they are prospering well.

But I want to talk some about those places where they have but little preaching. For instance, River Point. They have preaching round them, and some right there. Bro. George Champlin bears them a faithful testimony. But it has become one of the points where I love to labor, because they seem to appreciate and love the truth. There are some precious souls there, and in the region round about. Got round, after walking across to Apponaug and to Greenwich, and from Kingston, to Peace Dale. I think that society is in a better state with still "a wide margin." I hied me home from there. My perils were those of walking and speaking. I did not suffer worth the telling.

C.

Steamer Champion, May 23, '57.

Choice Selections.

Human Materialism.

POPULAR ASSUMPTIONS WITH BRIEF REPLIES.

1. It is asserted that thought is not a property of matter. If this means a table, a stone and an apple cannot think, we find no fault with the statement; but if it means that animalized living matter, for instance brain, cannot evolve mental phenomena, we ask the proof. Has the Creator said so? Is it a self-evident proposition that Omnipotence cannot cause animalized and organized living matter to judge, reason, love, and hate? When it is demonstrated that this is impossible, and, that it is impossible, nothing less than the testimony of God himself can be accepted as final proof, it will be time to pass on in quest of a second cause to explain the existing results, both, we may say, in relation to man and the lower animals. The philosophic rule of Sir Isaac Newton, in obeying which he made his grand physical discoveries, is most applicable here, "When one cause is sufficient to account for an effect, no more are to be admitted."'

To all appearance, judging from the development of brain, and the corresponding mental functions or results,—from the facts of madness, either complete or partial,—from idiocy, and from the suspension of consciousness by pressure on the brain and many other circumstances, we say, judging from all these, there appears to be ground, broad and firm, for the conclusion to rise upon, that thought, passion, desire, and the like, as naturally proceed from matter when it assumes the form of brain, as perfume arises from it when it exists in the form of a rose, or galvanism when it coheres in the form and subject to the arrangements of the battery. To all appearance this is the case, and, since it is the product of Heaven's power, it must be an infinitely wise ordination, and on our part it is the office of piety to acknowledge the device of his wonder-working hands.

In asserting that brain thinks, &c., in man and the lower tribes, we do not wish to be misunderstood, for, strictly speaking, it is not the brain of a man, but rather the living being man himself, that thinks and wills by his brain. A brain by itself, that is, disjoined from the human system of which it is only a part, cannot act in this way, any more than feet can walk, or lungs breathe, or ears hear, or a stomach digest; but if we rightly consider we will discover, as already suggested, that the proper view of the matter is this, that it is the creature man who walks by his feet, breathes by his lungs, &c.; and the being man is a compound of these organs, with many more, capable of executing the various mechanical, physiological, mental or cerebral functions, peculiar to his order of animated existence.

2. We are told man's spirit thinks. We answer, it is quite an assumption that he has a spirit such as he is supposed to possess; it is another that a spirit must be a living substance, and that, if even alive, thought must be among its attributes. Who, with an authority that we may not wisely and virtuously question declares that man's spirit thinks, and wills, and desires? When will the distinction be drawn between a man and the spirit of a man?—between the life-giving breath and Breather?

3. It is asserted that the man and his outward material parts are entirely different, as may be detected in the phraseology, my hands, my feet, my head, my eyes, &c.; the "my," it is affirmed, is the "spirit" on its throne within owning these as its organs or members, and this spirit is alone worthy of being called the man. Well, if this reasoning is solid, what originates the my, or what is it that says my, in the expressions "MY soul, MY spirit?" If the "my hands," for instance, prove these members do not essentially belong to the human being, but are, as it were, accidentally conjoined with him in the meantime, then the my soul and my spirit prove the same as to the popular "soul" and "spirit;" and if a man is not a corporeal agent, nor a soul, nor a spirit, what is he? Every orthodox believer in the common doctrine about the human spirit, uses parallel phraseology to that on which such stress is fallaciously placed, when he speaks, as every one must do, of his reason, his will, his imagination, his desire. How very absurd to demand, is there a being different from this reason, will, imagination, and desire, who yet owns them all, and employs them to gain his ends? If the evidence is good in the first case, it is equally powerful in the second. A little reflection, we respectfully submit, would convince most persons of the language we have presented being just that of a human agent announcing property in his own members, parts, faculties, and in himself. If we say my hands, we also say myself, and the being who underlies the my, is the same being who underlies and originates the self. It is in fact a "self" claiming property in a "self"—a man declaring himself to belong to himself. The divine being is an absolute unity, yet he says "my soul," and is not the soul of God, just, the Eternal himself? When he uses the words "my soul" the phraseology is equal to I, as is detectable in the verse, "my soul," or I "shall have no pleasure in him.".

4. Men, it is again affirmed, will live forever because they are spirits. Who has not heard the language, "a spirit cannot die?" Now we beg to answer, that the Bible no where declares a man to be a spirit, and the same book never asserts that a spirit must live forever. Angels are spirits, and who would suspend their duration on the order, or kind of being conferred on them, and not on the will, and power, and promise of the Supreme.

5. Men are in the image of God, and therefore they must be spirits. Where is this laid down in the Book, from which, of course, it is professedly derived? So far from God making man a spirit, when he produced him in his image, the Record instructs us, he was formed of the "dust of the ground." Gen. 2: 7, 3: 19. As all Bible students know, we are never expressly informed in what this image consisted, and to assume that it was in the point of "spirit," or, what is no less common in that of immortality, is to do what the whole volume palpably condemns. Man is of "dust," and was at the very first merely a candidate for an eternity of being, as may be easily discovered by an unprejudiced examination of the arrangements in Eden, and the trial to which our first parents were snbjected there. The language "image of God," in which man as man is still found (James 3: 9, 1 Cor. 11: 7,) seems to have a primary special reference to the dominion which was to be exercised by him over the inferior tribes, like that which the Everlasting maintains in the boundless universe, for so soon as it is said, "let us make man in our own image," it is added, "and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air," Gen. 1: 26.

But whatever it may consist in, or however numerous may be its elements, it is demonstrable that it describes man not as a spirit, for he only has a spirit, being himself of the dust entirely; moreover it cannot lawfully be understood to intimate that he is immortal, since he has never been anything else, in all the dispensations under which he has been placed, than a candidate for eternal life. One simple statement of what man is, and the position he occupies in the universe, is worth a thousand inferences drawn from the words "image of God," or a thousand conjectures as to what their meaning may be. Such direct intimations are abundant in the Volume, and they are to teach us in interpreting "image of God," what its import cannot be; patience and application may enable us to acquire a satisfactory apprehension of its signification. [Moncrieff, Scotland.]—Examiner.

The Spirit of Prayer.

That prayer is a constant and continual duty, will not be questioned by any Christian. And that men ought always to pray and not to faint, can not be denied. And yet how to maintain the spirit and practice the duty, is a difficult question for many. How it can be done is pointed out by THOMAS FULLER, in his "Good Thoughts."

"Ejaculations are short prayers darted up to God on emergent occasions. If no other artillery had been used this last seven years in England, fewer corpses had been buried in earth. Oh, that with David we might have said, 'My heart is fixed,' being less busied about fixing of muskets! The principal use of ejaculations is against the 'fiery darts' of the devil. Our adversary injects (how he doeth it, God knows; that he doth it, we know) bad notions into our hearts, and that we may be as nimble with our antidotes as he with poisons, such short prayers are proper and necessary. In hard heavens so choked up with envious sands, that great ships drawing many feet of water cannot come near, lighter and lesser pinnaces may freely and safely arrive. When we are time-bound, place-bound, or person-bound, so that we cannot compose ourselves to make a large, solemn prayer, this is the right instanant for ejaculations, whether orally uttered, or only poured forth inwardly in the heart.—Calendar.

Learn all You Can.

Somebody has given the following excellent advice, which is worthy of being treasured up by everybody: "Never omit any opportunity to learn all you can. Sir Walter Scott said, even in a stage-coach he always found somebody to tell him something he did not know before. Conversation is generally more useful than books for the purpose of knowledge. It is, therefore, a mistake to be morose or silent, when you are among persons whom you think ignorant; for a little sociability on your part will draw them out, and they will be able to teach you something, no matter how ordinary their employment. Indeed, some of the most sagacious remarks are made by persons of this description, respecting their particular pursuit.

Hugh Miller, the famous Scotch geologist, owes not a little to the fame of observations made when he was a journeyman stone-mason, and worked in a quarry. Socrates well said that there is but one good, which is knowlege, and but one evil, which is ignorance. Every grain of sand helps to make the heap. A gold-digger takes the smallest nuggets, and is not fool enough to throw them away because he hopes to find a huge lump some time. So, in acquiring knowledge, we should never despise an opportunity, however unpromising. If there is a moment's leisure, spend it over a good or instructive talking with the first person you meet.

INDUSTRY AND ITS BLESSINGS.—People may tell you of your being unfit for some particular occupations in life, but heed them not. Whatever employment you follow with perseverence and assiduity will be found fit for you; it will be your support in youth and comfort in old age. In learning the useful part of any profession, very moderate abilities are generally injurious to the possessors. Life has been compared to a race, but the illusion still improves by observing that the most swift are ever the most apt to stray from the course.

DON'T STAND STILL.—If you do you will be run over. Motion, action, progress,—these are words which now fill the universe with their stirring demands. Advance, or stand aside; do not block up the way, and hinder the career of others. There is something for all to do.

MAKE THE LIVING HAPPY.—If we were only half as lenient to the living as we are to the dead, how much happier might we render them and from how much vain and bitter remorse might be spared, when the grave, the "all-atoning grave," has closed over them.

For the Children.

DISOBEDIENCE TO PARENTS.—A young man was sentenced to the South Carolina penitentiary for four years. When he was about to be sentenced, he stated publicly that his downward course began in disobedience to his parents—that he thought he knew as much of the world as his father did, and needed not his aid or advice, but that as soon as he turned his back upon his home, then temptations came around him like a drove of hyenas, and hurried him on to ruin. There is no place so safe and happy as a good home.

POLITENESS.—"How are you, my dear?" said a minister to a little girl, where he called in. How do you think she behaved? Did she put her finger in her mouth, and hold down her head, without saying a word? No, indeed! She looked up cheerfully, and said, in a sweet voice, "I am well, thank you; how are you?" And when she retired, observing that the minister looked towards her, she very neatly bade him good evening, and slipped off to her room. That little girl was less than seven years old. How do you act when any one speaks to you?

COUNSELS FOR THE YOUNG.—Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come, but resist it stoutly. A spark will set a house on fire. A fit of passion may give you cause to mourn all the days of your life. Never revenge an injury.

He that revenges knows not rest;
The meek possess a peaceful breast.

If you have an enemy, act kindly to him, and make him your friend. You may not win him at once, but try him again. Let one kindness be followed by another, till you have compassed your ends. By little and little, great things are completed.

Water falling day by day,
Wears the hardest rock away.

W. C. Ford 3/4

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, 1857. WHOLE NO. 96. VOL. V. NO. 18.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

From the Christian Messenger.

LONG SUFFERING.

BY H. L. H.

I saw a beauteous flower
Beneath rude footsteps crushed,
But oh, what fragrance from it spread,
While prostrate in the dust:
All its sweet wealth before concealed,
Was by this footstep rude revealed.

Thus, too, the Christian's worth
Is oft unseen, unknown,
Till bruised and trampled in the earth,
There rises to the throne
Something that earth can ne'er impart—
The incense of a broken heart.

Jesus each sorrow feels,
He shares our hidden woe,
He sees each tear in darkness steal,
As oft in secret flow;
And soon each faithful one will find
A heavenly home where all are kind.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Will You Join our Church?

—OR—

REASONS FOR BEING AN ADVENTIST.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—In reply to your inquiries why I retain a position separate from all other branches of the Christian Church, and if it would not savor more of a truly christian, catholic spirit, and more effectually advance the cause of our common Master, to abide within the pale of some Church that possesses influence in community, and consequently offers a more extensive field of usefulness, than to occupy the comparatively limited sphere offered by the Advent Church?—I hasten to make some remarks.

And first, I wish to observe, that, concerning the influence you speak of, I consider it should have no weight in our minds at all. For the reason that the question at issue is concerning truth and right, and not concerning popularity. That it is desirable to get influence in community so far as to allow us to succesfully publish the truth to them, is, I admit, quite desirable. But this, it must be remembered, like all the blessings given to the Church, is the gift of God. The accumulation of church popularity is seldom conducive to the interests of God's cause. Usually, the fruit of such things is a time-serving, and, of course, popular ministry, which courts the favor of wealth, winks at vice, and with soft words says what is the equivalent to truth. And then, no sooner is a mighty truth broached within the region of such a church, than it is immediately cried down as heresy, or a schismatical innovation. In this we are not conjecturing, for such has been the fact, throughout the history of the Church. Such popularity we deem but little better than uniting church and state, christians and wordlings in one; which, while it nominally gains the ear of the world to the proclamation of truth, yet does so only nominally, while at the same time it subjects the church to the most inexorable bondage to the world, whose wealth and pride dictates what shall and what shall not be sanctioned within her pale. A condition very properly symbolized by a woman riding upon a scarlet-colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, (Rev. 17: 3,) instead of resting, as the church should do, only on Jesus Christ.

The influence of the church is two-fold; first, such as we have described, which is no more than such as might and does attend many human enterprises which have their beginning and ending in man. The other is, that mighty, moral power, which sends thundering home to the human heart an almost overwhelming conviction of sin and the necessity of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and which is the result of entire consecration, faithfulness, and earnest prayer on the part of the church. This sometimes results in what some call popularity—and which is witnessed in many instances of revival, when whole communities are stirred, and the limits of the church often not sufficient to accommodate the crowd. To those not instructed in divine things this might be counted as a piece with the popularity before described. But upon observation it will be found to possess many points of difference. In the former case, the officiating minister did all the work; (if work it may be called) while in the latter case, the church works with the minister—Zion travails. In the former case, a well-trained and accomplished choir (probably for the most part wicked persons,) sang the high praises of God for the entertainment of the congregation; but in the latter case, the heart of every saint seemed attuned to the praise of God, and yearned for a thousand tongues to sing their great Redeemer's praise, because He is worthy. In the former, the minister preached beautiful sermons, full of brilliant sentences, of rhetoric and logic, and language as "soft as downy pillows are;" while in the latter comes forth the strongly conceived, and earnestly uttered truths of the gospel, with many times, "thus saith the Lord." In the former case, men go away and say, "what a splendid sermon!" In the latter, they say, "what shall we do?"—or, it may be, sing—

"His easy yoke I'll bear,
With delight, with delight."

In the former case, men go and come—like the door on its hinges—year in and year out, and do not feel they have grown either in grace or knowledge. In the latter case, the church is bestirring herself, loving to pray, to warn, to instruct; sinners are converted, truth is loved, religion prosperous, and God is honored. In the former, men sit lazily, and often sleep in cushioned pews; while more frequently, the latter are found, if not with their master on the mountain-side, in the chapel or school-house. In the former is found the mighty and noble, the wealthy and learned; while in the latter, "the common people receive Him gladly." In the former, whether the minister shall be sanctioned or dismissed is for those who have the mighty dollar to say. In the latter, all feel he is Christ's messenger, and bears to us the word of God Most High. In the former case, the church is in servile bondage to the world, having those and only those to preach to her the gospel that can or will, with smooth things please worldly men; while in the latter case, the preacher feels he is dependent on Him whose servant he is, and the church is composed of God's free men.

This seeming popularity of which we have remarked, as sometimes attending the more humble church of God, differs as widely from the other in its origin as in its character. It is as I have before intimated, the gift of God. "A man can receive nothing except it be given from heaven." John 3: 27. This axiomatic truth is illustrated not only in the ministrations of our blessed Lord, but likewise in the perpetual experience of His church. I mean that church that has faith. And beside all this, we do well to remember that commonly error is more popular than truth; and that always when any precious truth has been brought to the church the popular mass have rejected it. And such facts, however painful, are but in keeping with the scriptures. "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and FEW there be that find it." Matt. 7: 14. "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets." Luke 6: 26. "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." James 4: 4. And again; "Fear not, LITTLE flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give YOU the Kingdom." Luke 12: 32. Finally, upon this point suffice it to say, that against the influence of a carnal, though popular church, we enter our most solemn protest; and assure you that we care not for influence more than is given us by God in consequence of our holy living and the faithful exhibition of His truth.

Concerning a catholic spirit, as opposed to a narrow, bigoted and sectarian spirit, we most heartily approve of, but feel that such a spirit may as easily be cultivated in a small fold as in a large one. Indeed, we have not yet learned of that church where the poisonous influences of sectarianism do not prevail.

Of our usefulness with a larger or popular church we cannot say, having never yet joined one. Although we know that in unity there is strength, and that because of the divided condition of christendom there is left an occasion for stumbling to the skeptic, yet, with the existing condition of things, we know not how to improve this matter—for all churches are but fragments or single parts of the one body.

But to sum up and give briefly some of the more prominent reasons why I must refuse your invitation to join your church, or some other church more popular than is the Advent church, I remark, my reasons are,

1st. Because the doctrine of the second personal advent of our Lord Jesus Christ is of great practical worth to the christian, and yet is disregarded by the mass of professing christians, your own church not excepted.

2nd. The doctrine of the resurrection is counted of no practical worth by your church.

3d. Because the doctrine of Christ's personal reign on the earth, with his saints, resurrected, and translated, has been the one hope of patriarchs, apostles, prophets, and martyrs, and is rejected by your church; and with this taken away I have no intelligent hope.

4th. Because the doctrine of a temporal millennium is no where found in the scriptures, and was never taught or believed by the primitive christian church, and yet is now the general belief of your church, and operates as a great moving power in all her efforts.

5th. Because the doctrine of a temporal millennium—to which your church has now pledged her strength—is calculated to rock men to sleep in the cradle of carnal security, promising them a time of universal peace and safety, beside exerting a secularizing influence on the church, which Martin Luther called a lie of the devil forged in hell, to which lie I cannot give my influence as a christian man, either directly or tacitly.

6th. Because the prophecies, both consecutive and discursive, are nearly fulfilled, and the last event mentioned therein is realized, to which awful fact your church is almost utterly indifferent, and unwilling to hear or heed anything relating to the subject.

7th. Because the signs our Lord foretold as the sure harbingers of His second Advent, have now been or are being witnessed, which signs your Church will not discern or notice.

8th. Because, in the great truths relating to the speedy, personal advent and reign of Christ on the earth, I feel the greatest conceivable interest, and desire to be instructed and comforted by hearing them preached and in return do what I can for their promulgation, opportunity for neither of which would be afforded me in your church.

9th. To habitually sit under the preaching of any system of divinity—however rich it might be in intellectual worth, or scholastic lore—that should leave out the grand crowning truths of revelation, which I have mentioned, and the prophecies which compose so large a share of the word of God, would seem to me like a personal attempt to defraud both myself and God.

10th, Because, should I join your church I should yet feel myself compelled, in my way, "earnestly to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," which I know would provoke upon myself unpleasant epithets from those whose feelings I should irritate;—or else I should feel constrained for the sake of peace, to keep quiet, and so forfeit my christian liberty.

Many other reasons I might add, such as my neglecting "the present truth"—to warn the world of its approaching doom, and, in fine, do that work reasonably expected of those who are looking for the return of their Lord. And yet while for these many reasons I cannot cease to be known as an "Adventist," and join your church, I shall nevertheless endeavor to continue—though it may be in trial—to yet love all those who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and continue your brother, looking for our Lord Jesus Christ unto Eternal Life. * * *

For the Crisis.

Waiting, Watching, Praying.

The question is very appropriate, even now—"When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Faith in the personal coming of Christ, is only kept by a precious few, while the multitude follow the more popular view—a world converted—which is more congenial to their hearts; and though they may deceive themselves and each other by their specious pretences to love and good works, yet the Master they cannot deceive, and too late they will find that the crown is laid up for those alone "who love his appearing." While nominal professors are thus riveted to the things of time and sense, the whole world is running mad with witchcraft, in the form of spiritualism, the living seeking knowledge of the dead, and from "spirits who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh," thereby proving that they are not of God. These frog-spirits seem to be the progeny of the "old dragon," as Mormonism is of the "false prophet." Iniquity abounds, and seems on the increase. Distress and perplexity are manifest, though the "peace and safety" cry is trying to hush the discordant elements, and fix them in darkness and unbelief.

But there is a class of "despised ones" who are "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." Each of these can adopt the words of the Psalmist, "My soul waiteth for the Lord, more than they that watch for the morning." A posture, or state of waiting, for any event of importance, is one of intense interest; how much more, to be in a state of continued watching for an event of infinite moment, which is expected to come suddenly. And to wait for such an event as the coming King, hoping he will soon arrive, presupposes a readiness for such arrival; and though there be joy in the anticipation, still, as we must occupy till He comes, there is a kind of anxiety and fear lest something should be left undone, or be done wrong. But one cannot be said to be waiting, till he is wholly ready. "If it (seem to) tarry, wait for it; for it will surely come, it will not tarry" one moment beyond the appointed time. "For at the time appointed the end shall be." "If we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." Paul's benediction is, "The Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ." He admonishes us, before God, "to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." And it was his desire "that we come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

But this doctrine creates disturbance in Satan's kingdom, and his legal subjects frown upon us, and affirm that we can know nothing about the time. But this counsel we reject, because we know that those signs given by himself as tokens of his approach are in the past, and we are admonished "to lift up our head." Why? Because our "redemption draweth nigh;" and we have the assurance that when he comes the shout will be raised,—"This is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Here is proof that a class will be waiting for him when he comes. And why do they wait? because they expect him. But they would not expect him if they could know nothing about the time. By a knowledge of the chronological prophecy of Jeremiah, Daniel was enabled to understand the time of the end of the captivity of the Jews, after twenty years. So may all, who are so disposed, understand the end of the twenty-three hundred days. There was also an understanding of the first advent, and there were some waiting then "for the consolation of Israel." Such was Simeon, to whom "it was revealed that he should not see death, till he had seen the Lord's Christ." Luke says,—"The people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ or not."

Dr. Lightfoot gives many interesting quotations from the Talmuda and Gemara one of which is as follows: "Daniel's weeks had so clearly defined the time of the coming of the Messiah, that the minds of the whole nation were raised in expectation of him." But the minds of the Jewish rulers were so inflated with self-sufficiency, that they could not acknowledge one in a humble state of life, though his doctrine and miracles, as well as his birth, testified that he was the Messiah, though they sent a delegation of "priests and Levites from Jerusalem to John to ask him who art thou?" His answer was, "I am not the Christ." "Art thou that prophet? and he answered, no." "Why baptizest thou then, if thou art not the Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?" His answer was, "There standeth One among you whom ye know not." "He shall baptize with the Holy Ghost." "I am sent before him." Here John bore a truthful testimony that the Messiah had come; but the haughtiness of the rulers forbade them to receive so meek and lowly a King. And the same prophecy of seventy weeks, which revealed the time of the Messiah, revealed his death. "And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself." And truly did Peter affirm that "they had fulfilled the same prophecies, in condemning him," and I should be constrained to believe that they knew it, had not Peter said, they did it ignorantly; and for the prophecy of Caiaphas, as high priest, "that Jesus should die for that nation; and not for that nation only, but that he should gather together in one the children of God which were scattered abroad." O the forbearance of God toward so vile a man, that he should permit him to utter a prophecy so exactly parallel with that of Daniel!

Again. Says Lightfoot, "When they saw this, the true Messiah, they would not see him," (i. e. the rulers would not acknowledge him.) While many of the nation of the Jews were waiting and longing to behold him, the dire malignity of the leaders procured his crucifixion. Again, "The Jews were gathered together from all nations at Jerusalem, (Acts 2nd Chap.) expecting and coming to see, (him) because at that time the term of revealing the Messiah, that had been prefixed by Daniel, was come." "Hence, that now the time of that great expectation was at hand and fulfilled; they thought that the kingdom of God would presently appear." (Lightfoot.) See Luke 19: 11.

We read in Acts 2: 4,—"And there were dwelling at Jerusalem, Jews, devout men out of every nation under heaven." These had come up to Jerusalem to attend the feast; and what must have been their consternation when they heard the preaching of Peter and his application, charging the leaders of the Jews with the murder of their Messiah; that those very prophecies of Daniel, which they had come so far to see fulfilled in the glorious person of the Messiah, and to meet him there, had just been fulfilled by their own priests, in the cutting off of the Messiah. "They broke out (says Lightfoot,) into various, and those wild conjectures of the time; and at length all those conjectures coming to nothing, all ended in this curse, may their soul be confounded, who compute the times." "They were fully aware that the time foretold by the prophets must be long since fulfilled, and that their obstinacy must be confounded by their own history, and the chronology of their own scriptures." "Therefore they have pronounced an anathema on those who should attempt to examine by chronological computation, the prophecies that predict the coming of the Messiah." Dr. Clarke, from whom the foregoing quotations are copied, exclaims,—"Who can conceive a state of willful blindness or determined obstinacy superior to this!"

Thus we see that though Jesus was "delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God," to be a sacrifice of atonement for sins; yet did the Jews "with wicked hands," crucify and slay him. And thus they improved the last of their seventy weeks, (that part of the vision that was to be fulfilled on the Jews,) in the gratification of their hatred to the Son of God, till they insured the curse of God to their own souls and bodies, and also to the whole nation.

But far different will the Messiah appear when he comes in his glory; for though "he was once offered to bear the sins of many," yet unto them that look for him, shall he appear "the second time without sin (sin offering) unto salvation." As the same prophecies which foretold his first coming, foretold his death, so the same prophecies which foretell his second coming foretell his glory. "Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Even so, Amen. Who so justly entitled to this punishment, as those who so much despised and crucified him? But "God hath raised him up, having loosed the bands of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it." "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all (apostles) are witnesses." "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made this same Jesus both Lord and Christ." "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Yes, blessed be God, we believe it; we watch for it; we wait for it; we look for it, and we long to behold that face which was once spit upon, that head which was once crowned with thorns, that body which was scourged and pierced, and those hands and feet which were once nailed to the cross.

Who can contemplate the man of sorrows, "who had not where to lay his weary head," but with the deepest sensations? Who can hear his voice from the cross saying, "sinner, see my blood flow; must I suffer all this for thee?" without the most heartfelt penitence? This is our hope, for him we live, for him we labor, and for him we suffer, and still "count it all joy," because of our blessed hope. All things here will soon be dissolved, and we desire to live in all holy conversation and godliness, and to be "looking for, and hasting unto the coming of the day of God;" when "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. "Joshua said to the armies of Israel when about to pass over Jordan, "Ye have not passed this way, heretofore;" and so it may be said of us, we may have passed antitypically through all the hardships of that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents and scorpions, for near forty years of pilgrimage, and have arrived in view of our home; yet it may be said of what is immediately before us, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore."

O Children of my Father, be faithful; be watchful, be ready, be looking and waiting. "For since the beginning of the world, men have not heard nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside side thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him!"

B. P. HILDRETH.

Westford, June 17th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

SECRET PRAYER.

Blessed privilege have we,
When alone to bend the knee;
When no mortal ear can hear,
Then the blessed One is near.
Then we pour out our complaints,
Tell our grief and tell our wants;
Then the Comforter appears,
Stoops, and wipes away our tears.

A. B. DRAPER.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—The Conference at Carmel, which we attended, can but result in great good to the cause of Christ in this State. The meeting commenced with a few, and there was an evident fearfulness on the part of the brethren as to the result; and the people were still more afraid, for they had frequently heard of the distractions and isms that had been among us, and with their prepossessions and prejudices they looked for no good. But as the meeting progressed it was evident the Lord was with us, our hearts grew warm, and the pilgrims kept coming, some from a great distance; the interest increased. The people ventured in to hear, and whereas we had to go two miles to sleep at the commencement of the meeting, before we got through all were cordial, and earnest in their solicitudes to go with them and enjoy their hospitality.

The meeting was a blessed good one. Yea, the best for the cause of truth and the Advent, for Me., that has been enjoyed for the last four years. Good christian harmony did prevail, with a soft sweetness, binding in its tendency, subduing in its influence. Good religion was let loose in the meeting, and surely it did not stop in our circle, out it ran into the village, and it was with astonishment and admiration that they got a sight at it once more They had thought from its non-appearance that it was DEAD, but the lovely creature they found was still alive with all its primitive attractions, and, I venture to say, they would welcome another meeting of the like at Carmel.

There were some that were exceedingly afraid "good religion" would get lost, if let loose; we have had such all the way. Their method is to slip it under a bushel, but Jesus would have the candle lit and put upon the candlestick, and set where its light could be seen by ALL. So I tell them, no danger of "good religion," let it loose, and if perchance it stray and run into any, or all the "flocks," it may, and will be known. It has a mark upon it which is indelible. Expose it to the dews of midnight, the mark is still there. Let it be drenched with the bleachings of the thunder shower, the mark can plainly be seen. Pass it through the line storm, it still lives, is not lost, its mark is plainly to be seen as the sun at noon in a clear day. But what is this mark so plainly visible which neither fire nor water, malice nor envy can erase? Its name may be given in four letters, which the most simple at first sight will recognize—LOVE.

Love is interwoven into the christian's entire being. Let him loose day or night he works no ill to his neighbor. Find him among his enemies, he will do them good. Heavenly visitor, pass on, untrammelled, through every village and hamlet, visiting Adventists and all other ists till the christian shall find his home and resting place in the Paradise of God. I am still laboring in Me., and our prospects seem to brighten. Among the last perils we have some good seasons.

Thy Bro. in love and hope,

L. BOUTELL.

Holden, Me., June 23, '57.

From Bro. M. Chandler.

BRO. GRANT:—We have enjoyed some mercy drops here the past winter. We have baptized a number, and had quite an addition to the church, and still hope for greater prosperity in the cause of God. I have been doing what I could the past winter to spread the news of the coming of our Savior. I commenced a meeting at Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., on the twenty-fifth of Dec., and continued it for ten days. Had a good time. I have visited some other places. The Lord has been with us. I preach to the church here and elsewhere, every Sunday. Bro. Morgan and myself supply the church here and at Princeton.

I am intending to visit Hancock Co., in a few weeks; then I intend to go north to Joe Davis, Ogle, and Stevenson counties. I travel as the way opens for me. For the most part, I have to supply my own wants and the wants of my family; if I was not under the necessity of doing so, I should devote all of my time to the cause. But, by the grace of God, I intend to clear my garments from the blood of all men. Your Brother in tribulation.

MOSES CHANDLER.

Cordova, Ill., April.

P. S. My address is Cordova, Rock Island Co., Ill.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 1, 1857.

What does Spiritualism Teach?

Read the following extracts from their papers and lectures, and see. The spirit speaking through I. N. Underwood, in Sacramento, California, says, when defining Deity, "we must regard him as a central Principle, but not as a Being .... a Principle existing in matter in all conditions, and in all relations .... a part of every thing."

Is not this denying the Father? What can be plainer? And if they deny the Father, they must of necessity, deny the Son also. Who is he that denieth Father and Son? Let the apostle John answer.—"He is antichrist, that denieth Father and Son." 1 John 2: 22.

Mrs. Henderson, a distinguished trance medium, who is called by Spiritualists, "the inspired evangelist," stated at the Melodeon, in Boston, a short time since, in answer to the question,—"What evidence have we that Spiritualism is a revelation from God?" that we have "the same that we have in relation to the Scriptures." In answering the inquiry,—"Which is the highest authority, Spiritualism or revelation," she said, "the authority is alike."

She was asked,—"What is meant by Christ's walking on the water?" and replied,—"It was no miracle, except as an appearance of deviation from the ordinary operation of laws. Christ was a great medium."

We inquire if the above answers give evidence that they come from the same source as the Scriptures? If these spirits get their knowledge from the same source as the prophets and apostles, let them meet the Lord's challenge given by the prophet Isaiah,—"Produce your cause, saith the Lord .... show us what shall happen .... show the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods." The prophets and apostles have foretold events hundreds and thousands of years before they came to pass, without making one single mistake in the hundreds of prophecies that have been fulfilled. Let the "familiar spirits" of the last days give us the same evidence of their truthfulness, and we will believe them; but up to this time, we have seen no proof that all the spirits combined, who are manifesting themselves through mediums, can foretell a single event that is not already revealed in the Bible, or that might not be discovered by any man in the flesh, who is a close observer of the signs of the times, or which men could not foretell, and then cause to be fulfilled by their own efforts.

It may be asked,—"if Spiritualism is not from the same source as the revelations in the Bible, then from whence does it come?" Read the following, and we think you have the truth:—

"A correspondent of the New York Tribune states that the spirits have confessed to him 'that they are not the persons that they have hitherto professed to be—are not the once mortal friends and relatives of those who have interrogated them from this side of the veil—are not of the human family at all, but a different and darker race, outcast and abandoned, who derive a delicious pleasure from deluding and misleading credulous human beings.' This certainly explains a vast mass of facts not hitherto accounted for by the spiritualists, and until some means are found for identifying individual spirits, nobody can say that it is not true in every instance of alleged spiritual intercourse."—Boston Herald.

Mrs. Henderson says, "Spiritualism ... may be termed the second spiritual coming of the Son of God, and of the Son of Man." Then he is "in the secret chamber;" but Jesus taught us when on earth, in relation to his second coming.—"if they shall say unto you ... behold he is in the secret chamber, BELIEVE IT NOT." Why not? Because the Bible declares that, "this same Jesus (which was 'crucified,' 'buried,' 'was raised again,' had 'flesh and bones,' and was handled,) which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." How unlike the teachings of Spiritualists. It is very evident they do not come from the same source. The reporter of Mrs. Henderson's lectures says, "it was shown that the second advent was not to be a literal, bodily one." This sentiment is just what Jesus told us not to believe. He saw that "in the latter times" many would "depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils," teaching the people, among other things, that the second advent is spiritual, manifested in "secret chambers," and has instructed us to believe not their false teaching, and let us remember his words.

Hear their boastings,—"We feel that our advance will be irresistible, and our conquests speedy and sure. To Spiritualists is committed the gospel of the present age."—[Spiritual Telegraph.

The following is from the Christian Spiritualist.

"A youth is now living upon earth unknown to man, and to those Spirits who at this time are most generally in communication with us. He is the type of a perfect man. He is a sample, to which the race shall ultimately attain. He is under the guardianship of celestials, and is in process of developing his physical nature by due and appropriate exercises. He has a brain with new organs, affording a broader forehead and a higher reverence. He is supposed to be at this time about ten years of age. At twelve years he will give token of remarkable mental endowments.

He is in the United States. He will possess powers of which men now have no conception. The wonders wrought by Jesus will be thrown into the shade by the more wonderful which shall be witnessed from this person, and his twelve principal mediums, who are also in process af preparation for the work assigned them. These twelve are also as yet in obscurity. The youth will be prepared to act at the time of the greatest need. He will restore order from the confusion which shall arise in our country. The process of purification must first be here endured, and when the paroxysm shall have passed, then will restoratives be judiciously administered by this person and his associates. Thus our country is the kingdom which the Lord of Heaven shall set up, which shall break in pieces all other kingdoms. Here is the nursery of mediums which shall effect the purposes assigned, from aforetime, by the supreme designer. Here is the New Jerusalem, from whence shall issue the law. Many thousands of lesser mediums are also at this time under Spirit tutors, being prepared for service, who have no thoughts that they are being thus disciplined. When wars and revolutions shall have prepared the way, they will go forth to heal the nations, to establish political and religious freedom, and to bring into unity all people; to humble all that are exalted, and to bring down those who are lifted up."

CAMPMEETING.—So far as we have had opportunity to ascertain the feelings of the Brn. in relation to the time of the campmeeting, with one exception, it is thought best to commence the 24th of August; but if the 31st will accommodate better, the time can be easily changed. We hope to hear from others immediately, if they wish an alteration. All things considered, we are in favor of the 24th. We intended to have put in the full notice this week, but wait to hear from others.

THE article in the Crisis of June 10, headed "A Case for Antagonists," should have read, "A Case for Anatomists."

For the Crisis.

"May be Mistaken."

Why bless you, man alive, you are mistaken. You have been wearing the Devil's green goggles on your eyes so long that you have changed the color of everything. Why, you can't tell the difference between a wolf and a sheep, and so while you thought you were killing wolves, you was in fact destroying "the flock of God." Why, you have got in a little narrow, contracted place, and built a pen big enough to hold about one tenth of the flock, and then you thought that all who could n't squeeze into it were goats, wolves, and hyenas.

Now, my good friend, I would advise you, first, to throw away Satan's green goggles; then take that powerful microscope of the Devil. which you have used to spy out the faults of your brethren, and sink it so deep in the bottomless pit that the Devil never can fish it up again with his longest line. Then pull down your little sectarian pig-pen walls, and let the sheep and lambs go in and out and find pasture. Then come and get a little of that charity which hopeth all things and is not easily provoked; then think of your own faults and errors, and pray God to forgive you as you forgive those that trespass against you. Then try to be a companion of all that fear God, and live a quiet and peaceable life, and you will be surprised to see what a change it will make in your feelings.

The fact is, all this jealousy and evil surmising is just a trick of Satan to divide the flock, to alienate brethren, and to destroy you all. First, it offends the little ones. Second, it destroys the power of the church. Third, it discourages and fetters those who would be faithful. Fourth, it grieves the heart of Christ, who prayed that they might "all be one." Fifth, it strengthens the hands of the wicked, and fills their mouths with arguments and blasphemies against God. Sixth, it will shut out those who indulge in it from the fellowship and glory of the eternal home.

O brother, be very careful. Take heed and offend not one of these little ones. Let your love compass all. Love all that Jesus loves. Receive all that HE receives. Pity all that HE pities. Let your affections be as wide, and deep, and as tender as his! God help us to have more of the deep and yearning sympathy that filled the heart of the divine Redeemer. Let us catch the tide of love that gushes from his heart, and love him because he first loved us. O let us pray for more of that heavenly unity and peace which is well pleasing in the sight of our heavenly Father, and which manifests his glorious presence in his church. H. L. H.

Springfield, Mass., May 5th, '57.

For the Crisis.

Travels and Trials.

No. II.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—The meeting at the Brick Chapel in Bridgeport, Ct., was one of deep interest. A large number attended for that place, and there was a desire to hear, which was encouraging. Met, at the meeting, only two of the old '43 believers—Bro. Andrews and Sr. Leonard. But met with some old acquaintances, who had moved there—among them, Bro. Evans and Bro. Kelly. I did not understand the condition of things as to two meetings, when I sent my appointments. I left after a brief visit (in the morning) for New York; arrived in the afternoon of the 23d, and immediately took boat for Newark, N. J., where we had a most interesting and powerful meeting; an account of which I must give you in another letter.

Allow me to say, I do enjoy very much the season and the weather—beautiful landscapes—lovely scenes—splendid prospects of land and water. I can, and will appropriate them. Who shall hinder me? Am I fit for a recluse? Not at all. I never shall become a hermit. Never! I must take my lungs full of air, and mean to breathe in a whole being—full of joy. I hate a big city—I will have nature's fields—sometimes in her wildness, and—more wild, more ravishing. I love the great, great country—the forest, prairie, plain, mountain, bay, wave and shore; and where will I fare better than in this state?

Ah! the New Earth will furnish the scenery to bless and interest—Spring will always abide, summer never depart, trees "leave out" an everlasting verdure, and flowers forever bloom. Life, live! for death is dead! Wintry sorrow never will breathe the bleak chill upon the face of loveliness. And the sultry Simoon-blast from the earth-desert will no more blacken and waste. On the other side, brethren, rapture immortal swells the bosom. Praise unmingled bursts spontaneous from every redeemed shore. Can the senses be feasted here by the sights and sounds of nature? More there! balmy, salubrious air! Does it spread delight over the being? Better there. C.

Steamer Chicopee, May 25, '57.

"He Comes to Make all Things New."—Rev. 21: 5.

He comes, the second Adam, to undo all that the first did. He comes to repeal and remove the curse to which creation has been subjected by the fall. "We, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

Reader, if all things are to be made new, your heart must also be made new; there must be a new creation within you if you would possess or enjoy the new creation without you. There must be the new heart before you can sing the new song. Have you been renewed? have old things passed away? If not, you are as yet without any hope of or meetness for the inheritance, which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. Oh, bless God! do hear the words of Jesus,—"I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed;" then thou shalt walk with him in white, and shalt eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

J. F. CHAMPLIN.

For the Crisis.

Willing to do God's Will.

"Here am I; send me." So said one of the devoted servants of the Lord in the days of old, the prophet Isaiah, when he saw the "glory" of Christ and "spake of Him." He informs us, that "in the year king Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged. Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me."

This is the language of entire submission to God. This is a state of grace, it is to be feared, to which very few persons attain. Hark! Does God speak? "Who will go for us" to preach the Gospel of Christ, bear the reproach, endure the shame, brook all the trials without murmuring or complaining? Let him who is qualified, and feels "woe is me if I preach not the Gospel," reply cheerfully, "here am I; send me." "Who will go for us" to plead the cause of the oppressed and the needy? Let him who loves his neighbor as himself reply, "here am I; send me." "Who will go for us" to visit the poor and afflicted ones—to supply bread to the hungry, clothing to the naked, rest to the wandering and weary, a shelter to the outcast, a home to the homeless, and comfort to the comfortless? Let him who hath the means at hand, who sees an open door before him to do so, whom God blesses with sunshine, rain, and fruitful fields, and gifts of other kind, reply, with all his heart, "here am I; send me."

O for a religion that ACTS! Not only talks of theory, and doctrine, and principles, and "the kingdom," but does something for the good of others. That is cheerfully willing to be sent by, and "go for" God, at all times, and in all things. Christ was sent to do something—to suffer something for mankind, as well as to teach mankind. Are we not His representatives in community? As He was so let us be.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Murder! Murder!! Murder!!!

A writer remarks, "The Tribune reports fourteen murders in the city of New York, since the first of April!" And that is not the only city in which murders have been committed, since the first of April, but in other large cities, in small cities, in the country, in the more refined and religious portion—as well as in the far West, and more remote, out of hate, of jealousy, of sudden passion, of love of plunder—cold-blooded, unprovoked, diabolical assassination—for money, and most unwarrantable and abominable defiance of law by the executions under "Judge Lynch." For what is the hanging of a man by the decision of a mob, of which so many instances have recently occurred, better than murder, in which every man who acts, partakes? And when the courts are defied who is safe? It were enough that there should be judicial executions,—legal murders—but the taking of life by the rabble in its rage, is like the assassinations of the banditti.

The country is being alarmed by the repetition of such acts, and where is the remedy? What is the hope? Certainly it does not seem to be in the efficiency of human laws, nor yet in the power of religious principle. What can the church effect towards the world's conversion? How can she turn back this mighty tide? In vain, alas! her plea. In vain her half-uttered warning—her feeble, inefficient, illegitimate effort. The effort! what is it? The puny death struggle of the tiny canoe in Niagara's flood. The faint sinking agony of the man in the whirlpool. Murder, in its startling cry, comes on every gale! Robbery, outrage, the worst of uncontrolled human passions, with diabolical rage, appear wildly dark, in omen! Men, rushing with damning ferocity to reek in blood, and victims weltering in the gore of death! What bodes this fury for the world's future? What is the world's hope? C.

Rochester, June 15.

For the Crisis.

Infidelity.

SAMUEL MASON.

No. VIII.

[Concluded.]

It would be needless in me to say, I have proved beyond successful contradiction that Jesus is the Messiah, and that he has made his first advent. The skeptic cannot but be impressed that it is impossible that all these things predicted of some one person, several hundreds, or even some thousand years asunder from each other, should all receive accomplishment in Jesus Christ, without any one exempt case, and in no other person that ever appeared upon earth, without Jesus Christ being the person intended in the divine counsels, and the Messiah, whom all the Prophets were inspired to predict. Otherwise, prophecy would be of no use. All evidence would be rendered precarious, and mankind left to roam at large, without any satisfactory guide to direct their steps in pursuit of truth and salvation. I think then we may say, with unshaken confidence, in the words of St. Philip to Nathaniel,—"we have found him of whom Moses in the Law, and the prophets did write: Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph."

But I will call the skeptics attention to those prophecies which are more immediately connected with the Messiah's second, personal and literal advent.

Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, invaded the land of Israel, about 600 years before the birth of Christ, and carried into captivity a considerable number of the inhabitants of the country. Among others, led captive, were Daniel and his three companions, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. In the second year of his reign, he had a remarkable dream, which made a strong impression upon his mind, but which he was not able to recollect. He sent for all the wise men of Babylon, and, however unreasonable the injunction, insisted that they should make known his dream, together with the interpretation thereof, upon pain of death. After some time, the king's determination was revealed unto Daniel. He requested a little respite might be allowed him, before the decree should be put into execution. This being granted, he went to his three religious companions and desired them to join with him in fasting and prayer, to entreat the Lord to discover unto him the king's dream, and the interpretation thereof. The Lord was entreated of Daniel and his three friends, and the whole matter from first to last was revealed unto him, to the full satisfaction and even astonishment of the king. See Daniel 2: 1–30. The dream is this; Dan. 2: 37–45. The king was so affected with the wonderful manifestation of his inmost thoughts, that he was quite overcome, forgot his own dignity, and fell into an act of idolatry. Dan. 2: 46–49.

The dream is so distinct, the interpretation of it so satisfactory, and the whole so perfectly conformable to the history of the world, as far as the several ages have hitherto proceeded, that no thoughtful man can help being exceedingly struck with the accuracy of the divine foreknowledge.

The dream itself was the figure of an image in the form of a man, made principally of metal, but yet the metal was of different kinds. The head was of gold. This was an emblematical representation of Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonian empire over which he presided. The breast and the arms of the image were of silver. This was an emblematical representation of the empire of Persia, which was to subvert and succeed the Babylonian. Nebuchadnezzar was, at that time, the most powerful monarch in all the earth, and made Babylon the capitol of his kingdom, the wonder of the world. Within sixty years, however, the empire was overturned, and Babylon itself taken by Cyrus the Great, afterwards king of Persia. The belly and thighs of the image were of brass. This represented a third empire which was to succeed the Babylonian and Persian. Accordingly, about two hundred years after the establishment of the Persian empire, Alexander, king of Macedonia, a small State in the upper part of Greece, marched against Darius, king of Persia, defeated him in three pitched battles, and totally subverted the second of the four empires. The Grecian then became the third. The fourth was represented by the legs of iron, and feet part of iron and part of clay. This is the Roman, for these people subdued the four successors of Alexander, and reduced their kingdoms into Roman provinces, and particularly Greece and Macedonia, which were subdued by them one hundred and thirty years after the conquest of Persia by Alexander the Great, and two hundred years before the birth of Christ. The Roman empire then was the fourth and the last. It was represented in this image by iron legs, and feet of iron and clay. "Thou sawest," says Daniel to the King, "till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet, that were of iron and clay, and broke them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them; and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."

The four empires were all to be destroyed, and a fifth was to succeed, which was to be different from all that had gone before. The fourth, too, was to be unlike the three former in several respects. The image had iron legs. This implied that the empire represented by them was to be more powerful than any of those which had gone before. But then the feet and toes of the image were part of iron and part of clay. This was to denote that the latter ages of the Roman empire were partly strong and partly weak. The ten toes upon the feet of the image were designed to represent ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was to be divided; just as the two feet of a human creature are split into ten ramifications. The following ten kingdoms had risen in western Rome before A.D. 483: the Huns, about A.D. 356; the Ostrogoths, 377; the Visigoths, 378; the Franks, 407; the Vandals, 407; the Sueves and Alans, 407; the Burgundians, 407; the Heruli and Turingi, 476: the Saxons 476; Lombards in the north of Germany, 483. The prophet speaking of these kingdoms expresses himself in the following manner,—"Whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with the miry clay, . . : so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken. And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men; but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay." The meaning of which is, the rulers of the ten kingdoms, into which the Roman empire will be divided, shall form marriages, alliances, and contracts one with another from time to time, for supporting each other's interests, but more of their schemes and alliances for obtaining universal empire shall stand. They shall all be broken and come to nought. No universal empire shall ever exist upon the earth again, till the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

How often has the skeptic, when he has seen such characters as Charlemagne, or Charles V., or Napoleon of France, arise and press onward, overthrowing all before them, and at length reaching out their giant arms, entirely around some two, or three, or four of these kingdoms, press them all into one,—"Surely the charm is broken. Can Europe continue any longer so divided as to represent the ten toes of the image, or the ten horns of a beast? Surely, hereafter it must be under the dominion of only one or two." But let him look a little longer, and he will find the cords once more broken. Although differently divided, the ten horns are there still. The revolution was long and bloody. Nations were fractured and sifted through each other, but there are the ten toes still, and part of their composition is yet clay. Again, when he sees those sovereigns scheming in their marriage contracts for their children, negotiating for their marriage portions, etc., he is ready to fancy—"Surely it will not be long until several of these estates will be consolidated, and fall by inheritance to the lot of one."

Skeptic, different farms and large tracts of land are thus united and become the property of one every day that the sun passes over us, but an old grey-headed Hebrew man, twenty-three hundred years since, was told to write concerning the kingdoms of Europe, "They shall mingle themselves with the seed of men, but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay." And in the days of these ten kingdoms, "The God of heaven shall set up a kingdom." Skeptic, do you think he will? He has not failed to do all that was said besides this, and we believe that he will keep his word also here. The fifth universal kingdom is as certain as the first, and both are as certain as that the ten kingdoms exist at this present day, which, again, is as certain as that there is a God, for he has said it, and his word will never fail. The literal seed of David's body will, therefore, come again the second time. I am yours praying, let "thy kingdom come." SAMUEL MASON.

Plymouth Hollow, Ct., June 11, '57

From Eld. J. Howell.

BRO. GRANT:—I have through divine providence safely arrived at my western home, after an absence of about ten months. For about seven months of the time I was very pleasantly located with the brethren and sisters in Salem who worship in Union St. We became very much attached to the church in Salem, and nothing but the consciousness of duty to return to our western field of labor, would have willingly separated us from them. It is indeed one of the best flock with which I ever labored; and I was repeatedly reminded of the truth of David's expression in Psalms 133: 1,—"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" I do believe that the above named church gives of this text a practical illustration. Their strict adherence to the Bible gives health and strength to the whole body.

From a sense of duty, I wish to say of those against whom certain suggestions have been made prejudicial to their moral integrity, that after a very close observation of their course while with them, and a knowledge of their history for a few years past, I am perfectly satisfied of their christian integrity, and strict loyalty to the cause of God. We should have been happy to have remained with them, and preached the word until called to our reward, had not a conviction of duty called us again to our western field. May the peace of God abide with them, and our fervent prayer is, that God will give them a pastor after his own heart.

On our return to the west we called on my only brother in the flesh with whom we enjoyed a very pleasant visit of about ten days. He resides in Pleasant Valley, Duchess Co., N. Y. By a very kind invitation of the Presbyterian clergyman resident there, I occupied his pulpit, and preached to a very attentive audience. May God's blessing be with all of them, and their pastor.

On our arrival here we found the friends well, and a nice hall fitted up for worship. We hope by a faithful discharge of our duty to see the cause of God prosper, and souls saved from the wrath to come. O may the divine blessing attend us here. How true it is, that the success of all our labor for the salvation of men comes from God. What a great necessity exists for faithful labor. Men all rushing into infidelity, and almost everything else, forgetful of God, and regardless of their own interests. May the Lord help us to do our duty.

May the divine blessing attend you, and bless you in all your labors. I like the Crisis, and so do those who take it, so far as my knowledge extends. May success attend it, and its influence be always heavenly and saving. More anon. Yours waiting for Redemption,

JOHN HOWELL.

Harvard, McHenry Co., Ill., June 9.

Man.

Man, in a state of simplicity, uncorrupted by the influence of bad education, bad examples, and bad government, possesses a taste for all that is good and beautiful. He is capable of a degree of moral and intellectual improvement which advances his nature to a participation with the divine. The world in all its magnificence appears to him one vast theatre, richly adorned and illuminated, into which he is freely admitted, to enjoy the glorious spectacle. Acknowledging no natural superior but the great Architect of the whole fabric, he partakes the delight with conscious dignity, and glows with gratitude. Pleased with himself and all around him, his heart dictates with benevolence as well as piety; and he finds his joys augmented by communication. His countenance cheerful, his mien erect, he rejoices in existence. Life is a continual feast to him, highly seasoned by virtue, by liberty, by mutual affection. God formed him to be happy, and he becomes so, thus fortunately unmolested by false policy and oppression. Religion, reason, nature, are his guides through the whole of his existence, and the whole is happy. VIRTUOUS INDEPENDENCE, the sun which irradiates the morning of his day, and warms its noon, tinges the serene evening with every variety of color, and on the pillow of religious hope, he sinks to repose in the bosom of Providence.

But where is man to be found thus innocent, thus noble, thus happy? Not, indeed, in so many parts of the terrapueous globe as he ought to be, but still he is to be found wherever the rights of nature and the virtues or simplicity are not violated or banished by the false refinements, the base artifices of corrupt government.

Unhappily for man, society has been almost universally corrupted, even by the arts intended for its improvement; and human nature is gradually depraved in its very progress to civilization. (John Knox, Spirit of Despotism.)

Yes, "unhappily for man, society has been almost (or is quite) universally corrupted," and we do not look for any improvement, "even by the arts" and sciences, for it appears that these, instead of being the means of leading men to the truth, have, on the other hand, led him to erect an altar, with the memorable inscription—"To The Unknown God," which has been the object of his devotion and worship. See Acts 17: 23, and 19: 19. 1 Cor. 3: 19. 1 Tim. 6: 20.

Man here, as the writer so beautifully describes him, "Pleased with himself and all around him," with "countenance cheerful, mien erect," rejoicing "in existence," "Life" being "a continual feast to him, highly seasoned by virtue, &c., unmolested by false policy and oppression," "the false refinements," and "the base artifices of corrupt government," may never expect to stand forth "erect," with those pure and blessed surroundings which will cause his heart to delight and glow with unalloyed happiness, this side of the resurrection and the establishment of God's righteous kingdom. Then he may walk forth in all the dignity of his divine and newly-created nature, amid restored creation's primeval glory.

Then man shall tread again the Eden bowers,
Inhale the nectar from her perfumed flowers;
His "mien erect," his heart both full and free,
He plucks the fruit from life's sweet healing tree.
He both communes with angels and his Lord,
Within the "paradise of God" restored.

WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

The Child may win the Parent.

Two daughters of an irreligious father, while away from home embraced religion. The father alarmed, immediately sent for them home; but before the messenger reached them they had made their lasting choice, and found the peace the world cannot give. They returned to their father,—not overwhelmed (as he expected) with gloom and despondency, but with countenances beaming with a heavenly serenity and celestial hope.

They told their father what the Lord had done for their souls—that they were pilgrims here—they kept in view the bright fields of promise as they traversed this desert of sin, and were looking for that city which hath foundations.

Soon after their return home they were anxious to establish family worship. They affectionately requested their father to commence that duty. He replied that he saw no use in it. He had lived very well more than fifty years without prayer, and he could not be burdened with it now. They then asked permission to pray with the family themselves. Not thinking they would have confidence to do it, he assented to the proposition.

The duties of the day being ended, and the hour for retiring to rest having arrived, the sisters drew forward the stand and nerves, which had been gathering strength for half a century, could no longer support him; he also kneeled, and then became prostrate on the floor. God heard their prayer, and directed their father's weeping eyes (which had never shed tears of penitence before,) to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world. [Piety at Home.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, on the 8th of April, at Campville, Ct., after a long illness with consumption, Sister Elizabeth Peck, aged thirty-one years.

The subject of this notice has for years worshiped with the Advent believers, and about eight month ago gave all for Christ, and found him precious to her soul. She then saw the cross, but did not excuse herself on account of her poor health. With a trembling step she went down into the water where she was buried with Christ in baptism. Although her pilgrimage was short, she gave good evidence of being a child of God.

While Sister Peck was confined to her bed, which was about three weeks, she warned and exhorted all that came within the reach of her voice to prepare for the judgment. It was evident to all who saw her that she was doing up her last work.

She exercised the grace of patience in all her pain, and went down to the grave willingly, having treasured up in her heart the comforting words of our Savior,—"I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

"That fragile form low in the tomb's extended;
Dimmed those bright eyes, and stilled the fleeting breath.
Alas! her sojourn here on earth is ended,
The music of that voice is hushed in death!"

M. T.

Foreign News.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE PERSIA.

NEW YORK, June 23.

The Royal Mail Steamship Persia, from Liverpool with dates including the 13th, arrived at her docks this morning at half past 7 o'clock.

A despatch from Florence states that the scenery of the theatre took fire on Thursday evening, during the performance of the seige of Sevastopol. A panic arose, when 43 persons were killed, and 134 wounded.

The political news by this arrival is unimportant.

PRUSSIA.—The Berlin correspondent of the London Times writes that the police had obtained a clue to the wide spread conspiracy among the working classes, for bringing out a general strike in all trades on the same day, in Germany, Belgium and Switzerland. Stringent measures have been taken to counteract this movement.

CHINA.—Advices from China state that the rebels are again making headway in the districts surrounding Foo-chow-foo. They had also captured Hokow, in the Keangsee province.

JERUSALEM.—A letter from Jerusalem of the 30th April states that, a few days before, mass was celebrated for the first time in the Church of St. Anne in that city, which was performed with some pomp. The Abbe Martin delivered a sermon, in which, after thanking the Emperor Napoleon for having got back the church, he insisted that the French government ought to require the restoration of the Church of St. Helen at Bethlehem, and of other sacred edifices, which are either "audaciously usurped" by the Greeks, or turned to profane uses by the Turks. The mass was attended by the French pilgrims then in Jerusalem.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—A recent letter from the Sandwich Islands says:

The fact is, religion and morals here are at a pretty low ebb. Most all the missionaries have forsaken their calling; some have got fat berths under government, others are in mercantile business, &c.

Domestic Summary.

The Floridian says that within a very short period there will be within a fraction of 2,000 Mounted Volunteers actively engaged in the vigorous prosecution of the Florida Indian war, the operations of which will undergo no relaxation during the summer months.

HAIL STORM IN MISSOURI.—A hail storm in Buchanan county, Mo., on Saturday, destroyed all the crops, and killed some cattle in the fields. Several men were injured, and one, a negro, was killed. The hail-stones were as large as goose eggs.

AFFAIRS IN UTAH.

WASHINGTON, June 23.

Gen. Scott is here, having been sent for by the President to arrange matters with reference to the movements of troops for Utah. Their final orders are now being prepared. They are to act, while in the Territory, as a posse comitatus. The United States laws are to be enforced and strictly carried out, and the troops are not to interfere in any manner with the Mormons, or their religion. It is the intention of the President that the Governor, Judges, Marshal, etc., shall all proceed to Utah together, doubtless with the U. S. troops.—Cor. of the N. Y. Herald.

TROOPS FOR UTAH.—New York, June 23.—Three companies of U. S. soldiers passed through Jersey City to-day, on their way westward, by the New York and Erie Railroad, to join the forces detached for service in Utah.

REV. CHARLES S. PORTER has resigned the pastorate of the Phillips church, South Boston, on account of having become a convert to Spiritualism.

IRON PASSENGER CARS.—There is now nearly completed in Paterson, N. J., a first-class passenger car, a little larger than the ordinary size, constructed almost entirely of wrought iron. This material is employed to obtain great strength, with less weight than usual, and to avoid the injuries to passengers due to the destruction of ordinary cars in any kind of a smash.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—It is now thought probable, says the New York Commercial Advertiser, that the mammoth steamship Great Eastern will make her first voyage from London to New York—and not to Portland or Norfolk. If she goes there, she will probably take the route by way of the Sound, and stop at Morris' wharf, above Hurlgate. There is said to be 35 feet depth of water at high tide in the shallowest places by that route, while the depth of channel over the bar at Sandy Hook is only 27 feet at high water.

A FEARFUL DISASTER.—Three Hundred and Fifty Persons Burnt and Drowned.—We have by telegraph a brief account of the destruction by fire of the English steamer Montreal, near Quebec last night. By this sad disaster three hundred and fifty persons have lost their lives, principally, it is stated, Scotch emigrants just arrived from Europe. It is to be feared, however, that, at this season of the year, some from New England would be likely to be on board, though the number would probably be small. As usual in such disasters, the great fatality appears to have been amongst the crowded deck passengers.—Traveller.

Notice.

Brethren and friends living in the Western States, who wish for Advent books or tracts, are informed that Elder W. Pratt, having removed from this place from one to two hundred miles south, has transferred his books and tracts on hand to me. Brethren can have them sent as usual, by directing their letters containing their orders to

N. BRANCH, Jr., Moline, Ill.

There are now on hand some of the following kinds.

BOOKS.

Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ, by D. T. Taylor. Future Punishment, by H. H. Dobney. Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times, by William Ramsey, D. D. Church Debts, by Wm. Ramsey. The World as it was, as it is, and as it will be, by Mrs. A. C. Judson. The Unity of Man, or Life and Death Realities. Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as taught by Paul. Bible vs. Tradition, by Aaron Ellis and Thomas Reed. The Old Paths, or the primitive doctrine of a future life.

TRACTS.

Voice of Warning from the four Winds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—Noah, his age and ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Divine Testimony of the Son of God—Plain Truths—State of the Dead—The great Incentive—True Source of Life—Key of Truth—The Night cometh—Ancient Land Mark,—Scripture Searchers Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Tracts free to the poor.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Elder E. Burnham appoints to preach in
Boston, July 12th
Salem, Mass., Third Sunday in July
Lowell, Mass., Fourth Sunday in July

Bro. A. M. Higgins appoints to preach in Salem, July 5th
Salem, July 12th
unless otherwise supplied.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach in
Lawrence, Mass., July 5th
Exeter, N. H., July 12th

Providence permitting, Bro. Albert Fox will meet with the Brethren at Wells Forge, Mass., July 5th
Bristol, Ct., July 12th

Bro. Whitney appoints to preach in
Lowell, July 5th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Stoneham, Monday evening, July 6th.
M. GRANT.

Bro. I. Damman appoints to preach, Providence permitting, in Madison, Me., July 12th, where the Brn. may appoint.

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach in Portland, Me., July 12th.

The Lord willing, I will preach the word as follows:—
Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, July 12th
Exeter, N. H., at the Advent Chapel, July 14th
Lawrence, Mass., July 15th
Auburn, N. H., where Brn. Welsh or Robie may think best, July 16th
Roxbury, Mass., July 17th
Boston, Mass., Lord's day, July 19th
Providence, R. I., July 20th
River Point, where Br. H. Taylor appoints, July 21st
Fairhaven, Mass., July 26th
Elder S. S. BREWER.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Boston the first Lord's day in July.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., the first Lord's day in July. M. GRANT.

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at Kennebunkport, or where Bro. Elisha Mitchell may appoint, Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th
If any of these appointments come in collision with others already made, brethren must let me know immediately by letter, directed to Warner, N. H.
S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
New Bedford, fourth Sunday in June, and first Sunday in July.

Conference.

THE ROCK ISLAND AND EASTERN IOWA SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE stands adjourned to meet in Cordova, Ill., Friday, July 3d. A good representation is desired. Service at the chapel, Thursday evening. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to attend.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the Brethren in
Shelburne Falls, Wednesday eve., July 1st, where Bro. Pulsifer may appoint.
Thursday, July 2d, Charlemont, or at Shelburne, as thought best.
Friday, 2 P. M., July 3d, commence a conference in the vicinity of Hawley, or Savoy, as the brethren may appoint, and continue over the Sabbath. Evening meetings commence at half past 7.
H. PRATT.
Wales, June 7, 1857.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th
Granby, Mass., Sunday, July 19th
D. E. MOULTON.

S. G. Mathewson will preach in a grove at Williamsville, Ct., on the 4th and 5th of July, according to request.

Bro. P. B. Manning appoints to preach at Warner, N. H., July 5th

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

J. Holden 143, Jane Coffin, 120, Edward T. Gladding 121, S. D. Stevens 126, J. Morrison 143, E. White 121, T. Harrington 125, H. Keefer 97, Sarah Mix, Julia A. Tower 121, C. E. Gierlow 130, J. B. Davis 121, J. Roberts 121, L. J. Owen 121, C. Beecher 119, H. Hey 119, G. Berry 119, J. Clifford 96, $1 each.

L. D. Allen 143, W. H. Wild 120, E. Janvrin 124, $2 each.

T. B. Davis 130, J. A. Smith 130, $1.50 each.

T. Foote 136, Laura Botherton 109, J. Holstead 179, Sister Hanson 117, 50 cents each.

G. L. Raymond 81, 66 cents; J. Harmon 156, $1.62

C. B. Burnham 95, 66 cents.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—C. A. Votey 39 cents; W. H. Wild $1; G. L. Raymond $2.34; J. A. Smith $3; J. Harmon 48 cents.

FOR THE POOR.—L. D. Allen $1; J. Holden $1.

BOOKS SENT.—C. A. Votey, W. A. Wild, G. L. Raymond, T. Foote, J. A. Smith, Sarah Mix.

W. H. Wild's P. O. address is North Lee, Mass.

Bro. C. Goodrich's P. O. address is South Farms, Ct.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Harvard, Mc. Henry Co., Ill.

Married.

At Buffalo, N. Y., on the 8th inst., by Rev. Wm. H. De Puy, Mr. Wm. C. Peck of Buffalo, to Miss Mary Jane Toomer, of Iowa City, Iowa.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If so, prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publicati shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half pent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 3 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; full bound gilt, $1—pos. 9 cts.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State, By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] ture Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single $1 per hundred.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 10 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES

ON THE DEATH OF SR. STEPHENS.

Sister, we lay thee down to rest,
Beneath the verdant sod;
Hushed is thy voice, quiet thy breast,
Thou image fair of God.

Sister, while thou art mouldering there,
Low in the silent grave,
Angels may bear from us the prayer,
"O, Jesus, come and save!"

Sister, that morning soon will dawn,
That morning of delight,
When all the saints shall leave the tomb,
And Jesus claim his right.

Sister, not long wilt thou remain,
In that unhallowed spot,
For soon the King descends to reign
O'er kingdoms He hath bought.

Not many days will pass us by,
Ere Christ, the King, will come,
And call his saints, who mouldering lie,
To their eternal home.

O! then, we'll bear thee to the tomb,
In solitude to dwell,
For hovering angels guard thee now,
And they will guard thee well.

MARIA.

HALLOWED BE THY NAME.

BY MISS ELIZA COOK.

List to the dreamy tongue that dwells
In rippling wave or sighing tree;
Go, hearken to the old church bells,
The whistling bird, the whizzing bee;
Interpret right, and ye will find
'Tis "power and glory" they proclaim:
The chimes, the creatures, waters, wind,
All publish "Hallowed be Thy name!"

The pilgrim journeys till he bleeds,
To gain the altar of his sires;
The hermit pores above his beads,
With zeal that never wanes nor tires;
But holiest rite or longest prayer
That soul can yield or wisdom prove,
What better import can it bear,
Than, "Father! hallowed be Thy name!"

The savage kneeling to the sun,
To give his thanks or ask a boon;
The raptures of the idiot one,
Who laughs to see the clear round moon;
The saint well taught in Christian lore,
The Moslem prostrate at his flame—
All worship, wonder, and adore,
And end in "Hallowed be Thy name!"

Whate'er may be man's faith or creed,
Those precious words comprise it still;
We trace them on the blooming mead,
We have them in the flowing rill;
One chorus hails the Great Supreme;
Each varied breathing is the same;
The strains may differ, but the THEME
Is, "Father! hallowed be Thy name!"

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

"Behold the Lamb of God!"

JOHN 1: 29.

These words were uttered by John the Baptist, when the promised Messiah—"God manifest in the flesh"—who had so long been prefigured by the sacrifice of the lamb, presented himself for baptism.

How beautiful and appropriate this figure! The Redeemer of a lost world—the tender-hearted, suffering, self-sacrificing, sympathizing Jesus, compared to that most lovely of animals—the innocent, inoffensive, unresisting lamb. Is the lamb apparently exempt from all stains of guilt, seeming a complete type of innocence and purity? Never was there a created being so pure, innocent and lovely, as Jesus. Is the lamb unresisting and yielding when led to execution? Jesus was "led as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth." At his apprehension, he voluntarily gave himself up to his murderers, and rebuked one of his disciples for attempting to defend him. Though he could have summoned to his aid "twelve legions of angels," if necessary, yet, in perfect submission and meekness, he underwent the most intense suffering. Is the lamb the most harmless and lovely of animals? Jesus is the "chiefest among ten thousand," and "altogether lovely."

Such a being, truly, is worthy of our admiration. Yea, indeed, if we can look at anything, such a Being as this claims our intensest gaze. No other object in the universe has so strong claims to our admiring contemplation. Even the glorious object of our hope itself—the beauty and glory of the coming Kingdom, ought perhaps to occupy our thoughts subordinately to the life and character of our blessed Redeemer, who has purchased it for us. Not that the former should be thought of less, but the latter much more.

Here is an antidote to all the evils that exist among us, who are looking for the coming of the Lord. It is because we do not gaze and gaze at Jesus till we drink in the same sweet spirit, and are thus led to practice his precepts. View him enthroned a glory; that glory which he had with the Father before the world was. The splendors of the crystal palace—the pomp of Westminster Abbey on coronation day, or any of the grandest events which mortals ever witnessed, would be unworthy to be named as a comparison with the glory that then encircled the Redeemer. When St. Paul was permitted to enjoy a vision of this glory, so far did it exceed anything with which man is familiar, that he declared that it was impossible (as the margin reads,) for a man to utter it.

And O, what pen can describe, what imagination can paint the immense, unfathomable love of Christ, who was willing to leave this ineffable glory and plunge into the gloomy prison-house of this world—the dominion of Satan, peopled with his own children, in order that he might rescue lost, guilty, dying men!

"Down from the portals of the sky
With joyful haste he fled,
Entered the grave in mortal flesh,
And dwelt among the dead."

So low had our guilty race—created in the image of God—sunk in degradation and misery, that Isaiah says,—"The Lord wondered that there was no intercessor." It was then that he conceived the mighty project of saving man. O, infinite stoop! O, boundless love divine! Well may angels look on and wonder! All because he pitied our condition. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotton Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

'Oh for this love, let rocks and hills
Their lasting silence break,
And all harmonious human tongues
The Savior's praises speak."

But seeing he is about to undertake this scheme of immeasurable love and condescension, we should at least have supposed that he would come as some mighty potentate. But O, wonder of wonders! The mighty God assumes the form of a helpless infant, and is laid in a manger!! Accommodations must all be occupied by the rich and great of earth. "There was no room for him in the inn." Christian, does not your heart glow with love, and with a willingness to drink of the cup of humiliation?

Ah, he was too good for earth. This sin-cursed, polluted soil, could hardly bear such a pure Being. Accordingly, he was persecuted in his earliest infancy. At the age of twelve years he gives a proof of his Divinity, by showing the strength of his understanding in a conversation with learned doctors of the law.

At his baptism, when about to commence his public ministry, he was owned as the Son of God by a voice from heaven, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." He began his great work by a fierce encounter with the Devil, which lasted forty days, during all which time he continued fasting. Utterly at variance with the usages, the cold-hearted, selfish schemes and ways of this world, instead of going about to amass property, or for any worldly pursuit, he "went about doing good." His whole business was to benefit mankind. He raised the dead; healed the sick; gave soundness to the lame; restored the blind to sight; fed the hungry; preached the gospel to the poor; pronounced blessings upon the faithful servants of God, as well as portraying the awful consequences of disobedience; administered comfort to the broken hearted; and sought to bless mankind in every possible way. Were any in trouble? he was their friend. Were any disconsolate? he was ready to console and comfort. Did any weep? he administered the balm of joy. Were any ignorant? he was ready to instruct. He talked of the goodness of God towards man, and pointed out their duty to Him—of the reward of obedience, and punishment of disobedience—told men how to secure his favor, and what would surely draw down upon them his vindictive wrath. He inculcated morals far more pure and exalted than could ever have been thought of by any mere man; morals which, if practiced, not only carry with them their own reward, but especially ensure an eternal reward in the kingdom of God. He carried with him the impress of his Divinity. No one could long be in his society without feeling a conviction that he was more than a mere man. Even the officers who were sent to take him, were constrained to acknowledge, "Never man spake like this man." Well might the poet exclaim—

"No mortal can with him compare
Among the sons of men."

Think not of sorrow; your bitterest sorrow—your keenest anguish, dear suffering saint, falls infinitely below this! View him prostrate on the ground, crying, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." See him sweating "great drops as of blood." So deep was his anguish, that his bitter cry for relief was three times repeated, in the same words; and an angel was sent from heaven to strengthen him. And for what was all this intense agony? Ah, it was for your sins, and mine, fellow christian! The sins of a world lay upon him! But he shrunk not from the burden. And shall you and I shrink from any burden that the Lord lays upon us? Well, indeed, may we "glory in tribulation," for his Name's sake.

But yonder comes a mob, bent on his destruction, and headed by one of Christ's own disciples. A kiss betrays him to his enemies. But does he endeavor to escape? No, the precept which he had before laid down, "Resist not evil," is now enforced; and he shows himself a wonderful spectacle of harmless innocence, and meek acquiescence with the will of God, by freely giving himself up to his murderers.

But the most thrilling scene in this wonderful tragedy is still before us. Forsaken by all his disciples, and left alone, I see him hurried before Annas, then before Caiaphas, then before the tribunal of Pilate, then away to Herod, then back again to Pilate; and all in the space of a few brief hours, so intently did they thirst for his immediate death. See him spit upon, insultingly arrayed as a mock king, clothed in scarlet, crowned with thorns, with a reed, instead of a sceptre, put into his hands; and then in mockery, being offered homage, crying, "HAIL! KING OF THE JEWS!" and the thorns, with which he was crowned, being smote into his sacred temples. And all this he bears meekly and silently as a lamb. View him, a spotless lamb in the midst of ferocious wolves, all eager to devour him—an innocent victim, surrounded with the pomp and pride of Jews and Romans combined. He is nailed upon the cursed tree, between two thieves, as though viler than either. But nought of revenge can find a place in his pure and holy soul. Hear him breathe forth the ardent prayer for his murderers, those cruel demons in human shape,—"Father, forgive them!" and then, as though he would apologize for their infernal treatment, adding, "for they know not what they do." Listen to his tender-hearted address to the women, who were weeping at his sad fate,—"Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and your children."

But the worst part of this tale of agony is untold. He could have suffered all, could he have felt his Father's presence and approval. But, alas! God veiled his face in anger! That countenance which had from eternity beamed a loving smile, is clothed with a frown of awful wrath! This he could not bear. Twice he cried out in agony, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" and then expired.

And all this he endured for me. What heart would not melt with love to such a Being? Let me ask, my dear fellow christian, is it too much for you to give up all, everything, to such a Savior?—to make an unreserved consecration of your whole being into his hands?

We may suppose that Satan rejoiced in supposed triumph at his death. He thought he had overturned the whole scheme of man's salvation. He had overcome the first Adam, and now the second had fallen—his supposed victim. But, no. The grave could not hold him!

"The mighty conqueror arose,
And burst their feeble chain."

He bore off the keys of the tomb, and holds them in his hands, and will soon come and unlock the prison-house of all his saints. Glory to his name!

He has ascended on high to die no more. He is enrobed in glory, "his eyes as a flame of fire, his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace, his voice as the sound of many waters, and his countenance as the sun shineth in his strength." Says he, "I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore. Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Rev. 1: 14.

Behold him at his second coming. Lo he comes, not as before, the despised babe of Bethlehem's manger, to be hunted up and down, as a vagrant, though "foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests, yet not having where to lay his head," and finally crucified as an accursed malefactor; but he comes, attended by myriads of angels, far outshining the sun in splendor, and putting to the blush all the pomp and glory which this world has ever seen. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." He comes to reward his downtrodden, suffering saints—to call the sleeping millions from their dusty beds—to arraign all mankind before his awful bar; and then to "separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." Yes, he who once stood a condemned culprit at Pilate's bar, will then summon all mankind, great and small, before his own awful tribunal. And then the scale will be turned. The rich, and great, and proud of this world, will be humbled; while those who have been outcasts here, will be welcomed to the Kingdom. The Lord hath promised, saying, "I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame." "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

"They that be wise, shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars, forever and ever." "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and before his ancients gloriously."

Christian, that day is near. Your reward is close at hand—only just a little in the future. The signs of Jesus' coming have already been hung out in the heavens; and Jesus declares, "This generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled." Your tears, your sorrow and sighing, will soon all be gone, and gone forever! The cross will soon be exchanged for the crown, and mourning for endless joy. Fight on, then, as a good soldier, for remember 'tis only "he that endureth to the end that shall be saved."

H. P. SIKES.

Northfield, Mass., June 13, '57.

For the Crisis.

He Will Come.

While the earth groans, and we wait for the redemption of these bodies, we cry, come! While the world is in commotion, we read, "in me ye shall have peace," and we cry, come! While we hear of nation rising against nation, and we see the great of the earth fall in battle, we cry, come! While the sound of war and the clashing of arms is heard, we read "they shall learn war no more," and we cry, come! While the battle field flows with blood, and men fall in its crimson river—while the war ship travels the trackless ocean and brings tidings of war and blood-shed, we long for peace and cry, come! While the widow and orphan cries unto the Lord for daily bread, and the cry of the reaper enters into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, we read that the righteous are not forsaken nor his seed begging bread, and we cry, come! While evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse, we read, "the wise shall understand," and we cry, come! While men's hearts are failing them for fear of the things that are coming on the earth, we see the consummation of our hope drawing nigh, and we cry, come! While the sea and waves roar, and the mountains send forth their fire of destruction, we read, "the earth shall melt with fervent heat;" and we cry, come! While the bond-man sighs and groans under his yoke of bondage, we read of the King that shall execute judgment and justice in the earth, and we cry, come! While the blood and ashes of the martyr cry for God to avenge we read of a Judgment to come, and cry, come! While we see the end at hand and that the heavens are about to reveal the Judge of all the earth, we cry, even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly!

J. W. CRABTREE.

For the Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—I was in Canada, in May, and attended the Methodist Annual Conference, two days, as I learned they had trouble with some of his preachers for holding to the destruction doctrine. I heard the trial and exclusion of one of their best circuit preachers for their heresy as they call it. He contended for the right to give his reasons for rejecting their discipline on future punishment, but was refused the privilege. He told them that when he was ordained he had a Bible presented him, and he had made it his guide, and wished to be tried by it, but they feared to hear his defence, though some thought he ought to be heard.

Bro. G. P. Harris of Kamoka, C. W., (near London,) will now devote his time in promoting this great reform. He seemed happy in being unfettered. There seems quite a move in the Conference on this subject, and Bro. H. told them boldly that though he was the first, he would not be the last they would have to expel for this doctrine.

They seem anxious to spread truth in Canada, as I sold $20 worth of books in one week, and only visited two places—Toronto and Georgetown.

I would say to brethren that I am detained at home at present, by poor health, but trust the Lord will permit me to travel again soon. JACOB BLAIN.

Buffalo, June 19th, '57.

Choice Selections.

From the Christian Messenger.

Remarks on Scripture.

"Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations."—Luke 16: 9.

This is the practical admonition which Jesus deduces from the preceding parable of the unjust steward. He was accused to his lord of having wasted the property which was placed under his care. The master, addressing him, informs him that he must give a satisfactory account of his administration of those affairs, or be no longer steward. He immediately brings into exercise the wisdom of this world, and endeavors to provide against the anticipated discharge. He soliloquizes thus: What shall I do? For my lord taketh away my stewardship. I cannot dig—to beg I am ashamed; I am resolved what I will do; I will so arrange that when I am discharged, my master's creditors will receive me as a benefactor to their dwellings.

In accordance with this resolution he called his lord's debtors to him. On inquiring of the first that came concerning the amount of his indebtedness, he ascertained that it amounted to an hundred batos (i. e. about 1000 gallons) of oil. As the steward had in his possession the bond or agreement, he proposed to the debtor to cancel the previous bargain and write a new agreement, specifying half the amount instead of the whole; the indebtedness of the next was one hundred measures, (or something over 1400 bushels of wheat.) Instead of the hundred he directs him to write eighty measures, thus giving him the other twenty. It is possible that these sums were the annual rent paid by occupants of the lands; if so, the obligation would be greater and more enduring, as it would be repeated at every successive season.

Upon this coming to the knowledge of the lord of the servant (not the Lord Jesus by any means) he, seeing himself so cunningly overreached, commended, not the steward's fraud, but his prudence in seeking and his sagacity in securing a comfortable subsistence. He commended the unjust steward because he had done wisely.

The Lord Jesus draws from this the conclusion that the men of this world are more sagacious in planning, more close and cunning in the things with which they have to do, than the children of the light are in things pertaining to their eternal welfare.

Then follows the exhortation, "make to yourselves friends," &c. Mammon was the name of a deity supposed to preside over wealth and is put here by metonymy, for wealth or riches; it is probably called the riches of unrighteousness, from the fact that (the love of money being the root of all evil,) great riches are rarely obtained save by means of a griping, cheating, unrighteous course of conduct, which rendered it easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven.

The duties inculcated are, in general, that as he, having been unfaithful, and apprehending a discharge, made provision for the support of his natural life; so we, in view of our past unfaithfulness, should, by active and persevering endeavor, make provision for our eternal existence.

More particularly, that as he provided for himself out of his master's goods by disposing of the same in other hands, and among several different persons, so we, by distributing among the poor and needy those blessings of providence which God has entrusted to us, as stewards, endeavor to be rich in good works, and lay up a good foundation against time to come, that we may lay hold on eternal life, and have treasure in heaven, where neither moth and rust corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal.

The object that he holds out as a motive is, that when their period of stewardship should terminate, they might be received, not into houses made with hands, but into eternal habitations.

We may understand this in various ways; (1) that through the prayers or intercessions of the distressed whom they may have relieved, they may be assisted to overcome and thus be saved, or, (2) that when the angels of God shall gather the elect, those who have done good may be greeted and welcomed to the abodes of bliss, by those whose tears they have wiped away, and whose wants they have relieved while in this state of stewardship; or, (3) perhaps it may be better to consider it thus, that when ye fail ye may be received into everlasting habitations. So that we, by means of our improvement of the various talents which God has given us, may make our calling and election sure, that so an entrance may be ministered unto us abundantly, into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

I find, by referring to Whiting's translation, that he renders it thus: "make to yourselves friends by means of the deceitful riches; that when ye fail, ye may be received into everlasting habitations."

Here, then, we have a command. While we see others busy in artful endeavors to provide for the future, we should strive by every means in our power to do good, and communicate, and thus improve the means God has granted us.

This addresses itself to each one of us. The rich may consider it as an admonition for them, but still there is hardly a person that cannot do something in this way. To those who object their poverty, we have only to say, remember the widow's "mite," and remember the "one talent" that should have been improved, and the burial of which caused sorrow to the slothful servant.

Let us remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Let us call to mind those scenes of the last judgment, when the King of glory shall say to some, "I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not." Let us, also, remember the unspeakable gladness of those who shall be received into everlasting habitations, with the joyful welcome, "come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

H. L. H.

THE FEELING PREACHER.—He that can tell men what God hath done for his own soul is the likeliest to bring their souls to God; hardly can he speak to the heart, that speaks not from it. Before the cock crows to others, he claps his wings and rouses up himself. How can a frozen-hearted preacher warm his hearers' hearts and enkindle them with the love of God? But he whom the love of Christ constrains, his lively recommendations of Christ, and speeches of love, shall sweetly constrain others to love him. Above all loves, it is most true of this, that none can speak sensibly of it but those that have felt it.

NOBLE SENTIMENTS.—Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every one enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment, since every man must give an account of himself to God. Abhor every approach, in any kind of degree, to the spirit of persecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force him into it. If love will not compel him to come, leave him to God, the Judge of all.—John Wesley.

EVIL THOUGHTS.—Have a care of evil thoughts. Oh, the mischief they have done in the world! Bad thoughts come first, bad words follow after, and bad deeds bring up the close. Strive against them! Watch against them! Pray against them! They prepare the way for the enemy:

Bad thought's a thief. He acts his part;
Creeps through the window of the heart;
And, if he once his way can win,
He lets a hundred robbers in.

BISHOP HALL hath written, "I never loved those salamanders that are never well but when they are in the fire of contention. I will rather suffer a wrong than offer one. I will rather suffer a hundred than inflict one. I will suffer many ere I will complain of one, and endeavor to right it by contending. I have ever found that to strive with my superior is furious; with my equal, doubtful; with my inferior, sordid and base; with any, full of unquietness."

MILK turns sour in a thunder-storm, but when the storm clears it does not turn sweet again. It is sometimes so with human kindness.

HE who gives for the sake of thanks, knows not the pleasure of giving.

For the Children.

Mother's Prayer.

A pious aged woman had one son; she used every means in her power to train him up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; he was the child of many prayers. The youth grew up, but was of a gay, dissipated turn; she still followed him with her entreaties, faithfully warned him of his awful situation as a sinner before God, and told him what his end would be, dying in that state. One day he went to his mother and said, "Mother, let me have my best clothes; I am going to a ball to-night." She urged him not to go by every argument in her power. He answered, "Mother, let me have my clothes; I will go, and it is useless to say anything about it." She brought his clothes; he put them on and was going out; she stopped him and said, "My child do not go." He said he would; she then said to him, "My son, while you are dancing with your gay companions in the ball-room, I shall be out in that wilderness praying to the Lord to convert your soul." He went; the ball commenced, but instead of the usual gaiety, an unaccountable gloom pervaded the whole assembly. One said, "We never had such a dull meeting in our lives;" another, "I wish we had not come, we have no life, we cannot get along;" a third, "I cannot think what is the matter." The young man instantly burst into tears, and said, "I know what is the matter; my poor old mother is now praying in yonder wilderness for her ungodly son." He took his hat, and said, "I will never be found in such a place as this again," and left the company. To be short, the Lord converted his soul. He was soon after taken ill, and died very happy. Praying breath is never spent in vain.—American Baptist Magazine.

DEEDS are fruits—words are but leaves.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adams's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1857. WHOLE NO. 97. VOL. V. NO. 19.

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I FLEE UNTO THEE TO HIDE ME.

God of Love, whose arm outstretched
O'er the universe so wide,
Holds each trembling, trusting soul,
That in thine embrace would hide.

O'er a bleak and cheerless waste,
Wand'ring, with no hand to guide,
Dangers thick'ning near,—I flee,
'Neath thy shelt'ring wing to hide.

Helpless, tossed on every wave,
O'er time's wildly surging tide;
Darkness brooding round, above,—
Hide me, O my Father, hide.

Be thy Name my "strong tower," when
Trusted friends have left my side,
Thither fled in all alarms,
Father, safe in thee I hide.

When thy last dread fearful wrath—
Wrath no mortal heart may 'bide—
Sweeps like fierce storms o'er the earth,
Me with all thy people hide.

Let me o'er life's sea upborne,
Its last perils dark outride,
Blest eternal refuge gain,—
In thy love embosomed hide.

Maria T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Spirit, Prophecy, and the Test of Truth.

"Quench not the Spirit. Despise not prophesyings. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5: 19–21.

The Holy Spirit, teaching the world by prophecy, is "good." This mind of the Spirit we should "hold fast;" and by this unerring standard we may "prove" all things that may be proposed in the name of truth or religion.

Most see no connection between these and other inspired precepts. They are regarded as mottoes and spiritual aphorisms, thrown together with no special or necessary relation.

But the Spirit is expressed—the Spirit operates, and is apprehended among men, primarily, by prophecy. Prophecy never came "by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." There would not have been the knowledge or name of God, or Jesus, or salvation, but for "prophesyings." The first divine lesson in Eden was a prophecy; and every advancing lesson was, or is yet, a prophecy. It embraces all, whether Jew, Gentile, or the church of God; individuals, nations, or the world—God's whole creation.

Most dislike prophesyings, not knowing that thus they ignore the Spirit—"quench the Spirit;' and, as far as they go, have no test of truth, but do "sin against the Holy Ghost!"

"DESPISE NOT PROPHESYINGS."

The ignorance prevailing on this subject is such, that most imagine that the prophecies relate only, or mainly, to the Pope, the Grand Turk, or the Devil, at the final judgment! But as from all these they stand quite aloof, they imagine that the prophecies do not concern them, nor their religion.

Such should read the great Prophet's greatest prophecy,—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned!" This is prophecy. It is prophecy applied to persons, individually.

All the promises and all the warnings of scripture are but so many prophesyings of what shall surely come to pass. Let none then despise these prophesyings, as they are brought down to each and all of us, especially where the gospel is preached. Human destiny is thus predicted; it is divinely determined—made known in prophecy.

Those who do despise prophesyings, despise the wisdom and grace of God. They "quench the Spirit," as he operates in and through these divine unfoldings of individual, and national duty and destiny.

"Ye do always resist the Holy Ghost," said Stephen, by the Spirit, to the Jews. They resisted the teachings of the Spirit in the Prophets; and they resisted the workings of that Spirit through Jesus and his servants.

Thus, now, the multitude of professors who "despise prophesyings," as to our time and our duty, do "resist the Holy Ghost." Such do just so much to "quench the Spirit" of grace and truth among men. They thus insult the Almighty, by assuming not to need his aid, either to understand or to prepare for the opening future. Prophesyings are our heavenly Father's most condescending instructions. They are the teachings of His Holy Spirit. They "quench not the Spirit!" Therefore, "despise not prophesyings."

"PROVE ALL THINGS."

The word "prove," is "examine," in 1 Cor. 11: 28; it is "try," in 1 John 4: 1; 1 Pet. 1: 7.

This trial or test demands a standard; and the standard is given by Him who commands us to "prove," test or "examine," all theories and doctrines. Deut. 18: 18, 22; Isa. 8: 19–20; John 5: 39. The true prophet speaks according to fact and experience, in harmony with history; but that which "comes not to pass is spoken presumptuously." Such teachers have "no light in them!"

The word asserts the death of the Patriarchs; the burial of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the cave of Machpelah, and their "hope" to be in and by "the resurrection of the dead." Then God's elect will be avenged, glorified, in Immortality. As the good do die in this hope, and prayer and promise, this word bears the test. It is proved by its coming to pass.

But the popular teaching that "none really die," that the good are judged and glorified at the mystic death and resurrection, is against experience—against the plain word of God, and, therefore, "it is spoken presumptuously." The widow and orphan do break away from their delusion thus far. They do oft dwell on their loved one's death, on the funeral, and on the grave, as the depository of all they loved. All theories and teachings that overlook death and the grave are out of harmony with the deepest and most dreadful of human woes. They all ignore the only hope of the resurrection. They originate in presumption, are maintained by delusion, and tend to "damnation." God has pledged himself to "require it of" all such! This rule applies to the four Gentile kingdoms, to dispersed Israel and Judah, and to the coming and kingdom of Christ. Amen.

"HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

The Bible as the only standard of truth, the wisdom of God, the Spirit teaching and operating by the prophets, is "good." It is divinely good; and should be held fast, even to the loss of all other things. "Good is the word of the Lord." Amen.

But how shall we hold fast this good word? We should hold it in its God-given form, hold it as it stands, and await its actual accomplishment. Thus, the fall and the curse, the deluge, the bondage of Israel in Egypt, in Babylon, and in Rome, or the Roman earth; thus, the birth, baptism, death, resurrection and ascension of Jesus; and thus, with the Gospel age and Gentile domination. All these and like events have answered to the prophesyings as the metal answers to the mold in which it is cast. However minute or vast the subjects; whether individuals, as Cyrus and Pharaoh, or nations, as Israel and their oppressors, the Spirit's prophecy is but the announcement of the actual event. Hence, we have the rule of construction determined by God himself in his world-wide and all-controlling providence. The "Spiritual mind" takes "the mind of the Spirit." Those who hold this fast, by a living faith, become "filled with the Spirit." Such have fellowship with the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, in the great plan of providence and grace. Such add to their faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, &c., in hope of the kingdom. Thus we have here in these three precepts a miniature body of Divinity, instinct with the living truth of the life-giving Spirit.

By the above rule we may test all the creeds of Christendom—that of Rome and all her harlot daughters. No one is bound to any human formula. The only creed, authorized of God, is that in Scripture—the Spirit's prophesyings and teachings. These are "spirit and life;" they are spiritual and life-giving. Therefore, "quench not the Spirit;" but hold fast the prophetic word, for the way of life lies here.

The Spirit is truth—the wisdom of God. It is not to men generally abstract or isolated; but given in a way to make us "wise unto salvation," through faith in prophesyings. Let us then "embrace the promises," and hold fast the sure word of prophecy. Amen. J. B. Cook.

For the Crisis.

The Prayer Meeting.

What can be more divinely interesting, this side the heavenly world, than a good, lively, well attended and well conducted prayer meeting? I am well aware that many of the so called prayer meetings, held by different denominations in community, are far from being interesting. What kind of pleasing interest can there be in one of these meetings where Brother Longbreath must pray for a full half hour, all round Robin Hood's barn, from the latitude of Greenland to the South Seas, and about everything to be thought of in general, and some things in particular; and then Brother Dullsound, Brother Slowtime, and Sister Draglong must sing a long hymn; and then Bro. Spinout must speak of many things in general, or some doctrine in particular, twenty-five or thirty minutes; and then it is time to go home.—I ask, what kind of pleasing interest can there be in such a prayer meeting as that? I would rather be at home in bed, dreaming of the kingdom of heaven, or some other good things, than to be anywhere in the vicinity of such a meeting.

On the contrary, let a few humble ones, or many, as the case may be, come together to worship God; let the mind be fixed on God—let several pray short, simple, earnest prayers, (the Lord's prayer is not over three minutes long,) and let short hymns be sung, several of them during the meeting, and let several persons speak freely, simply, briefly; thus let the meeting go on lively, and at the close you will want to sing,

"My willing soul would stay
In such a frame as this,
And sit and sing herself away
To everlasting bliss."

Good prayer meetings are among the most important means of grace that we enjoy. Show me a minister who does not love good prayer meetings, and you will show me a man who does not possess the love of God. Show me a church that neglects prayer meetings, and you will show me an apostate church. Prayer meetings always accompany a reformation; the want of prayer meetings always attends religious declension. If you would show you have some interest in the public worship of God, do it by attending the prayer meeting.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Christian Duties.

"And he said to them all, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me."

God, in his wisdom, and by his own power, created the world; he also made man, and breathed into him the breath of life, made him an intelligent being, set before him certain objects, and made them attainable only upon conditions. By reading the connection, with the text, we readily discover that the great Shepherd was presenting that object which in itself was most sublime, also most to be desired. The kingdom of God is here brought to the view of the disciples, and now they must know how to gain it. Jesus was then, as now, heir to that blessed kingdom, and, as all who keep the faith of Jesus are to be heirs with him, and no others, he tells them, "if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up (not run round it, not try to excuse one's self,) his cross daily, and follow me." Now if we cannot bear the cross we cannot wear the crown. By the cross here is signified religious duties, a willing mind and a cheerful heart to perform. Such Jesus had, when he said, "it is more than my meat and drink to do Thy will."

Many there are who think about the kingdom, who, alas! will never arrive there; nay, they do more, they actually set out for it,—perhaps make a profession of religion; they do not like the idea of being lost, so they submit to a partial reformation, and make an approach toward the performance of religious duties. They just obtain a sight of them, and they are frightened; this is the cross. What is there in the cross so dreadful? Let us see. Of all who present themselves as candidates for the kingdom, it is required that they become poor in spirit, humble as a little child, penitent for sin, perfect and pure, as he is pure,—that they do deny self, crucify the flesh, mortify the body, subdue inordinate desires, set the affections on things above, hunger and thirst after righteousness, forgive enemies, submit to persecution for Christ's sake, to exercise a constant watchfulness over themselves and against the world and the devil,—the hand, if it offends, must be cut off, the eye plucked out.

They are told of the strait gate, the narrow way, the yoke, the burden, the race, the warfare, etc. Yea, the whole man is to be brought under new influences, governed by new principles, and live for new ends. Self-denial, self-discipline, and self-conquest, are made indispensable prerequisites for the kingdom of God. This is the cross: it stands in the path of life. To proceed, it must be embraced. Christ is "the way" to God. His atonement, example, doctrines, commandments,—there is no other way, there can be no other, a wall of adamant, wide as earth, high as Heaven, meets us in our attempt to find one, on which stands inscribed in letters of light, "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

Religious duties are irksome and disagreeable to the carnal mind—to the unconverted; it is their nature to be so. By them a man may know what he is, whether he is converted or not. The cross is a mirror. Religious duties are imposed, not that by performing them we may earn a title to that blessed inheritance, but because they are necessary for the purification of our moral nature, through the grace of Christ, that we may become meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light. To neglect the cross is to neglect all; it is to go to the feast without the wedding garment; it is to go forth to meet the bridegroom without a light, and without oil in our vessels.

We may substitute something else for the cross; such as morality, philosophy, or even painful penance. It will all be in vain. As long as we continue unwashed, unsanctified, we are unsafe—in momentary danger of Hell-fire. There is no neutrality in this war. In revolutions of states and empires, those who do not take up arms against the foe are deemed as enemies; it is so here. "He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." This is the conclusion of the whole matter. When Christ comes to judge the world, all who will not now take up the cross, will be regarded as enemies; instead of the crown they will have the curse; instead of life, eternal death.

O, have the cross and have the crown. Look at that man as he walks boldly up to the cross; he lays hold of it, exclaiming, "when I am weak then am I strong; I can do all things through Christ strengthening me." He finds it easy and light, pleasant and delightful; he bears it faithfully in palaces and in prisons, on the sea and on the land, among Jew and Greek, bond and free, exclaiming, as he goes, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of Christ;" and having carried it the appointed time he lays it at the Savior's feet, singing triumphantly,—

"I have fought a good fight;
I have finished my course;
I have kept the faith;
Henceforth there is laid up
For me a crown of righteousness."

J. A. Packard.

For the Crisis.

Preach!

Preach Jesus Christ! His humiliation, sufferings, death, sacrifice, resurrection, ascension, and mediation—preach his coming again! In giving to the church the food required, we must keep Christ before the world, in all the interesting views of the Bible. "Jesus Christ and him crucified!" said Paul. But how? by the Scriptures. In his resurrection. How? by the Scriptures; by the prophecies, which, by the very Spirit of Christ, testify of his "sufferings and glory."

But why preach? God will save some by the foolishness of preaching. It is the wisdom of God. It is testimony to the truth in plainness of speech. The people of the world need it! Need it now, more than ever! Nothing will effectually stop the tide of infidelity, but the preaching of the gospel, as it really is, and as it should be, in the apprehension of man. Pagan infidelity was overthrown by it once. It must be kept down by it forever. But Pagan philosophic infidelity is trying to raise its deformed and mangled head. Truth only will crush the cockatrice's egg, or stamp on the serpent's head. Let it be proclaimed!

The people of our faith, everywhere, want preaching. They are hungry for the word of life. Let all who can preach, preach the word, and do not think they only want to hear on one subject. They desire the whole of Gospel truth, and they demand it for their strength. I see the importance of the Scriptures being thoroughly presented, that the brethren may be thoroughly furnished.

Zebulon.

For the Crisis.

A Reply.

Bro. Grant:—In reply to the questions of your intelligent correspondent, "Martha," I offer the following remarks for candid consideration.

"First. In Matt. 5: 17–18 what Law did Christ mean, which he came 'not to destroy, but to fulfill'?"

It is evident that our blessed Lord and his apostles used the term "Law" in reference to the entire Sinai Covenant given from God by Moses. "The Law was given by Moses,' &c. The term includes the offerings and sacrifices which were figures of better things "for the time then present;" Heb. 9: 9, 22, and also the ten commandments, which are moral precepts excepting the fourth or Sabbath-day law, which the apostle, by inspiration, places in the category of figures or "shadows." Col. 2: 16, 17. That our Lord, Matt. 5: 17, 18, referred to this Law, is evident from the fact, that on this very occasion he refers in the 23d and 24th verses to the ceremonials of the Law, and in the 27th and 28th to the seventh commandment.

"What is meant by fulfilling the Law?"

The Law must be fulfilled. Not one jot or tittle can fail of fulfillment. Every part and parcel of it had an important import. All was an emanation of divine wisdom. Shadows and figures have their origin and basis in substances and realities. The Son of God fulfilled the Law by becoming himself the substance or glorious reality of it. Col. 2: 16, 17; Heb. 9: 11–14, &c. He is the true "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." John 1: 29. Every bleeding sacrifice under the Law testified to man's position before a holy God, as a sinner justly condemned to everlasting death (which is the penalty of the law, Rom. 6: 23,) for transgression. Christ "is the end of the Law for righteousness (i. e. justification,) to every one that believeth." For this end God set him forth as a propitiation "that he might be just and the justifier of him which believeth." Rom. 3: 25, 26. Thus he fulfilled the law of sacrifices and offerings, by his one sacrifice and "offering of a sweet smelling savor unto God," by which "he has perfected forever them that are sanctified." Heb. 10: 14. He fulfilled every moral precept of the Law by his spotless holiness. The prophetic word, Isa. 42: 21, "he will magnify the Law and make it honorable," he has fulfilled. The Sabbatical Law he has fulfilled by becoming our Rest, which is the true import of the word "Sabbath." "We which have believed do enter into Rest." Heb. 4: 3. We leave the shadow for the substance.

"What commandments are meant by 'these commandments' in the 19th verse?"

The connection of this verse with the two preceding, clearly shows that the reference is to the law in general and not simply to "the ten commandments of the decalogue." This view is confirmed by our Lord's subsequent direction (verses 24 and 25,) in respect to the manner in which the gifts were to be brought to the Jewish altar, according to the law of Moses; an observance of which our Savior enjoined previous to his death. See Matt. 8: 4. This reference to the commandments of the Law, no more proves the obligation of christians to observe the positive institution of the seventh-day Sabbath, than it proves an obligation to bring gifts to an altar in the manner and form enjoined by the Law of Moses.

The plainly revealed truth is, that, to christians, the Law is "dead," Rom. 7: 6, dead unto us, and we dead unto it, verse 4. It is that which we are "not (now) under." Rom. 6: 14, 15; that which "now we are delivered from" (7: 6) that which "was done away" more than 1800 years since. 2 Cor. 3: 11. To affirm that these declarations of the Spirit of Truth refer exclusively to the ceremonial part of the law, and not to the ten commandments, is to contradict the inspired apostle, who quotes the tenth commandment, Rom. 7: 7,—"thou shalt not covet," as a part of that very law which he declares is dead, and to which christians are become dead by the body of Christ. 4th verse. He anticipated an objection to this truth. "What then? Shall we (or may we covet or) sin because we are not under the Law, but under grace? God forbid," or far be it. He annihilates the objection by teaching us that we are "not without law to God, but under the law to Christ," not Moses.

In respect to the fourth commandment of the decalogue, the Sabbatical law, we have double proof of the cessation of its obligation. First, in the fact of its pertaining to the Law, or covenant, which was not made with their Fathers; Deut. 5: 3, and which is "dead." Secondly, in the specific reference to this law by the inspired apostle as "a shadow" which has given place to the substance or "body" which "is Christ." Col. 2: 17.

"Why did Christ speak of a Sabbath day so far down in the future if it was no longer obligatory? Matt. 24: 20."

Because the compassionate Redeemer knew that if their flight from the destruction of Jerusalem occurred on the Sabbath day, which the Jewish nation and some christians would still consider sacred, a Sabbath day's journey would be insufficient for their safety.

"What does Paul mean in Rom. 3: 31 when he says,—'Do we then make void the Law through faith? God forbid; yea we establish the Law.'"

Well might the apostle affirm this truth. Our faith being in Him who has so perfectly fulfilled and honored the Law. The claims of God's holy law, so far from being made void through faith, are more fully established by the perfect obedience unto death of the Son of God, than they could have been by the perfect obedience of the entire human race. The law is established, however, not by the continuance of its shadows, but by the accomplishment of the realities which its shadows prefigured. Respectfully submitted. H. G.

Philadelphia, June 24th, 1857.

From Sr. Amelia Crabtree.

Dearly Beloved Brn. and Srs:—We are still pilgrims and strangers in this world of sin and sorrow; still we wander exiles from our Father's house; still we have the blessed hope in view, even the appearing of our Lord Jesus. Nearly three years have passed away since we looked with joy for the return of Him whose right it is to reign, and we have looked many times since and as often have we been disappointed, for our blessed Lord and Master has not come yet. But, glory to God, we believe he will come and not tarry beyond the "appointed time." I do not feel any discouraged in striving to pursue the heavenly journey: O no, far from it. I think we have everything to encourage us, that, if we are faithful to God, we shall soon arrive at home.

We are living in a perilous time, when iniquity abounds, and the love of many has grown cold; many give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, instead of the sure word of prophecy; spirits of devils, working miracles, have gone forth gathering the world to the battle of the great day of God Almighty, and now God speaks to the waiting church and the world,—"Behold I come a thief, blessed is he that watcheth." Dear Brn. and Srs, do we realize that we are near, very near, that great day? We are living in a grand and awful time,—but the unthinking world heed it not, they pass on in careless security, little imagining that soon the trump of God, which will awake the sleeping saints, will strike terror to their hearts, and stop them in their mad career. O, I do pray to God that he would once more call after sinners, and that some more may be gathered into the ark before the door of mercy is forever closed.

We have entered upon another season. The earth has again put on the gorgeous robes of summer; but ah! the glory and beauty of the earth renewed will far surpass the present; there will be no blight there, no sickness and death, no weary watchings and disappointed hopes, but all will be love and peace. Jesus will be there; his own hand will wipe away all tears, and the rebuke of his people, bless God, will be taken away. Oftentimes when I think of these things, the thought presents itself, shall I be there? I sometimes fear that I shall be found wanting in that day; but by the help of God I am determined to strive against sin, and I know that though I the chief of sinners am, yet Jesus died for me, and through his sufferings and death I may obtain a free and full forgiveness; and through his mercy I hope to be among that happy company that shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air.

Dear Brn. and Srs., will you pray for me, that I may be wholly the Lord's; and my poor feeble prayers shall often ascend to God for the little flock scattered abroad, that he would preserve them blameless to his coming, for Jesus sake. O be faithful; let not the cares of the world nor the deceitfulness of riches render the word unfruitful, but be good children, love one another, and strive to live out every command contained in God's word, for it will judge us in the last day. The pure in heart will see God. O I hope that we shall not deceive ourselves with vain hopes. Let us keep humble at Jesus' feet, and his strong arm will bear us safe through.

Your sister, Amelia Crabtree.

South Hope, Me.

From Sr. S. E. Teeple.

Bro. Grant:—As time is rolling on, wickedness is on the increase, and the child of God feels truly it is a time of peril. When will deliverance come, when will sorrow and sighing forever cease? Soon, I trust. Soon we may cease our weeping, for it endureth only for a night; joy cometh in the morning. Praise God forever. For one, I long to behold the morning that shall bring an eternal day. I am still sighing for home, and feel sick of the earth, that seems dark and dreary every where I roam. How cheering the thought, there is a better land to which we are journeying, where there will be no night, and where there will be no need of the sun.

Although the Lord has seemed to tarry a long time, yet, I do not feel to cast away my confidence, which hath great recompense of reward; and if ever there was a time when the just were to live by faith, it is now. I do not believe the true child of God can, in these days, walk by sight, nor go merely by feeling, but must have a fixed purpose to serve God. Many, very many are the trials and temptations that surround us, and unless on our guard we are liable to turn aside, and be in danger of making shipwreck of our faith.

I feel at times almost discouraged, and yet don't mean to give up, for the prize is still ahead, and it is he that endureth to the end that shall be saved. And when I think of what we shall be saved from, I am greatly encouraged to go forward. Dear Brn. and Srs., do we realize how much meaning there is to the word, saved? I for one feel unable to comprehend it. I do praise God for present salvation, and feel at times my prospects are bright for future salvation; and if ever I get that, it will be enough, yes, more than I deserve. Here we have joy, but often it is mixed with grief; but there it will not be thus.

I ever feel glad that it is my lot to be numbered with the little flock who expect to enter the kingdom, and we are told that we need not fear, and yet how much we have to watch and pray; and thankful am I that it is our privilege.

There is still a few of us in this place who mean to be ready to enter the rest that is promised, where the wicked cease from troubling. I love the Crisis, and it does me much good to hear from the scattered ones, and am trusting ere long to meet them, where parting scenes will be known no more, where farewell tears will never be shed. Your sister praying, "let thy kingdom come."

Susan E. Teeple.

Roxbury, Ct., June 14th, 1857.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 8, 1857.

The Grand Traverse Affair.

It will be recollected by our readers, that some time since we published an account of a strange occurrence in Grand Travers, Mich., which appeared to be well attested. We were satisfied, that if it was true it was no more strange than things which are occurring almost daily among the Spiritualtsts; for we see no reason why the same agents that throw chairs, tables and pianos about the rooms, may not go to a graveyard, get a corpse and bring it into a room at midnight; but we have learned that the Grand Traverse exhibition never took place. We give below the letter we have just received from the Postmaster of that town.

Grand Traverse, June 2.

Mr. Miles Grant:—Sir,—I now write to inform you the story you sent is false; there are no such persons in or about Grand Traverse as are mentioned in said story. I have received and answered letters on this subject from nearly every State in the Union, and have a large package of letters now for James Taylor, Dr. John Morton, &c. There never have been any such person here at all, therefore there is no truth in the matter. Report says, the Editor of the Grand Rapids Inquirer wrote and published said story for his own diversion. H. C. Furman, P. M.

A Chance to do Good.

We have consented to act as general agent for Bro. A. M. Higgins' "Great Antalgica, or Vegetable Pain Reliever," on condition that the net profits on what we sell shall be used for the benefit of the poor, in supplying them with the Crisis, tracts, preaching and the necessaries of life. We are satisfied that great good may be done by scattering our excellent tracts and books through the length and breadth of the land, and in aiding preachers to go "in the regions beyond" our present fields of labor, to spread the glad tidings of the coming kingdom. Now is the time to work if we ever intend to do anything for our fellow men. The enemies of the cross are making unparalleled efforts to overthrow the Bible, and remove the very foundations of the christian religion; and shall we be indifferent? As taught by Jesus, let all take heed, "lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping."

We need more of the spirit of sacrifice for the welfare of others. Says the Lord, when speaking of those who are to be saved,—"Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Let us practice rigid self-examination, and see to it, that we are not of the class whom Paul describes as "lovers of their own selves."

In relation to the medicine, we can confidently say, that we believe Bro. Higgins' "Vegetable Pain Reliever" is the best that has been offered to the public, and should be in every family where medicine is needed, as a remarkable remedy for all kinds of pain whether external or internal. Its wonderful properties have been tested in curing Rheumatism and Spinal affections, Hip Complaint, Stiff Joints, Contracted Muscles, Swelled Limbs, Cramp in the Stomach, Side, Bowels or Limbs, Cold Hands or Feet, Numb Palsey, Neuralgia, or Tic Douloureux, Ague, Toothache; also for all Bronchial Affections and Inflamation of the Lungs, Chest, Liver, Kidneys, Quinsy Sores, White Swellings, Tumors of all kinds, Coughs, Colds, Cholera, Dysentery and Fever and Ague.

Responsible agents wanted to sell this valuable medicine, who will receive a liberal discount, and at the same time will be aiding the poor and benefiting the afflicted. Such an opportunity for doing good is rarely offered. The virtues of this medicine have been tested for years, and none need fear to engage in its sale, or to give it a hearty recommendation. It is warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. On these conditions, thousands of bottles have been sold during the last six years, and not a dollar has yet been demanded. The medicine is put up in boxes containing one dozen bottles. We have also on hand, Bro. Higgins' complete set of Family Medicines, which we can furnish on the same conditions.

Orders, accompanied with cash, directed to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., will receive prompt attention. Directions on the bottle. Price 50 cents.

☞ Please save this article for reference.

☞ We would particularly request those friends sending us articles for the Crisis, with different headings but on the same sheet, to hereafter let them appear on separate sheets; otherwise, communications are liable to be mislaid and lost.

☞ We wish all who write for the Crisis, to be very particular to write all names of persons and places as plain as they possibly can.

Also remember, never to address the editor as M. Grant, but as Miles Grant, because there is another M. Grant in Boston, who frequently gets our letters.

We have just received some of Bro. Storrs' "original six sermons on the inquiry, are the wicked immortal?" Price 15 cents, postage 1 cent.

John Wesley.—A Scrap for Methodists.—"It is, indeed, very generally supposed that the souls of good men, as soon as they are dislodged from the body, go directly to heaven; but this opinion has not the least foundation in the Oracles of God. On the contrary, our Lord says to Mary, after the resurrection, 'Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father in heaven.'"—John Wesley's Sermon on Luke 16: 31. Sermon 48, p. 256. Bohn's Edition.

For this and other testimonies on the same point from other writers, please consult the Tract—"Plain Truths"—published by H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y., and for sale at this Office. Price $3.00 per 100; 5 cents single.

Valuable Books.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ on Earth; a history of that doctrine by D. T. Taylor. Dr. John Cumming of London writes,—"I thank you for sending me the Voice of the Church. I think it eminently fitted to disarm prejudice, and show that there is no novelty in doctrines some think very new. I hope many will read it."

Dr. H. Bonar of Scotland writes,—"I like it, and think it fitted to be useful."

Says the Pres. Banner,—"This work contains a wonderful amount of selections from authors in nearly every age of the church. It displays the views of the leading men in the church on the Millennial controversy. It is a literary curiosity, as it supplies to the possessor, without labor or research on his part, the views of many hundreds of great minds on a debated question."

Notices might be multiplied. This work is the most complete on the subject, and from its notices of about four hundred authors, becomes a dictionary of christian biography as well as a contribution to Doctrinal History. Price $1.00, postage 18 cts. For sale at this office, and by the Publisher, H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a sign of the times, by Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Price 40 cents., paper cover 30, postage 8 cents. The best work extant on the subject, accounting for the phenomena, showing their origin, embracing accounts of them in India during the author's mission there, and presenting a new and satisfactory solution of all, which is confirmed by quotations from christian and heathen antiquity. Sent by mail on receipt of the price.

Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y., or Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Campmeeting.—We have received several letters stating that the season is so backward, they shall not get through with haying and harvesting, so as to attend the campmeeting, before Aug. 31st; hence it is appointed to commence at that time.

Eld. J. Blain writes:—I wish to say to ministering and other brethren west, that I have just sent a good supply of the last editions of my five works to Chicago, Ill., where they can obtain them to sell, as heretofore, by express or mail, by writing to my son-in-law, J. W. Dean, at the Tribune Office. I have also sent a number of other works which are generally wanted by brethren.

For the Crisis.

Be Easy.

Yes, yes, be easy. Don't fret. Supposing some one else does think differently from you. Supposing he does quote scriptures that knock your notions into a cocked hat; well, what can you do about it? Would you like to gag his mouth, or break his pen, or knock his brains out, or dagger him under the fifth rib? Well, if you would you can't do it. Would you like to pick a fuss with him, and get into a kind of theological bull-fight? Well, may be he won't fight with you. Perhaps he has something more to do than to stop and quarrel, and dispute, and wrangle. Perhaps all your sly thrusts, and inuendoes, and musquetobites won't move him away from his Master's business.

Well, what then? why, just be easy. Don't fret. The world will roll on even if you can't get all the crotchets that are in your head into all others. The world indeed may not perish, if it should be suddenly deprived of one or two of your pet hobbies, of which you think so much, and on which you doat so fondly.

Now it's best to be quiet. You can't make one hair white or black, and the most you will do will be to make yourself very uncomfortable. Come, get right yourself, so that a little Bible won't capsize your theory, and so that a little plain truth won't put you in a fret—if you don't like the droppings, why, just stand from under! That's the only way that I can see to mend the matter.

Come, friend, just be good natured, that face of yours is long enough for two, and, judging from appearances, one would think you had been sucking lemons, or eating pickles for a month. Now the best way is to feast on something sweeter and better. If you want to love God, you must love your brother also, and that too, even if you happen to know more than he does; or even if by some marvelous chance he should happen to know more than you do! Don't knock his lantern to atoms because it gives more or less light than yours.

I think it's best to "be easy," don't you? Well, let us try, then, and behave like kind, quiet followers of Him who said,—"I am meek and lowly in heart. H. L. H.

Springfield, Mass., May 5th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

What is the World's Hope?

The crisis is approaching, and what is the avenue of escape, to the mopes who heave and roll by the force of facts, fears and hopes, like swelling surges of the storm-raged deep? To human apprehension the remedy for existing evils appears in that direction, from which, according to previous conclusion, or even speculation, in theology or philosophy, it should come. Hence, every class will select its own agencies, and hope from their action—if that action should be according to their expectations. And from this it appears that the expectations of men are the reasons why they hope for the escape of man from the evils of his lot—the earth from its manifest curse—whether built on fact or fancy. Then, from the very nature of hope, we come to this conclusion; and this is the acme of wisdom in these days—they expect because they expect.

Now, revelation to the reflective mind must funrish the only ground of estimate; and to the believing mind the only assurance of hope, because revelation has proved itself to be reliable testimony in regard to the future, and the only reliable ground of prospect.

With God, and truth, and obligation—Divine Law, righteousness, faith, the kingdom, all as they are in the divine purpose and exemplification, unbending, unyielding to human philosophy-plans, governments, institutions, sin—what may men reasonably look for? With the fire and fury of human passions, less and less restrained—rage of hell, in waves of ruin breaking on the shores of a fated world!—terrible, angry, graceless elements, rushing forward in the mad work of desolation, upon man's fairest interests. Hordes of human demons bent on blasting faith and truth to entire extinction; and where is the hope? Spirits of secret, infernal caste and power, prowling wide upon this wrath-wrecked planet!

What's the hope? Is it in the "spiritual wickedness in high places?" Is it the rage of war, and the foam of battle? In the strife of political elements? In the reconstruction of the social system? Alas! vain dream! In the lullaby of peace and safety from the pulpit and press—on the crusted volcano, whose inward world of fire, swelters and boils in one dark chaos of future and final destruction of the elements? Is it not in the desire of nations?"

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

On the Conclusiveness of Inferential Evidence.

If I testify that A or B stole my money, and that A did not steal it, my testimony is as conclusive against B as if I testified that B stole it.

If the divine testimony declares anything concerning the wicked dead which cannot possibly be fulfilled without their being "made alive," the testimony is as conclusive as the positive declaration that "the wicked dead shall be made alive."

The divine testimony that the wicked shall "awake to shame and everlasting contempt;" (Dan. 12: 2,) that "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth;" (John 5: 28–29,) that God "will render . . . tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil . . . in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ;" (Rom. 2: 6–16; Acts 17: 31,) "that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgement;" (Matt. 12: 36,) that "we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ, . . . and every one of us shall give account of himself to God;" (Rom. 14: 10–12,) that persons long since dead "shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead," I Peter 4: 4–5;—these and other similar divine testimonies, I affirm, cannot possibly be fulfilled without the wicked dead being made alive. I will only add that, it is impossible that men can be "hurt of the second death," or indeed know a "second death," without being made alive from the first; and that in respect to the manifestation of divine justice before the universe, in rendering to men according to their deeds, it is impossible without the revivification of the wicked dead. Respectfully submitted. H. G.

For the Crisis.

Heart-Cheering Promise.

"I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." This language was addressed to the disciples by our Savior previous to his departure from this earth, and it must have been truly comforting to their sorrowing hearts to have had the blessed assurance from his own lips that, although he was about to leave them to be absent for a length of time, yet he would come again. And during my absence, said he, "I will not leave you comfortless," but "I will send the Comforter unto you." And, as a parting benediction, he adds,—"peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—"I will come again."

And may not this blessed promise cheer and comfort the hearts of his disciples in these last days? Methinks it may. But, says one, how are we to know that we are his disciples? The Savior says, "if ye love me keep my commandments." "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, when ye have love one for another." And how did he manifest his love for us? By giving his life a ransom for ours. And as if to impress our minds more deeply with his love for us, he says,—"greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." Do we appreciate this divine love for us as we should? And are we striving to imitate the examples of our Lord and Master, who during his pilgrimage here on earth went about doing good, being a perfect pattern, given for us to follow after? Although we may not be called upon to lay down our lives for our friends, yet there are many ways in which we may manifest our love for them. Are we so doing? Are we expressing our love by cheering and comforting words to the sorrowing and desponding? Are we pointing them to that Savior who will appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation? Are we giving from our abundance to relieve the wants of the tried and afflicted? In short, are we possessed of that christian grace, called charity, (love,) which endureth all things, and without which we are as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal?

Except we have the spirit of Christ we are none of his. Let us not then fold our hands and sit idly down and say, I can do nothing, I have no duties to perform. It is the little things of life that serve to make up the sum of human happiness. So our little acts and deeds of kindness, though seemingly small in themselves, may have a lasting effect for good upon those around us, and if we are but instrumental in converting one sinner from the error of his ways, we have the promise that it shall "save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins." Let us then in view of these things gird on the whole armor, and run with patience the race set before us; and though trials and afflictions await us on every hand, yet we have the comforting assurance that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord, and that "the Lord loveth whom he chasteneth, and scourgeth every one whom he receiveth." The apostle Paul also informs us that there is a crown of righteousness laid up, not only for him, but for all those that love the appearing of that long absent, but soon returning Savior. Do we, his professed disciples, love his appearing? Are we looking, watching and waiting in joyful expectation for the return of Zion's King, who has said, "behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man as his work shall be?" And can we in the language of our hearts respond, even so, come, Lord Jesus? May this be the happy state of each one of God's dear children, that at his coming they may receive the crown of life that fadeth not away, and hear the welcome summons,—"come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Maranda E. Orr.

Cambria, Mich.

For the Crisis.

Keep it before the People.

What? Why, first, that the ten commandments alone are never called the law of God in the Bible. The ten precepts are only a small part of the law given on Mt. Sinai.

Second. That the expressions, "God's commandments," "my commandments," "all his commandments," do not refer invariably to the ten, as some affirm. If the Jewish dispensation is referred to, these expressions embrace all the commandments given to Moses from Mt. Sinai. If this age is referred to, they embrace all the commandments written on the fleshly tables of the heart by the Holy Ghost. Seventh-day Sabbath keeping never was written on the fleshly tables of the heart; consequently it is not binding. "Truth is from God. Error is from man."

A. N. Seymour.

From Eld. W. Pratt.

Bro. Grant:—I have left Books and Tracts with Bro. Nicholas Branch Jr., that the friends west in want of any advertised at the office of the "Crisis" can have them at eastern prices by sending orders to N. Branch Jr., Moline, Rock Island Co., Ill.

Moline is a central point, and easy of access by river or cars; hence, there seems to be the place for publications on the Advent question. I know of no place that will serve the cause of truth so well as that for the present.

Bro. Branch is a man well qualified for business, and one whose ways please the Lord. He will serve you cheerfully and punctually. Send in your orders, with the cash, and get what you need for your friends and neighbors. Send, sell, give away, for time is short!

My health has not been sufficient to do but little labor, mental or physical since I was taken with the ague last Sept. I have preached some, occasionally, but to my injury. I shall labor as my strength will allow. I was a long time going down in health, and the ague reduced me very low. I have been improving slowly—shall, I hope in God's providence, get so I can go to work in good earnest and serve the cause of truth in God's pleasure.

Since I left the east the tendency to my lungs has to a great extent lessened, but the disposition is not entirely ceased, rather, changed. By care, however, and prudence, I hope to get strong again, and do some little good yet in the name of the Lord.

Hope the friends will write to me often as well as pray for me. I am thankful for the latter and glad of the former. Yours hoping, WALTER PRATT.

Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

P S. I ought to have said I left the friends in Cordova, in good cheer. Baptized two saints as we left them. They went on their way rejoicing, and we started south. W. P.

For the Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—I see by the Crisis, that Bro. W. S. Campbell is on a western tour, and expects to be in Milwaukie soon. I wish he would come here. It is one day's travel to this place, and will cost about $5.00. I take this means to inform him, as I do not know where to direct to him. O how cheering it would be to hear the gospel again in its purity. I believe that time is short, and what is done must be done quickly. For one, I wish to have a home in the soon coming kingdom, and am trying to take the Bible as my rule of faith and practice. I am sick of man-made theories. What will they amount to in the day when the secrets of all hearts shall be made known. O for a more entire conformity to the will of God.

N. S. LATIMER.

Berlin, Wis., June 22nd, 1857.

For the Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—By the request of certain Brn., I drop a line to give information that it will be very desirable to have our preaching Brn., as they pass through this place, call and preach to us. The cause seems to demand that they should come over and help us. They will find a welcome home among the Brn. here. Bro. James H. Stevens lives at No. 9 Been's Block, Pine St.; Bro. Barker at 21 Lent St., where further information can be obtained. Yours in hope,

W. P. STRATTON.

P. S. The Brn. are requested to preach week day evenings, or on the Sabbath, as they can make it convenient.

Manchester, N. H., June 28, '57.

For the Crisis.

CHRIST'S APPEARING.

TUNE.—"Watchman, tell me."

Christian, lo! your Lord is coming
In a cloud of glory bright;
Hark! his welcome voice is sounding,
Filling saints with sweet delight.
See the angels too, descending,
Clothed in robes of living light!
Lo! they are the Lord attending,
To the kingdom of his right.

See the sleeping saints arising
From the ground on every side,
Prophets and apostles waking,
To adore the Crucified.
Hear a million martyrs shouting,
With the countless blood-washed throng;
Though once dead, they now are living—
Hear them s'ng redemption's song.

They are wearing crowns supernal,
In the realms of endless day,
They have gained that life eternal,
For which pilgrims ever pray.
With the angels they are chanting
Sweetest lays of melody;
And the music is unending,
Through a vast eternity.

W. SHELDON.

Never Give a Kick for a Hit.

I learned a good lesson when I was a little girl, said a lady. One frosty morning I was looking out of the window into my father's barn-yard, where stood many cows, oxen and horses, waiting to drink. The cattle all stood very still and meek, till one of the cows, in attempting to turn round, happened to hit her next neighbor, whereupon the neighbor kicked and hit another. In five minutes the whole herd were kicking each other with fury. My mother laughed, and said,—"See what comes of kicking when you are hit." Just so; I have seen one word set a whole family by the ears on a frosty morning. Afterwards, if my brother or myself were a little irritable, she would say,—"Take care, my children; remember how the fight in the barn-yard began. Never give a kick for a hit, and you save yourself and others a great deal of trouble."

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER INDIAN.

QUEBEC, June 27.

Steamer Indian, from Liverpool June 17th, arrived at this port this morning. News unimportant.

RUSSIA.

The French Moniteur de la Hotte publishes a letter from Sebastopol, in which it is asserted that the vessels raised in that harbor were those which were merely grounded in shallow water, receiving slight damage; while those sunk as barriers are imbedded in the sand above the bilge, and were unmovable.

The Emperor and Empress embark at Cronstradt on the 23d of June, for a tour in Germany.

Trade reports from St. Petersburg state business as very dull, with very few arrivals or foreign orders for grain.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE NIAGARA.

HALIFAX, June 29.

The Royal mail steamship Niagara, from Liverpool at 9 A.M., Saturday, June 20, arrived here at 8.20 this evening, en route for Boston. Very little news of interest.

RUSSIA.

Some disturbances have taken place on the Gallician frontier. The peasants, believing the world was coming to an end, committed some excesses, and the troops had to be called out.

Letters from St. Petersburg state that the cholera, which is never totally extinct in that capital, is now raging violently, the number of deaths exceeding 70 a day.

TEA POISONING.—The following is from the London Times.

"Is there anybody so foolish as to suppose that the Chinese will not poison every box or chest of tea, preserved ginger, sweetmeats, chow-chow, marmalade, or anything else that is exported from China for the use of foreigners? We believe honestly and truly that the destruction of human life in this country and in America, from the use of poisoned tea, will be the most fearful calamity that has ever visited the two countries in this century. It will kill more people in England than were killed in the Crimea. It will destroy more human life in the United States than our wars, the yellow fever or the cholera. People continue to drink tea, and think there is no danger! It will be a fatal mistake. Wait until the cargoes of tea now on their way to American ports are landed. Those who dream that we shall escape poisoned tea, had better preserve the extracts from the Times. We have no doubt that our warning articles about tea will save thousands of lives in this country. We wish all would take the warning in time."

Domestic Summary.

"WORSE AND WORSE."

Paul has said—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. . . . Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Says the New York Tribune,—

"Sixteen murders have been perpetrated in this city since the 1st of April. . . . There have been sixteen attempts at murder, beside violent assaults and rumhole fights without precedent. Ten thousand hardened and hopeless female outcasts swarm the streets at night, two thousand children, under the guise of peddlers, from the ages of ten to sixteen, penetrate every public building, store and office in the city, to beg, steal, spy for burglars, and on their own account to practice those vices which cannot be named in respectable language; five thousand great and small gamblers prey upon the credulous and the infatuated, standing all day at the doors of their dens in Broadway, as well known in person and profession as the Mayor himself; ten thousand lazy, drunken, thieving, short boys, swill boys, killers, roughs, and rowdies of other names, lounge on the rum cursed corners of streets, making day disgusting, night hideous, and travel dangerous to all who can be suspected of having respectability or money; thousands of emigrant swindlers, mock auctioneers, lottery dealers, policy backers, pickpockets, hall thieves, burglars, wharf rats, area sneaks, pimps and vampyres, practice their knaveries as openly and with as little fear of punishment as though they were engaged in the most virtuous and legitimate of human pursuits. The swell mob of London, flying from the argus eyes of a real police, and the unendurale felons of San Francisco, expatriated by the bullet and the hemp of the Vigilance Committee, are received here with open arms, parade our streets under not only the toleration but the protection and personal friendship of the police, carry our primary elections, and fill high places on our nominating committees. On every hand we have vice and crime and splendor; crime, vice, rum, and beggary. Here, in the most fashionable faubourg, is the Crockford's of New York; there between the palatial residences of a millionaire and a divine, is the 'mason de joie' of a woman whose dress is the most brilliant, whose equipage the most costly, whose appearance is the most stunning, of any of the gay butterflies, virtuous or vicious, whose beauty and wealth add glitter to the opera or sunshine in the promenade. Within a bow shot of these palaces, is the other side of the world; for brocade, rags; for diamonds, dirt; for Johannisberg, whiskey; for millionaires, beggars; for divines, devils; for Aspasias, drabs; with here and there some poor, starving wretch, painfully enacting the 'Song of the Shirt,' her besieged virtue glimmering in the misery of this tangible hell, like the fabled jewel in a dunghill. And, over all, we have a set of men called rulers, wrangling like hungry dogs for the public purse; lying and cheating for advancement; plotting to overthrow all law, that they may rob the people; and in their influence upon our vast criminal population, recklessly flaring their incendiary torches in our moral powder house."

METEORIC PHENOMENON.—P. Johnson communicates the following to the New York Tribune from Carbondale, Pa., June 20;

"A strange and startling phenomenon took place near this city just at sunset last evening. A large cloud was seen making its appearance, coming directly from the northwest, accompanied by considerable wind. When near this place, a dark looking cloud or substance was seen to leave the cloud and make diagonally for the earth. So soon as it struck the ground, contrary to all expectation it became highly luminous. Making directly for a large barn that stood in the field, it passed through its centre, setting it on fire, and continued its course gaining in velocity as far as the eye could reach, making a straight course for the woods, melting stones of considerable size, and burning up brush and underwood, making a complete road of a rod or more in width, for the distance of three miles, and finally fetching up against a perpendicular breast of solid anthracite coal of sixty feet in thickness, proving rather too much for his cometship, leaving nothing but a sulphurous mass behind."

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT UPON THE BOSTON COMMON.

During the exhibition of fireworks upon the Common in the evening of the 4th, a terrible accident occurred, by which four persons were killed and several others wounded.

THE FOURTH IN NEW YORK—RIOTS, MURDERS, &c.

NEW YORK, July 5.

There were several riots in this city yesterday. The most severe riot originated in the Bowery, between a mob from the Five Points and a party of the Bowery boys. The fight was continued with great ferocity for an hour. Clubs, stones, bottles, and fire arms were freely used, and the Five Pointers were gradually driven back.

Eight persons were killed in this riot, and about thirty wounded, including several policemen. At one period of this riot the rioters had the streets barricaded, defying the policemen, of whom upwards of 100 were present.

Three regiments of State troops were ordered out, and kept in reserve, but their services were not required, as the riot was finally suppressed by the exertions of the police.

In the minor riots two persons were killed, and 20 or 30 badly wounded. In nearly all these disturbances ex-policemen were conspicuous actors.

DESPERATE AND BLOODY SUNDAY RIOTS IN NEW YORK CITY.

NEW YORK, June 29.

There were some serious riots in the city and vicinity on Sunday. At Hudson Park, near Spuytenduyvil Creek, a party of Germans, who were enjoying a pic nic, were attacked by rowdies, when a battle ensued, in which several of the former were seriously injured.

The Eleventh Ward was the scene of a dangerous riot. A gang of rowdies attacked Capt. McKinney, of the 13th Ward Police, and nine of his men; succeeding, after a bloody fight, in rescuing a prisoner from the custody of the policemen. Capt. McKinney was, it is believed, fatally injured, and seven of his men dangerously wounded.

At Williamsburg the Germans and Irish engaged in a fight, in which three persons were stabbed.

The firemen of that city also indulged in a fight, on Saturday night, but without any serious results.

At Brooklyn two rival fire companies engaged in conflict. Stones, clubs, and other missiles were freely used, and several were injured.

According to the State Register, California contains 507,067 inhabitants.

The shipments of gold Atlanticward, so far from falling off, are increasing.

The weather throughout the interior of California has been excruciatingly warm. In some localities the mercury rose to 100 degrees in the shade.

FROM UTAH.—By late advices it seems that Brigham Young is besieged in his own house by a portion of the Saints, who have dissented from the true faith and threaten to immolate the Prophet in the castle of his abominations.—Athens Post.

GRASSHOPPERS IN MINNESOTA.—The region around Monticello is literally alive with grasshoppers. Though not yet half grown they are already doing immense damage, and unless they speedily emigrate, must devour every green thing in Wright county. Mr. Ferguson, a farmer on Minnesota Lake, says that in five days the grasshoppers have destroyed twelve acres of wheat—not a single blade can be seen on the whole field. Mr. Bradley of Monticello says that a wheat field of twenty acres he saw on Saturday in excellent condition, looked, on repassing it on Monday following, as though it had never had a crop on it—not a blade was to be seen.—St. Anthony Express.

Notice.

Brethren and friends living in the Western States, who wish for Advent books or tracts, are informed that Elder W. Pratt, having removed from this place from one to two hundred miles south, has transferred his books and tracts on hand to me. Brethren can have them sent as usual, by directing their letters containing their orders to

N. BRANCH, JR., Moline, Ill.

There are now on hand some of the following kinds.

BOOKS.

Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ, by D. T. Taylor. Future Punishment, by H. H. Dobney. Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times, by William Ramsey, D. D. Church Debts, by Wm. Ramsey. The World as it was, as it is, and as it will be, by Mrs. A. C. Judson. The Unity of Man, or Life and Death Realities. Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught by Paul. Bible vs. Tradition, by Aaron Ellis and Thomas Reed. The Old Paths, or the primitive doctrine of a future life.

TRACTS.

Voice of Warning from the four Winds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—Noah, his age and ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Divine Testimony of the Son of God—Plain Truths—State of the Dead—The great Incentive—True Source of Life—Key of Truth—The Night cometh—Ancient Land Mark—Scripture Searchers Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Tracts free to the poor.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

SACRED MOUNTAINS.

SINAI, thou hast awful pomp,
Rumbling earthquake, sounding trump,
Circling gloom and lightning's gleam,
Fraught with wrath and terror seem!
Self condemned I trembling stand—
Humbled 'neath the Almighty's hand.

PISGAH, from thy towering height,
Lo! I see a landscape bright;
Beauteous hills and vales appear,
Rushing rivers bright and clear.
But I gaze oppressed with woe,
For the hand of death I know.

HOREB, round thy rocky brow
Rush the mighty whirlwinds now;
On thy quaking, barren height,
Fiercely burns a radiant light;
Yet the still small voice of God
But rebukes the path I trod.

Lo! on TABOR'S summit gray
Beams the light of perfect day;
There we see an earnest bright,
Of the inheritance in light;
Yet it is a transient gleam,
Passing like a beauteous dream.

CALVARY, on thy darkened brow,
Jesus' head in death did bow;
Mocking Jews and impious foes,
Saw his agonizing throes.
Here my soul would refuge find,—
Help me, Savior of mankind!

Hark! that burst of melody,
Stealing o'er yon glassy sea,
Swelling like the thunder's roar,
Or the waves on ocean's shore;—
There, where endless anthems swell,
On MOUNT ZION I would dwell.

H. L. H.

Obituary.

Died suddenly, (by accident,) in Fairhaven, Ct., on the 27th day of May, Mr. William Lyman, aged fifty-six years. He had long been a member of the Advent Church.

GILBERT LYMAN.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Campmeeting at North Wilbraham!

Our brethren abroad have made a demand on us, or rather have expressed a great desire for another "Independent Campmeeting" at North Wilbraham, Mass. What shall we do? Shall we respond to their desire! I think we must, or perhaps do more harm than good. We have concluded to commence the meeting on Monday the 31st day of August next. We give this timely notice that all who wish to attend such a meeting may arrange so to do.

We call this an Independent Campmeeting, because we intend that it shall be independent of all sectarianism and partyism. We invite all to attend it who are interested in, and love the immediate appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ. We expect at this meeting a general gathering of the "waiting ones." It seems to us that it cannot be otherwise, as this will be centrally located for the friends of the cause.

Come, Brethren and Sisters, in the Lord's name, help! Make all the preparation you consistently can to attend, we beseech you, for "is there not a cause?" We feel lonely and pilgrim-like, and it will be well to meet, and greet, and cheer each other once more on the journey. Will you come from the East, and West, and North, and South, and sit down once more in the anticipation of the kingdom?

The objects of this meeting are twofold.

1. To comfort and strengthen one another.
2. To endeavor to benefit, with the truth, all who will attend the meeting, who are not yet ready for the kingdom of God.

We shall expect each Brother and Sister at this meeting, to speak and act as he, or she may think God requires, with a view to the best good of all concerned. We desire no public debates or controversy, but let each speak independently of others, and in the spirit of Christ. It is the general desire of the friends that Bro. Munger be Superintendent of this meeting, inasmuch as his acquaintance with that part of the country and long experience in these matters render him the fittest person that can be selected. We can all confide in his integrity and faithfulness. We trust he will comply. We would say in conclusion, that it will be well for our friends in all parts, where they can, to associate and prepare tents and bedding, &c., for themselves, so as not generally to be dependent, as many individual cases must necessarily be. The cloth which is used for tents can be taken by the several families which purchase it, after the meeting, and be used for domestic purposes. In some cases, tents may be more cheaply hired. We will try to get the fare on the railroad from Boston to Wilbraham reduced, if possible, and thus help our Eastern friends; and should we succeed, will give notice in season. Perhaps other brethren will do the same on other railroads.

Get tickets for NORTH Wilbraham—the Camp-ground is near the North Wilbraham depot.

And now, Brethren and Sisters, we submit this matter to you in the Lord. Act right.

EDWIN BURNHAM,
For the Brethren.

P. S. Provision for man and beast will be made as usual. E. B.

Providence permitting, Bro. Albert Fox will meet with the Brethren at Bristol, Ct., July 12th

Bro. I. Damman appoints to preach, Providence permitting, in Madison, Me., July 12th, where the Brn. may appoint.

Elder E. Burnham appoints to preach in
Boston, July 12th
Salem, Mass., Third Sunday in July
Lowell, Mass., Fourth Sunday in July

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach in Exeter, N. H., July 12th

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach in Portland, Me., July 12th.

The Lord willing, I will preach the word as follows:—
Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, July 12th
Exeter, N. H., at the Advent Chapel, July 14th
Lawrence, Mass., July 15th
Auburn, N. H., where Brn. Welsh or Robie may think best, July 16th
Roxbury, Mass., July 17th
Boston, Mass., Lord's day, July 19th
Providence, R. I., July 20th
River Point, where Br. H. Taylor appoints, July 21st
Fairhaven, Mass., July 26th

ELDER S. S. BREWER.

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at Kennebunkport, or where Bro. Elisha Mitchell may appoint, Sunday, July 5th
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th

If any of these appointments come in collision with others already made, brethren must let me know immediately by letter, directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Concord, N. H., Sunday, July 12th
Granby, Mass., Sunday, July 19th

D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in the following places:
Collinsville, Ct., Thursday, July 16th
Winsted, Friday, July 17th
Newfield, Sunday, July 19th
Litchfield Station, July 20th
Bro. Humphreyville's, July 21st
Plymouth Hollow, July 2d
Bristol, Thursday, July 23d
Hartford, Friday, July 24th
South Hampton, Long Island, N. Y., Sunday, July 26th, if the Brethren meet me at Sag Harbor, on Saturday, when the boat arrives.
Peacedale, (as Bro. Dixon may arrange,) July 28th and 29th
Appanauge, (will the Brn. meet me at Appanauge depot?) Thursday, July 30th
River Point, (where Bro. Taylor appoints,) Friday, July 31st
Providence, Sunday, Aug. 2d. Third meeting where Bro C. O. Towne may appoint,—perhaps with Bro Osler's charge.
Roxbury, Mass., Monday evening, Aug. 3d
Boston, Tuesday evening, Aug. 4th
Worcester, (at Bro. D. T. Taylor's charge,) Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th

If these appointments interfere with others, please notify me before I arrive. These are not decrees,—only propositions.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Bro. R. R. York appoints to preach at
Freeport, (on the Neck,) July 12th
Flying Point, July 19th
East Gray, July 26th
Brunswick, Aug. 2d
South Gray, Aug. 9th

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at the 1st Baptist (colored) Church in South Kingston, Saturday evening, Aug. 1st

Twice the following Sunday, Aug. 2d, at the Advent Chapel, Peace Dale, and in the evening at the Colored Church above named.

For the Brn., J. T. DIXON.

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at
Nashua, N. H., July 12th
Hillsborough, N. H., July 19th
Danbury, N. H., July 26th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Salem, Mass., July 12th. M. GRANT.

Bro. D. E. Moulton appoints to preach in Stowe July 12th instead of Concord, N. H. Cannot come as Bro. Hook requests.

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at West Boscawen, N. H., in the Christian Meeting House, (removed from the Pond School House,) July 12th
East Weare, in the Free Meeting House, July 19th
Canterbury, in the Town Hall, July 26th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Dover, N. H., Friday and Saturday evenings, July 17 and 18, and over the Sabbath.

M. GRANT.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Buffalo, N. Y., Wednesday evening, July 22d
Rochester, July 26th
Canandaigua, (evening,) July 27th
Syracuse, (evening,) July 28th
Clay, evening, (meet me at Brewerton, morning stage,) July 29th
Albany, N. Y, (evening,) July 30th

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Lake Village, N. H., July 26th

The Lord willing, I will preach the word at North Searsport, Me., on Sunday, July 12th
Belmont, (in the Jordan School House,) at 5 P. M., Tuesday, July 14th
Lincolnville, (Young Town School House,) at 5 P. M., Wednesday, July 15th
South Hope, where the Brethren prefer, at 5 P. M., Thursday, July 16th
Damariscotta, Br. J. Campbell's, Friday, July 17th
Round Pond, (evening,) at Br. Stephen Harding's, Saturday, July 18th
Round Pond, (Union Meeting House,) 3d and 4th Sabbath in July.

THOS. SMITH.

A Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a tent meeting in North Dana, commencing Thursday, August 13th, and holding over the Sabbath, of believers in the primitive faith of the church; viz., the personal coming of our Lord, and the literal resurrection of the dead, and the restitution of the earth, and in making ready a people for these great events by taking the new covenant of Jesus Christ, in all its parts, without addition or diminution, for the basis of church building and government, as the only law by which the temporal, civil and ecclesiastical affairs of all the members of the body are to be regulated and governed.

We invite the lovers of truth to come and unite in laboring with us in this good and best of all causes. With us christian character is a test of fellowship, and that to be gained, as Peter says, by being begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

Some of God's servants will be present to preach the word. We invite all classes to come and hear, and then judge. Prove all things and hold fast that which is good. For the Brethren,

D. E. MOULTON.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Maria Christenson 112, S. H. Cresey 117, J. A. Bigelow 123, C. Walker 52, E. Eastman 127, H. Fyler 104, L. J. Beach 117, W. Welch 101, J. Gifford 119, Esther Tuttle 122, C. Cottle 130, E. Kelly 126, M. Bachelor 114, $1 each.

J. M. Withington 131, M. M. Lewis 143, $2 each.

Mrs. A. Shepherd 110, 50 cents; S. E. A. Bogues 159, $1.75; S. H. Waldron 117, $1.50; A. Smith 113 $3.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—W. Jackson, $1.18; S. E. A. Bogues, 25 cents; H. Hand, $1.18; D. B. Wyatt, $2.

BOOKS SENT.—Wm. Jackson, D. B. Wyatt.

Bro. Jonas Merriam's P. O. address is Concord, N. H.

Bro. Walter Pratt's P. O. address is Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

W. H. Wild's P. O. address is North Lee, Mass.

Bro. C. Goodrich's P. O. address is South Farms, Ct.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Harvard, Mc. Henry Co., Ill.

To Correspondents.

Bro. Latimer—We have no tracts in the German language.

Bro. B. R. Clark—It will be more convenient for us, and just as well for you, if the postage is paid at the office where the paper is received.

D. B. Wyatt—We sent your books by express.

S. E. A. Bogues—We comply with your request in behalf of M. N. C. The money all right.

TRACTS.—We have just received a supply of DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

We can furnish these works on commission at the wholesale prices. Let ministers send in their orders, and scatter them like leaves of the forest. They can be had also of J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ, By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price [illegible] —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance, or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

A View of the Scripture Revelations Concerning the Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 30 cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

CHEER UP! BROTHER!

Cheer up! brother! what though trials
Thee surround on every side;
Trusting, drink from sorrow's vials,
Then come forth like gold when tried.

All these trials light and fleeting,
Are for thy eternal gain;
Go to Jesus, and with pleading,
Ask for strength, thee to sustain.

O! look, brother! see the glory
That in thee shall be revealed;
When thou'st fought thy battles gory,
Conquered sin, and won the field.

Trust in Jesus, thy great Captain,
Quit thee well while here—be strong!
Soon will come thy glorious Chieftain;—
Sure, he will not tarry long.

M. M. L.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

WRITTEN FOR BRO. SAMUEL HANCOCK, A BLIND PILGRIM.

I'm not a cheerless wand'rer,
On time's eventful sea;
A thankful heart is beating,
Within my bosom free.
I cannot see the lovely flower,
That turns to greet the light;
But on the mind's retina fair,
Is stamped its beauty bright.

The morn with all its freshness,
Breathes on a grateful brow;
Though wrapt in rayless darkness,
I feel its healthful glow.
Like angel melodies I hear,
The warblers of the grove;
While softly melting on the air,
I drink their notes of love.

But should a tear oft linger
Within my sightless eye,
Think not I'm wretched, stranger,
As careless you pass by.
I'm going to see the BLESSED ONE,
In realms of fadeless light:
Where victors gain the spark'ling crown,
The blind receive their sight.

I weep to think the darkness
Will soon the world enshroud;
While morn with all its brightness,
Will burst, without a cloud
To dim the splendor of the scene;
But oh! a starless night,
Will meet the poor lost sinner, when
The blind receive their sight.

Farewell, dark world, forever,
I leave my tears with you;
The goal's in sight where never,
Is heard the sound, Adieu.
Where lilies kiss the crystal stream,
I'll drink forevermore;
And earth's renewed with living green,—
My night will then be o'er.

V. N. CUDWORTH.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Travels.

THAT MEETING IN NEWARK.

BRO. GRANT:—I must be brief with such things, I am aware, but the season was so much like those of by-gone days, I must, for the encouragement of others, speak of the refreshing we had.

In the morning we had preaching, after which some spoke. In the afternoon all spoke who wished to, if they could get time, for the time was all taken up for three hours. Many spoke on time, giving the evidence, to their own minds, of the coming of Christ in a few days. I ought to have said that many of the brethren from New York were over there, and united. The arguments on the time were as well taken as possible, and urged with a kindness and force commendable. There was none of the testing on the point we have seen in some instances. They (the arguments) went to show that the 2300 days would expire at the anniversary of the Pentecost,—the 20th of Artaxerxes being 444 B. C., 69 weeks—483 years—ending in the year 40 A. D.—time of Christ's crucifixion in the year forty, and covenant confirmed seven years after, bringing the termination of the remaining 1817 years, 1857, from the year 40 A. D. Also, the termination of the time of tribulation—1782 (Edict of Joseph, Emperor of Austria,) and 75 years before the termination of 1335, ending this year.

The meeting was one of great and solemn power. Some most joyful testimonies of experience were given. Our oldest and most established brethren here, and in Newark, are in this interest.

One Bro. who has lately come among us in Newark said,—"I stood on the seashore of Tyre and Sidon and received my convictions, and thought of the instructions of my mother who was dead, and of Jesus of Nazareth who once used to teach there, and sought out a place to pray in secret, even on board the U. S. man of war, and was converted."

Bro. Wilkins electrified the audience by reference to Moses, in respect to the glory of the Lord and the salvation of his people; but if I undertake to write the speech, it will be like the picture only of the falls—it will not have the sound!

In the evening, at the Lord's supper, there was a most joyful, impressive remembrance of him, not only in the past—the agonies of the crucifixion—but in the promise—the coming glory—by about 125 brethren and sisters, (many speaking as we proceeded,)—and there seemed to be a bond of union for every heart. It was as if we were back in our position of '44, before the feuds, and strifes, and conflicts of our travail—the tearing and splitting and breaking which we have endured, commenced. Oh, God of mercy! when will the church get home, and "see eye to eye?" C.

New York, May 26th, '57.

For the Crisis.

"Work while the Day Lasts."

What can I do? says one who professes the christian's hope, and calls himself a disciple of Jesus, who feels himself "weaker than a bruised reed;" what can I, so frail, so insignificant, do in the cause of God? You can do something. To all is given at least one talent, and there are many ways in this sad and dreary earth of doing good. Look at the broken-hearted, grief-stricken ones of earth. "Weep with them that weep" in loneliness and sorrow; speak the sympathizing word to those mourning for the loved and lost, and point them to Him who is the resurrection and the life. This will be working for God.

Remember the erring; those who have perhaps wickedly wandered from the path of virtue; do not look at them coldly with a face of pious horror because they have done wrong, but like Jesus look with pity, and point them to the Lamb of God; and remember that "he that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death."

Time's last sands are wasting; the events of each moment speak, in thunder tones, of the end of the present state of things. Soon, very soon will our opportunity of doing the will of God be over, and we shall receive our reward. Then let us never say we can do nothing, that we do not feel competent to do anything, but let us do our duty in the fear of God—comfort the broken-hearted—strengthen the weak—warn our fellow mortals that soon they must meet the Judge of quick and dead, and make straight paths for our feet lest that which is lame be turned out of the way. And what our hands find to do, let us do with all our might. Then, at the coming of the Just One, we shall receive the welcome words, "well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of your Lord." M. E. S.

For the Crisis.

True Life.

What is a true life? Is it merely to spend the hours in gaiety and frivolous amusement, or in striving to adorn our persons with useless ornaments, to please the eyes of those who are unable to penetrate the outward appearance and behold in the inner man that priceless gem, the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit? Is it for this purpose that God in his wisdom and unceasing mercy has prolonged, and still continues to prolong our lives? Is it that we, who are the recipients of His goodness and loving kindness, should spend the short time he has allotted us here in doing that which will neither benefit ourselves or others? O no; methinks it was for a wiser purpose than this that we have had a continuation of his mercy extended to us. It was that his name might be magnified by us; that we might cast off the works of darkness, and put on the whole armor of light, that we might be prepared for that great day in which we must all give an account to God for the deeds done in the body; that we might here be perfecting ourselves in grace, that we may stand before him without spot and blameless.

Should we not, while here, render to each other those little acts of kindness which cheer and make glad the heart? Let us take as an example of true life, our Savior while here on the earth. Let us strive to model our lives after his divine pattern, and to walk in the path which he has marked out for us, which is straight and narrow. Let us ever be found following after the footsteps of Him, and methinks we shall show to the world that our lives are not spent in vain. Let us do good, as he did—seek for the poor and needy, and minister to their wants, and thereby lay up our treasures in heaven.

How few at present realize the value of time, and the vanity of this life they are pursuing. How few realize that Jesus died and was crowned with thorns, that they might live and be crowned with eternal life. O! methinks it would be much more wise, while we are spending a short life here, to live in such a manner as to merit eternal life. What if we do not indulge in those foolish amusements which the adversary of our souls is ever presenting before us to draw our minds insensibly from our God? What matters it, if we are persecuted and ridiculed by the cold, unfeeling enemies of God? What if those we loved and trusted forsake, and bitter foes surround us? O! let us remember that Jesus is a friend that will never leave or forsake us. If our trust in Him is unwavering, we need not fear what man can do to us. If God be for us, who can be against us?

O! that those who are thoughtlessly spending their lives in sin and folly, could realize the utter necessity of making an entire consecration of all they have and are to God, having their lives hidden in Christ, so that when he shall appear they can have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming. Then they can stand before the Judge devoid of fear, and be found at God's right hand to enjoy forever the sunshine of his approving smiles.

O sinner, be wise, and seek the salvation of your soul while Christ is interceding for you. Now he is waiting to receive you; soon it will be everlastingly too late! O, bid adieu to all those vain amusements, those trifling entertainments, those sinful diversions, and seek those peaceful pleasures, those joyous realizations which are the inevitable result of doing right, and you will have not only the promise of peace and happiness in this life, but of eternal life in the kingdom of God.

M. A. MOORE.

Conesus Center, N. Y.

From Bro. Munger.

BRO. GRANT:—As some of the brethren wished me to say to the church and preachers that Vermont is not wholly destitute of those that are waiting for and loving the appearing of the King, although very much scattered, I would say, I found

At Vernon the church in a very good state, willing to work for God in his appointed way. We had a good number rise for prayers. Sunday afternoon it looked like a revival, and I agreed to go back on my return, but was prevented stopping as the brethren requested, as the cars did not stop. This is my apology.

Houghtonville. Here are a few that want to live, and there are some signs of life among them.

North Springfield. A general turning out; good attention; spirit of God manifest in the audience. This is a good, united company. Bro. Bunday is their preacher. I was glad to see him and Bro. Shipman in the congregation. I held a meeting in the south village, in the Methodist Church. A few brethren present, who were strengthened, and commenced holding meetings again, which I think God will bless.

Wethersfield. Rainy, and no meeting, but had a good visit with Bro. Fellows and family.

Taftsville. Appointment taken up.

Hartland, Densmore Hill. Here I found a good, consistent company, well grounded and settled in the principles of the Gospel. Sunday, the people came from eighteen to twenty miles to attend the meeting each way. This looked like taking pains to get to meeting. I hope they did not lose their journey. I think they did not. God blessed us greatly in that place, and a relationship formed very quick. I hope those that rose for prayers will continue to seek with the same earnestness until they get into liberty, and then in the kingdom. Here I left Bro. Kendall and wife, who accompanied me and stayed up my hands among strangers.

I went to Alsted on my way home to see some relatives that never saw me; others not since 1816. Some dead, others in Rapology, which was showing its head very boldly in that place, with no one to check it—the preacher had left for good, the meetings run down. I wrote a notice and gave to the school-teacher, saying there would be a lecture there that evening. I did so, and left the event with God. The news flew, the people came, the Deacon was astonished at the proceeding, but opened the church instead of the school-house. I talked an hour on the nature of the soul. Had help from God. How much good was done I don't know. All the rappers were out and had nothing to say, although I gave liberty. I was very strongly pressed to stay longer, but at sunrise was on my way home. This ended my northern journey. May good come out of it to the glory of God.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Chicopee Falls, June 22, '57.

For the Crisis.

Talebearing.

What is that? A talebearer is a story carrier. No matter what the burden may require, of strength, or sacrifice of real comfort! "Report, and we will report it," say they. Well, have not we a right to? You may take the opportunity to abuse and pervert your powers, and waste your influence and time, by doing so; but you will rob God, that way. Do it? Many will do it! Ready hands, willing hearts, persevering effort, will and nerve,—all are found to move the work forward.

A right, forsooth! A right to do the work most pleasing to the great deceivers and disturbers! Have you a mind to this work? Will you load the devil's baggage on your own shoulders, and become his pack-mule? And for what? Is it such a pleasure to carry a thing round, the labor of which cannot do you any good? Are you destined to act, mainly, so that you must say, "evil, be thou my good?" for the work is evil; and where is the possible good?

To hear and then to run with it! and from one to another, and gather, and haste to the next door, until you are, in fact, the accredited way-mail, porter and courier for the evil genius of a whole village! How enviable the position! They say of you—"tell it to him or her! You would better put it in the news-print—give it to the public-crier—paste it on the town post!" And will you, Advent reader, secure such a notoriety? Will you, Christian friend, merit such a name? Scandal-monger! For it is scandal-work. It does not mean carrying good information, substantial and satisfactory accounts of people. Nay!

Ah! Sir! Ah! Madam! you will rob yourself. You will gather rubbish; but waste intellectual stores!! Waste religious power—character! You will "sin, as with a cart rope," and become a direct instrumentality in robbing others of reputation,—the best treasure they have. Forbear! As you would enjoy an appreciation of yourself—noble, independent, generous, satisfactory, above, elevated far above the groveling—desist! As you would feel that you are a philanthropist, a christian, a benefactor—pray you, leave off—never begin! Tell tales, never more, and work on the other side. At least show the negative good of leaving this evil alone.

Above all; if you would be justified before the Judge, don't follow this pernicious practice, for God abominates and forbids it! Heaven ignores and rejects the office and characters! DELTA.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. E. MILLER writes from West Martinsburgh:—"Bro. E. Burnham was at our place about the middle of April last, and preached five discourses, which were profitable to us. If we could have such men as he to teach the people, instead of these false teachers that are teaching the commandments of men and doctrines of devils, there would be more than there are at the present, looking for that blessed hope that the apostle Paul looked for—the appearing of Christ—the resurrection of the dead—the restitution of all things—the saint's inheritance.

Our little society was planted under the labors of Bro. G. W. Burnham, six years ago; and there are some eighteen or twenty who remain steadfast, in hope of eternal life at the appearing of Christ. We hold our meetings regularly every Lord's day, for prayer, exhortation and reading of the word of God. We have very interesting meetings. We find that we all have one talent to improve, and that we are sanctified through the Spirit, and belief of the truth."

—:o:—

BRO. S. H. WALDRON writes from Portland:—"I am sorry to say that the cause of truth in this place is more dead than alive. For some time we have been very deficient in preaching, which I think is one great cause of so many running after the 'lo heres' and 'lo theres,' Spiritualism, and other 'isms' of the present day. I do not wish to be understood to say that prayer meetings are not profitable for our growth in grace; they certainly are; but we want some one to break the bread of life, or expound the word unto us that we may be thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work. We all know by experience that nothing will keep an audience together equal to a preacher.

I hope that the way will soon be opened for Bro. Burnham, or some other one richly laden with the spirit of prophecy, to visit Portland. My sick father-in-law, Richard Hamilton of Portland, required my attention for some time previous to his death. He died in the Lord at the good old age of sixty-five, claiming the blessing promised to all such. My partner in faith, joys and sorrows, has now neither father, mother, brother or sister, but she, with me, expects very soon to see our loved ones where death will have no more claim upon us. We are as firm as ever in the doctrine of the literal coming of our Lord to raise the dead and establish his kingdom, by changing or cleansing this sin-cursed earth, as well as our vile bodies, that we may be fit subjects to dwell therein."

Choice Selections.

THE RICH.

They are rich whose treasures lie
In hearts not hands—in heaven not here;
Whose ways are marked by pity's sigh,
And mercy's tear.

THE POOR.

They are the poor who rich in gold,
Confiding in that faithless store,
Or tremble for the wealth they hold,
Or thirst for more:—

Whose hands are fettered by its touch,
Whose lips no generous duty plead;
Go, mourn their poverty, for such
Are poor indeed!

Extract

FROM "A TESTIMONY AGAINST DIVINITY DEGREES."

BY WILLIAM DELL, ESQ.

John Wickliff, that chosen servant of Jesus Christ, did witness against these Anti-Christian degrees, who saith, "The Clergy do busily seek their worldly worship and glory, and by great gifts, and vain-costs, to be called masters in divinity, and to speak before lords, and to sit at meat with them, and not to teach truly the gospel to all manner of men, by meek life, and freely, as Christ bids."

Again, saith he, "Every sect, state, and operation, which Christ does not approve in his gospel, is in reason to be rejected; and therefore seeing Christ doth not approve, but reprove heathenish mastership, it is manifest that it is to be discharged, and cast out of the church."

He saith also, "That Christ hath specially forbidden his disciples heathenish or scholastical mastership; and that Christ would have the name of master or doctor singularly reserved to himself, seeing he, by reason of his hypostatical union, hath a certain excellency which cannot agree to any other of mankind." He concludes, "Seeing there is danger in attributing to men the title of master or doctor in divinity, therefore in good reason, those titles are to be shunned in the church of God."

John Huss also saith, "that they who take to themselves academical degrees, and titles answerable, do go in the apparel and harness of the mystical body of Anti-Christ, who is the king of all the children of pride, to wit, of the masters and doctors in divinity."

Again, in another place, he speaks to this purpose, "Christ saith, John viii. Neither came I of myself, but the Father sent me; so the saints have come in the name of the Lord Jesus, and in the name of Jesus they have performed their priesthood, and he is the crown of their glory; and by this they are distinguished from certain, who are otherwise crowned as masters and doctors, and bachelors, and from others of other kind of titles, according to the manifold wisdom of this world. For these excelling others by their pains, and through their own science and learning are notably beautified with their own titles and crowns, and therefore do rather perform their office in their own name than in Christ's."

Luther speaks much to this purpose also.

Zuinglius on that scripture, Matt. xxiii. Be ye not called docter, for one is your master, even Christ, &c. saith thus, "Thou hearest here, that these titles of masters and doctors are not of God, seeing Christ forbids them."

Now methinks, the clear and precious WORD of CHRIST alone, should take off the Universities and Clergy from giving and receiving their degrees and titles, if they do in good earnest profess themselves to be his disciples; but how much ought they to be ashamed and confounded, when they see other believers, for the love of Christ and his word, utterly renouncing these things before their faces, that they, if they persist, may be left wholly without excuse before CHRIST and his Church.

Wherefore, I pray, that the Universities lay this to heart, how much they have departed from the gospel of Christ in this matter, as well as in all the rest; and hast received the doctrines and laws, methods & manners of Anti-Christ, wherewith thou hast deceived thyself as well as the nations. And hast brought forth a company of prodigous children, heathenish, foolish, vain, vile and abominable, yet they have called them learned, and given them degrees in divinity, contrary to the degrees in the gospel, and hast sent them forth into every city, country, town and village, as ministers of Christ, yea, as sons of the morning, though unbelievers, and altogether destitute of the Spirit. And thus have deceived the nations, and given them a false ministry instead of a true; and by this false ministry, a false word instead of the gospel; and the world hath not at any time received a greater woe, nor more greivous plague; wherefore thus saith the word of the Lord. The day of thy vengeance is coming, and the years wherein thou shalt be made desolate, and thy dainty and goodly things shall depart from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all; and the voice of musicians and pipers shall no more be heard in thee; for in thee is found the blood of prophets and of saints, and of all that have been slain upon the earth. Thy human learning, to wit, thy philosophy and school divinity, and the false ministry which they have set up, and the false Christians which have proceeded from that ministry, have devised and executed all these murders and massacres on the true Saints of GOD.—Herald of Gospel Liberty, Sept. 14, 1810.

For the Children.

A Child's Faith.

A gentleman wished to remove from his grounds an unsightly plum-tree which, having become sadly disfigured and partially dead by black wart, was of no service to the eye or the palate. Destitute of beauty and affording no fruit, the owner of the land determined that it should be transferred from his grounds to his wood-house. He selected as the time for removing it the month of May, when the earth around it was soft and yielding. His companion, aid, and pupil in this chore was his oldest son, a boy between six and seven years of age. This little fellow was strong and nimble, but constitutionally fearful. The father dug around the tree and loosened the roots, until a weight of forty or fifty pounds at the top to sway it on one side, with the help of a lever at the foot, would bring it to the ground. The tree was some twenty feet high. It stood near the bank of a river, into which it would fall if it should lean to the south, and a ledge of rocks was near it on the west.

The father, having loosened the tree, said to his boy, "Charles, I want you to climb to the top of the tree and throw your weight (pointing to the eastward) so that the tree will fall in that direction." The boy looked amazed and stood still but said nothing. "You are not afraid, are you?" said the father. "You won't get hurt."

Charles explained: "Why, father, I should think that the tree would come down so quick that I should be killed by the fall." "No," replied his father, "the tree will come down gently and slowly, and you will have a grand ride, and fall on the soft grass." Charles trembled, looked thoughtful for a moment, and then began to ascend. As he went higher and higher his courage evidently increased, and his voice and eye became as clear as a bird's. His father, from below, by words and signs, gave him directions how to proceed. Charles reached the limb designated. His father carefully applied the lever below. Softly as a rocking cradle the tree descended to the earth, and Charles, greatly entertained, found himself on the green-sward, unharmed by the ride.

"Now, father," said the boy, "I want to tell you how I felt about going up that tree. I thought I should get killed, and when you said I should not, I still felt afraid I should. But then the thought came into my mind that if I should be killed, it would be in obeying my father, and that it could not be bad for me to die in that way. Then I was not afraid any more."

This, dear children, was an instance of practical faith, faith in an unseen God, faith that led to obedience. Charles obeyed God in obeying his father. He believed, not that God would save his life, but that, dead or alive, he would be safe in obeying the fifth commandment. The courage that he felt as soon as he was willing to trust God, was better to him than an extra supply of muscular strength. It made no difference that there was really no danger. The apprehension of danger is the occasion for faith. Faith is believing where you cannot see, whether the reason you cannot see is want of eyes or want of light. In both cases you are equally in the dark, and so have an opportunity to put your trust in your unseen Father. Happy is the boy who early learns to obey God and leave the results without fear in his all-wise hands.—Independent. E.

Doing Good to Others.

A mother who was in the habit of asking her children before they retired at night, what they had done during the day to make others happy, found a young twin-daughter silent. The elder one spoke modestly of deeds and dispositions, founded on the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you." Still the little bright face was bowed down in silence. The question was repeated, and the dear little child said timidly:

"A little girl who sat by me on the bench at school had lost a baby brother. All the time she studied her lesson she hid her face in her book and cried. I felt so sorry that I laid my face on the same book, and cried with her. Then she looked up, and put her arms around my neck; but I do not know why she said I had done her so much good."

INTEGRITY, however rough, is better than smooth dissimulation.

INDOLENCE is the rust of the mind and the inlet of every vice.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1857. WHOLE NO. 98. VOL. V. NO. 20

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

UNION.

Sweet are the ties that link our hearts
In bonds of christian love,
Bonds that no earthly change can part,
Nor earthly strife remove.

Union with each we know and feel,
Through Christ our Lord and Head;
Union that binds to endless weal,
The saint alive or dead.

Branches of Christ the living Vine,
His fellowship we prove;
We share his sorrows and his shame,
His patience and his love.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The World, the Flesh, and the Devil.

"The world, the flesh, and satan,
Will prove a fatal snare,
Unless we do reject them,
By faith and humble prayer."

These are the combined enemies of the dear saints of God. The allurements of the world, the besetments of the flesh, and the temptations of the Devil constitute the formidable army against which the Christian has to fight. And, as great and as powerful as our enemies may be, if we are truly the humble, faithful followers of the Lamb of God, we are abundantly able to overcome them all through Jesus Christ, our all-sufficient Savior. Let us now look at some of their characteristics. We will appeal to the Scriptures for witnesses, and for testimony.

The Apostle Paul, in 2. Tim. 3; 1—9 says,—"that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their ownselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts, ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. Now as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, (with their counterfeit miracles,) so do these also resist the truth; men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith; (the gospel of the kingdom,) but they shall proceed no further; for their folly shall be manifest unto all men as their's also was." Can any one have a single doubt that we are living in "perilous times?"

The works of the flesh, &c., are no new thing; though they may assume somewhat different forms now to fulfil prophecy; but in olden time, according to Paul in Rom. 1: 29—32, men were "filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents; without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful; who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, (the second death,) not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them."

Again, 1 Tim. 6; 3—5, "These things teach and exhort," says Paul in the preceding verse. "If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, (or foolish) knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness; from such withdraw thyself." "Now the works of the flesh are manifest; which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I tell you before as I have also told you in times past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." These are plain and solemn declarations. But I can say with the Apostle, "Am I not therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth?"

Having spoken of the world and flesh combined, we now proceed to speak of the devil—his devices. His main object seems to be, to hinder men from the belief and practice of the truth. So he is ready to try all ways to make men believe error. It does seem that he has come down in great wrath, knowing that his time is short. And as we have not time, nor room here to speak particularly of the various ways of satanic deception; let me just say in conclusion, that Satan's masterpiece for deception now is sectarianism. He aims to distract the professed church of God, or to divide her into fragments, and, if possible, array each separate family of the household of faith against the others. The different denominations of christians on the face ot the earth, seem beyond dispute, a proof of satan' power. God has not formed the different sects; who has? Satan's influence is such as to make God's people contend more earnestly for a form of faith, than for the faith itself, and to spend more time and effort in defending a rite in the church, than would be needful to save many poor sinners from the power of Satan, and establish them in the truth. And even in the matter of Spiritualism, as now developed, we doubt not but that he will lead many from truth and duty,—he has done it already! That Spiritualism, as it is now manifesting itself in our midst, is emphatically a devise of satan to oppose, in anticipation, the coming and kingdom of our Lord, we have no doubt. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Put on the whole armor, and fight manfully for King Jesus. PARKER TANDY.

For the Crisis.

Willful—Willfulness.

The rational and rightful exercise of the will, (or power of choice and determination) is never expressed by these words.

The will, and all the faculties and capacities of our nature are designed to be exercised. Their exercise is commendable, save where they become excessive and violate some law. But this excess—this trampling on right by the violence of the will, is set forth by these words, "willful—willfulness." These terms do not represent the righteous, or holy experience of the will, but only its abuse, its indulgence against right or without reason.

"WILLFUL, (will and full) governed by the will, without yielding to reason; obstinate, stubborn; perverse—as a willful man."

"WILLFULNESS, obstinacy, stubbornness, perverseness, as sins of presumption are such as proceed from pride, arrogance, willfulness, and haughtiness of men's hearts."—Webster.

All our faculties have names. Their perverted indulgence, and their passionate exercise, have names also. In this case, will is the name of a most distinguishing faculty of the human mind. But "willful" is the word which expresses its perversion or abuse. Let us then eschew "willfulness" as we do all sins of presumption. "A willful man" is so far a bad man—but a worse christian! J. B. C.

For the Crisis.

Fault Finding.

What a vast amount of evil is effected by the captious fault-finding spirit, and consequent manner. There is that sister's bonnet! oh dear! How it looks! Why did she not have it plain—just as I like it? ribbon of such a color, or so much, or none at all. Poor creature, (minister's wife, perhaps,) had to wear what was given to her, and had not money to get one; and felt tried, but wanted to look decent—could not pay for any alteration.

And so it might be of all the articles of ladies' wearing apparel. Better mind your own heart. Get it all clean—keep it all nice, a beautiful palace, for the lovely Savior!—the proper tenant.

That poor mother! with a large family to work for and clothe, and with husband gone—naturally too particular, has gathered things to her mind. Now half the church is finding fault with her for being proud, and "wonder where the income is," &c. Is not that a well-meaning woman? good wife, mother, christian? Why offend such a disciple by finding fault? Better go and have a good praying season at her house; then tell her wherein things might be improved. Help her a little. Dress plain! Glorify God!

The way the brethren live, as to the manner and style, I mean,—speak—speak in meeting, and do every other duty, is a subject of discussion with a certain class. Now, my brother or sister, it there is any thing wrong in principle—in fact—go to the brother or sister; if not let it be thought of as a difference of habit or education, or perhaps of past position in society. But does not the gospel make us all one? Yes! but don't expect a full result all in a moment.

There is some old brother who has always lived in a particular outward style—all well for him—but there is that young sister, whose bonnet or dress tries him to death—or some mother ought to be dealt with, that she allows a child to come to church in a decent apparel. Poor "old Simeon," good man, forgets he was once a child. Should he kill that little lamb with his coarse strong fodder?

There was that sermon of the minister's he preached after he traveled over the mountains in the snow, or through the heat of a July day—took his lunch with him, and saved the shilling for the horse-feed—might not have been so fine, but you ought to have considered he had but little time for study, and if he preached the plain gospel of the kingdom he did very much after the fashion of the Apostles. If he preached very plain and cutting, better look into the gospel and see if that does not require all that he preached, and ask yourself in the fear of God, if he could have preached any less, and have done his duty to high heaven. Find fault with the messenger of God, for the way of truth! Aye, you would find fault with the Plenipotentiary of the king who brings you life, and deliverance from the prison. DELTA.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

BRO. GRANT:—In some corner, with your sanction, I will give a few brief incidents, hoping not to be tedious or flat.

Let all the brethren traveling West remember that the ticket master at Springfield does "not know anything" about fare beyond Albany, when it will save a little to the W. R. R. Co., and find out how to save $1.00 to Rochester, by some one else!

Passing in full view of the spot where the "Russell tragedy" was enacted, and deeply impressed with the increasing wickedness and depravity of man, I arrived at Albany by eleven o'clock, A. M., and thus had ample time to find the brethren, and visit half a dozen families, before the services in the evening. These were highly interesting and I trust profitable. Found a goodly number of those who were in the faith in '43 and '44.

Would it not be well for the place of meeting to be advertized, in the cities and towns that are remote from Boston, or occasionally to give the residence of some brother? Here, for instance, great confusion and labor occurred to me from the removal of persons, which, had I been late in getting in, would have disappointed the congregation. Had I known where the meeting would have been held, I would have had no anxiety. I care but little about the trouble; I can always do it, even if I have to follow impressions, and when I do not know which way to look—as yesterday—have a good praying soul ask me on the street if I am not Mr. C., who is going to preach to the Advent people? Yes! I am. Thank God! He helps in little things. We hope he will in great ones. I would like to help others about it, &c. W. S. C.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 11.

From Bro. A. P. Moore.

BRO. GRANT:—I have for some time past read the excellent, heart cheering epistles in your paper from the followers of the "meek and lowly" Savior; and Oh! could I but express in these few lines the joy that it gives me to hear from the "despised of earth" through the Crisis. It is but a short time since I embraced Jesus my Savior, but I have had many very happy seasons in his service and I do praise the Lord for ever opening my eyes to see my true condition, ere the door of salvation was closed forever. Yes, I thank God that he in these last and "perilous times" showed me (one so unworthy) that I must "repent and be baptized," if I would be saved. I have done so, and now, glory be to God, I feel that Jesus is mine and that I am his; and I pray that I may always feel so.

I am still on the Lord's side, striving to overcome this present world, and trying to work out my "salvation with fear and trembling." I know if I trust in the true and living God that out of them all he will deliver me. Brn. and Srs., let us all trust in him evermore. Though we are far apart, let us ever be very near to our God, continuing to fight on as bold soldiers of the cross. Let us fight manfully the battles of the Lord. Soon our warfare will be ended; soon the victory will be won. Glory be to God! Soon we shall see Jesus, who spilled his blood on Calvary, that we through his blood might be cleansed from all sin. Soon we shall hear the sound, "behold he cometh, go ye out to meet him!" How glorious will be that sound to those that love his appearing; but on the contrary, how very terrible to a world lying in sin and wickedness.

It does seem to me the world is as bad as it possibly can be; just as it was in the days of Noah, when they were "eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away. Brn. and Srs., is it not time for us to be up and doing, professing what we do? Let us awake and "put on the armor of God;" we have but a short time to work, and what is done must be done quickly, for Jesus himself has said, "behold I come quickly." Let us who are looking for his coming, come out from the world and be separate. Let us not think that we can love this present world and the world to come, for if we love the world and the things that are in the world the love of the Father is not in us. Though we are despised, what of it? Though we are persecuted, and have our names cast out as evil, what of it? Though we are called so many hard names as, infidels, atheists, deists &c., what of it? Did they not call Jesus even worse names? and should we expect to shun them? No. If they despised Jesus, they will his followers; and "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."

What is our reward if we endure unto the end? "He that endureth unto the end shall be saved." Let us be faithful, and watch and pray, caring not what the world says about us. What does Jesus say about those that are persecuted, &c.? "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Is not that sufficient? If He is for us who can be against us? If He call us "blessed," that is enough.

Oh, my Brn. and Srs., is not this thought enough to encourage us to press onward amidst these perilous times? Soon "he that is to come will come, and will not tarry." Then our joy will be complete. Then shall the whole earth be filled with the glory of God. Then and not till then will the promise be fulfilled that the Lord swore unto our father Abraham that "in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

Who does not want Jesus to come? Reader, do you? Do you love the Lord thy God "with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength?" If not, let me invite you to Jesus. Do love him, "for he is good, and his mercy endureth forever." If you live in open rebellion against your God, let me, as one that loves your eternal welfare, point to the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Oh! my friend, come to Jesus; come while there is room, for very soon the door will be closed, and you will be shut out for ever. If you are without Christ in the world, I pray you in Christ's stead be ye reconciled to God. I warn you to flee from the wrath to come, and find refuge in Jesus, that you too may "receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Brn. and Srs., pray for me that I may be "preserved blameless until the coming of Jesus," that I may meet you all in the kingdom that never shall end, and walk the golden street with Jesus.

Your young Bro. in hope,
Bath, N. Y. A. P. MOORE.

From Sr. C. E. Gierlow.

DEAR BRN AND SRS:—I have not for a long time received but one communication from any of you, and I begin to fear that you have forgotten me. Some of you may not know my present address, although it has been published in the Crisis. For the benefit of such, I will state that we moved from Macon to this place last March to take charge of the Forest Hill Academy, my husband having been elected as Principal, and myself assistant. I feel that I never was in a situation where I could be more useful than in my present one; though I am often sad to think that I am so far separated from those of like precious faith.

I found a few, in Macon, who loved and embraced the hope of the Gospel; and I have one or two very dear friends there, who are longing with us for deliverance. But in this State people are so much occupied in the acquisition of wealth, that they do not appear to have much time to think of any thing else. Alas! they will, ere long, have to take time to settle their account with God.

Is it not worse than madness, for poor dying creatures to be so eager for the perishable things of this life, and at the same time so utterly regardless of their future destiny? The doctrine of the world's conversion is, I think, generally preached, and thousands upon thousands are deceiving themselves with a false hope of salvation.

How thankful am I for the privilege of reading the "Crisis." I would sooner deprive myself of one meal a day than be without it. I wish that all who have an abundance of this world's goods were as much interested in it as I am. If this were the case, even, with those only who profess to be looking for the immediate coming of Christ, the paper would never flag for want of funds to support it. But Ah! how blind and selfish is poor human nature!—always making excuses for not doing what would make us far happier here, and secure to us a crown of immortality, studded with the richest gems in the world to come! For my own part, it does seem to me that if we were free from debt, and I could have the control of my own present salary, notwithstanding I can sing with the poet,—

"No foot of land do I possess,
No cottage in this wilderness,"

I could freely devote it all, after defraying my necessary expenses, to the cause of Christ; and how much better this would be, than to hoard it up, to witness against me in the day of judgment! Amid trials and perplexities, I am striving to serve God myself, and endeavoring to instil into the minds of my pupils, that knowledge which is calculated to fit them for God's everlasting kingdom.

The people of this place are wealthy. They have servants, lands, &c., in abundance, and they generally appear to be very kind and hospitable. I could not ask for better treatment than I have received from them. I am informed that when I first came here some persons expressed regret that I was a "Millerite," but when they learned that a "Millerite" was only a Bibleite, and that their children were improving as fast under my instructions, as they could reasonably expect, they seemed very well satisfied. I feel to praise the Lord for his wonderful goodness to me. He has been my front-guard and rere-ward, a present help in time of need. Since I came from the North, and left you all whom I loved so well, what a portion has he been to me! In the hour of affliction, his presence has sustained me. When earthly friends were needed he has supplied them, and when I have attempted to defend his truth, he has furnished me with argument that no one could possibly resist. On one occasion he favored me so much, that, if I did not fear that it savored a little of boasting, I would relate the circumstance to you. I will venture to do so, since I know that God knows my heart, and if you, Bro. Grant, think it not for God's glory to publish it, you will please leave it out. I may have related the same to you before, in a private letter.

Soon after I arrived at the South, it became noised about that I believed we were living very near the end of this age, that Christ's kingdom was about to be established on the earth, &c. This created a great deal of excitement, and in many instances people appeared to be much pleased with our views, and studied their Bibles in order to test them. But after a while bitter opposition began to develope itself. My husband deeply mortified, begged me to be silent in regard to a subject that was calculated to ruin us both. This did not frighten me in the least. I had such a "propensity" to talk, or rather, to repeat passages of Scripture, touching our faith, that I kept at it. Whenever I was interrogated, I was ready, God helping me, to give a reason of our hope.

One day, an Episcopal minister—a devoted friend of my husband—called to see us. He appeared sad and thoughtful, and after remaining a few moments, he said that he had been truly grieved to learn that many ill-natured reports were in circulation about me. As nearly as I can recollect they amounted to this. I was "teaching strange and dangerous doctrines, and had affirmed that the ministers (of the different denominations) did not preach the truth, &c." I had said, (when asked by some of their numbers, why their "ministers had not found out these truths if they were truths,") that as they did not think it right to pry into the "secrets of the Bible," and therefore had not obtained the truth particularly applied to us, viz., the coming of Christ, the second time, they did not preach according to the Bible. And when I heard a man in the pulpit say, "Be not troubled, the end is not yet," "it cannot come for at least a thousand years," and, that "man goes to heaven at death, and always will remain there," I did tell him that he was preaching contrary to the Bible, and I think I convinced him of it too, for he has lately warned his people to be ready for the judgment—said that he could not see one prophecy that remained to be fulfilled, &c.

Please to excuse me, brethren and sisters, for turning aside from my story. I will proceed to inform you that I gave the Episcopal Bro. a synopsis of our views, and he said that he could discover nothing heterodox in them. But as they were so very unpopular he "would advise me not to say much about them. It might be an obstacle to our success, and as we were dependent upon the patronage of the public, it would be best to use discretion." No doubt he intended this advice for my good. He has devoted his life and property to his Redeemer, and is now standing upon the verge of the grave, and I believe him to be ripe for the kingdom of God! When he had concluded his remarks, I took a seat by him, and, looking him calmly in the face, "replied,—"My Dear Brother, you say that you are grieved to hear that people are saying all manner of evil things concerning me, &c. What I believe and teach is God's immutable word, as you will admit. Do not trouble yourself about me, my Bro. I know that He in whom I believe, and whose I am, is able to provide for me, and mine; and that he will protect me from all harm. I expect very soon to meet those persons who have so cruelly censured me at the bar of God. Should I for fear of their hard sayings now, withhold from them that light which God has given me, and let them perish without making any effort to save them? Let me suffer reproaches, and contempt, even for a little season; if God be on my side, what have I to fear?"

While we were talking, my husband was silent. But when the minister was gone, he said to me, "Clara, I never in my life saw you look as you did while in conversation with Bro.---It seemed as if a ray of glory were playing upon your countenance. What was it that made you look so heavenly?" Ah! well I knew, that as I stood alone, far, far away from all human aid, that God was with me, and that his blessed Spirit spoke through me My sheet is full. God bless you all! and may we soon meet to part no more.

Athens, Tenn.

C. E. Gierlow.

From A. P.

Bro. Grant:—On Cheshire Street, there is a little Chapel for the people to worship in that believe in, and love the immediate appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ, to reign King of Kings, to beautify this earth, which has been so long time defaced by sin and sorrow, and fit it for the everlasting abode of the righteous; to unlock the graves of those that sleep in Jesus, to crown all those that love his appearing with glory, and put them in possession of joy and happiness forever and ever. There are a few of that class who are trying to be faithful, to endure unto the end and receive the crown of life which fadeth not away. They have a meeting every Sabbath, and preaching once in two weeks.

Yesterday, Sabbath, June 14th, the house was well filled with a very respectable audience of various denominations, and many that belong to no denomination of christians, who gave good attention. Our worthy minister took his text from the Apostle Paul in the Acts,—"I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." He showed first the character of Saul of Tarsus, his great natural ability, the firmness and energy of his mind, his peculiar advantages for education and religious instruction, and what a fit instrument he was for the great Sandhedrim of the Jewish Church to use in persecuting the humble followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. And while on such an errand for the Jews, with orders to bind, and power to condemn both men and women whom he could find worshiping the true God, there shone a light about him, above the brightness of the sun at midday; and Jesus called and told him that it was him he was persecuting, and bade him "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do." Paul was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, but went directly about doing the Lord's work, though it brought upon him the most severe persecution. He related the vision and preached Jesus and the resurrection to come, before king Agrippa and Bernice, the chief Captains, and the principal men of the city, telling them plainly what the Lord had done for him, how he had called him, and that he intended to obey God rather than man, not fearing what kings and tribunals might do to him.

Then comes the question, are we disobedient to the heavenly vision? Jesus has called every one of us. You may not all of you have fallen to the ground and heard a voice audibly, as Paul did; you may not have seen a light above the brightness of the sun, but every one of us have had light from heaven sufficient to lead us the Saviour, to embrace the religion of Jesus; to love and serve God with all our hearts; to be his faithful followers, if we have not been disobedient to the heavenly vision.

O, that we all would follow the true light—show ourselves obedient to the calls of the Savior—walk by his counsel—have a right to the tree of life, and an inheritance among those that are sanctified and blessed forever and ever.

In the afternoon, the discourse was from the text,—"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." In the first place, it was shown how difficult it is for poor human nature to understand how all the crosses and afflictions we are subject to can work for our good; but they are among the "all things," and it is our privilege and duty to believe God and trust all to him, who will bring it about in his own good time, and show us that trials, afflictions, temptations, persecutions, sickness, sorrow, pain, or even death itself, if we love and serve God, will work for our good. After such great and glorious promises were made to Jacob, and to his fathers before him, that they with their seed should inherit the whole land, that they should be as numerous as the stars, or the sands of the sea, it was hard for even that good man to see how it should be for his good to be thus bereaved of his children,—Joseph and Simeon gone, the famine sore in the land, and no possible way to get bread but to let Benjamin, the darling son, the only one left of his mother, to let him go, not knowing that he ever would return. No wonder the good old man mourned his hard fortune, when he could not persuade his sons to go to buy bread without Benjamin. Hear him; "Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away. All these things are against me." Joseph might have thought all was against him—sold a slave to the Egyptians, tempted and tried, and cast into prison, forgotten by Pharaoh's butler when he had promised to speak to the king of him and bring him out; still he remained there two years, and was remembered just in time too, when it was for his best good, when he could do the most to glorify God; in good time to interpret Pharaoh's dream, and be made ruler over the land of Egypt; and in so doing, saving the lives of all his father's family, and the chosen people of the Lord. Here they could not hesitate to confess it was for their good that the all-wise God had sent Joseph before them to save their lives. What unmistakeable evidence was there that all things did work for their good!

Cannot many of us remember the time when darkness and clouds seemed to enshroud us, and we were almost led to exclaim (on account of some severe trial) that, all these things are against us, when, perhaps, to our surprise we found they were for our good? Will we not love and serve God with all our hearts, believe in him, and put our whole trust in him, and know assuredly that "all things" will work for our good, let come sorrow and grief, poverty and sickness, losses and crosses separation from our friends, pain and death, if we can know that all will work for our good, that we can have eternal life, be made immortal, receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away, that Jesus will come in glory and receive us unto himself where will be all the good and the blessed in the paradise of God to remain forever and ever? Yes, we all want to be there. I want to be there. O, let us all strive, and love God, that we may be there.

A. P.

Cheshire, Ct., June 15, 1857.

From Sr. Louisa J. Beach.

Bro. Grant:—I would say to the dear, scattered children, that the same blessed hope which has been our joy and consolation in years past, is still mine, and for its consummation I am still looking. That people, who love the appearing of Jesus, are still the people of my choice; their God is my God; their Savior my Savior; the narrow way, in which the church of God have ever walked, the path I would pursue, and that bright home in glory, of which we have so often wrote and sung, and for which we have longed and prayed, I hope to share with all those who shall be heirs of life eternal, and join in that song which the redeemed shall sing, when they return and come to Zion with everlasting joy upon their heads—when sorrow and sighing shall have forever fled away.

Truly the Lord is good to those who fear him, to those that hope in his mercy. Although small, we are a favored people and our blessings many. While Spiritualism, with its withering, blighting influence, is destroying its multitudes, and infidelity, like a dark pall, is settling o'er the land, I rejoice that the children of God have "light in their dwellings;" yea more, they have food to eat, the world knoweth not of. While that which should be food for God's people, is trodden under foot of men, and the pure waters are roiled by their feet, yet there is no lack to those who fear God. The Good Shepherd regardeth the cry of his little ones, and feedeth them with the bread of heaven, of which if a man eat he shall never die.

Dear Brn. and Srs.,—let us hold on our way, though oft it seems dark and dreary, for we have an assurance of faith, which trial and disappointment can never wrest from us, that "he who hath promised is faithful," and "in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

To those who have formerly labored among us, I would say, the idea, that our meetings in this place are discontinued, is an erroneous one. For a time last Fall they were broken up, but for the last six months we have had regular meetings at the chapel on the Lord's day. Although our numbers are small, and we have had a variety of unfavorable influences to contend with, yet our efforts have not been in vain. The blessing of God has rested upon us, and often have our hearts burned within us as we have communed together, and anticipated the time when all the family of the redeemed shall be gathered home. We have had no preaching for a long time, and the little flock are earnestly desiring and praying the Lord to direct the steps of some of his faithful, spiritual servants to this place. Such, would find a little remnant striving to overcome, and ready to receive them in the name of the Lord. That the Lord would strengthen and bless his people, and soon give his chosen ones rest, is the prayer of your sister,

Louisa J. Beach.

New Britain, Ct., June 29th.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 15, 1857.

Rich Man and Lazarus.

No. I.

A brother wishes to know how Luke 16: 19–31 can be harmonized with the idea that the dead are unconscious between death and the resurrection?

In answering this question, it will be necessary, in order to get the connection, that we go back to the commencement of the 15th chapter. In the second verse we read,—"The Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, this man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." From this point, we think the Savior goes on to vindicate himself against the above charge, by showing the Pharisees that they act on the same principle in temporal things, and closes with the parable of the rich man to illustrate the then future history of the Jews.

He first vindicates his course by the parable of the lost sheep, and says,—"What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?" The Pharisees could not deny that this would be their course of action. Jesus thus pleads guilty to their charge, and says,—"I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance."

With the eighth verse, he commences another and similar illustration in the parable of the ten pieces of silver. He inquires, what woman, who had ten pieces of silver and lost one, would not light a candle and seek diligently till she found it, and then rejoice? He then makes the same application again, saying, "there is joy in the presence of angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." If they would rejoice because they had found a lost sheep or piece of money, should they not still more when a sinner is restored to the favor of God?

The Savior next introduces the parable of the prodigal son in the eleventh verse, to illustrate the conduct of the Jews towards the Gentiles with whom he had been eating and conversing. In this pointed illustration, we believe the elder brother represents the Jews, and the younger the Gentiles. All were counted as Gentiles from creation to Abraham, who was considered the father of the Jews. Said they, "we have Abraham to our father." Like the prodigal son, the Gentiles had squandered all their blessings, and wandered far from the Lord in their idolatrous worship; in short, they had spent every thing, but when they beheld Jesus and his wonderful works, they began to think of returning to the true worship of God, and because Jesus sympathizes with them in their lost condition, they charge sinners; and like the elder brother in the parable, they are offended, and entirely refuse to co-operate with Jesus and the him with being a friend of publicans and angels in restoring the lost sinner, and rejoicing over him. The Jews, like the elder brother in the parable, for many years had been the favored people of the Lord, and should have been delighted when they learned that Gentiles were to share the blessings of the gospel with them, but they were so sectarian in their feelings, that they could take no satisfaction in the prosperity of any church but their own, and felt even angry when they saw the Gentiles received into "Abraham's bosom," or in other words, brought into the Abrahamic covenant.

Thus far, the Lord has been addressing the Pharisees, who complained of him for receiving sinners and eating with them; he next speaks to his disciples, (chap. 16: 1–13) instructing them how to use "the mammom of unrighteousness," and teaching them that they "cannot serve God and mammon." We learn from chap. 16: 14, that the Pharisees listened to this conversation of Jesus with his disciples, and being covetous, "they derided him." The Savior then continues his conversation with the Pharisees, to the close of the chapter, introducing the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. In verse 16, he declares that, "The law and the prophets were until John." Since then, there has been a change which the Pharisees refuse to acknowledge. He illustrates this point in verse 18, by the law regulating the marriage relations, and says,—"Whosoever putteth away his wife and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery." If any do not see the application of this, let them turn to Rom. 7: 1–4. Says Paul, "Know ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth? For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband, so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress; but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man." In the next verse he makes the application, which shows plainly why the Savior introduced the same subject when talking with the Pharisees. Hear him.—"Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to Him who is raised from the dead, that ye should bring forth fruit unto God." We found the Lord declaring that the law was until John, that is, unto John's ministry; and when he commenced preaching, the time had come to put away the law, be baptized, and be married to Christ, "for Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10: 4. This the Jews refused to do, and were married again to the law, which had been divorced by the Savior, consequently they were adulterers.

We now come to the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

In this article, we have endeavored to show—

1. That the Pharisees condemned Christ because he received sinners and eat with them.

2. That he pleads guilty to the charge, and vindicates his course by showing the Pharisees that, when they lose a sheep or piece of money, they at once make search for the lost, and rejoice when it is found.

3. That, in the parable of the prodigal son, he brings out the fact that they did not rejoice when he came to save lost sinners, who are of more value than many sheep or pieces of silver, thereby proving that they, and not himself, were the ones to be censured.

4. That the time had come to put away the law, and be married to Christ, which they refused to do, consequently, they are condemned as adulterers.

In our next, we purpose to show the consequences that followed this course of conduct on the part of the Jews, as illustrated by our Lord in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

Voice of the Church.

Says the Worcester Daily Spy, of May 9th, '55,—"It (Voice of the Church) is a work of remarkable research and patient collection, and shows that the authors have been diligent searchers for evidence of the truth of their doctrines; and also zealous advocates of them."

Says the National Ægis, (Worcester) May 9, '55,—"It appears to be a thorough examination of the doctrine of the second coming of Christ; requiring extensive and laborious research, and presents arguments and arranges facts of history with method and precision. Ancient authorities and writers in abundance are cited, and detailed explanations of some scripture passages given, all of which, taken together, render the book quite interesting."

For sale by H. L. Hastings, No. 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., and at this office. Price $1.00. Postage 18 cts.

We hope all will read the letter in another column, from A. Judson, "To the Female members of Christian Churches in the United States of America."

For the Crisis.

Abide in your Calling.

Some people make a great mistake in relation to being useful, by making a great mistake about their calling: they seem to think their wish is a better standard by which to determine their calling than their ability is. From this evil much mischief and confusion arise. For, no person can be out of his or her proper calling, in matters of religion, or, indeed, in any other matters, without creating disorder. It is not certain that one can preach the gospel, is called to preach the Gospel because he or she can talk, and has a strong desire to speak in public; other qualifications are as necessary as the talking qualifications, even allowing the person in question to be a sincere christian.

It seems to me that a good degree of common sense, or what we term sound judgment is necessary in order to fulfill, acceptably, the ministerial function. I do not, I cannot believe that God ever did, does, or ever will call a fool, or rattlebrain, or insane person to preach the Gospel.

I think, too, a person must have perception of mind, who is called to preach the Gospel, or what may be called power to learn, or else how can he STUDY to show himself approved?

And there are still other qualifications necessary. A man may be called to exhort who is not called to preach. So in other departments—a man may be called to take some other part who is not called to preach or exhort—a man may have a gift to sing with others who is not called to lead in singing—a man may be called to "help" in the Church, who has no ability to be connected with "governments"—a man be called to be an evangelist who has no ability for the pastoral office—a man may be called to be a pastor who has no power as an evangelist. Let every one be sure to find out by his ability, which God giveth, what is his calling, and therein abide.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Interest for a Brother.

Bro. Grant:—I am deeply and gratefully impressed, to-day, with the kindness of the friends in this place, and arising in the exhibition from the interest taken by one or two individuals, one in particular—to ascertain, what a brother's circumstances were, and how he could get along with what the brethren were disposed to do in aiding him.

I do not know that what I shall say will be heeded, perhaps it is not needed: and I would offer a thought which, to me, seems but justly required. It is this; instead of leaving it all to the Lord, without our knowing any thing about it, (I mean the brethren,) would it not be just as well to leave it to the Lord, and know what is done, and whether sufficient is done to give such help as is demanded for the time being.

This is a delicate question. No man wishes to be thought seeking after money or to be over anxious about his support. And hardly any one is willing in public or private, to communicate his wants unless interrogated; therefore, I would suggest that wherein brethren take up collections for the preacher, and have not in their arrangements any amount determined upon, (among themselves,) there should be some one to ascertain his condition, and if he gives his time to the work, as far as possible supply him. I think this would be for the good of the Church, as well as for the preacher.

The preacher must often know in sadness, what he needs, even before he leaves, —if he is the true servant of Christ, and the Church, should not the Church, at least the deacons, know as well as he? Often he must know what he has by him, to travel with, to pay rent, to meet his bills for every thing. Any harm in the brethren knowing? Is it not right then to inquire?

I hear one say, he must keep out of debt. Aye! he must or injure the cause. Why? If he gets into debt he cannot pay up. Let him keep out of that snare. I say, Amen, I hope he will. He must pay his bills when they become due, probably then he would not owe any thing, but even if he pay in advance, he must have means.

What then shall he do? I'll tell you, all in one word, just how the preacher and his family can be happy—keep out of debt—keep from hunger or cold, starving or freezing, or any suffering. How? That word is means. Interest yourself to help him get some work, or find out what he requires, and one or two societies take hold. Keep the money from going into the pockets of the R. R. Co's, and let it run into the preacher's kitchen.

"But I have heard this and the other thing, about his circumstances or possessions, &c." Is that the interest you take? Hearsay, is a run-away team. It will bring up where it must, but generally dashes in pieces.

I am not writing this to complain—I begun by expressing gratitude. I know how good it is to feel it—to be encouraged to go on—to take hold anew, as a man will when the Brn. come to his assistance, and bid him "God speed" with the "mateiral aid." Otherwise, he may feel downcast, disheartened. What is he good for then? Has he not enough to battle against, beside neglect in his poverty?

W. S. C.

Newark, N. J., May 30, 1857.

P. S. I ought to say that many societies are "doing nobly, and are coming up most beautifully to the work." C.

For the Crisis.

The Promises.

Is there any truth? (This inquiry should not be propounded.) Yes, God is true; the Bible is true; and all things pertaining thereto, embracing the exceeding great and precious promises spoken of by the Apostles and prophets are also true. God's word is more enduring than the heavens and earth, for, while they shall pass away, the word of God will remain, as lasting as Himself. I feel confident that the importance attached to the things contained in holy writ is not realized as it should be, emanating as they do from so high a source.

In relation to the promises, I will only notice a few portions of scripture bearing on the heirship of Christ to David's throne. I would simply remark, that if any truths are more prominent than others, they are those which the nominal churches contend against, and as being peculiar to Adventists alone. Take, for instance, the promise above mentioned, attested to by an oath from the living God, recorded in Ps. 132, 11,—"The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David, he will not turn from it, of the fruit of thy body, will I set upon thy throne." Here is a promise yet unfulfilled, which can never be gainsayed. Mark the phraseology,—"sworn in truth." He will not turn from it, it is unconditional, and to prevent, as it were, its being construed in a spiritual sense,—"of the fruit of thy body, will I set upon thy throne"—which places it beyond dispute.

"But," says one, (it has been remarked to me,) was not this promise alluded to fulfilled in Solomon?" Never. Just turn for a moment to Peter's view of this subject, recorded in Acts 2: 30. Speaking of David, he says,—"Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, (the same promise and oath, undoubtedly referred to as above quoted,) that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne," &c., &c. Is not this plain? We think it is. But, lest there should be a lingering doubt in the minds of any, we next call attention to the announcement made by the heavenly messenger that said to Mary, previous to the birth of Christ,—"He shall be great, (perfectly plain) and shall be called the Son of the Highest; (easily understood, and fulfilled literally,) and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Now, I ask if his birth, greatness, &c., accord with the prediction, will not also the latter clauses given in the same connection, accord precisely in the same literal manner? I think all candid minds will answer, yes; and thank God, this promise, with others connected, will speedily have a glorious fulfillment.

Placing implicit confidence in the ability of Him who has promised, let us take courage. Notwithstanding these truth's are so generally scouted at, they are predicated on the word of Him who cannot lie, and will be accomplished according to his revealed plan.

JOHN RUDDELL.

Buffalo, N. Y.

From Sr. H. E. Wright.

BRO. GRANT:—* * * To me, a lone pilgrim, the Crisis has been and still is a source of comfort and consolation. When I peruse its contents my heart is indeed cheered, and the soul stirring communications I often find therein are, to me, like food to the hungry soul. It is now nineteen long months since I bid farewell to my dear advent brethren and sisters at Cheshire, Conn., and came to this place. Since that time I have not become acquainted with any of like precious faith. I do in reality feel that,

"I long here have wandered a pilgrim and stranger,
Aloof from the world have endeavored to keep;
All free from its error, pollution and danger,
Till I should be changed or in Jesus should sleep."

Thus far the Lord has led me, and kept me in sweet peace and in the faith and patient waiting for his promise to be fulfilled.

I sometimes feel that I am like a sheep without a shepherd, or a stray lamb that has lost its fold. But I hear the good Shepherd's voice, and, by the grace of God, will follow him; for he will soon gather all his scattered ones, and there will be one fold and one Shepherd, and he will give unto his own eternal life, and none shall be able to pluck them out of his hands.

Pray for me, that I may prove faithful, and in the morning of the resurrection be clothed with immortality and eternal life.

Your sister in hope of the glory of God, H. E. WRIGHT.

Cascade, Iowa, May 12th, '57.

From Bro. Manning Curry.

BRO. GRANT:—By request, and from a sense of duty, I give a few reasons for my ceasing the observance of the Seventh Day Sabbath.

I consider the Sabbath to be a positive institution of the Jewish dispensation, instead of a moral precept of perpetual obligation. The difference between the two not being observed has been the cause of many embracing the Seventh Day theory. Yet, you can easily see, that, in every reflecting mind, the difference is obvious. For example, let a professed minister of the gospel come to your congregation and teach that the precepts,—"thou shalt not steal . . . kill," &c., are not binding, the vilest of the vile would object. But let him take the position that the observance of the Seventh Day Sabbath is not binding, and you would see a willingness to hear argument. The cause is this,—

A positive institution is of that nature that it can benefit no one to observe it, nor injure any one by not observing it, unless it is a law for the time being enjoined by a rightful ruler. A positive institution is based entirely upon the sovereign will of God, and is binding so long as he sees fit to require its observance. The erecting of the brazen serpent in the camp of Israel could have benefited none, had not God required it; there was no relation existing between the brass and poison that healed the people. it was not means existing in the nature and fitness of things, but its healing virtues depended wholly upon the will and appointment of God; this is purely a positive institution, not moral law; had it been, it should still exist, and be a perpetual observance. There were many such institutions belonging to that age, as there are in this. It will not do to confound the two ages, nor their institutions, because all these institutions are only appropriate under the dispensations where God has placed them. Example. A Jew would appear as a mocker receiving the institution of Baptism and Lord's Supper, while yet adhering to the Jewish religion. Equally so, would a Gentile convert appear, engaged in the Jewish mode of worship.

Circumcision, offering of beasts, new moons, feast days, holy days and Sabbaths, are positive institutions, based on the will of God, and must be at an end, unless God sees fit to enjoin them. But neither Christ or his Apostles have so done, while, on the other hand, such expressions as the following must settle the question relative to the observance of days of the former dispensation:—

"Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days, which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ." Col. 2: 16, 17. The Jews had some nine holy days and Sabbaths. Lev. 23, contains a number of them. Ver. 22, calls them "your (Jews) Sabbaths."

A positive institution is mutable, changeable, and may end. But a moral precept, such as, "thou shalt not steal . . . kill . . . bear false witness," and others of the like nature, are immutable, unchangeable, eternal; they of themselves possess moral principle and must eternally exist, and be the rule of righteousness for all intelligences in the universe. Who can do away the precept, "thou shalt not steal?" No one existing—God could not, unless he deny himself.

It is a prominent argument with Seventh Day observers that the two tables of stone contained the moral law of God, in contradistinction to every other law, which they call ceremonial. But not only does the fourth commandment, by fair examination, possess the nature of a positive law, a law that was passed by God at a certain time, or a law that was made; for, says Christ, "the Sabbath was made," &c. If it was made it had a beginning, and therefore is not eternal; a time was when it did not exist, therefore it is not a moral law.

Can it be said that God made the commandment, "thou shalt not kill?" No; it is eternal in its nature; it involves an eternal principle of righteousness, that always was, and is, and will forever be.

But there are other things written on the tables of stone, that were only positive law; viz., "visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation." This is mentioned and kept up, as may be seen, (Ex. 34: 7; Jer. 31: 29; Lam. 5: 7,) but finally repealed as you may see, by Ezek. 18: 2–4.

Thus the argument fails that every thing was purely moral law on the tables of stone.

Your Brother in the hope of the gospel, MANNING CURRY.

Delhi, Mich.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

SONG OF THE WAITING ONES.

AIR.—"Flow gently sweet Afton."

Awake slumb'ring virgins, join in a sweet song
Of praise and thanksgiving to God and the Lamb,
Who brought us salvation—to freely bestow—
Which saves us from sin, and from death and its woe.

Cheer up then, ye mourner, redemption is near,
The Heavenly Bridegroom is soon to appear;
And our joy will be full when our labor is done,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

Hosanna to Jesus, dear Spirit, inspire
Our hearts for to love him, to bless and admire;
We'll praise him, we'll praise him, and crown him our King,
Salvation through Jesus, salvation we'll sing.
O glory to Jesus, whose feet shall then stand
On Zion's bright mountain, the fair promis'd land;
We'll sing with the angels and join the fair throng,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come

And if we are called ere that happy morn,
To rest in the grave and be laid in the tomb,
When the "last trump" shall sound through the earth and the skies,
We again shall awake and in splendor arise,
In the bright resurrection, the morning of bliss,
When Jesus shall crown the ransom'd ones his;
O glory to Jesus will then be the theme,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

When the saints of all ages in the kingdom shall meet,
Round the throne of God's glory their Redeemer to greet,
What joy, O what rapture, shall fill each glad soul,
While pleasures celestial eternally roll;
Enrob'd pure and spotless, with harps ever sing
Hallelujah, salvation to Jesus our King;
Through grace we may conquer and win a bright crown,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

W. SHEPHERD.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. M. HOBART writes from East Douglass, Mass.:—"How little have we expected to see these days. What a similarity there is between these scenes and the journeyings of ancient Israel; and, as God was manifested in their midst, so we see it now. How peculiarly adapted, were the scenes through which they passed, to try them whether they would believe God or not. So it seems to be now; we have expected to get Home before this, but it is not so; yet we see that God is here. Yes, he is in the midst of the camp, and soon the glad trump will sound for the host to move on, not to another temporal Canaan, but to an ETERNAL REST. How sweet to know that God is interested for us. O then let us with childlike simplicity wait, and watch, and pray."

—:o:—

BRO. J. C. W. writes from Mechanic Falls:—"It is truly comforting to read the letters from my brethren and sisters. I have been for a few weeks past where I could not associate with those of like precious faith, but I find the Lord is just the same. He will hear the lonely pilgrim in his solitary cottage. They may take every thing from him, yes, deprive him of every thing but his Bible, and he is happy. Thank God for his word, and for the light he has given us in these last hours.

Brethren, Jesus is at the helm,—we have a good Captain. I have sailed under his command about nine years, and the longer I sail the more attached I become to him. I have no treasure here, but I am trying to lay up my treasure in heaven."

—:o:—

BRO. N. S. LATIMER writes from Berlin, Mich.:—"Receive our thanks for your good paper, which came to us free until a good Bro. sent a dollar for us. And I would say, since Bro. Burnham's article, 'Cannot Pay,' appeared, we have given up tea and coffee, which we found cost us at least $6.00 per year, and have felt much blest in doing what seemed to be duty."

—:o:—

BRO. B. W. SIMMONS writes from Chemung, Ill.:—"I lived fifty years in darkness as to the truth of the Bible. I was taught to believe I had an immortal soul, taught so by my father, mother, priest, and deacon. I lived within the pale of the Presbyterian church. I was strong, but my foundation was rotten. Bro. Blain removed the scales from my eyes. I found by investigation that what he preached was true. Bro. John Howell came here. I heard him declare the truth, and laid hold, embraced and believed the truth of the near coming of our Lord and Savior, was baptized into his death and resurrection, and am now wending my way to the kingdom.

I feel like Job, that in my flesh I shall see my God, in the land of Canaan. I am poor, yet I feel as though I could not do without your paper; it is my meat and drink. Go on, my dear Bro., in the good work, and may the God of heaven bless you in the way of truth."

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, July 7.

Steamship Arabia, from Liverpool afternoon of June 27, arrived at this port this evening at 7 o'clock. In the British House of Commons the Jews oaths bill had been passed by a large majority.

Queen Victoria, attended by a brilliant staff, had personally distributed the Victoria Cross of Order of Valor in Hyde Park. The attendance was immense.

The French elections have all been one way, the Opposition securing only about a half dozen members.

Latest advices from India allow that the mutiny of the native troops had assumed a very serious shape. They had taken possession of Delhi, and were massacreing the Europeans.

Accounts of the grain and potatoe crops continue to be highly encouraging.

FRANCE.—The Paris correspondence of the Times mentions a rumor of a serious plot connected with the recent election movement. Four Italians, on whom papers and firearms were found had been arrested.

Advices from Madrid state that the Spanish and Mexican Ministers had a long conference without improving the state of the Mexican question. In fact the situation of affairs between the two countries is considered critical. The English and French Ambassadors were striving to effect a reconciliation.

The report that General Concha had sent vessels to the coast of Mexico is fully confirmed.

Lord Howden had sent to the Spanish government another very strong note on the Cuban slave trade.

Late advices state that the Mexican Minister positively intends to leave Madrid in the course of a week, if he was not previously recognized in his official capacity.

A despatch from Trieste announces another victory of the Circassians over the Russians, in which the latter lost 1000 men.

INDIA AND CHINA.—The overland mail had arrived with dates from Bombay to May 27, Calcutta May 18, Hong Kong, May 9, and Shanghae April 29.

The mutiny in the Bengal army had spread in a most alarming manner. At Meerut, two native infantry regiments had united with the light cavalry in open revolt. After some bloodshed, they had been dispersed by European troops, but they fled to Delhi, where they were joined by three more native regiments. Delhi was in possession of the mutineers, who had massacred almost all the Europeans, without regard to age or sex, plundered the bank, and proclaimed the son of the late Mogul as King.

Disturbances had also taken place at Ferozpore, but were suppressed. Government was taking active measures to suppress the revolt, and was concentrating troops around Delhi.

The Rajah of Swaltar had placed his troops at the disposal of the British government.

Great distress prevailed in China, on account of the scarcity of food. The neighborhood of Foochow too continued disturbed by rebels. and it was feared serious injury to trade would be caused thereby.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE ANGLO SAXON.

QUEBEC, July, 11.

The Anglo Saxon left Liverpool about half-past 1 P. M. Wednesday, July 1, and arrived at this port at 11 this A. M.

The shipment of the cable of the Submarine Telegraph between Europe and America had commenced on board the Niagara, and would be proceeded in with the utmost despatch.

France, at the request of England, is to send out 14 transports with troops to China. This will be done at the request of England, in order to prevent the withdrawing of British troops from India for the China war, as was at first contemplated, the startling news of the mutiny among the native troops of the former country, having made their presence there more than ever necessary.

Later accounts state that a reinforcement of 14,000 troops are to be sent immediately to India.

The Spanish-American difficulty is as far as ever from adjustment.

Political troubles are rife at Genoa, where party conspirators have been arrested.

Troops were marching from every side against the mutineers in the Punjaub. Meerut and Delhi were placed under martial law, and the native princes were sending contingents to the British forces and to Meerut. The native troops had murdered every officer on whom they could lay their hands at Delhi.

It was supposed that Mr. Fraser, the Commissioner had fallen, with many men, women and children. The mutiny had not affected the troops at other stations.

CHINA.—The advices from Canton River are to the 8th of May. Several attempts had been made to blow up the ship there, one of which was nearly successful. No military operations could be undertaken before October, owing to the heat of the weather.

Obituary.

Died in Casco, Me., May 5, 1857, Mary L., daughter of Isaiah and Rosella C. Hall, aged one month.

She bloomed but for a day, and left her dear parents to mourn. They do not mourn, however, as those who have no hope, but can say with a full soul,

"Sleep, dearest babe, till Jesus comes
To resurrect thy dust;
And then we hope to meet again,
Where all will be at rest.

Soon our dear child we hope to greet,
On that eternal shore,
Where we will join the happy throng,
And meet to part no more"

May the Lord bless the dear parents, and help them to be in readiness to meet the little one where death shall never enter. The funeral was attended by the writer. Text, Job 14: 14. JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Campmeeting at North Wilbraham!

Our brethren abroad have made a demand on us, or rather have expressed a great desire for another "Independent Campmeeting" at North Wilbraham, Mass. What shall we do? Shall we respond to their desire? I think we must, or perhaps do more harm than good. We have concluded to commence the meeting on Monday the 31st day of August next. We give this timely notice that all who wish to attend such a meeting may arrange so to do.

We call this an Independent Campmeeting, because we intend that it shall be independent of all sectarianism and partyism. We invite all to attend it who are interested in, and love the immediate appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ. We expect at this meeting a general gathering of the "waiting ones." It seems to us that it cannot be otherwise, as this will be centrally located for the friends of the cause.

Come, Brethren and Sisters, in the Lord's name, help! Make all the preparation you consistently can to attend, we beseech you, for "is there not a cause?" We feel lonely and pilgrim-like, and it will be well to meet, and greet, and cheer each other once more on the journey. Will you come from the East, and West, and North, and South, and sit down once more in the anticipation of the kingdom?

The objects of this meeting are twofold.

1. To comfort and strengthen one another.
2. To endeavor to benefit, with the truth, all who will attend the meeting, who are not yet ready for the kingdom of God.

We shall expect each Brother and Sister at this meeting, to speak and act as he, or she may think God requires, with a view to the best good of all concerned. We desire no public debates or controversy, but let each speak independently of others, and in the spirit of Christ. It is the general desire of the friends that Bro. Munger be Superintendent of this meeting, inasmuch as his acquaintance with that part of the country and long experience in these matters render him the fittest person that can be selected. We can all confide in his integrity and faithfulness. We trust he will comply. We would say in conclusion, that it will be well for our friends in all parts, where they can, to associate and prepare tents and bedding, &c., for themselves, so as not generally to be dependent, as many individual cases must necessarily be. The cloth which is used for tents can be taken by the several families which purchase it, after the meeting, and be used for domestic purposes. In some cases, tents may be more cheaply hired. We will try to get the fare on the railroad from Boston to Wilbraham reduced, if possible, and thus help our Eastern friends; and should we succeed, will give notice in season. Perhaps other brethren will do the same on other railroads.

Get tickets for NORTH WILBRAHAM—the Camp-ground is near the North Wilbraham depot.

And now, Brethren and Sisters, we submit this matter to you in the Lord. Act right.

EDWIN BURNHAM,
For the Brethren.

P. S. Provision for man and beast will be made as usual. E. B.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

JOHN CHAPMAN,
In behalf of the Brethren.

Brother Burnham, please answer by letter, and also through the Crisis. My post office address is Magog, C. E. J. C.

I cannot attend.—EDWIN BURNHAM.

DISCUSSION.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 18, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

Eld. D. B. Wyatt appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sunday, 19th inst., Providence permitting.

Exeter, Advent Chapel, July 25th and 26th. Time of worship on Saturday, 5 o'clock, P. M.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Carmel, Me., Saturday eve., 6 P. M., Aug. 8th
" " Sunday, Aug. 9th
Bangor, Me., Wednesday eve., Aug. 12th
Hermon, Me., Saturday, Aug. 15th
" " Sunday, Aug. 16th
L. BOUTELL.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 2d. M. GRANT.

Providence permitting, Bro. Albert Fox will meet with the brethren at the School House, near Wells' Forge, Mass., July 19th

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach in Auburn, N. H., July 26th

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

Elder E. Burnham appoints to preach in
Salem, Mass., Third Sunday in July
Lowell, Mass., Fourth Sunday in July

The Lord willing, I will preach the word as follows:—
Lawrence, Mass., July 15th
Auburn, N. H., where Brn. Welsh or Robie may think best, July 16th
Roxbury, Mass., July 17th
Boston, Mass., Lord's day, July 19th
Providence, R. I., July 20th
River Point, where Br. H. Taylor appoints, July 21st
Fairhaven, Mass., July 25th
Elder S. S. BREWER.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Granby, Mass., Sunday, July 19th
D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in the following places:
Collinsville, Ct., Thursday, July 16th
Winsted, Friday, July 17th
Newfield, Sunday, July 19th
Litchfield Station, July 20th
Bro. Humphreyville's, July 21st
Plymouth Hollow, July 2d
Bristol, Thursday, July 23d
Hartford, Friday, July 24th
South Hampton, Long Island, N. Y., Sunday, July 26th, if the Brethren meet me at Sag Harbor, on Saturday, when the boat arrives.
Peacedale, (as Bro. Dixon may arrange,) July 28th and 29th
Appanauge, (will the Brn. meet me at Appanauge depot?) Thursday, July 30th
River Point, (where Bro. Taylor appoints,) Friday, July 31st
Providence, Sunday, Aug. 2d. Third meeting where Bro C. O. Towne may appoint,—perhaps with Bro Osler's charge.
Roxbury, Mass., Monday evening, Aug. 3d
Boston, Tuesday evening, Aug. 4th
Worcester, (at Bro. D. T. Taylor's charge,) Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th

If these appointments interfere with others, please notify me before I arrive. These are not decrees,—only propositions.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Bro. R. R. York appoints to preach at
Flying Point, July 19th
East Gray, July 26th
Brunswick, Aug. 2d
South Gray, Aug. 9th

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at the 1st Baptist (colored) Church in South Kingston, Saturday evening, Aug. 1st

Twice the following Sunday, Aug. 2d, at the Advent Chapel, Peace Dale, and in the evening at the Colored Church above named.

For the Brn., J. T. DIXON.

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at
Hillsborough, N. H., July 19th
Danbury, N. H., July 26th
Warner, N. H., Aug. 2d

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at East Weare, in the Free Meeting House, July 19th
Canterbury, in the Town Hall, July 26th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Dover, N. H., Friday and Saturday evenings, July 17 and 18, and over the Sabbath.

M. GRANT.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Buffalo, N. Y., Wednesday evening, July 22d
Rochester, July 26th
Canandaigua, (evening,) July 27th
Syracuse, (evening,) July 28th
Clay, evening, (meet me at Brewerton, morning stage,) July 29th
Albany, N. Y., (evening,) July 30th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Lake Village, N. H., July 26th

The Lord willing, I will preach the word at
Lincolnville, (Young Town School House,) at 5 P. M., Wednesday, July 15th
South Hope, where the Brethren prefer, at 5 P. M., Thursday, July 16th
Damariscotta, Br. J. Campbell's, Friday, July 17th
Round Pond, (evening,) at Br. Stephen Harding's, Saturday, July 18th
Round Pond, (Union Meeting House,) 3d and 4th Sabbath in July.
THOS. SMITH.

A Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a tent meeting in North Dana, commencing Thursday, August 6th, and holding over the Sabbath, of believers in the primitive faith of the church; viz., the personal coming of our Lord, and the literal resurrection of the dead, and the restitution of the earth, and in making ready a people for these great events by taking the new covenant of Jesus Christ, in all its parts, without addition or diminution, for the basis of church building and government, as the only law by which the temporal, civil and ecclesiastical affairs of all the members of the body are to be regulated and governed.

We invite the lovers of truth to come and unite in laboring with us in this good and best of all causes. With us christian character is a test of fellowship, and that to be gained, as Peter says, by being begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

Some of God's servants will be present to preach the word. We invite all classes to come and hear, and then judge. Prove all things and hold fast that which is good. For the Brethren,

D. E. MOULTON.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

N. Bennett 104, P. Pilcher 122, S. Blake 122, E. W. Hall 130, B. R. Clark 117, J. Woodard 131, M. Whitaker 122, T. Tryon 117, A. Wait 117, M. D. Richardson 91, E. Hall 122, A. D. Waldron 122, J. Pinkins 108, J. B. Young 121, S. Roice 116, E Bemis 76, J. Spaulding 130, D. Young 123, F. F. Farnsworth 123, Tryphena D. Metcalf 123, E. M. Lee 112, A. Soule 118, T. Waters 104, J. Clothey 123, Mary Fogg 117, E. B. Knapp 125, $1 each.

W. Gilmore 156, A. K. Warner 130, J. Atkins 130, $2 each.

J. Burley 134, Mary J. White 104, E. B. Tallmadge 104, 50 cents each.

H. T. White 123, $3; J. Hooker 130, 82 cents; E. Baker 120, 80 cents; Mrs. R. J. Fowler 110, 51 cents; S. Guild 96, $1.54; H. W. Dann 113, $1.52.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—J. Hooker $1.18; C. P. Thorn 18 cents; U. Smith 12 cents; C. Boutwell $1; E. Baker 20 cents; J. Burley 50 cents; H. W. Dann 48 cents; Miss Belle Phelps 16 cents.

BOOKS SENT.—U. Smith, Ezra Baker, C. Boutwell, C. P. Thorn, J. Hooker, C. Doane, Miss Belle Phelps, H. W. Dann.

Geo. L. Teeple's P. O. address is Arlington, Sibley Co., M. T.

B. P. Manning's P. O. address is Oil Mill Village, N. H.

Bro. Thomas Wiswell—The dollar credited to "R. Bedd" in the Crisis of June 17 was intended for R. BEDEL.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

DEATH NOT LIFE.—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a biographical sketch, or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Millennium—State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 3 cents single copy; $2 per hundred. —Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

MARY OF BETHANY.

She looked upon the brother loved,
So late from death restored,
And sought her grateful love to tell
To Him, their friend and Lord.
And precious ointment she hath brought,
In alabaster held,—
O the deep, tender, trusting love
In that one act revealed!

Meekly she poured it on his head—
Those costly odors sweet—
And knelt with her long tresses fair
To wipe his sacred feet.
And what to her the murmuring
Of those who round her stood?
She heard but that approving voice—
"She hath done what she could."

"The lavished gift she ought," they said,
"Unto the poor impart;"
He owned it meek love's offering,
That dwelt in a pure heart.
Oh, faithful one, devoutly thus
Thy Lord anointing now,
Dost know they'll bind the thorn-wreath soon
Upon that holy brow?

Those feet, thou'st gently touched to-day,
Where tear and kiss have been,
Will bear a bleeding nail-print soon,
When held by cruel men!
And thou wilt weep beneath the cross,
And watch beside the tomb;
And mocked will be thy tears and grief,
In that dread hour of gloom.

Yet, favored Mary, yet again
At those dear feet thou'lt bow,
And view with glad, adoring love,
A glory-crowned brow.
And O, that I beside thee then
A worshiper may be,
And hear that voice, and share that smile,
To all eternity.

MARIA T.

For the Crisis.

OUR ETERNAL HOME.

TUNE.—"We have heard."

We have heard of the realms of paradise,
Where the saints shall ever dwell,
Where shall be no wickedness or vice,
But love shall all propel.
There the glory shall be ever seen,
And the tree of life in bloom,
The river of life pure and serene,
And all devoid of gloom.

We have heard about our eternal home,
Where the saints shall die no more;
Through the realms of glory we will roam,
When our journey shall be o'er.
We will play upon celestial harps,
And wave an immortal palm;
What melody will fill our hearts,
As we sing the angels' psalm.

We have heard of the new Jerusalem,
From the heavens to descend;
There is seen the throne of the holy Lamb,
And his reign shall never end.
There the prophets and apostles too,
Shall celebrate his praise;—
While golden ages onward flow,
We bask in the smiles of his face.

W. SHELDON.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Christian's Desire.

"To be with Christ" is the deep and abiding desire of every living soul. Hours of prosperity may shine on the christian's pathway, friends may gather at his side, he may dwell amid the fairest scenes of earth, still his affections are on things above—his treasure and his heart are there, and he himself would dwell with him, whom having not seen he loves. The sons of Zebedee desired to dwell with Christ, when they asked to sit one on his right hand and the other on his left in his kingdom. Peter felt this desire when on the mount he beheld in vision, his glorified Lord, and craved permission to make three tabernacles and abide there. The meek heart of the faithful Mary cherished this desire, when, in forgetfulness of worldly concerns, she sat at the Master's feet to hear his words. The dying penitent on the cross uttered this desire in the prayer—"Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Paul, amid the buffetings, toils and trials of his Apostolic life, while suffering joyfully for the name of Jesus of Nazareth and his church, expressed himself as "having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ." And how much the beloved John must have longed to lean again on that bosom where once in the confidence of sacred friendship he reclined. His own words declare it when, to the declaration, "behold I come quickly," he breathes the response,—"even so, come Lord Jesus."

How many thousand hearts that have found peace in believing through ages that have rolled away, have throbbed and glowed with the holy desire till the chill touch of death has stilled their beating; but the last out-gushing of life's ebbing fount told their longing "to be with Christ" and their God has promised,—"the desire of the righteous shall be granted." Yes, when the last trump shall startle their slumbering dust, they will spring from each low resting-place, and the last thought of the fainting, dying soul will be the first word on the immortal tongue—that thought, that name—Jesus!

And to-day ten thousand hearts scattered over the wide earth, over mountains, vale and sea, amid the glare of the world's vain pomp and pleasure, amid scenes of wretchedness and crime, amid toil and turmoil, and care, from the bed of sickness, from the couch of the dying, from the tomb of the buried, from human ills and fears, from sin, and pain, and death, look up to the intervening heavens, echoing the cry that comes wailing down the stream of time, from the lonely Isle of Patmos, rising ever to the ear of their absent king—"come Lord Jesus."

Yes, there are those to-day—too few though they may be, that love the Son of God, believe in him, and wait for his coming, desiring to be with Christ. Why should they not? When they see him they shall be like him. When they awake in his likeness they shall be satisfied. They "suffer with him," they would "reign with him." And to them that look for him he will appear; to those who wait he will come, but we may not go to him. He left no shining footsteps on the trackless air that may guide us from Bethany to his Father's throne; no swift-winged Angel comes down to bear us thither, nor wish, nor prayer may make void his words—"whither I go, ye cannot come," but we may believe and rest on the blessed promise, "if I go away, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." The church must wait the appointed hour of re-union with her Head, when our Lord himself shall descend from heaven with all his Father's dazzling train, and angels catch us away to meet him in the air. Thus shall we, with Paul, with all the innumerable elect host, depart to be with Christ, to be forever with the Lord.

"Forever with the Lord,
Amen! so let it be!
Life from the dead is in that word,
'Tis IMMORTALITY!'

MARIA T.

Cold Spring, Mass, June 22d., 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Desire of Nations.

What elements of the future will elicit the prayer of the people of God—"come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly?" And what principle of administration make the "Son and heir of David" the "desire of all nations," who is to come when God shall fill his "house with glory," and the "knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill he earth as the waters cover the sea?"

The coming of the Lord Jesus Christ must be the hope of the nations—of the world, for salvation; and here salvation cannot come without destruction. The elements must be subjected to a reacting, overwhelming, absorbing, revolutionizing, rebuilding power—to come forth anew. This the nations may not apprehend, but the chosen will.

The world—nations who shall worship Him, and bring their glory and honor to Jerusalem (New) with all the left of the nations, will not be the nations in their present form. There must be a change, and destruction upon destruction now determined and then accomplished, will witness the breaking up of national establishments, the passing away of the old, that the new may come in. He has been the desire of all the good of all nations in all time, and he is the desire, and his kingdom the desired exhibition of all his saints of every land now.

But I fully believe there is another sense in which the nations will desire him. It is briefly this. The elements of evil, turmoil, disruption and revolution, knowing no bound, and stopping at no limit whatever, will, however—some of them may have begun well—baffle all attempts at reduction and subjugation on the part of governments. Laws will be overridden and trampled under foot on the one hand, and be tyrannical, unjust and abominable on the other. War and strife will rage; political elements be upheaved; long established and time honored institutions uptorn at the foundation; states dismembered; peace and quiet gone from the nations and from the world. Then will men desire peace and righteous administration.

Thus they desire Christ to come! Merely for the peace the world might have. He is the desire of nations—THE PRINCE OF PEACE! Hope of the flock!! Rejected hope of the world!!!

DALETH.

Is not every face beautiful in our eyes, which habitually turns towards us, with affectionate, guileless smiles?

Choice Selections.

From the Athens Post.

TRUST IN PROVIDENCE.

BY MRS. GIERLOW.

Lord of my life! I give this weary heart,
With all its cares, its griefs and pains, to thee.
Thou knowest all things, and for me the cup
Of good and ill Thou hast in love prepared!
I drink the mixture, though it give me pain,
Confiding, Great Physician, in thy skill!
A stranger, far from my beloved home,
Be thou, O God! my friend and portion here;
Lay underneath the Everlasting Arms,
And let me ever feel that Thou art nigh.
I mourn the loss of loved ones gone, alas!
How many tears I shed o'er withered hopes
And blighted joys! But, thou canst comfort me.
The precious jewels are not lost which Thou
Didst lend awhile to cheer this aching heart:
Thou hast them now, to polish and refine,
And they shall sparkle yet in that bright crown
Which Thou, my Savior, hast in store for me!
Methinks I hear Thee say: "Weep not! thy dead
Shall live again—no more to suffer pain,
No more to weep, and never more to die!"
Yea, in Thy word I read that sundered friends
Shall meet in that glad day; that clouds shall not Obscure, nor night succeed. With eyes undimmed
They shall behold Thy face, and stand complete
In Thine own righteousness arrayed, and sweep
Their golden lyres in notes of praise. How sweet
Will be the song of that celestial throng:
"Worthy the Lamb, who died, us to redeem
By His most precious blood!"
O God! once more
I give myself to Thee! Be thou my guide,
My sure defence till time and toil shall cease,
And then, O Righteous Father! take me home.

From the Christian Herald, August, 1832.

A. Judson's Letter.

To the Female Members of Christian Churches in the United States of America.

DEAR SISTERS IN CHRIST:—Excuse my publicly addressing you. The necessity of the case is my only apology. Whether you will consider it a sufficient apology for the sentiments of this letter, unfashionable, I confess, and perhaps unpalatable, I know not. We are sometimes obliged to encounter the hazard of offending those, whom of all others we desire to please. Let me throw myself at once on your mercy, dear sisters, allied by national consanguinity; professors of the same holy religion, fellow pilgrims to the same happy world. Pleading these endearing ties, let me beg you to regard me as a brother, and to listen with candor and forbearance to my honest tale.

In raising up a church of Christ in this heathen land, and in laboring to elevate the minds of the female converts to the standard of the gospel, we have always found one chief obstacle in that principle of vanity, that love of dress and display (I beg you will bear with me,) which has, in every age and in all countries, been a ruling passion of the fair sex, as the love of riches, power and fame, has characterized the other. That obstacle lately became more formidable, through the admission of two or three fashionable females into the church; and the arrival of several Missionary sisters, dressed and adorned in that manner which is too prevalent in our beloved native land. On my meeting the church, after a year's absence, I beheld an appalling profusion of ornaments, and saw that the demon of vanity was laying waste the female department. At that time I had not maturely considered the subject, and did not feel sure what ground I ought to take. I apprehended also, that I should be unsupported and perhaps opposed by some of my coadjutors. I confined my efforts, therefore, to private exhortation, and with but little effect. Some of the ladies, out of regard to their pastor's feelings, took off their necklaces and ear-ornaments, before they entered the chapel, tied them up in a corner of their handkerchiefs, and on returning, as soon as they were out of the Mission house, stopped in the middle of the street to array themselves anew.

In the mean time, I was called to visit the Karens, a wild people, several days' journey to the north of Maulmein. Little did I expect there to encounter the same enemy, in those "wilds, horrid and dark with o'ershadowing trees." But I found that he had been there before me, and reigned with a peculiar sway, from time immemorial. On one Karen woman, I counted between twelve and fifteen necklaces of all colors, sizes and materials. Three was the average. Brass belts above the ancles, neat braids of black hair tied below the knees, rings of all sorts on the fingers, bracelets on the wrists and arms, long instruments of some metal, perforating the lower part of the ear, by an immense aperture, and reaching nearly to the shoulders, fancifully constructed bags, inclosing the hair, and suspended from the back part of the head, not to speak of the ornamental parts of their clothing, constituted the fashion and the ton of the fair Karenesses. The dress of the female converts was not essentially different from that of their country women. I saw that I was brought into a situation that precluded all retreat,—that I must fight or die.

For a few nights I spent some sleepless hours, distressed by this and other subjects, which will always press upon the heart of a Missionary in a new place. I considered the spirit of the religion of Jesus Christ. I opened to 1 Tim. ii. 9, and read these words of the inspired apostle: "I will also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array." I asked myself, Can I baptize a Karen woman in her present attire? No. Can I administer the Lord's Supper to one of the baptized in that attire? No. Can I refrain from enforcing the prohibition of the apostle? Not without betraying the trust I have received from him. Again I considered, that the question concerned not the Karens only, but the whole christian world; that its decision would involve a train of unknown consequences; that a single step would lead me into a long and perilous way.

I considered Maulmein and the other stations; I considered the state of the public at home. But "what is that to thee? follow thou me," was the continual response, and weighed more than all. I renewedly offered myself to Christ, and prayed for strength to go forward in the path of duty, supported or deserted, successful or defeated in the ultimate issue.

Soon after coming to this conclusion, a Karen woman offered herself for baptism. After the usual examination, I inquired whether she could give up her ornaments for Christ? It was an unexpected blow! I explained the spirit of the gospel. I appealed to her own consciousness of vanity. I read the apostle's prohibition. She looked again and again at her handsome necklace (she wore but one,) and then with an air of modest decision, that would adorn, beyond all outward ornaments, any of my sisters whom I have the honor of addressing, she took it off, saying, I love Christ more than this. The news began to spread. The christian women made but little hesitation. A few others opposed, but the work went on.

At length, the evil which I most dreaded came upon me. Some of the Karen men had been to Maulmein, and seen what I wished they had not. And one day, when we were discussing the subject of ornaments, one of the christians came forward in my face, and declared, that at Maulmein he had actually seen one of the great female teachers wearing a string of gold beads around her neck!!!

Lay down this paper, dear sister, and sympathize a moment with your fallen Missionary. Was it not a hard case? Was it not cruel for that sister, thus to smite down to the dust her poor brother, who, without that blow, was hardly able to keep his ground? But she knew it not. She was not aware of the mischief she was doing. However, though cast down, I was not destroyed; though sorely bruised and wounded, I endeavored to maintain the warfare as well as I could. After some conflict, the enemy left the field, and when I left those parts, the female converts were, generally speaking, arrayed in modest apparel.

On arriving at Maulmein, and partially recovering from a fever which I had contracted in the Karen woods, the first thing I did was to crawl out to the house of the patroness of the gold beads. To her I related my adventures,—to her commiseration I commended my grief. With what ease and truth too, could that sister reply, Notwithstanding these beads, I dress more plain than most ministers' wives and professors of religion in our native land. These beads are the only ornament I wear; they were given me when quite a child, by a dear mother, whom I never expect to see again (another hard case;) and she enjoined it on me never to part with them as long as I lived, but to wear them as a memorial of her! O ye christian mothers, what a lesson you have before you. Can you, dare you give injunctions to your daughters, directly contrary to apostolic commands? But to the honor of my sister, be it recorded, that as soon as she understood the merit of the case, and the mischief done by such example, off went the gold beads; and she gave decisive proof that she loved Christ more than father or mother. Her example, united with the efforts of the rest of us at this station, is beginning to exercise a redeeming influence in the female department of the church.

But notwithstanding these favorable signs, nothing, really nothing is yet done. And why? This Mission and all others must be sustained by continual supplies of missionaries, male and female, from the mother country. Your sisters and daughters will continually come out to take the place of those who are removed by death, and to occupy numberless stations still unoccupied. And when they arrive, they will be dressed in their usual way, as christian women at home are dressed. And the female converts will run around them, and gaze upon them, with the most prying curiosity, regarding them as the freshest representations of the christian religion, from that land where it flourishes in all its purity and glory. And when they see the gold and jewels pendant from their ears, the beads and chains encircling their necks, the finger rings set with diamonds and rubies, the rich variety of ornamental head dress, "the mantles and the wimples and the crisping pins," (see the rest in Isaiah 3d chap.) they will cast a bitter, reproachful, triumphant glance at their old teachers, and spring with fresh avidity to repurchase and resume their long neglected elegancies;—the cheering news will fly up to the Dah-gyaing, the Laing-bwai, and the Sal-wen;—the Karenesses will reload their necks and ears, and arms and ancles;—and when after another year's absence, I return and take my seat before the Burmese or the Karen church, I shall behold the demon of vanity enthroned in the centre of the assembly, more firmly than ever, grinning defiance to the prohibitions of apostles, and the exhortations of us who would fain be their humble followers. And thus you, my dear sisters, sitting quietly by your firesides, or repairing devoutly to your places of worship, do, by your example, spread the poison of vanity through all the rivers, and mountains, and wilds of this far distant land; and while you are sincerely and fervently praying for the upbuilding of the Redeemer's kingdom, are inadvertently building up that of the devil. If, on the other hand, you divest yourself of all meretricious ornaments, your sisters and daughters who come hither will be divested of course; the further supplies of vanity and pride will be cut off; and the churches at home being kept pure, the churches here will be pure also.

Dear Sisters,—Having finished my tale, and therein exhibited the necessity under which I lay of addressing you, I beg leave to submit a few topics to your candid and prayerful consideration.

1. Let me appeal to conscience, and inquire, what is the real motive for wearing ornamental and costly apparel? Is it not the desire of setting off one's person to the best advantage, and of exciting the love and admiration of others? Is not such dress calculated to gratify self-love, to cherish the sentiments of vanity and pride? And is it not the nature of these sentiments to acquire strength from indulgence? Do such motives and sentiments comport with the meek, humble, self-denying religion of Jesus Christ? I would here respectfully suggest, that these questions will not be answered so faithfully in the midst of company, as when quite alone kneeling before God.

2. Consider the words of the apostle quoted above from 1 Tim. 2: 9,—"I will also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness, and sobriety, not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array." I do not quote a similar command recorded in 1 Pet. 3: 3, because the verbal construction is not quite so definite, though the import of the two passages is the same. But cannot the force of these passages be evaded? Yes, and nearly every command in scripture can be evaded, and every doctrinal assertion perverted, plausibly and handsomely, if we set about it in good earnest. But preserving the posture above alluded to, with the inspired volume spread open at the passage in question, ask your hearts in simplicity and godly sincerity, whether the meaning is not just as plain as the sun at noon-day. Shall we then bow to the authority of an inspired apostle, or shall we not? From that authority shall we appeal to the prevailing usages and fashions of the age? If so, please to recall the missionaries you have sent to the heathen; for the heathen can vindicate all their superstitions on the same ground.

O christian sisters, believers in God, in Christ, in a heaven and a hell! and can you hesitate and ask what you shall do? Bedew those ornaments with the tears of contrition; consecrate them to the cause of charity; hang them on the cross of your dying Lord. Delay not an instant. Hasten, with all your might, if not to make reparation for the past, at least to prevent a continuance of the evil in future. And be not content with individual exertion. Remember that union is strength. Take an example from the temperance societies, which are rising in their might, and rescuing a nation from the brink of destruction.

Unite, christian sisters, of all denominations, and make an effort to rescue the church of God from the insidious attacks of an enemy which is devouring her very vitals. As a counter part to the societies just mentioned, may I respectfully suggest that Plain Dress Societies be formed in every city and village throughout the land, recognizing two fundamental principles,—the one based on 1 Tim. 2: 9,—all ornaments and costly dress to be disused; the other on the law of general benevolence,—the avails of such articles, and the savings resulting from the plain dress system to be devoted to purposes of charity. Some general rules in regard to dress, and some general objects of charity may be easily ascertained and settled. Minor points must of course be left to the conscience of each individual. Yet free discussion will throw light on many points at first obscure. Be not deterred by the suggestions, that in such discussions you are conversant about small things. Great things depend on small; and in that case, things which appear small to short-sighted man, are great in the sight of God. Many there are, who praise the principle of self-denial in general, and condemn it in all its particular applications as too minute, scrupulous and severe. Satan is well aware that if he can secure the minute units, the sum total will be his own. Think not any thing small which may have a bearing upon the kingdom of Christ, and upon the destinies of eternity. How easy to conceive, from many known events, that the single fact of a lady's divesting herself of a necklace, for Chrst's sake, may involve consequences which shall be felt in the remotest parts of the earth, and in all future generations to the end of time; yea, stretch away into a boundless eternity, and be a subject of praise millions of ages after this world and all its ornaments are burned up.

Beware of another suggestion made by weak and erring souls, who will tell you that there is more danger of being proud of plain dress and other modes of self-denial, than of fashionable attire and self-indulgence. Be not ensnared by this last, most finished, most insidious device of the great enemy. Rather believe, that He who enables you to make a sacrifice, is able to keep you from being proud of it. Believe that he will kindly permit such occasions of mortification and shame, as will preserve from the evil threatened. The severest path of self-denial consists in encountering the disapprobation, the envy, the hatred of one's dearest friends. All who enter the strait and narrow path in good earnest, soon find themselves in a climate extremely uncongenial to the growth of pride.

The gay and fashionable will in many cases be the last to engage in this holy undertaking. But let none be discouraged on that account. Christ has seldom honored the leaders of worldly fashion by appointing them leaders in this cause. Fix it in your hearts, that in this warfare the Lord Jesus Christ expects every woman to do her duty! There is probably not one in the humblest walks of life but would, on strict examination, find some article which might be dispensed with for purposes of charity, and ought to be dispensed with, in compliance with the apostolic command. Wait not, therefore, for the fashionable to set an example; wait not for one another; listen not to the news from the next town; but let every individual go forward, regardless of reproach, fearless of consequences. The eye of Christ is upon you. Death is hastening to strip you of your ornaments, and to turn your fair forms into corruption and dust. Many of those for whom this letter is designed, will be laid in the grave before it can ever reach their eyes. We shall all soon appear before the judgment seat of Christ, to be tried for our conduct, and to receive the things done in the body. Will you then wish, that in defiance of his authority you had adorned your mortal bodies with gold, and precious stones, and costly attire, cherishing self-love, vanity and pride? Or will you wish that you had chosen a life of self-denial, renounced the world, taken up the cross daily and followed him? And as you will then wish you had done, DO NOW.

Dear Sisters, your affectionate brother in Christ,

A. JUDSON.

Maulmein, Oct., 1831.

For the Children.

For the Crisis.

NOT THINKING.

What is it often gives us pain
We did not see a thing so plain,
And have to do the same again?
Not thinking.

What makes the heart of others bleed,
So often by a word or deed,
Of which in truth there was no need?
Not thinking.

Why is so much of evil done,
And why so often good undone,
And prizes lost that might be won?
Not thinking.

Why do we sometimes do, or say,
Something that leads the weak astray,
Or strengthens sinners in their way?
Not thinking.

Why do our plans so often fail,
Then leaving us so weak and frail,
Just as we thought success to hail?
Not thinking.

Why do the tears of sorrow flow,
So long before we deign to go
And strive to soothe another's woe?
Not thinking.

How shall we then amend our ways,
And shun the same in other days,
And for reproof, thus merit praise?
By thinking.

So shall we do more good by day;
And if we walk the narrow way,
Our nights more sweetly pass away—
By thinking.

S. BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Vt.

A Brave Boy.

I was sitting by the window in the second story of one of the large boarding houses at Saratoga Springs, thinking of absent friends, when I heard shouts of children from the piazza beneath me.

"O, yes, that's capital! so we will! Come on now! There's William Hale! Come on, William, we are going to have a ride on the circular railway. Come with us."

"Yes, if my mother is willing. I will run and ask her," replied William.

"Oh, oh! so you must run to ask your ma. Great baby—run along and ask your ma! Ain't you ashamed? I didn't ask my mother."

"Nor I,—nor I," added half a dozen voices.

"Be a man, William," cried the first speaker.

"Come along with us if you don't wish to be called a coward as long as you live. Don't you see we are all waiting?"

I leaned forward to catch a view of the children, and saw William standing, with one foot advanced, and his hand firmly clenched, in the midst of the group. He was a fine subject for a painter just at that moment. His flushed brow, flashing eye, compressed lip and changing cheek, all told how that word coward was rankling in his breast. Will he prove himself indeed one, by yielding to them? thought I. It was with breathless interest I listened for his answer, for I feared that the evil principle in his heart would be stronger than the good. But no.

"I will not go without I ask my mother," said the noble boy, his voice trembling with emotion, "and I am no coward either. I promised her I would not go from the house without her permission, and I should be a base coward if I were to tell her a wicked lie."

There was something commanding in his tone, which made the noisy children mute. It was the power of a strong soul over the weaker, and they involuntarily yielded him the tribute of respect.

I saw him in the evening among the gathered multitude in the parlor. He was walking by his mother's side, a stately matron, clad in widow's weeds. It was with evident pride she looked on her graceful boy, whose face was one of the finest I ever saw, fairly radiant with animation and intelligence. Well might she proud of such a son—one who could dare to do right, when all were tempting to the wrong.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store. | Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1857. WHOLE NO. 99. VOL. V. NO. 21

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year - - -	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months - - -	1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - -	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months -	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months -	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES AT THE GRAVE.

Written on the death of Dr. Wm. M. G., and respectfully dedicated to his surviving sister, by a stranger.

Though sorrow bow thy bleeding heart,
And deepest woes thy thoughts employ;
Yet God can love and peace impart,
And turn thy mourning into joy.

Weep not! lo! on the passing storm,
The iris' radiant arch is hung;
So over thee in grief forlorn,
Hope's bow of glory now is flung.

Weep not! for free from woe or care,
The dead "in Jesus" now are blest;
No pains disturb their slumbers there,
No griefs intrude upon their rest.

Weep not! beyond death's gloomy reign,
A day of holy light shall break;
When sundered friends shall meet again,
For sleeping saints in joy shall wake.

Weep not! O bear thy heavy woe,
And lay it at the Savior's throne;
So when earth's griefs no more we know,
Thou shalt have joy, and joy alone.

H. L. H.

Honeoye, N. Y., April 25th, 1856.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Spiritualism.

BRO. GRANT:—Spiritualism, as developed at the present day, is undoubtedly one of the great errors, or perils, of which we are not only to take heed ourselves, but to warn those on every side, as we have opportunity, that they may not be led away, and be so deceived by it, as to forfeit eternal life.

Just as the all-important truth of life only through Christ is being developed, and finding its way through the mists of tradition and blindness to the hearts of God's people, the great Adversary rouses himself, and combining all the wisdom and experience he has been accumulating for six thousand years, takes this weapon of Spiritualism, against the two-edged, blazing sword of Jehovah—Eternal Truth! And he is fighting boldly.

You are probably aware that there have been crowded audiences gathered recently in the city of New York, to listen to the celebrated medium, Mrs. Hatch, as she answered various questions proposed by a committee. The following extract on the "Raising of the dead," wherein the power of our Redeemer is attributed simply to psychology or magnetism, seems so utterly repugnant to all true faith, and, in short, is such open infidelity, that I would fain raise my voice in trumpet tones to warn the world against such delusion. Many are saying that our blessed doctrine of Life through Christ alone tends to infidelity; but is it not the immortal soul doctrine that is doing it? This Spiritualism is surely a branch from that same root, and is spreading itself fearfully over all our land. God grant that we may hold fast to his word in these days of peril.

A. C. J.

Victor, N. Y.

THE RAISING OF THE DEAD.

Question 20.—How are we to interpret the accounts of the raising of the dead in the New Testament, that of Lazarus, Jairus' daughter, &c.?

Mrs. H.—Lazarus, like Mary and Martha, was an intimate friend and associate of Jesus. It was very natural that when Jesus approached the grave of his friend, he should exclaim, "Lazarus is dead;" but the principles of nature forbid the idea that after the spirit has actually departed, the lifeless form can ever be re-animated. Death signifies a want of action, and if there is really death, there can be no resuscitation; but in the records of medical science you have many well authenticated instances of the spirit withdrawing its functions, so that there is an appearance of death, which may be removed by the application of proper medical means to restore animation. What follows? That Jesus in the unfoldings of his nature possessed that power over the elements which medical men obtain by the aid of science, and by means of his psychology or magnetism, as it is called at the present day, which was his power over mind, he recalled the spirit of his friend which had temporarily withdrawn its functions by reason of spiritual unharmony, or what you please. The body is said to have lain in the tomb many days, and it is given as the opinion of the writer, or rather of those who went with Jesus at the grave, that decay had already commenced, though it is not asserted positively that such was the case. None are prepared to say that life might not be recalled, where perfect power exists, except in cases where absolute decay had occurred. Elijah, in the perfection of his unfoldments, might have the same power, but not to the same degree. So in this century there have been many instances of persons supposed to be really dead, who have been resuscitated by this same power, this same unfoldment of the power of will in harmony with nature. In the case of Jairus' daughter, he himself said that she was not dead, but asleep. Possessing this perfect power, he at once perceived the condition of the woman.

Question 21.—Then, is that power attainable by all men, though in a lesser degree?

Mrs. H.—Inasmuch as Jesus was the son of God, he possessed all the elements of manhood, as manifested in the external form; and as in the unfoldment of his natural form, all was in harmony with his spiritual, he was the greatest and most perfect manifestation of the divine manhood that ever existed. But, inasmuch as he was the son of the same God manhood, in its distinct and positive essence, whether in the form of a man of the nineteenth century or of one of the past ages, may possess the same elements of external combination, and in its unfoldings may manifest and exercise the same, or a similar power.

For the Crisis.

The Fault Finding Preacher.

No. II.

"I wish people could ever appreciate!" "I have taken great pains to prepare a discourse, and now nobody seems to apprehend the meaning, or properly estimate the effort." Well now! Did you preach just as well as you could under the circumstances? Did you try to make it all plain, and do the church good, and awaken sinners too? Have you no fault to find with yourself? "No." Well, then don't grumble! Christ sent you to preach, not with another man's eloquence—not with a philosopher's power of analysis, but with your own ability, aided by his grace. If you have done it in his fear, 'tis a pity that good brother did not keep awake,—but it may not be your fault.

Then the criticism of friends and christians you should not find fault with, nor be troubled about the remarks and censures of enemies. Don't complain when you hit sinners, of any kind, that they are stirred up by it.

"But my people do not show respect." Really! Don't work with eye-service to gain respect. "But they sometimes interrupt me, and ask questions while I am speaking." Well, reply kindly. I have found that the best way. Christ did so when they insultingly said, "do we not well to say thou hast a devil?" "But it looks so!" Well, it may mortify pride! It does in some, I know that.

"But they came out to hear Elder —— much more than they did to hear me." Work away, Bro.! Keep steady at it! Attend to the Master's business—see if you do not have fruit. A few antics, some singular and odd movements in the street, will call a multitude together, at once collect a crowd; but the man who stands at the gate to point people the way, or hold up his red flag of warning, will not have many round him at a time; but a vast many are instructed. The porter has no business to stop people to hear what nice things he can say, or see motions he can make, but just show people where to go. A mountebank will have and hold more spectators than a minister.

"But they do not pay me!" It may not be your duty to stay there, or go there; if it is, don't grumble. "But I cannot live." Pray more. Work with hands some. Have done with muttering! "But I must have pay." How? Will you play auctioneer, or regular salesman? What are your little wares worth? Pay indeed! What have you, that you did not receive? and what do you expect, that God must not give? "The laborer is worthy of his hire." I know it. God will reward him. If you are going to "make merchandise," better estimate the trade, and take an account of stock.

"They will not come to any order." Will not? Are they christians? Then there is some order. Are they trying to become such? Then you must help them. And here, as everywhere else in this wide social world, muttering and grumbling, abusing your best friends, complaining about the ill deeds of others, will do but little good. Some will plague a grouty man for the mere love of doing it; when good nature will throw sunshine all around.

"But they are talking about me and my family." Is it possible? Are the bad things they say, true? "No." Thank God! Preach a little more gospel to them—a little plainer still! Take pains to make them christians, by word, and spirit, and prayer. May the Lord help us to be examples to the flock. Then we shall not be finding fault, but remedy the evil by truth, which, if it will not convert, will leave them.

"I went to my appointment on foot—got cold—lame—feet blistered—rode in the cold, snow, rain, or sun, in the 'paddy car,' with poor clothing," and a hundred etceteras. Tough, wasn't it? Sorry for you, brother. The older ones have done it many a time. But could you not glory a little? Think of Paul—of Jesus! You murmur! Oh, shame—be a man! He said, "be a good soldier." Will you? And whatever may be the cause of complaining, may the Lord help us to remember that we are men "of like passions," and shall have been most happy in our work if men have been converted; and successful, if we "save ourselves and those that hear us."

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

The Kingdom of God.

A FRAGMENT FROM THE WASTE PAPERS.

Having thus sketched the outline of the coast as delineated in the prophetic record, it remains for us to speak briefly of the future Kingdom of God. We look back upon the dark and stormy track over which the gospel ship has passed;—we survey the dark coast along which she has sailed through tribulations deep; we see her now threading the dangerous passage amid the perils of the last days, and beyond these, shut in from human view, is the land-locked harbor, the haven of eternal repose. The things that are seen, have passed in review before us, but the unseen! who can depict their glory? But the revealing Spirit has brought to our minds, through the prophetic word, some faint and feeble tokens of the glory that is in reserve for us. A few clusters of Eschol have excited our hopes, and the unfailing promises of God still cheer us onward. And now, while we have gazed backward o'er the stormy past, and have found out that the voyage is almost over, while around us everything betokens that land is just before us, we will strive by means of the prophetic telescope, to catch a few glimpses of the coming rest ere its full beaming glory shall burst upon our ravished eyes.

We find, then, that our place of destination is a kingdom, a restored and glorious kingdom. The voyage commenced with a dominion, (Gen. 1: 27.) and it ends in a kingdom where the first dominion (Micah 4: 8.) shall be restored. It commences with the kingdom perverted and cursed, but it ends in the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world. Matt. 25: 34. It is a kingdom, not anarchy, not a republic, but an absolute monarchy, where the will of the monarch is the law of the land; where his will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Matt. 6: 10. It is a kingdom for which we suffer. 2 Thess. 1: 5. It is a kingdom to which we are heirs. James 2: 5. It is a kingdom into which much tribulation conducts us, (Acts 14; 22.) and it is a kingdom into which we hope for such an abundant entrance. 2 Pet, 1: 11. And there are several particulars in which this kingdom differs from all the kingdoms which have occupied the coast along which we have been sailing.

FIRST: This is an "heavenly kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 18. Not that it is to be in heaven above, no, it is rather "under the whole heavens." Dan. 7: 27. But though it fill the whole earth, (Dan. 2: 35,) yet, it is an heavenly kingdom. Beneath the mild glory of the new heavens, and amid the resplendent beauty of the new earth, (2 Pet. 3: 13,) this kingdom shall be established, in the better country, that is, an heavenly. Heb. 11: 16. Our heavenly Father shall give this kingdom to the second Adam, the Lord from heaven. Dan. 7: 13, 14: 2 Cor. 15: 47. The multitude of the "heavenly host" shall be there, (Luke 2: 13; Matt. 25: 31,) and all the subjects of that kingdom, having been made partakers of the "heavenly calling" and tasted the "heavenly gift," (Heb. 3: 1; 6: 4,) shall forever bear the image of the heavenly Adam, (1 Cor. 15: 48, 49,) and shall enter with unspeakable delight the holy gates of the heavenly Jerusalem, (Heb. 12: 22,) which shall descend from God as the fit metropolis of the eternal kingdom. With such characteristics no wonder that this is termed an heavenly kingdom.

SECOND: This kingdom is a righteous kingdom. All the kingdoms on the coast behind us are full of sin and unrighteousness. It shall be in the New Earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. The king shall be "THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." Jer. 23: 6. "In righteousness doth he judge and make war." Rev. 19: 11. "His throne shall be established in righteousness." Prov. 25: 5. "A sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom." Heb. 1: 8. His "people shall be all righteous." Isa. 60: 21. And "then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Matt. 13: 43. The gates shall be opened that the "righteous nation" shall enter. Isa. 26: 2. "The righteous judgment of God" shall be revealed. Rom. 2: 5. "He shall judge the world with righteousness;" (Ps. 96: 13) and "in his days shall the righteous flourish." Ps. 72: 7. "They shall be called trees of righteousness." Isa. 61: 3. They shall be covered with "the robe of righteousness;" (Isa. 61: 10,) and the "Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations." Isa. 61: 10. "And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever." Isa. 32; 17.

THIRD: It shall be a glorious kingdom. Ps. 145: 11. Earth's kingdoms have been all shade; this is all sunshine. Of this kingdom, the territory shall be glorious, for the whole earth shall be one sea of glory. Num. 14: 10. Its King shall be the King of glory. Ps. 24: 7. He shall come with "power and great glory." Matt. 24; 30. And with the kingdom there shall be given him "dominion and glory." Dan. 7: 14. His appearing will be "glorious." Titus 2: 13. And when his glory shall be revealed, it shall cause "exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4: 13. The "glory of God" shall "lighten" that city. Rev. 21: 23. And those who have listened to "the glorious gospel," who have been "called to glory and virtue," who have rejoiced "in hope of the glory of God," (Rom. 5: 2,) who have been "sown in dishonor and raised in glory," (1 Cor. 15: 43,) who have sought for "glory. and honor, and immortality," (Rom. 2: 7.) shall appear with Christ in glory, (1 John 3: 4.) and receive a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, (2 Cor. 4: 17,) and a crown of glory that fadeth not away. 1. Pet. 5: 14.

Therefore, we receiving a kingdom so glorious, so righteous, so heavenly, let us have grace to serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. Let us seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all else shall be added. For us all these things are prepared and reserved. Let us strive to be found worthy of that kingdom, and share its glory at last.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

"Hobby Horse" Preaching.

The same story! The "end of all, and the be all." It may be a little varied in form and manner, but the one everlasting and unending theme appears. "It is a great truth!" I know it may be. "It is saving." "So much depends upon it." This may be, in part, from your apprehension, and not from fact; but if the particular subject be true—vastly important as truth—possibly it may be better to employ it in such a manner as not to produce satiety and disgust. Too great familiarity with the best things, sometimes causes loss of respect. So preaching upon one thing, good and true in itself, may produce unwillingness to listen, and fatigue—it becomes stale.

Some are accused of want of variety, and why? The tendency to dwell upon one subject from love for it, from the powerful effect of its discovery upon our own minds. And do we not all, or nearly all, have our "hobbies?" One man is devoted to a particular view; another to another, and with a people who, in the mode of their being, to say nothing of their birth, naturally become the devotees of a great truth, developed at a given time and by a particular instrumentality, and soon of another, &c.; so that two or three will constitute the circle-range of thought, how easily the preaching applied, becomes qualified by the one idea character. The people require it. The preacher feels the force of it, and preaches as he believes and as they believe." Bye and bye, it becomes a "hobby"—a song always "harped," and the very same congregation will complain that "our minister is very dull."

Now who is in blame? Answer that! Both parties. The preacher most. How? The people demanded such effort, and he gave it, and got on to his hobby—rocked and rolled—and there he was. He had the whole gospel to preach—should have done it. If they did not believe, the more need of speaking. The word of the gospel camp is, "Advance!"

The dragging of a few ideas always along, prevents study; prevents enlarged, amplified views. Jesus Christ said to the servant, "preach the gospel." Do it! Don't confine your effort to one big truth! If the responsibility of the improvement and advancement of the church rests with the ministry, and that is to be effected by every word of inspiration properly, and in a workmanlike manner presented, with illustration and application, will he sit there on his old hobby?"

C.

For the Crisis.

The Parable of the Ten Virgins.

Various opinions have been expressed relative to this interesting parable, the particulars of which I shall not go into here, but only express my own deep convictions of all that relates to it; for nothing can be more clear than that it was a prophecy, uttered by the Bridegroom himself, to be perfectly fulfilled at a certain period just preceding the day of judgment. I find a location or date for its commencement this side of "the falling tears," 1833; as it would neither be logical nor scriptural to date its beginning anterior to the development of the most prominent signs of his final coming, for till those signs were seen, or given, it could not begin, because by them we are apprised that his coming is immediate.

Since 1833 we have seen the budding fig-tree, the unmistakable sign of summer at hand; and he assures us, "when ye see these things come to pass, know that it is near, even at the doors." "This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." "Heaven and earth shall pass away; but my words shall not pass away." "But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. . . . Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." The parallel passages in Mark are as follows: "Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work; and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, (or the evening watch, which reached from six to nine o'clock,) or at midnight, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning. Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping." This admonition was very appropriate, just previous to A. D. 1840, when the little flock began to inquire, "Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?" Then "the Watchman said, the morning cometh, and also the night; if ye will inquire, inquire ye; return, come." At that time the feeder was feeding his flock; the smiter smiting his fellow-servant, emboldened by the delay of his Master; and then was the time to look for the fulfillment of the parable.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven (the professed subjects of the future kingdom of Christ,) be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the Bridegroom. And five of them were wise and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them; but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps." (I believe the Bible is the lamp, and the Holy Spirit the oil, the former of which is a dead letter without the latter.) It was then proclaimed as with a trumpet, "The morning cometh!" and consequently they went out to meet the Bridegroom; they needed no exhortation, for they were ready to go. There is no midnight cry here, for it is the beginning of the evening watch; and they are mistaken in thinking it morning. They expect him at the end of that watch, but lo! it is even, and not morning. The scene of the parabl[illegible] presented as being ful[illegible] or from the evening [illegible] morning watch. The ev[illegible] at nine o'clock, but the B[illegible] not come. The watchman had [illegible] the trumpet, saying, "The morning [illegible]eth!" but it was premature; though proclaimed with a spirit of love, it was a false alarm; the morning could not come till the night had passed away. They had hoped to see him, but were disappointed, and to them he seemed to tarry. They took their station on the watch-tower to learn what answer should be given to their reprovers. And the Lord said, "write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time; but at the end it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry, (even again, or continue to tarry,) wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry (beyond the appointed time.) . . . But the just shall live by his faith." Thus the little company were much cast down, and in sadness fell asleep. "While the Bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept" till midnight. "And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." Time's progress is onward, and the second watch is passed at midnight; and they expect to see the Bridegroom at the cock-crowing watch. They hoped to meet him at the three o'clock watch, but were again disappointed. Here was another false alarm; the Bridegroom still tarried, and the cry ceased.

Now, though we have been tried, we can look back and see a perfect analogy between the parable and its literal fulfillment in our own day, and its correspondence with our own experience for the last twenty years; and we must come to the conclusion, and bear witness, that this wonderful prophecy thus far has had a most exact, literal, chronological fulfillment. I say chronological, because I not only believe that it dates this side of the "falling stars," A. D. 1833, but chronological, as it relates to the night-watches. And now the shout is raised, "every vision faileth,"—your times all pass by; but even this could not be said with truth had not time been preached, and then failed, more than once. "The scriptures cannot be broken." And "thus it must be;" and though we have passed many sorrowful, trying scenes, in the fulfillment of this remarkable prophecy, still, what remains to be fulfilled, and the prospect of its speedy consummation, is blessed good yet. It is before us, and we have felt to heed the exhortation,—"Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward. For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the soul." The literal fulfillment of this prophecy, thus far, must be plain to every observer; i. e., till "all those virgins arise and trim their lamps." And still the Bridegroom seems to tarry. It is not the second tarrying time, for until he comes it is a seeming tarry, at least. Many that professedly went out first to meet the Bridegroom, proved themselves foolish. They seemed to think in the outset, if they could get into the church their profession would shield them from all harm when the Bridegroom should appear; hence, they made no sacrifices to obtain the sweet and peaceful influences of the Holy Spirit, which is "the oil of joy" to every weeping penitent; and though they arose with the others, while the cry was being made to trim their lamps, yet, as soon as the watch was reached, at which time they expected him, and the time passed, their lamps went out; and being destitute of oil they are shrouded in darkness; they can see no more light on time, and even have said, "He may not come for a thousand years."

Now if the customs of an eastern wedding are presented in the parable, then the virgins went forth soon after the setting of the evening watch. Why? Because they could not know whether he would come "at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning;" and as he did not come during the evening watch, nor at midnight, nor at the third watch, we know that he will come in the morning. "The righteous will have dominion over the wicked." When? "In the morning." There is no intimation in the prophecy that he would come at midnight when the cry was made, nor at the and he himself the time set by the mid- whom having not seen arose and trimmed of Zebedees; and the wise kept theirs replenished till he came, whether longer or shorter the time. So now there is no more slumber nor sleep to those that are looking for him. They are waiting, and so they are represented in the parable, while the foolish are asking for oil, and until they are gone to buy, when "the Bridegroom came and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." They all feel that "the night is far spent, and the day is at hand;" they have "put off the works of darkness, and have put on the armor of light;" and though "weeping may endure for a night; but joy cometh in the morning." But the foolish are not so: they know that they have put their hand to the plow and looked back; and consequently are not fit for the kingdom of God.

This view presents us now in the morning watch, which will reveal the Bridegroom; and as one watch succeeds another till the last we can have no more midnight cry, we have got beyond midnight and cannot go back. "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man." Well, how was it with Noah? Did he know the time when he should be called to enter the ark? Yes, says one, he knew seven days before. Not so. Noah had no time revealed to him but the whole period of one hundred and twenty years before he was called to enter the ark. And I hope not to offend when I say, we have the whole period of 2300 days, and that I think is all the definite time we ever shall have. But we can see an approximation toward the very last of the last watch. At the end of the one hundred and twenty years, Noah was called to enter the ark, and was told that in seven days the destruction would come on the wicked. So, at the end of the vision, the saints will be called to enter the "Ark of Safety," to enter their chambers and hide themselves "for a little moment," perhaps seven days, before the "overflowing rain and great hailstones, fire and brimstone" shall sweep the inhabitants of this wicked earth into the pit of destruction. By watching we can "see the day approaching;" but I look for no angelic cry, nor any more definite time till the sign of the Son of Man appears in heaven, and that I think will be the signal for the saints to "be caught up," which gives us no time for preparation after it appears. We must be ready, and if ready, what need of any more revelation of time. After Noah entered the ark "the Lord shut him in;" and so he will his chosen flock when he takes them home. Now I ask, "Watchman, what of the night?" The watchman says, 'The morning cometh;" and it is "a morning without clouds" to the saints; but "as the shadow of death" to the wicked.

O children of God, "be ye also ready." Watch unto prayer: and "the God of peace, who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory forever and ever." Amen.

B. P. Hildreth.

Westford, July 4th, 1857.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 22, 1857.

Rich Man and Lazarus.

Lk. 16: 31.

No. II.

In our last we noticed the charge presented against our Savior in Luke 15 : 2 —"This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them," and his manner of meeting it with the parables of the lost sheep, the lost piece of silver, prodigal son, &c., showing that he not only plead guilty to their charge, but justified his course of action, and condemned their sectarian superstition.

We now purpose to examine "the parable of the rich man," given as we believe to illustrate the history of the Jews and Gentiles, from that time to the end of this dispensation.

Some claim that Luke 16; 19—31, is not a parable, but a history of what actually took place. Let us look at the position a few moments. Ver. 22. "And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried." All, who claim that this is a history of what actually took place, must admit,—

First,—that Lazarus died, not his body, but Lazarus himself; and he that died was carried, not something else, for the record reads, "the beggar died, and was carried.' If I say a man died in the street and was carried into the house, would any one suppose that I meant they carried his soul in, and left his body in the street? Then why say in this case that the angels carried his soul, and left his body, when it is expressly declared that the beggar that died was carried? If this is history, then whatever it takes to constitute Lazarus died, and was carried to Abraham's bosom.

Second. "The rich man also died, and was buried." In this case, the one that died, is the one that was buried. If this is also a historic account, it follows that the rich man came to life after he was buried, and that a flame burned in the grave, for the word rendered hell, in ver. 23, is hades, which is never used to denote the future punishment of the wicked, but simply the grave, where all remain between death and the resurrection. The word hades, rendered hell in the passage, corresponds with sheol in the old testament, which invariably refers to the grave, or the state of the dead when used in its literal sense. Then the question arises,—what is the condition of one in hades or sheol? Let the wise man answer.—"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, (sheol) whither thou goest." Such then was the state of the rich man while in hades, but this cannot be harmonized with the text if it is a historic account instead of a parable; because, while he is in hell, (hades, the grave,) he is represented as having both device and knowledge, which could not have been true, unless he was buried alive; but the latter supposition cannot be accepted for a moment, for the text declares that, "the rich man, DIED." Whatever constituted the rich man died, otherwise, it is not a true history, for there was nothing buried in hades (the grave) only what died, hence, if there was anything about him that did not die, it was not the rich man, and was not put in hades at all, but went to some other place. If this is a historic account, there was nothing tormented only what died and was buried, and no one can suffer in the grave, unless buried alive, but as the rich man was dead, we are driven to the conclusion, that this account is not a history of what actually took place, but a parable.

But for argument's sake, we will take another view of the subject, and suppose that the rich man did not die—only his body or the house in which he lived, was buried in hell, (hades or the grave) while his soul went into torment. Now let us read this scripture in harmony with this position. Begin at the 22nd verse.—"And it came to pass that the [body of the] beggar died, and [his soul] was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the [body of the] rich man also died, and was buried. And in hell, (hades, the grave,) he lifted up his eyes [of his soul] being in torment, and seeth [the soul of] Abraham afar off, and [the soul of] Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, father Abraham, [let thy soul] have mercy on me, and send [the soul of] Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his [soul's] finger in [literal] water, and cool my tongue [of my soul.] The foregoing paraphrase is in harmony with the theory, that only the body died; but we think all can see the absurdity of such an exposition. Even if we should adopt this paraphrase as truth, it completely overthrows the idea that man exists in a disembodied state between death and the resurrection; for he is represented as having eyes, fingers, and tongue, and these organs do not exist and act independently of the rest of man's physical organism; consequently, we have the whole material man existing and acting, between death and the resurrection; then what will he do with the body when he is raised from the dead at the coming of the Lord? "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we, which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 4; 16—17. This last scripture teaches plainly that something now dead, is to be raised to life when Christ comes. Job asks the interesting question,—"if a man die shall he live again?" Hark! and hear the Savior's answer.—"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5 : 28—29.

In concluding this article, we remark, that we can see no possible way of harmonizing the scripture, if we take the position that the account of the rich man and Lazarus, is a literal history of what actually took place. At this time, the Savior had been speaking to the Pharisees in parables, and we read that, "without a parable spake he not unto them." The Rich Man and Lazarus is a continuation of his discourse with them. See Luke 16 : 14—15. In our next, we purpose to show the application of this parable.

Voice of the Church.

We pronounce it an impartial and very valuable production; one that was called for, and will do much good at this time. We candidly recommend it to the favorable notice of all classes of the community. A dollar will be well laid out for its purchase. —Prophetic Expositor, Rochester, N. Y.

This book contains in a comparatively small scale a large amount of valuable historical evidence respecting the opinions of distinguished names in the church on the interesting subjects of the Millennium and Kingdom. . . . We can speak with confidence of its merits, . . . a valuable acquisition to this department of literature.—Advent Herald, Boston, Mass.

For sale by H. L. Hastings, No. 49, Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., and at this Office. Price $1,00. Postage 18 cts.

A correspondent requests that those who write for the Crisis should sign their true name.

A Correction.

In last week's editorial on the "rich man and Lazarus," a misarrangement will be found at the top of the fourth column of the second page. The fifth line from the top should be placed next after the first.

For the Crisis.

Earth.

Poor, "cursed, sickly, dreary, gloomy, fading, wasting, changing earth! But there are some bright, redeeming spots in it. Yes, O yes. It is a beautiful structure in magnificent ruins! Sublime mountains, towering hills, contiguous forests, meandering vales, spreading flowery fields, majestic rolling rivers, winding murmuring streams, and many other departments of earth are, indeed, beautiful; but they are beautiful only comparatively.

What if our eyes had looked upon the earth when God looked upon it, in the beginning, and pronounced it, and all connected with it, "very good?" O then there was beauty and loveliness sublime! But the blight of sin, the curse of God, has spread its shadow everywhere. Mountains crumble and waste: hills are washed and disfigured; forests are uptorn by the wild whirlwinds of heaven; valleys are filled up by earthquakes and volcanoes; fields are rendered desolate and barren by fearful inundations and other causes; rivers and streams change their courses,—change, change is everwhere.

The blood of millions on millions has enriched, and tears, tears, tears, have watered the soil of earth. It sounds hollow by reason of the great multitude of graves which are made therein, and seems in mourning by reason of fearful ravages of the many wars which have blasted some of its fairest portions. It seems to reel in anguish under the burden of its own wretchedness. It manifests both an animate, and inanimate desire "for redemption." It "travaileth" for "the glorious liberty of the sons of God." "O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord," "Behold, I will make all things new!" Not all new things, but all things new! Hear it, O ye people! Believe it, O ye saints!

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Come, Lord Jesus, and Come Quickly.

How familiar are these words with the poor way-worn traveler to the kingdom of God! He comes from his daily task, weary from its toils, and thinks of the glories that will be revealed when Jesus shall come, and his whole soul cries out, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. He takes the blessed book and reads of the new heavens and earth, and how Jesus is to come and, restore the kingdom to the saints, and hear him say, "Behold, I come quickly;" and again, "He that testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly." "Amen," says John, "even so, come, Lord Jesus;" and as he reads this, his whole soul is absorbed with the idea of Jesus' coming, and he wonders that any who profess to love God, can refrain from crying out in earnest,—Amen, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

How cheering it is to feel that Jesus knows we love him, and sigh for his return. If we had a friend in a foreign land, and our hearts longed for the time to arrive when he would return, would it not show that our love for him was deep, and would not our friend be well pleased with us for our manifestation of love to him? Then will not Jesus, our best friend, whom we love so much, be well pleased with our longing desires for his return? I think he will. Poor pilgrim, keep praying "thy kingdom come," and let your sorrowing heart go out after the living God. Your sorrow will soon be turned to rejoicing, your tears all wiped away, and you be escorted to the city of God. I, with you, dear pilgrim, am looking for that time. Through trials sore, and conflicts hard, I mean to press my way, crying, Come, Lord Jesus. I know I love his coming, and I want all to embrace the truth of God and be also looking, that when he appears it will be to salvation. Come, brethren, rouse up, trim the lamp anew, gird on the armor, fight the good fight, strengthen the brethren, lay hold of the hope set before you in the gospel, run the race, and gain the crown and obtain the victory. All is lost if you do not. I fear that Jesus is nearer than many imagine, and that he will come in an hour that they are not aware of, and they will be cut asunder. Oh! come, get your hearts imbued with the spirit of Jesus—all upon the altar, dead to the world, but alive to God; then you will feel like crying for the Master to come; your longing heart will exclaim with John, "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

Come, my brethren, and sisters, rouse up! awake! your redemption draweth nigh!

G. L. Temple.

For the Crisis.

Take Notice!

Feastings, called religious, have become very common among the professed followers of Christ. Concerning these, our Lord has given us directions. "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed, for they cannot recompence thee." Now to suppose that our Savior, by example or by precept, ever sustained intemperance, luxury, or extravagance in any form, or vain, foolish conversation, is (in my humble view,) little better than blasphemy. The New Testament inculcates temperance in all things; sobriety, economy, simplicity, purity; yea, the entire coming out from the world, its spirit, customs, fashions, follies, amusements, honors, acts, and its pleasures. Nothing is plainer, more evident, than that all christians are solemnly bound to come out, and to keep out of all worldly customs, (that are sinful,) to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present evil world.

Now let me ask, is God glorified by pic-nics, oyster suppers, tea parties, soirees, or luxurious holiday feasts? Do they lead to repentance for sin, reformation, holiness of heart, or eternal salvation? Can we, as faithful stewards of God, dispose of his money thus, and feel a clear conscience, when millions are perishing for lack of spiritual food? "A word to the (truly) wise is sufficient."

Again; we have too many professed christians that follow the world, that seek for gain, that roll in luxury, that know nothing of sacrifice, and nothing comparatively of christian toil; they divide efforts, they fritter away their powers, they are confused in their endeavors, they attempt much, lose all, and in all probability, will at last be lost themselves!

P. T.

From R. H. Clark.

Bro. Grant:—As I am often refreshed from letters in the columns of the Crisis, written by some of the dear children of God in different parts of this strange land, while on their pilgrimage to a better country, I thought it might not be amiss to communicate a few thoughts through this medium. I prize the privilege! I admire the right of free inquiry. Freedom is the air of Heaven. O that all might feel its hallowed influence.

We are a "little flock," scattered abroad over this wide earth, with no continuing city, no fixed abode. But, praise heaven's King! we seek one to come,

" Whose beauties are unfading, Whose glories are sublime;"

where the inhabitants will never say they are sick, and the last falling tear will be wiped from every face. How different from the present one, where sorrow and sighing are almost our daily companions. Causes innumerable produce these effects. Yes, the grim Monster Death, the king of terror, is stalking abroad in the land, breaking the family circle, causing the heart of the husband, wife, parent or child to heave with sorrow, and they to wear the badge of the mourner.

My present trial and deep affliction, with which some of the dear children are acquainted, has caused me to weigh these matters more deeply than ever. I find that this is truly a world of sorrow and disappointments; but I hope that I shall soon be able again to advocate the doctrine of the Bible, and to proclaim the truth to the world.

Brethren, pray for me. Let us all be encouraged to endure unto the end, and we shall be saved in the kingdom of God, and crowned with crowns of life.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

R. H. Clark.

East Holden, Me., June, 2nd. '57.

From Sr. M. M. West.

Brn. and Srs.:—I am weary of this groaning earth. It has lost, to me, every feature of its creative loveliness; it is one vast theatre of sorrow, trial and disappointment. I seek not its honors. I covet not its wealth. I participate not in its joys—it has no charms, no pleasures for me. But I do rejoice that it is not always to remain thus, that it is destined to a glorious change, when it will bloom in more than Eden beauty, stamped with immortality.

Dear brethren and sisters, I long to meet you there in that peaceful clime, where we shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace; the mountains and the hills shall break forth . . into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle-tree." "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose." O, who does not sigh for a home in that fair world, where the dread curse, with all its saddening effects, will be forever removed, and the weary will be ever at rest. "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." O, children, let us be good, patiently suffer for Christ's sake here, that we may share in his glory when he appears.

Melissa M. West.

From Sr. C. E. Cole.

Bro. Grant:—How consoling are the following sweet words;—"For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." True. This present life with all its evils is but a short period, comparatively, to an eternal life of happiness. Yes, methinks it is too short to cherish a desire contrary to the abstinence of every appearance of evil. Too short to complain of weariness in well doing. But rather let us be of those who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality—eternal life.

I am deeply sensible of the importance of being, what I term, a to-day christian, not only in word and deed, but also in thought; not passing to-day in a careless and selfish manner, cherishing a hope that we will be a christian next Saturday, or Sunday, or at a more convenient season; no, no, away with such hazardous hopes, and let us embrace the following precept, knowing that the present only is ours: "To-day, if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." I confess I am often, by the "still small voice," rebuked of my own temporal, vain anticipations, idle thoughts and heart wanderings; yet, I feel determined, trusting in God to assist me, to overcome, that I may be accounted worthy to enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God.

C. E. Cole.

Calhoun Co., Mich.

For the Children.

Something Wrong in the Boot.

"I am sure she means to slight me; six days has she been in town, and yet has never come to see me!" exclaimed Sophia, bursting into passionate tears.

"She has doubtless been very busy," quietly observed her mother. "Her brother is just departing for India; she has so much to take up her thoughts and her time, that we may be satisfied that she has a great reason for not coming. I am sure that she does not intend to give offence."

"I am certain that she does!" exclaimed Sophia, who had the unhappy art of making herself wretched by always expecting too much from others, and being on the lookout for anything like a slight.

"You remind me of a story that I once read," said her mother, "of a gentleman who lived in India, a place where scorpions so abound that they creep under furniture, and even hide in shoes, so that great care is required to avoid them."

Sophia dried up her tears, and turned to listen, for like most young people whom I know, she delighted in anything like a story.

"One day," continued her mother, "the gentleman of whom I speak, probably intending to take a ride, began to put on a pair of boots. What was his alarm when, on thrusting his foot into one, he felt a sharp sting-like pang."

"Was it a scorpion?" exclaimed Sophia.

"The same thought flashed across the gentleman's mind. "I am stung!" thus he reflected, "I shall perhaps die from the injury, but at least I will kill the venomous creature, whatever pain it may cost me." So he stamped down his foot, with mingled anger and fear, was more hurt than before, but the greater his pain, the harder he crushed down the thing that had caused it."

"'It must be dead at last!' cried the gentleman, much excited, as he drew his poor foot out at length. 'I should like to see the reptile!' so, lifting up his boot, he shook it violently, to throw out what was in it, and out tumbled——"

"O, mamma! what was there?" cried Sophia.

"Out tumbled a shoe brush, my dear."

"O dear! exclaimed Sophia, bursting out laughing, "so he had been stamping on the bristles all the time, and hurting himself dreadfully all for nothing!"

"He had been taking an innocent shoe brush for a venomous reptile, my love; when a little examination would have shown him, and some other people besides, that we may inflict upon ourselves much causeless pain, by always fancying the worst, and being on the lookout for scorpions."

The gentle lecture of the mother was here interrupted by the entrance of Sophia's long expected friend; and when the little girl found what good cause had kept that friend away from her so long, and how foolish and unjust her own suspicions had been, she turned with an arch smile towards her mother, and whispered, "Ah, mamma, I now see what you meant! I have been stamping on the shoe brush in the boot."

Obituary.

Died in Athens, Crawford Co., Pa., Feb. 21st, 1857, of dropsy and inflammation, Polly, wife of Bro. Elihu Root, aged 56 years.

Their house has long been a pilgrim's home, and often has Sister Root administered to the necessities of saints. They were the first settlers in the place, now called Root's Settlement. Last winter a small church was organized there, as taught in the word, and Bro. Aaron Ellis (author of "Bible vs. Tradition,") was chosen Elder, and Bro. Henry Y. Porter, Deacon. Since that time the writer has endeavored to dispense to them the word of life once in four weeks.

Subject on the funeral occasion,—"For we must needs die," &c. 2 Sam. 14 : 14.

Also, of the same place, June 19th, '57, of consumption, Sister Sarah Ellis, wife of Bro. Aaron Ellis, aged 62 years.

Sister Ellis was a believer in the doctrine of the Bible as taught by her companion. She had formerly been connected with her companion in church fellowship with the Methodists. Living in a new country, she did not have the privileges that many have. She lived and died a harmless, unoffending christian. A brother standing by said, "If Sister Ellis don't have a resurrection I don't know who will." The Savior says, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

The writer spoke to a large congregation from Job 14 : 10–14.

Also, on the 28th June, Bro. Henry Y. Porter, of disease of the heart, aged 54 years.

Bro. P. leaves a beloved companion, six children and an aged mother to mourn their loss. The church have also lost a faithful member and friend. Bro. P. has been a consistent christian for a number of years. He belonged to the Baptist church some twenty-eight years. About ten years since he was converted to the Advent faith under the labors of Bro. Ellis. Since that time he has been growing in the knowledge of our Lord, by searching the scriptures, "which testify of me," says Jesus, and, since I became acquainted with him, can truly say that he has been growing in grace. The Bible hope was his theme, viz., the coming of Christ, the resurrection, kingdom to come, deliverance, restitution, immortality or eternal life, new heavens and earth, &c.

A day or two before he died, while at work with one of his sons, he would stop his work and cry out, "Oh! when will my blessed Savior come?" And frequently would he lay down his tools and talk of the glories of the world to come.

He seemed to have a premonition of his end. Bro. P. and son had been building a boat. When I was out to attend the funeral of Sister Ellis, an arrangement was made for me to go out there the next week and preach in the evening and attend to baptism, and in the day-time to go in company with him and his children on a fishing excursion, on a small lake near by. The boat was finished the next day after I was there, and the following day he, in company with his sons, went on the lake. On returning, he said to one of his sons, "I shall never go on to that lake again." His son wondered, knowing the arrangement made. But alas! the day of pleasure anticipated was a day of mourning. His death was very sudden. He was at his son's house in the evening, talking very cheerfully with him and one or two others that were there. His last words were these;—"If I wait, the grave is my house." While sitting in his chair, all at once he stopped talking, dropped his head, and breathed like one asleep. Alas! it was the sleep of death! In five minutes he that was full of life and vigor was still in death.

Four of his sons are heads of families, and with his beloved companion and aged mother are looking forward to that blessed resurrection for the realization of their hope. They sorrow, yet not as those which have no hope.

"Nature will mourn departing friends."

The writer spoke to a large concourse of people on the occasion, and endeavored to comfort the friends from these words,—"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Rev. 14 : 13.

Also, we sung the following hymn, by the request of Sister Porter:—

"Behold the western evening light!
It melts in deep'ning gloom;
So calmly christians sink away,
Descending to the tomb.

The wind breathes low; the yellow leaf
Scarce whispers from the tree;
So gently flows the parting breath,
When good men cease to be.

How beautiful, on all the hills,
The crimson light is shed;
'Tis like the peace the christian gives
To mourners round his bed.

How mildly on the wandering cloud
The sunset beam is cast;
So sweet the memory left behind,
When loved ones breathe their last.

And lo! above the dews of night
The vesper star appears;
So Faith lights up the mourner's heart,
Whose eyes are dim with tears.

Night falls, but soon the morning light
Its glories shall restore;
And thus the eyes that sleep in death,
Shall wake to close no more."

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Blooming Valley, Pa., July 2, '57.
[Expositor please copy.]

Died in Manchester, N. H., July 3d, Brother William Siddons, aged forty-nine years and eight months.

Bro. Siddons has been a believer in the speedy coming of our Savior since 1843. When the sound went forth that the Lord was coming in 1844 he loved it, and prepared himself to meet the Bridegroom. But the disappointment came; still he clung to the promise, "I will come again." He expected the Lord again in '54, but his hopes were once more blasted. Since then he has tried to keep ready for the better land, where there will be no disappointment, pain, or death.

I reached our brother's bedside about three hours before he fell asleep. He had lost his speech; his last word had been spoken, but his mind was clear, and when I asked him if all was well, he raised his eyes and hands to heaven, and smiled. He sleeps in Jesus, and in the resurrection he will come forth to die no more. He leaves an affectionate wife and four children to mourn his death. May they remember his last words and be ready to meet him in the world to come. I endeavored to comfort the mourners from the words of Paul, in 1 Cor. 15 : 26; "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly!

E. WHITNEY.

Poetry.

For the Crisis

THE WORLD TO COME.

This age of death is soon to close,
The age of life soon to begin—
An age exempt from fears and foes,
Unblemished by the tide of sin.

The "King of glory" then will reign,
On Zion's mount behold his throne;
To lands afar, in sweetest strain,
His word is sent, His law is known.

In sweet submission, nations bow,
Honor and worship Israel's King!
Messiah sits on Zion's brow,
While many thousand harpers sing.

They sing a song that none can learn;
The strain resounds through Paradise,
While angel hearts with rapture burn,
And saints immortal all rejoice.

Through countless years the melody
Is ever sweet, and ever new;
Naught e'er can mar this harmony
In Paradise—The earth made new!

W. SHELDON.

Domestic Summary.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Among the last signs before the coming of the Lord, we read, there will be "upon earth distress of nations with perplexity." The following is from the New York Herald:

Day by day the signs are thickening around us of an impending crash, financial and commercial, which will shake the country from its centre to its circumference like an earthquake. Among other things we perceive that, owing to the increased prices of provisions, and especially of sugar and tea, our principal hotels are about raising their standard charge from two dollars and fifty cents to three dollars a day; and that in our restaurants and eating saloons a corresponding increase of prices may be expected. At the same time we are informed that in Michigan (and in other places the last we should think of) the people are starving for lack of bread. At the same time a spirit of land speculation, amounting to a morus multicaulis or South Sea bubble, has seized hold of the people of the West, and they are all in for it, up to their necks. At the same time an aggregate of perhaps not less than ten millions of dollars is involved in the building, at this moment, of splendid churches, stores and residences in this city; and how many millions during the summer will be expended in Paris furniture, finery, and bijouterie, and European excursions, it is impossible to conjecture.

Let it suffice that in all these, and in various other signs of these ominous times, we have the same symptoms, only on a much grander scale, of an impending crash, as were furnished in the warnings of 1836 of the terrible revulsion and bankruptcy, and demoralization, misery and ruin of 1837. It was the bank inflation and paper currency system of the former period, and the wild and reckless moonshine speculations and extravagances which this system engendered that worked out the grand collapse of 1837. This time the gold of California and Australia, and the land and railroad, commercial, bank and credit adventurers of all kinds, will assuredly do the same thing, in proportion to the tremendous stakes involved. Pay day must come. It must come, as in 1837, with the general crash. It will come to hundreds and thousands when least prepared for it. Prudent men will take in sail and keep near shore. It is a tornado that is gathering in the horizon.

FUNERAL OF A GIANT.—The funeral services of Mr. Miles Darden, says the Jackson (Tenn.) Whig of the 18th ult., who died at his residence in Henderson county, will be preached on the fourth Sunday in this month, five miles southwest from Lexington, Tenn. The deceased was beyond all question the largest man in the world. His height was seven feet six inches—two inches higher than Porter, the celebrated Kentucky giant. His weight was a fraction over one thousand pounds! It required seventeen men to put him in the coffin. It took over one hundred feet of plank to make his coffin. He measured around the waist six feet and four inches.

IMMENSE HOTEL.—A new Hotel is shortly to be commenced on the Hippodrome estate, Broadway, New York. It is supposed it will be the largest in the world, and one of the finest architecturally, as it will have a frontage of 650 feet. The plans have been drawn up by Thomas & Sons. It will be six stories high and will be built of white marble. It will not be completed for ten years.

DISGUSTING, IF TRUE.—The following paragraph is going the rounds:

"The Troy, N. Y., ladies have introduced a new feature at their fairs, which makes them draw like steam engines. All the most bewitching girls wear placards labelled 'kisses one shilling each;' and in some cases where dealers possess extraordinary beauty, as high as 25 cents is obtained. Gentlemen who are fond of gathering this kind of fruit, 'melting from trees,' go in for it according to the weight of their purses; and one of the newspapers states that one rosy-lipped, bright-eyed gal realized $62 in one evening. One gentleman actually purchased $11 worth of this honey."

ORANGE PEEL.—The especial attention of parents and others is called to the following facts:—

A little son of Robert Oliver, of New York, about five years of age, is now lying in a very critical condition from the effects of eating orange peel. Parents cannot be too cautious in keeping orange peel from their children, as it contains an active poisonous oil, which in many instances has caused the death of persons who indiscreetly made use of them. Life is jeopardized every time the rind is taken into the stomach.

IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.

INSURRECTION AT LAWRENCE.—THE U. S. TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

WASHINGTON, July 17. (New York Herald correspondence.) The President received a telegraphic dispatch this morning, dated at Leavenworth yesterday, from Governor Walker, stating that a serious insurrection had broken out at Lawrence, and that he had called out the United States troops to suppress it. The Governor started immediately for Lawrence. The cause of the outbreak is not known, but it is supposed to have originated from opposition to some of the territorial laws, probably the tax law. The receipt of this news had caused some little excitement in certain quarters.

The cabinet were in session until a late hour this morning, and I have no doubt this subject was prominently before them.

ST. LOUIS, July 16. The Democrat has advices from Kansas, stating that Governor Walker has issued a proclamation declaring his laws must be enforced, and censuring the citizens of Lawrence, and warning them not to organize under the Topeka charter.

Rumor says that 700 troops are summoned to march against Lawrence, and that it is the design of Walker to retain the army in Kansas, and to break up the Utah expedition.

WASHINGTON, July 18. Dispatches have gone West, directing Gen. Harney to throw the entire Utah expeditionary force upon Kansas, if necessary, to quell the insurrection and preserve order.

NEW YORK, July 18. There was this afternoon great excitement along shore, and a threatening riot among the sailors, growing out of the "no advance" movement. An attempt was made by a sailor landlord to prevent the crew of the E. P. Stringer going on board that ship, and the mate was badly beaten. The aid of the police has been invoked. Trouble is threatened in the Street Commissioner's office. A large force of police has been detailed to guard the premises.

TOBACCO.—The Maine Conference of the Methodist Church has passed resolutions denouncing tobacco as "an expensive and needless indulgence, unfavorable to cleanliness and good manners, unbecoming Christians, especially Christian ministers; and like the use of alcohol, a violation of the laws of physical, intellectual, and moral life."

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, July 19.

The Vanderbilt steamship Vanderbilt, Captain Wilcox, from Havre and Southampton 8 P. M. 8th inst., with 120 passengers and $200,000 in specie, and 1000 tons merchandise, arrived at quarantine at 11 o'clock this forenoon. There is very little news by this arrival.

Dispatches from Madrid speak of revolutionary attempts in the south of Spain. They had been suppressed. Madrid was tranquil.

The attempted insurrection in Italy was directed, it is said against the King of Naples and the Pope, not with a view to any particular form of government, but to get rid of the Italian Bourbons and expel the Austrians, and those who are protected by them from Italy.

NEW YORK, JULY 19.

The Collins steamship Atlantic, from Liverpool 8th inst., arrived at this port at 5 1-2 o'clock this evening.

There are no later advices from India. The London Times publishes a letter from an army officer, dated Lahore, May, 14, in which it is stated that the 45th Native Infantry at Ferozepore, having refused to lay down their arms, were cut to pieces by the cavalry, and shot by the Europeans, and orders are issued to kill every man of the regiment, wherever he may be found.

They have burnt nine bungalows and the the church there. All Europians are safe. The 300 Sepoys who got away from here yesterday, have been well punished by the Punjabese. Report says nearly all were killed.

"The salary of Louis Napoleon is five millions of dollars a year, and his revenues from the palaces about one million and a quarter a year."

Items.

TIME ANNIHILATED.—The telegraphic despatch on Monday from St. Johns, Newfoundland, by the Submarine Telegraph, in regard to the steamship Persia being seen off that port, was dated Monday, 10,35. A. M., and was received at New York Monday, 10,34 A. M. The distance from New York to Newfoundland is about one thousand miles—the difference in time, perhaps an hour.

INTERESTING STATISTICS.—The United States are composed of thirty-one States and nine Territories.

They contain a population of 27,000,000, of whom 23,000,000 are white.

The extent of sea coast is 12,550 miles.

The length of the ten principal rivers is 20,000 miles.

The surface of the five great lakes is 90,000 square miles.

The number of miles of railroads in operation is 50,000, which cost $78,000,000.

The length of canals is 5,000 miles.

It contains the longest railroad on the globe—the Illinois Central—which is 784 miles.

The annual value of its productions is $200,000,000.

Its most valuable production is Indian corn, which yields annually 40,000,000 of bushels.

The amount of registered and enrolled tonnage is 4,407,010.

The amount of capital invested in manu factures is $600,000,000.

The annual amount of its internal trade is $600,000,000.

The annual value of its products of labor, other than agricultural, is $100,500,000.

The value of farms and live stock is $500,000,000.

Its mines of gold, copper, lead and iron are among the richest in the world.

The value of gold produced is $100,000,000.

The surface of its coal fields is 138,131 square acres.

Within her borders are 80.000 schools, 5,000 academies, 234 colleges and 3,800 churches.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Campmeeting at North Wilbraham!

Our brethren abroad have made a demand on us, or rather have expressed a great desire for another "Independent Campmeeting" at North Wilbraham, Mass. What shall we do? Shall we respond to their desire? I think we must, or perhaps do more harm than good. We have concluded to commence the meeting on Monday the 31st day of August next. We give this timely notice that all who wish to attend such a meeting may arrange so to do.

We call this an Independent Campmeeting, because we intend that it shall be independent of all sectarianism and partyism. We invite all to attend it who are interested in, and love the immediate appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ. We expect at this meeting a general gathering of the "waiting ones." It seems to us that it cannot be otherwise, as this will be centrally located for the friends of the cause.

Come, Brethren and Sisters, in the Lord's name, help! Make all the preparation you consistently can to attend, we beseech you, for "is there not a cause?" We feel lonely and pilgrim-like, and it will be well to meet, and greet, and cheer each other once more on the journey. Will you come from the East, and West, and North, and South, and sit down once more in the anticipation of the kingdom?

The objects of this meeting are twofold.

1. To comfort and strengthen one another.
2. To endeavor to benefit, with the truth, all who will attend the meeting, who are not yet ready for the kingdom of God.

We shall expect each Brother and Sister at this meeting, to speak and act as he, or she may think God requires, with a view to the best good of all concerned. We desire no public debates or controversy, but let each speak independently of others, and in the spirit of Christ. It is the general desire of the friends that Bro. Munger be Superintendent of this meeting, inasmuch as his acquaintance with that part of the country and long experience in these matters render him the fittest person that can be selected. We can all confide in his integrity and faithfulness. We trust he will comply. We would say in conclusion, that it will be well for our friends in all parts, where they can, to associate and prepare tents and bedding, &c., for themselves, so as not generally to be dependent, as many individual cases must necessarily be. The cloth which is used for tents can be taken by the several families which purchase it, after the meeting, and be used for domestic purposes. In some cases, tents may be more cheaply hired. We will try to get the fare on the railroad from Boston to Wilbraham reduced, if possible, and thus help our Eastern friends; and should we succeed, will give notice in season. Perhaps other brethren will do the same on other railroads.

Get tickets for NORTH Wilbraham—the Camp-ground is near the North Wilbraham depot.

And now, Brethren and Sisters, we submit this matter to you in the Lord. Act right.

EDWIN BURNHAM,
For the Brethren.

P. S. Provision for man and beast will be made as usual. E. B.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

JOHN CHAPMAN,
In behalf of the Brethren.

Brother Burnham, please answer by letter, and also through the Crisis. My post office address is Magog, C. E. J. C.

DISCUSSION.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 18, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

If the Lord will, the church in Lynn, Dyehouse village, may expect Br. A. M. Higgins to be with them, the First and Second Sundays of Aug. instead of next Sunday. A. M. H.

If the Lord will, the church in Salem may expect Sister S. J. Higgins to be with them the First and Second Sundays in Aug., as requested. A. M. H.

Eld. D. B. Wyatt appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sunday, 19th inst., Providence permitting.

Exeter, Advent Chapel, July 25th and 26th. Time of worship on Saturday, 5 o'clock, P. M.

Bro. A. Fox appoints to preach at
Winsted, Ct., Aug. 9th
Waterbury, where Bro. Denny may appoint, Aug. 12th
Bridgeport, at the Old Chapel, Aug. 16th
and at the New Chapel at 5 o'clock, or in the evening, as the Brn. may appoint.
Cheshire, where Bro. Dudley may appoint, Aug. 20th
Cheshire Street, Aug. 23d
Lovely Street, Canton, Aug. 30th

Bro. P. B. Morgan appoints to preach in Addison, Vt., July 26th

Bro. H. Pratt appoints to preach in Worcester, Mass., Aug 2d

Providence permitting, I will preach at Carmel, Me., Saturday eve., 6 P. M., Aug. 8th
" " Sunday, Aug. 9th
Bangor, Me., Wednesday eve., Aug. 12th
Hermon, Me., Saturday, Aug. 15th
" " Sunday, Aug. 16th
L. BOUTELL.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 9. M. GRANT.

Bro. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach in Auburn, N. H., July 26th

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

Elder E. Burnham appoints to preach in
Salem, Mass., Third Sunday in July
Lowell, Mass., Fourth Sunday in July

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at
Danbury, N. H., July 26th
Warner, N. H., Aug. 2d

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at Canterbury, in the Town Hall, July 26th

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at the 1st Baptist (colored) Church in South Kingston, Saturday evening, Aug. 1st

Twice the following Sunday, Aug. 2d, at the Advent Chapel, Peace Dale, and in the evening at the Colored Church above named.

For the Brn., J. T. DIXON.

Bro. R. R. York appoints to preach at
East Gray, July 26th
Brunswick, Aug. 2d
South Gray, Aug. 9th

The Lord willing, I will preach the word as follows:—
Fairhaven, Mass., July 26th
Elder S. S. BREWER.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in the following places:
Plymouth Hollow, July 22d
Bristol, Thursday, July 23d
Hartford, Friday, July 24th
South Hampton, Long Island, N. Y., Sunday, July 26th, if the Brethren meet me at Sag Harbor, on Saturday, when the boat arrives.
Peacedale, (as Bro. Dixon may arrange,) July 28th and 29th
Appanauge, (will the Brn. meet me at Appanauge depot?) Thursday, July 30th
River Point, (where Bro. Taylor appoints,) Friday, July 31st
Providence, Sunday, Aug. 2d. Third meeting where Bro C. O. Towne may appoint,—perhaps with Bro. Osler's charge.
Roxbury, Mass., Monday evening, Aug. 3d
Boston, Tuesday evening, Aug. 4th
Worcester, (at Bro. D. T. Taylor's charge,) Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th

If these appointments interfere with others, please notify me before I arrive. These are not decrees,—only propositions.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Buffalo, N. Y., Wednesday evening, July 22d
Rochester, July 26th
Canandaigua, (evening,) July 27th
Syracuse, (evening,) July 28th
Clay, evening, (meet me at Brewerton, morning stage,) July 29th
Albany, N Y, (evening,) July 30th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Lake Village, N. H., July 26th

The Lord willing, I will preach the word at Round Pond, (Union Meeting House,) 3d and 4th Sabbath in July.
THOS. SMITH.

A Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a tent meeting in North Dana, commencing Thursday, August 6th, and holding over the Sabbath, of believers in the primitive faith of the church; viz., the personal coming of our Lord, and the literal resurrection of the dead, and the restitution of the earth, and in making ready a people for these great events by taking the new covenant of Jesus Christ, in all its parts, without addition or diminution, for the basis of church building and government, as the only law by which the temporal, civil and ecclesiastical affairs of all the members of the body are to be regulated and governed.

We invite the lovers of truth to come and unite in laboring with us in this good and best of all causes. With us christian character is a test of fellowship, and that to be gained, as Peter says, by being begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

Some of God's servants will be present to preach the word. We invite all classes to come and hear, and then judge. Prove all things and hold fast that which is good. For the Brethren,
D. E. MOULTON.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

W. Bassford 124, D. S. Cables 124, S. Mason 117, H. Thayer 78, E. P. Streeter 76, L. L. Demarest 124, J. McCracklen 130, P. Koon 72, J. B. Walker 123, H. T. Miller 140, J. Smith 120, A. P. Moore 111, Z. Farrington 91, E. Hall 107, E. A. Gould 110, Nancy Cole 115, A. Jenney 130, Isaac Dimmick 130, Eld. A. Lathrop 124, W. Arthur 124, C. Mallorey 124, P. Bunnell 124, W. Colbath 132, W. Colbath, Jr., 132, A. S. Kelly 130, M. Morehouse 130, $1 each.

W. D. Hough 149, Maria Dewey 150, J. K. Davis 70, M. E. McDaniel 95, J. Pinkham 158, $2 each.

Mary Kimball 111, 50 cents.

FOR THE POOR.—J. B. Walker, $1; A. P. Moore, 50 cents.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—S. Mason $2; J. Smith, $1.18; M. Morehouse, $1.

BOOKS SENT.—Betsy C. Bancroft, S. Mason, M. Morehouse, M. Greenough.

Geo. L. Teeple's P. O. address is Arlington, Sibley Co., M. T.

B. P. Manning's P. O. address is Oil Mill Village, N. H.

Bro. Jonas Merriam's P. O. address is Concord, N. H.

To Correspondents.

E. Lillie—The dollar credited to "E. White," in the Crisis of July 1, should have been credited to you. The back numbers have been directed to that name, and you can doubtless get them at your office. We now send them in your name.

T. Waters—All right.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half pent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By L. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 [illegible]

Tracts.—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the [illegible] of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE DAY BREAKETH.

Gen. 32: 26.

Cheer up, lone pilgrim, the night wears away,
Clouds are dispersing, and bright beams the day;
The tempest is o'er, when peace is the cry,
Death and redemption are both drawing nigh.

The seed-time now is;—the harvest we'll reap,
When Jesus shall come our work to complete;
He now gives us grace to conquer and win,
The vict'ry we gain in honor of him.

The morn will soon dawn; if faithful, we'll rise
And meet the Savior descending the skies;
We'll clap our glad wings, and join in the song
That echoes around from God's holy throng.

Then on the new earth, which is to succeed,
Like angels we'll live in thought, word, and deed,
Our prayers turned to praise, our faith turned to sight,—
Already it fills my soul with delight.

When lonely and sad, the thought—O how blest!
To learn from the word we soon shall have rest,
A happy re-union with Christ then giv'n,
When earth assumes its primitive Eden.

FRANCES.

Camden.

For the Crisis.

PASSED AWAY!

BY J. H. TURNER.

A lovely flower bloom'd one day
In the garden over the way;
Hours I watched its beauty there
And smelled its fragrance in the air.
But as I looked in the garden to-day,
The pretty flower had passed away!

A youth stood by his lovely bride,
In power of hope and strength of pride,
Spoke of glory of future years,
Of joyful hours free from tears;
But as I looked in the graveyard to-day,
The youth and his bride had passed away!

A man stood with ambitious mien,
Said he would reap immortal fame,
His voice should sound in nations' hall,
Tyrants tremble, tyranny fall!
I looked for his place 'mong statesmen to-day,
His fame and glory had passed away!

How many hopes, how many fears,
How many joys, how many tears,
With more ambitious pride and zeal,
Have lived awhile through woe and weal;
But when we look for their place to-day,
We find that they all have passed away!

Boston, July 9, 1857.

Original Articles.

Rev. XVII.

BRO. GRANT:—I am a stranger to you in person, but I have an occasional look at your paper, and as I see that the minds of some of the brethren are unsettled concerning the beast in Rev. 17, I thought that you would be willing to re-examine the views each have been giving concerning this beast. My own mind has been fixed for about ten years.

This beast is not only scarlet-colored, but it is "full of names of blasphemy." The beast can be known by its name; bear this in mind, and give the true meaning to the word, blasphemy, and we can know where and when to find this beast. For the true meaning of the term, blaspheme, we take the Bible as the only standard by which to explain Bible words, and here we learn that it means, to lie, to profess to be what we are not. Chap. 2: 9; 3: 9. That the Jews in the Savior's day so used this word, see John 10: 33. To speak against, or falsely, of others, is also a correct meaning of the term.

This beast was full of these names; it was then a lying power, in one or both senses of the word. And that it professed to be what it was not, and what it is not, we can see as we proceed. As this beast is "full of names of blasphemy," all its heads and horns must be blasphemous also, because they are so many parts of the beast which is full of these names. The beast is but one blasphemous beast, and the seven heads and ten horns are so many parts of its power; just the same as the four heads of the Leopard in Daniel 7th chap., and the four horns in chap. 8 are four divisions of the Grecian kingdom. But in Daniel's beast the heads all existed at one time, while these are successive, as we learn from ver. 8, 11. And here we read, "the beast that thou sawest was, and is not;" now all must see that there can be no beast without a head, and if the beast "is not," there is no head at that time.

This time when the beast was not, was when John had this revelation. There was at that time no blasphemous beast united with an apostate church, or carrying an adulterous woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and the martyrs of Jesus. This time must have been after the destruction of Jerusalem, because the Lord Jesus, who always spoke the truth, said, Matt. 23: 37, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee."

It is well here to notice, that in the destruction of the woman, who is also called "that Great City," there was found the blood of prophets, which could not be if the Papal power only is meant by the great city. Chap. 18: 24.

Again, Stephen says, Acts 7: 52,—"Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers." Was not Stephen one of the saints? That the Jewish church is represented by an adulterous woman in the prophets is too plain to be mistaken, and she was adulterous because of her union with Gentile kings. Let this be remembered; it is the union of an apostate church with Gentile kings, which is the adultery of the woman. Ver. 2. See Ezek. 23.

It also gives the character to the beast which is united to the woman, just the same as the character of a man is formed, or known, by illicit intercourse. The woman is called the Lord's church while it is not, and the beast is called the Lord's kingdom while it is not, and thus we see it is a lying, or a blasphemous beast.

This character, or name of blasphemy, cannot belong to any heathen nation which is not united to an apostate church. Thus we read in ver. 8,—"The beast that thou sawest was, and is not." Pagan Rome was in all its glory as a heathen nation, and so we read, "and yet is." The beast, or heathen nation "is," but as it "was" united to the Jewish church in Jerusalem, and that Jewish nation called the Lord's kingdom, it was not. It was the Roman power at Jerusalem in a distinct form, and separate from the nation at large, which was the blasphemous beast. The same was true of all the heathen powers in Jerusalem from the time of Nebuchadnezar until the Jews were destroyed as a nation. This portion of Gentile power at Jerusalem was more or less subject to the Jewish church and the priestly power, and did conform to it. Thus it was different from the Gentile nation of which it was a part. The same was true of the Papal power; it was but a part of Rome which did unite with the priestly power, and became subject to it, which is the last part of the blasphemous beast. But there was this difference between the first Gentile blasphemous beast and the second; the first was a tributary, or inferior power, while the second was the ruling power, and is therefore called the eighth king. Ver. 11. The first kingdom was also by Divine appointment, while the second was not, and is therefore said to be from the pit, or the power of darkness.

It is true the Lord's people were in the Jewish church, and they must have been there or nowhere, because they only had the word of God and the means by which they could be the Lord's. But they were the few and not the ruling power, the oppressed and persecuted, as Stephen said. The same was, and is true in the Papal church; the saints are, and have been, the few among them who have had to suffer for Christ's sake.

In conclusion, I will just say that the seven heads on this beast are just the same as the seven heads on the beast in chap. 13; and when the head is wounded in chap. 13, the same is true in chap. 17. But the ten horns in chap. 13, are not the same as those in chap. 17, because the beast is not a blasphemous beast, but simply a heathen or Gentile beast; and the ten crowned horns are so many periods of its power, and this power is given to it by the Dragon, or Satan, whose heads and horns occupy the same periods, and begin and end together.

I have now given a brief sketch of the manner in which we may begin to understand the harmony of these seven headed beasts, and if the brethren will look at this subject, I think they will rejoice in its beauty and simplicity.

JOHN REYNOLDS.

Marblehead, Mass.

For the Crisis.

"Follow Peace with All."

"Follow peace with all men, and holiness, (sanctification) without which no man shall see the Lord."—HEB. 12: 14.

Peace is the grand bestowment of "the God of peace." Peace was the crowning benediction of Him who is "the Prince of peace." "Peace I leave with you," said Jesus. John 14: 27. It is the mighty moral result of the gospel proclamation—"preaching peace by Jesus Christ."

This word that is so expressive of the Divine nature,—this highest moral designation of our coming King and Kingdom, denotes one of the characteristic features of the sons of God—the heirs of the kingdom. Follow peace, seek it, and promote it as an object of the christian life. To the christian there may be "many adversaries;" but he is, personally, peaceful to all.

Peace is promoted by yielding to all the Spirit's peace-speaking word. Then, we "have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ;" and all such have peace, in its spirit and in its principle, toward each other. But our peace is destroyed by seeking our "own, and not the things that are Jesus Christ's." When a leading man in a church becomes willful—when he "seeks his own," then peace with him is made impossible. Such willful self-seekers are the adversaries to peace. Such may become "profane, like Esau," and sell all they know of the birthright-promise. These are they who "fail (come short) of the grace of God." The grace of God ruling in the heart inspires, sustains, and perfects this heavenly attribute in "the son of peace." Grace and peace are sister graces—they are twin blessings, freely bestowed on all who seek them in the christian race; but impracticable to all who willfully seek their own.

J. B. C.

For the Crisis.

Extracts

CULLED FROM THE WASTE PAPERS.

BY H. L. H.

The following is from Byron, near the close of his life, and presents a sad picture of an infidel's joys.

"Though gay companions o'er the bowl,
Dispel awhile the sense of ill;
Though pleasure fills the maddening soul,
The heart—the heart is lonely still.

Aye, but to die, and go, alas!
Where all have gone, and all must go;
To be the nothing that I was,
Ere born to life and living woe!

Count o'er the joys thine house have seen,
Count o'er thy days from anguish free;
And know, whatever thou hast been,
'Tis something better not to be.

Nay, for myself, so dark my fate
Through every turn of life hath been,
Man and the world so much I hate,
I care not when I quit the scene."

The following is from a reclaimed infidel, and shows the other side of the picture.

"And darkness and doubt are now flying away,
No longer I roam in conjecture forlorn;
So breaks on the traveler faint and astray,
The bright and the balmy effulgence of morn.

See truth, love and mercy in triumph descending,
And nature all glowing in Eden's first bloom!
On the cold cheek of death smiles and roses are blending,
And beauty immortal awakes from the tomb."

THE LORD AT HAND.—"He is not far from every one of us, as an approaching Judge. People imagine his advent is a great way off, and hence they are so little impressed by it. But 'the coming of the Lord draws nigh.' 'The Lord is at hand.' 'The Judge standeth before the door.' This was said almost two thousand years ago. What then is the fact now? Yet, say some, it cannot even now be very near, for much remains to be previously accomplished. But God does not act according to our conclusions. He can cut short his work in righteousness."—Wm. Jay's Evening Exercises, Jan. 10.

"THE calmest and most intrepid sceptic could not refuse to acknowledge that the destruction of the present system of the world by fire was of itself extremely probable."—Gibbon, Vol. 1, p. 536.

From Sr. R. M. Rines.

BRN. AND SRS.:—I am still among the dying, but looking for the King to come speedily, to destroy the enemy and give unto us eternal life.

The Lord will not give all his truth to some highly esteemed brethren, but whosoever inclines the ear unto wisdom, and cries after knowledge, and lifts up the voice for understanding, seeks her as for hid treasures, shall understand the fear of the Lord and find the knowledge of God. And as we have freely received, freely we should give, and remember the words of Paul,—(Phil. 2: 3,) "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."

If I lightly esteem any truth because the Lord has given it to such an one, I lightly esteem Christ; and his truth is precious truth, is mighty, and will prevail, more to be desired than our necessary food. Whatever God wants us to deal to others, if we refuse, we rob God and his people; therefore let us bring all the tithes into the store-house and prove God therewith, and see if a blessing will not follow.

Many of you, dear pilgrims, are acquainted with the writer, and I ask you, do not forget her at the throne of grace, but remember she is yet with you in the faith of the gospel, and her motto is, onward! for "he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

"How careful then ought we to live,
With what religious fear,
Who such a strict account must give
For our behavior here."

"If I am faithful and true, and my journey pursue,
Till I stand on the heavenly shore;
I shall joyfully see what a blessing to me,
Was the mortifying cross which I bore."

Your sister in the faith of the immediate coming of the Lord.

ROSILLA M. RINES.

Franconia, N. H.

Choice Selections.

GO AGAIN SEVEN TIMES.

1 KINGS 18: 43.

Where ancient Carmel, vast, abrupt and steep,
Lifts its blue summit o'er the midland deep,
The prophet kneeled to pray, that genial rain
Might spread fresh verdure o'er the scorched plain;
For God to punish Israel's sin, had banned
The clouds of heaven, and drought consumed the land;
Each spring had failed, and every blade of grass;
The earth seemed iron, and the heavens brass,
And three long years the sluices of the sky
Their influence to a guilty land deny,
Turning the vales, where milk and honey flowed,
To barren wilds, dread famine's gaunt abode.
At length the penal vengeance passed away,
And melting mercy heard the prophet pray,
Inspired the faith that turned aside the rod,
And touched with tenderness the heart of God.
He bowed, he prayed, but still the sky was clear,
Nor sound of gust, nor sight of cloud was near;
Then from the earth, on which he leaned his head,
The prophet rose, and to his servant said,—
"Haste to the summit, the horizon sweep,
And cast thine eyes along the distant deep."
He went, he gazed upon the sky and main;
Still there was nothing—not a sign of rain.
Elijah said, "go seven times"—and bowed
His face between his knees—and lo! a cloud,
Small as a human hand, at first appeared;
But quick as thought the mighty column roared
Along the sky, and black and wild it spread,
While the winds whistled round the mountains head.
Say, what truth dost thou from this deduce,
Hast it a moral meant for christian use?
Yes, pilgrim, listen, there are gems and gold
Beneath the surface of this common mould:
In all thy trials through this world of woe;
In all thy ills—and thou hast ills to know—
Go to thy God in patience for redress,
Go seven times, and each the promise press;
But leave to him the mode, the time, the place,
To hear thy prayer and remedy thy case:
Be not impatient of a quick reply;
He may delay it—but he can't deny.
Pray, wait, and watch—then watch, and wait, and pray,
And do it seven times on every day;
Thy full deliverance is surely planned,
Although it comes as but a little hand;
The blessing in some simple medium lurks,
For not by miracle but means he works.

Selected.

From the Christian Herald.

From a Letter

OF JOHN NEWTON TO WILLIAM BARLASS.

Written seventy-eight years ago.

"I believe the Lord will, in his own hour, give you the habit of extempore preaching, which is as desirable in your situation, as it is in mine. For, perhaps, I preach more frequently than you. To commit your sermons to memory must be a heavy burden indeed;—it seems to me more inconvenient than reading them. And I think I could read with more spirit and probability of impressing the auditory, than if I repeated them by heart, as we commonly say, though in propriety I should call it repeating it by head, for my heart would have but little concern in it. But if you will be an extempore preacher, you must risk, and even suffer something. You must not despise the day of small things, nor expect that liberty and compass in your service at first, which you may afterward, by the Lord's blessing, attain to. To him that hath, that useth when he hath, more shall be given. When there is a competent stock of knowledge and ideas in the mind, and a person is not destitute of the gift of utterance, the chief hindrance and difficulty as to extempore preaching, arises from an undue regard to self. That thought, "What will my fellow worms think of me and my performance" will be ready to stop our mouths. This you must pray against, and the Lord will deliver you from it. Ah what a solecism! Indeed, what high treason against our Lord, are we often guilty of. We profess a zeal for his glory, and for the good of souls; we know that we are charged with a message of the utmost importance, and yet are apt to be more concerned about the manner of delivering it, than for the success. If you were apprized that a person was coming to consult you in your study, about his soul concerns, it is probable you would not pen down what you wished to say to him, and commit it to memory before-hand, but you would talk to him according to the view his conversation would give you of his case. And, perhaps, what you would then say to a single person, with little premeditation, might be as useful and acceptable to a thousand, if they could hear it, as the most studious sermon you could compose. The Lord has brought you into the ministry, and given you a sincere desire to serve him in it. Depend upon him, therefore, so to bless your studies at other times, as that you may be enabled to speak for him in public with composure and discretion, and he will not disappoint you. An act of simple faith upon him, will give you more ability, than many hours rummaging for something out of your own stock. When we have the fountain of living waters close by us, why should we weary ourselves with hewing out broken cisterns?

My first essay as a preacher was in a dissenting house at Leeds, in Yorkshire, in the year 1758. I do not know that I had a very overweening opinion of my own abilities; I feared and trembled abundantly, but I was determined to set off extempore. I did so. I opened my discourse with a passable exordium, divided my subject into four heads, had subdivisions under each in my mind, and was beginning to think I should do pretty well. But before I had spoken ten minutes I was stopped like Hanibal upon the Alps. My ideas forsook me, darkness and confusion filled up their place. I stood on a precipice, and could not advance a step forward. I stared at the people and they at me. But I remained as silent as Friar Bacon's head, and was forced to come down re infecta. My two worst enemies, self and satan seized me at the bottom of the stairs. I hope the Lord has forgiven the abomination of my heart, which showed themselves on that occasion.

This experiment seemed at the time, fully to convince me, not only of temerity, but that I was absolutely unable to preach extempore, that I ever should be so, and that I might as well attempt to fly. I then began to compose, and my next essay (in another place) was with a written sermon. I was not so much afraid this time, for I knew I could read if my eyes did not suddenly fail me, so I read them a sermon. The moment I began, my eyes were rivetted to the book, from a fear which got hold of me, that if I looked off, I should not readily find the line again. Thus with my head hanging down, (for I am near-sighted) and fixed like a statue, I conned over my lesson, like a boy learning to read, but I did not stop till I came to the end. I think I was rather more out of conceit with myself this time than the former. What was to be done next? I had tried the two extremes to little purpose, and there seemed to me to be no medium between them. I looked sorrowfully at my sermon book, and began to think my views to the ministry were presumptuous. I thought at least, that if the Lord was pleased to accept my desire to serve him, he would not accept my service, because I had been so vile a creature; as he accepted David's desire to build his house, but did not employ him because he had shed blood. And yet, notwithstanding all disappointments and discouragements, he was pleased at length to admit me into his vineyard, and to open my mouth.

However, I should tell you, that long after he had given me some liberty of speech, and not many years ago, at Olney, in the midst of my people, and before a large congregation, my mouth was stopped again. That is, my mind was so confused, I only talked nonsense, and thought it my duty to tell the people I could not preach, because the Lord suspended his assistance. I therefore stopped and told them so. When I had made this acknowledgment, I had liberty again, only I could not resume the subject I had been upon. But I spoke freely on what had happened, and perhaps it was one of our best opportunities. It was so to me. My pride was kept down, my mind perfectly composed, and I went home as easy as if the whole parish had admired my sermon.

Many exercises have I had about preaching; nor am I wholly without them still. I must add, I do not wish to be quite free. To be an extempore preacher, with some degree of acceptance and popularity, is an ensnaring situation. It affords much grounds for the workings of pride and self-complacence, and therefore it is a mercy if the Lord is pleased to give us frequent proofs of our own inability, notwithstanding what we can do, when he puts forth his power in us. Experience likewise proves, that we do not always preach best when we are much pleased with our own doings, at least if we account it the best preaching when we are the most useful. Such, I think, should be the standard. When is a fisherman's best fishing time? I think, not when he has the neatest rods, hooks, or lines, nor even when he has the pleasantest weather, but when he catches the greatest quantity of good fishes. When we have made a poor sermon, and are almost ashamed or afraid to look our hearers in the face, the Lord may put forth his power in our weakness, and work great things by our little sermon. When we think we have done bravely, and pleased the people's ears, and sent them home to praise the fine discourse, their hearts may be quite unaffected. If we were perfectly mortified to self, we should submit to be pitied or laughed at by the bulk of a congregation, if we might but be useful to a few. And we should be dissatisfied with the applause of all, unless we could be serviceable to some."

The Witch of Endor raising Samuel.

Can any one reasonably suppose, in reading the scriptural account of the interview of Saul with the witch of Endor, that she really did raise Samuel? I cannot. I give my reasons why I cannot.

1. It is not positively stated in the narration that she did raise him. It does not appear that Saul, or his accompanying friends, saw any appearance of Samuel, but only the woman saw a peculiar apparition, which she, at Saul's request, gave him a description of. See 1 Sam. 28. I know it may be said, "but Samuel talked with Saul." I will notice that point hereafter. It will then, I trust, appear plainly to the contrary.

2. It is represented, that this apparition, which was by Saul called Samuel, came up "out of the earth," in sight of the woman. Samuel was buried in Ramah, which was about a degree—quite a good many miles from Endor; how then could he come up out of the earth at Endor?

3. It could not have been the "disembodied immortal soul" of Samuel that the woman saw; for she said, it was an "old man covered with a mantle!" Do disembodied souls become old and wear mantles? She said he came "up out of the earth." Do disembodied immortal souls stay down in the earth? if so, would not Samuel's soul have been somewhere near his body at Ramah, rather than away there at Endor?

4. God had strictly forbidden the art which this woman practiced—witchcraft—on pain of death; and can we allow the unholy inconsistency, that this wicked woman, in open violation of the law of God, and at the desire of one whom God had abandoned, was permitted to disturb the repose of one of the most holy of the prophets, in the unseen world? The very thought seems to me almost sinful.

Let us now look at the whole connection of circumstances in the case, candidly. Saul was a very wicked man. God had left him to himself. In case of great martial emergency, he sought help from the Devil through one of his "mediums." God would therefore let him reap the full reward of deception due to his criminal course. Saul inquired for a woman with a familiar spirit. He was told of one at Endor. With two of his friends, he went to her house in the night, and pressed her to "bring up," by evil power which she possessed, one whom he would name. She finally consented to his wish. He named Samuel. She began to operate. Immediately she pretended to be, or really was frightened, and at once became aware, by some kind of superhuman intelligence, that it was Saul for whom she was operating; for until that moment, she had not been aware of that fact, he having come to her disguised. Saul inquired of her what she saw? She replied, "I saw gods ascending out of the earth." (I saw Elohim god—a god—gods—a judge—it is rendered differently—Patrick.) Saul inquired "what form he is of?" (What form is the Elohim—the judge—the god of?) She replied, "an old man cometh up; and he is covered with a mantle." Then Saul "perceived," by the description which the woman gave of him that it was Samuel, and addressed him accordingly. The apparition is therefore called Samuel, in accordance with Saul's perception. But we are not to conclude that Inspiration regarded it as being Samuel! It was perfectly proper to represent the matter as it appeared to Saul. There can be no room to doubt that this was a demon, counterfeiting Samuel, by the woman "medium." This demon was forced to speak that which was most for the glory of God, in the case; and he certainly talked very religiously, as demons sometimes do. It is however rather doubtful if all his words were true. Learned men question if Saul died on the morrow! However, he said enough to show Saul his wretched condition, and make him feel, that indeed, heaven and earth were against him; and thus he was punished on the spot. Once more. This woman of Endor was a "necromancer." A necromancer is not one who really converses with the dead, but one who "pretends to converse with the dead." A person may pretend to converse with the dead, and yet be deceived by diabolical appearances.

Adv. Herald—EDWIN BURNHAM.

The Old Man, the Children, and the Bur-Basket.

One pleasant day in autumn, two children wandered over the fields in search of wild flowers. "But where shall we find a basket to put them in?" said the little girl to her brother. "I'll make you one," said the rosy boy, clapping his hands for joy. And forthwith he commenced to pick the burs from a plant which grew in a fence-corner. When he had collected a large number, he sat himself down, and sticking them together one by one, he fashioned one of the most beautifully shaped baskets that ever was seen. When it was finished his little sister gave him a kiss, and arranged the flowers in the bur-basket, placing together the prettiest and the sweetest.—When all was completed, they looked around, and lo! there stood before them an old man with snowy locks, who leaned upon his staff, and smiled. "Well done, sweet children," said the old man; "these burs which have so stung your hands in picking, forshow good deeds and duties, which, taken singly, often seem prickly and unpleasant, but which may be so fitted and fashioned together, as to form vessels of beautiful shape, and rare workmanship." "And which will hold flowers too, like these?" asked the boy, scarce comprehending the import of his own question. "Ay, flowers of surpassing beauty," was the answer: and that too at a season of life when flowers begin to be scarce—in the autumn of existence, when burs and thistles grow by the wayside, and the trees are shedding their leaves over our heads."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over Geo. T. Adam's Store. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1857. | WHOLE NO. 100. VOL. V. NO. 22.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

JUBILEE.

Break, break, eternal Day,
Dawn on the pilgrim's way,
Earth's Jubilee!
When all whom sin had bound—
But grace did more abound—
Shall hear the trumpet sound,
And then be free.

O, day of sweet release!
Earth's sins and sorrows cease,
Captives rejoice;
Sighs burden now the gale,
But tyrants' power shall fail,
Freedom's bright morning hail,
With heart and voice.

The wilderness shall sing,
Joy in the desert spring,
And all be fair;
Sin's stolen lease must end,
For earth has yet a Friend,
Who can the right defend,
The scepter bear.

Death's prisoner goes free,
Buried in earth or sea,
Waking to life.
We hail thy dawning ray,
Bright coronation day!
The King of Kings bears sway,
And ends the strife.

S. BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Vt.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

"The Going Forth of the Commandment."

It has been stoutly and repeatedly affirmed that no commandment "to restore and build Jerusalem" went forth from the court of Persia, in the 20th year of Artaxerxes; that it was merely obtaining the king's consent, that Nehemiah had leave to go to Jerusalem; but no prominent decree like that to Ezra can be produced, as a date to the vision of Daniel. In reply to the foregoing assertion, I would say, there is no prophecy in the Bible, which has had its fulfillment, that is plainer to understand than Dan. 9 : 25, under the administration of Nehemiah; for the features of the prophecy are distinctly presented in the fulfillment, and there is no room for a doubt that the commandment, which dated the vision, did go forth in the 20th year of Artaxerxes.

But it is not impossible that Nehemiah himself gave the command which commenced the vision; he was clothed with power sufficient, when he left Babylon, to go to Jerusalem and summon his countrymen together, deliver his letters, and issue that very edict which dated the vision. And did he do it? We have seen what he could do, and now let us learn what he did do. "So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days. And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem. . . . And I went out by night, by the gate of the valley, . . . and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire. . . . And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers. . . . Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire. Come, and let us build up the walls of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach. Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, let us rise up, and build. So they strengthened their hands for the work." Neh. 2 : 11–18.

Here we learn from Nehemiah himself what he did; and Josephus is very explicit on the same subject. He says, "He (Nehemiah) came to Jerusalem; . . . and when he had shown the epistles to God, (or spread them before the Lord,) he gave them to Adeus, and to the other governors. He also called together all the people to Jerusalem, and stood in the midst of the temple, and made the following speech to them: 'You know, O Jews, that God hath kept our fathers, Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in mind continually. . . . Indeed, he hath assisted me in gaining this authority of the king to raise up our wall, and finish what is wanting of the temple. I desire you, therefore, who well know the ill-will our neighboring nations have to us, . . . that you will, in the first place, put your trust in God, . . . and to intermit building neither night nor day; but to use all diligence and to hasten on the work; now, we have this especial opportunity for it.' When he had said this, he gave order that the rulers should measure the wall, and part the work of it among the people, . . . as every man's abilities should require." Now if the king did not in word give the command to build Jerusalem, then he invested Nehemiah with power to do it; and it seems by the foregoing quotation that he (i. e. Nehemiah,) did do it. He (Artaxerxes,) commissioned him to govern Judea, and ordered the governors of the other provinces "to pay due honor to Nehemiah, and to supply him with what he wanted for his building." This gave Nehemiah power to command even the governors to do his bidding; but he was of a meek and rightoous disposition, and made no ostentatious display of his power, but said to his brethren, "Come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem:" and he gave orders to the rulers to divide the work.

Here is certainly a decree that Jerusalem shall be restored and built; and it is from Nehemiah. "Know, therefore, and understand that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah." Coverdale's translation of this prophecy is as follows: "Understand this then, and mark it well, that from the time it shall be concluded to go and repair Jerusalem again," &c. This last translation may be thought to favor the supposition that Nehemiah's decree was the commencing date of Daniel's vision; for Nehemiah's doings there do look very much like concluding to repair Jerusalem; and I think no one need be at a loss to determine who issued the commandment from which the vision begins. Now, as Nehemiah obtained leave of the king in the first month, (Nisan) it has been supposed that the 2300 days began at that date, or as soon after as the necessary preparation could be made. But if the vision is to be reckoned from Nehemiah's decree, then it could not begin before the sixth or seventh month. Why? Because he could not issue the decree till after he had arrived at Jerusalem, and after three days' rest from his journey; and his examination of the work and calling them all together to Jerusalem, could not all be done short of five months from his departure from Babylon. Josephus says, "it is four months' journey from the river Euphrates;" and this agrees with Ezra's declaration of the time of his going up from Babylon. He says, "For upon the first day of the first month began he to go up from Babylon; and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem." Ezra 7 : 9. Nehemiah probably left the Persian court in the second month. But he could not reach Jerusalem before the sixth month; and after a little rest, and examination of the walls and assembling of the Jews, which would perhaps take about a month, before he would be able to give any special orders about the work; and it would not be unreasonable to suppose that his orders, at least, were given in the seventh month, while standing in the midst of the temple of God.

It may be said, the Jews kept the feast of tabernacles in the seventh month. Neh. 8 : 16–18. True, but that was not kept till the walls were built. Again, it may be said, the wall was finished in the sixth month, in fifty-two days." Chap. 6 : 15. True, the wall was finished in the sixth month, but not in the first year after Nehemiah came to Jerusalem: and to suppose that all the work of preparation and building of the wall was performed in the short space of fifty-two days, would give us a very meagre idea of the greatness of the work, though the putting of the materials together, after they were prepared, was unquestionably done "in fifty and two days;" for they were required to "put their trust in God, to intermit building neither night nor day, but to use all diligence, and hasten on the work." But they had to cut and prepare their timber and other materials for the building; their instruments to work with, and their weapons of defence against their adversaries; which would take time, and the opposition they had to contend with, must greatly retard them in their preparation for the work. And, besides, Nehemiah had to settle all their disputes, and hear and judge of their complaints of debts, mortgages, and bondage, and see that restitution was made to the poor and defenceless, of their lands and houses, olive-yards and vineyards. He exacted of the nobles and rulers an oath, and laid them under a curse to perform it; and they all said, "Amen, and praised the Lord." Chap. 5. And here we can see that the whole drift of the narrative shows plainly that the preparation for, and building of that wall, was the work of years. The self-sacrifices which Nehemiah made for the good of his brethren, and the devotion of his heart to God, (of which we learn much from Chap. 9,) shows him to have been a superior character, and eminently worthy of the exalted station which he was called to fill. His dignity and firmness, his humility and faithfulness, are so beautifully blended together, they present him to the mind as an object of admiration. The dangers to which he was constantly exposed, the trials he suffered, the labors he performed, and the perils through which he sometimes waded with his companions in tribulation, prove, with the highest certainty, that the walls were "built in troublous times," and that the builders must have endured as seeing Him who is invisible. "And this trouble (says Josephus) he underwent for two years and four months; for in so long time was the wall built." Thus were the walls completed, and the builders were relieved from their great anxiety, which they had endured when laboring on the wall; for "every one, with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon." And now they hold a feast, "and offered sacrifices to God for the building of them, and they continued in feasting eight days. . . . So when Nehemiah had done many other excellent things, and things worthy of commendation in a glorious manner, he came to a great age, and then died. He was a man of a good and righteous disposition, and very ambitious to make his own nation happy; and he hath left the walls of Jerusalem as an eternal monument for himself." Jos. Ant., B. 11, Chap. 5, Sec. 6, 7, 8.

From the foregoing it will be seen, as plainly as any thing can be seen that has been fulfilled, of prophecy, that Nehemiah did fulfill the prophecy of building the streets and walls in troublous times, and though nothing is said about his age when he came to Jerusalem, it is more than probable that his administration continued, with but one exception, during the whole forty-nine years, i. e., the first period of the vision. His commission, as governor of Judea, appears at first to have been limited to twelve years, (Chap. 13 : 6,) which ended in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, and he returned to the court of Persia; and after certain days obtained leave to return, and came again to Jerusalem, unquestionably clothed with the same power which he had before. And as "he came to a great age, and then died," there can be no doubt but that he fulfilled the first period of the vision, and was buried in Jerusalem. Now if he fulfilled the first period of the vision, in building "the streets and walls," as has, I think, been abundantly shown, and departed this life at the end of forty-nine years, I am forced to the conclusion that he gave the commandment after he had arrived at Jerusalem, which dated the vision.

But I leave the subject now for others to determine. Will some more able writer count up his or her reasons and present them, if they have any, either for or against this view of the subject? for there are many among our ranks who are "mighty in the scriptures," and knowledge of history, who have time and ability to wield the pen skillfully, and to produce powerful arguments, which I hope to see, and for which I shall look.

B. P. HILDRETH.

Westford, July 10, 1857.

For the Crisis.

With Whom?

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF PURE DOCTRINE.

To whom is committed the "sound doctrine," which "they will not fear?" in the times that shall come, and which are now come. Who are to exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine? The people are exhorted to follow the faith of the Elders, who have the word to preach. The doctrine—the truth—was given to Timothy; "the word" to be given to faithful men,—men in the ministry.

Now the mission of the ministry of the word is, to "disciple" all nations. If then the work of the Lord in the hands of his Apostles, Evangelists, Pastors, &c., is to make disciples, there is evidence that treasury of knowledge is with them; that the knowledge of God which the "priest's lips should keep," is the fountain of pure doctrine to the church. The Scriptures are given by inspiration, that the man of God, especially the minister, who is a director in the Lord's work, may be furnished thoroughly unto all good works; and this very endowment is "for the work of the ministry, the perfecting of the saints, the edifying of the body of Christ."

There will not one voice dissent from the statement that, the obligation rests upon the class of men whom God has called to preach the true doctrine of the kingdom of God. Here is the fearful responsibility of the divinely commissioned legate of Christ, bearing the word of reconciliation to a rebel world. "Woe is me, if I preach not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." But if they who were sent into all the world for the world's good were to preach, then, upon them rests the obligation and the power to speak the truth, establishing converts in things that are true, and doctrinally pure, as well as to secure converts to the services and hopes of the word.

It may be answered that few have been willing to meet the requirements of this obligation. Indeed! And why?—The church has heaped teachers up because she has "itching ears;" but will that neutralize the position of ministers, and compromise the truth? Not at all. It may in the purpose of the congregation; it may in the action of the unfaithful servant, for the time, but not in the divine requirement—not in the plan and power of God's arrangement. If a man has been called to the work, it is his duty to preach what God says, or retire! if he has taken the place of the servant in the ministry, he should strive to meet its responsibilities as to preaching the true way of the Lord, or leave it;—no matter how much people may object, who do not like the divine doctrine; no matter how popular he is or may be by withholding a portion of the pure testimony.

The fact that so many are called by "the church," and must preach what the church requires, is a strong argument that the few who are called by Christ should advance the pure and heavenly doctrine, without qualification, as it is. I discover a tendency of the church, of different sects, to call ministers by their own name, and claim a possessorship in them. A presbytery at Dubuque, I think, has directed "her" minister to contend for sprinkling or effusion, as the mode of baptism. So says the "Tennessee Baptist." That church would direct her ministry, on other points, and, perhaps, to the reverse, if not on a more delicate subject. The people of God are, by figure, supposed to be led by the preaching of the word, "that they may grow thereby."

Now the character of the growth will depend upon the supply. If the whole church be gone away from correct conceptions of the scriptural plan of life, at whose door must the blame be laid? It is the fault of the ministry. A few exceptions will always be found under the most faithful efforts; but when the character is established for unbelief, in a whole body of believers, by profession, it must indicate most surely the instructions which they have received.

With the preacher of the Lord's truth, then, rests the power of light upon the mind of the people; and, consequently, the responsibility of their conviction. I know this is fearful. Men will, on the one hand, oppose the divine arrangement, which necessarily requires and secures it; on the other, they will shrink from assuming it. Still, it is so established by a very wise and efficient institution, and exemplified by the results which continually follow.

The very nature of the case shows that the position is correct. The commands to preserve and communicate sound and pure doctrinal truth, with the injunction, that we take heed how, and what we hear, prove it. Shall we present a pure faith and people when he calls?

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

An Acknowledgement.

My thanks are due those brethren who have so kindly responded to my queries, and permit me to say, that the explanations given were quite satisfactory with the exception of that of Matt. 24; 20, which does not look quite clear to my mind; for I suppose it was not the flight of christians from the destruction of Jerusalem, but from Papal persecution, centuries later, to which reference is had in the text. But if it was after the Abomination of the Desolation was set up, that Christ recognized a sabbath, I think it argues more in favor of the first day than the seventh; for Sunday-keeping had become almost universal as early as the sixth century.

But I agree with E. B that "it had nothing to do with the sacredness of the day." And though this text is often quoted by the seventh-day people, I cannot see as it favors them at all.

But I would not be understood as advocating the "no Sabbath" theory—a theory which if carried out would be most disastrous in its effect on society, and would show a recklessness of law and order incompatible with christian character; and cause offence in violation of the law of love which bids us "Love thy neighbor as thyself." Although I am perfectly satisfied that the law of God, given by Moses, is no longer our school-master, but that we are now under the New Covenant—the Covenant of grace—the law of faith—the law of Christ, which is the law of love; and that there is in the New Testament no positive command for the observance of a Sabbath; yet, I belive the blessed law of love, if it is written on our hearts, will lead us to conform to every thing that is for the good of the community around us: and the law of love cannot clash with the law of God.

I consider the Sabbath a blessed institution given us by an over-ruling providence, not enjoined by the "law of sin and death." I prize it highly as a gift, or privilege; and even if it does happen to come on Sunday, I can sing,—

"Day of all the week the best,
Emblem of eternal rest."

Sunday-keeping is well enough, and if people would only be content to "let well enough alone," there would no occasion for so much striving about the law. But when a people come out and tell us that we are violating God's holy law if we do not observe the seventh day, and that if we observe the first day we are reversing an institution of the Papacy, and consequently receive the "mark of the beast;" and when we see them laboring with untiring zeal, and an earnestness worthy of a better cause, gaining adherents—one or two in a family—one or two families in a neighborhood, thus causing much unnecessary inconvenience and bringing again the law of bondage,—who can remain silent?

I believe our seventh-day brethren are in an error on this point. But I would not for a moment question their honesty, or their piety; for, as far as my acquaintance with them has extended, I find them a self-sacrificing devoted people.

But Oh! it is painful to see those who are looking for the immediate coming of the divine Master, and who should be united in one common faith, so divided and sub-divided, and distracted on various questions, until a spirit of intolerance,—the exact opposite of charity—(the only true test) prevails to an alarming extent. May the Lord enable us all to put on that charity without which we are nothing; and avoid that spirit which looks very much like the mark of the beast whose great characteristic was INTOLERANCE.

MARTHA.

Woodstock, N. H. July, 17, '57.

For the Crisis.

"Be ye Clothed with Humility."

The gospel battering machine strikes at the foundation stones of the temple of sin, and causes consternation among those who worship at her shrine; nothing among all the commands strikes more directly at their heart, than these emphatic words,—"be ye clothed with humility." Let us enter this heathenish temple, and, in the name of the God of heaven, utter from this text his BURNING TRUTH.

First, let us examine the temple, and those that are seated within its walls, that we may understand if this text, as we have said, is adapted to them. This edifice, with its massive burning columns, had for its designer, the king of the bottomless pit,—report says, he whispered that it was for the worship of God, and we know not but nominally it is still for that purpose. As we glance at the frescoings, and behold the gorgeous windows that admit the reflected colors of the rainbow; as we look over the congregation, see the man of wealth, with his jewelled lady sailing along the aisle; the fashionable young lady, who has been very particular to display the diamond rings, gold necklaces, and dazzling silks, we must admit that if this gospel were to be sounded in their ears, there would be a clashing between the motives that actuate them, and the principles embodied in the text, and both their ears would tingle. But let us, in the fear of God, "sound the ALARM that the people may tremble." Although they may profess to worship God, they may turn us from the house if we utter the sentiments of the text, for proud as the powers of hell,—than whom none prouder can be found, who, as Milton tells us, thought it—

"Better to reign in hell, than serve in heaven;"

they admit of nothing in their creed that interferes with their "right" to dress and be as popular as they please, so as to receive the greatest attention from the beau monde.

Oh! we feel as we look forth from this pulpit, that the indignation of God must be aroused at this sacrilege, this professing to worship God, and yet bowing down to the shrine of mammon. We cannot refrain from speaking and saying, "Oh! ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord;"—"Be ye clothed with humility." Ye are proud, knowing nothing; think ye that there can be ought but a stink come up to Jehovah's nostrils from this abominable idolatry? "Your beauty is corrupted," for as the cohorts of Cæsar aimed at the visages of Pompey's army, so does God's truth strike at your boasted beauty. You think to worship God, and one would think, as some of you are professors of religion, that the God of heaven was a fashionable God; but in his sight "how has the gold become dim." "All is vanity:" all is in opposition to the text—"be ye clothed with humility." God loves the humble heart, he delights to dwell there, for there he can work without a rival. But you, who are so proud, how would you look sailing, decked in your gaudy trappings, through the streets of the new Jerusalem? Hell would be astonished at such impiety!

"O, generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Bring forth fruits meet for repentance, "that your sins may be blotted out;" and with your vanity exchanged for a lowly heart, you shall be found saved at last, and clothed, not with gold and diamonds, but—with the robes of Jesus' righteousness.

Ho. Tis.

From Sr. M. E. Wood.

Bro. Grant:—As I read the Crisis week after week, I find much to comfort, edify, correct, instruct, and help me to pursue the narrow way that leads to life. It has been a little more than a year since we received the Crisis. It has been a great help to me and my companion. We have not had the privilege of meetings. Although we are strangers here, we are children of one family, and I believe we shall all be safe at home in a little while.

It has been two years last fall, since I became a believer in the Bible. I never have been a firm believer in time, until during the three months that have passed, and I never had such a desire to have the Lord come and gather his people home as I do at this time. How true it is, that we are in the perils of the last days. The enemy is going about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. O let us be faithful, and soon we'll be in that land of rest where there will be no enemy to disturb our peace. I feel a great interest for near and dear friends. If this should meet the eye of any who are unconverted, I warn you as a friend, to prepare for that day that is just ready to burst upon an ungodly world.

I hope the dear brethren and sisters will pray for me, that I may have grace and wisdom from God to direct me in the path of duty, for I believe in a prayer-hearing, and a prayer-answering God. O let us ask of him just such things as we need, and we shall have them. While penning these few lines, I feel the love of God kindling in my soul, which enables me to rejoice in view of one day getting home, where trials and sorrows shall end. Here we have our loved ones taken by the cruel monster death, and laid away in the grave. Blessed be the Lord! they will come up from their dusty beds in a little while, and into their own promised land.

"We'll be there, we'll be there, in a little while,
We'll join the pure and the blest;
We'll have the palm, the robe, the crown,
And forever be at rest."

May the Lord help us to keep all the commandments, that when Jesus comes to make up his jewels, we may have a place in his kingdom. Yours in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes,

Mary E Wood.

Springfield, Vt.

From Sr. A. Bassett.

Bro. Grant:—I feel that it is highly important we should give heed to the word of the Lord, as unto a light shining in a dark place, and not to give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. I can say with good old Moses, I esteem the reproach of Christ greater riches than all the treasures of Egypt.

Brethren and Sisters, let us go forth without the camp, bearing the reproach of the Lord, for it is better to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Let us preach the doctrine of Christ, which is this,—"If I go away, I will come again." What a blessed promise. For one, I feel willing to do all I am able, to hold up the truth, and I pray God to bestow on all his children, wisdom and true knowledge, so that we be not in the dark concerning that day.

We are assured that if we serve the Lord Jesus Christ we shall receive the reward of the inheritance; hence, we are commanded to seek for glory, honor, immortality, and eternal life through our Savior Jesus, who will come to change our vile bodies, and fashion them like his own glorious body. I thank God that I have not been left to believe the lie—"ye shall not surely die." Weak mortals! how little you think on the all-important subject of our having immortality through Jesus, and how unconscious you are of the mighty delusion of Satan which he palmed off on Adam and Eve, in the garden of Eden, and of which all the spirit theory of the present day is only a revival. Satan has been faithful to his calling, has fought his battle well. How perfectly he has carried out his deception, even to this present hour; and in these last days is filling the minds of priests and people with the deception, "ye shall not die."

I pray God to bestow upon us wisdom, and light, and love, that we may be enabled by grace divine to continue unto the end. I feel truly thankful, that in God alone is immortality. When I awake in his likeness, I shall be satisfied, for God says, "I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward." Your Sister,

A. Bassett.

Williamsburg, June, 19.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 29, 1857.

Rich Man and Lazarus.

Lk. 16: 19–31.

No. III.

In our last we endeavored to show that this account could not be a history of what actually took place. But we are sometimes met with the objection, that, "all parables are founded on facts," and consequently such a case happened at some time. We think those who make such a remark should examine the Bible and laws of language more closely before they repeat the statement. We would ask if the following parable, from Ezk. 17: 2–8, is founded on fact?—

"Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel; and say, thus saith the Lord God, a great eagle with great wings, long-winged, full of feathers, which had divers colors, came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar; he cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic, he set it in a city of merchants. He took also of the seed of the land, and planted it in a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow tree; and it grew and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him; so it became a vine and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs. There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers; and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of his plantation."

It must be a very strange eagle that takes the branches off from the cedar and sets them out, causing them to grow "in a city of merchants;" and then takes the seed of the land to plant, raising vines which spread their branches towards himself! and more than this, the roots grow towards another great eagle! We think all can see that this parable is not founded in fact.

Again, I think no one will claim that the parable of Jotham is founded in fact, recorded in Judges 9: 8–15. It reads—

"The trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them, and they said unto the olive tree, reign thou over us. But the olive tree said unto them, should I leave my fatness, wherewith by me they honor God and man, and go to be promoted over the trees? And the trees said to the fig-tree, come thou and reign over us. But the fig-tree said unto them, should I forsake my sweetness, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees? Then said the trees unto the vine, come thou and reign over us. And the vine said unto them, should I leave my wine, which cheereth God and man, and go to be promoted of the trees? Then said all the trees unto the bramble, come thou and reign over us. And the bramble said unto the trees, if in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your trust in my shadow; and if not, let fire come out of the bramble, and devour the cedars of Lebanon."

Do trees talk, assemble together, and appoint kings? Without further remarks on this point, we think all must be convinced that parables are not always "founded on fact."

We now return to the Scripture under consideration—"the rich man and Lazarus." We think it has been clearly shown in a former article, that it is not a historic account of what actually took place, but a parable, given in connection with others to illustrate the character and history of the Jews as connected with the Gentiles. The Savior showed the Jews, who accused him of receiving sinners, and eating with them, that, when they lost a sheep or piece of money, they endeavored most faithfully to restore the lost, and that they rejoiced when success attend their effort; but when Jesus came to save lost sinners, who are of more value than all the sheep or money, the Jews were offended, as illustrated by the parable of the Prodigal Son. The elder brother should have felt great joy when the lost one was found and restored to his father's family; but instead of this feeling, he is offended, and refuses to cooperate in the rejoicing.

After instructing his disciples by the parable of the unjust steward, how to use the mammon of unrighteousness; Jesus tries once more to convince the Pharisees that the time had come to put away the law, by saying, in verses 16—18, that "the law and the prophets were until John," and, consequently, if they went back to the law, they would be guilty of adultery, or of marrying the divorced; but as the Jews still refused to hear him, he proceeded to fortell their history 'as well as the gentiles' in the parable of the "rich man and Lazarus."

The question now arises, who is represented by the "rich man and Lazarus?" According to the laws of parables and symbols, the rich man does not represent a rich man, neither does the beggar symbolize a poor man, for then it would cease to be a parable, and be changed to a simple history of the two individuals; but we think the absurdity of the historic view has been clearly shown. In the parable of the tares and wheat, the tares represent the wicked, and not literal tares; and the wheat symbolizes the righteous, and not literal wheat; and the same principle is applicable to all parables; and when applied to the rich man and Lazarus, it is at once evident, that, as the rich man and the beggar do not symbolize literal men, their death does not represent literal death; in short, that which is symbolized, is different from the symbol: hence it follows also, that the grave, the gulf, the flame, and Abraham's bosom, do not represent themselves, for if they do, they are no part of the parable; therefore, when we come at its true meaning, crumbs, dogs, sores, &c., will not represent crumbs, dogs and sores, but something bearing an analogy to the symbol; in other words, the poor man represents that which is in a degraded condition, and afterwards exalted, while the rich man symbolizes that which is highly favored and exalted, and subsequently meets with a complete reverse.

Having shown, as we believe, that the common application of this parable to the intermediate state of the dead, cannot be true, because it makes the Bible contradict itself, and also does violence to the plain principles of justice, by sending men to their reward and punishments, before the day of judgment, it remains for the advocates of the common theory to give us an exposition that shall be in harmony with sound principles of exegesis and the Bible itself. As Jesus has given us no explanation of this parable, we do not feel under obligation to offer any ourselves, but, in order that the whole conversation of the Savior at this time may be made plain, it seems proper that a brief exposition should be presented.

(To be Concluded.)

New Book.—The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, and the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Boston: Published by the Author. 1857.

In this work the author has labored to present a clear, concise and scriptural view of the kingdom of God—the Saint's Inheritance. It is well calculated to enlighten the minds of those who are unacquainted with our hopes. It is a work for the times. Let it be widely circulated among those who need light on this important subject. It is a neat 12mo. pamphlet of about 60 pages, paper covers. Price 10 cents single, $6 per hundred. 90 cts per dozen. Postage one cent. For sale at this office; and also by the author at East Weare, N. H.

—We have also some excellent tracts published by Bro. H. L. Hastings, entitled Olive Leaves, Plain Truths, Day of Judgment, Forty Questions, Ancient Landmarks, and many other good tracts and books noticed in our published list. Brn. and Sisters, these tracts and books ought to be in circulation. Incalculable good may be accomplished by sending forth these silent preachers to your friends and neighbors. Let every church form a tract society, and pay weekly the price paid for tea, coffee, tobacco, and other superfluities, and we think many will rise up to bless us, and give glory to the Lord. Who will engage in the work?

Remember, we do not feel under obligation to publish articles sent to the Crisis, unless we know the real name of the author. Please recollect this, and always send your name.

Foreign News, unimportant this week.

From Bro. C. Goodrich.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me to say through the Crisis, to the saints scattered abroad in New Lebanon, Cheshire, Savoy, Adams, &c., that I have not forgotten them, although I have not been able to visit them this summer as I expected; but if the Lord will, I intend to travel through that region in the fall.

I shall be happy to hear from any and all of them, by letter. Direct to South Farms, Ct.

C. Goodrich.

For the Crisis.

Rest in God.

From all the ills and vanities of life it is sweet to rest. And earth gives us no such place as we need in which we may securely repose. If we will rest securely, we must rest in God. If we would rest permanently, we must rest in God. If we will rest eternally, we must rest in God. This is our hiding place, our strong tower; the rock of our refuge; the covert; the shelter from the tempest, from every danger, from every foe. Here the soul escapes from the roaring of the lion and the charming of the serpent. Here he is hidden from the strife of the earth; sorrows may roll themselves about him, but they break as billows break at the base of some projecting, rocky promontory. Ah! there is nothing in earth, like rest in God!—nothing so sweet, so sacred, so secure—nothing so calm, so constant, so serene, so enduring as this. O, my soul, rest in God. Rest there in every weariness and woe. Rest patiently, calmly, securely, eternally. Cease from sin, and enter into rest. "Return unto thy rest, O my soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with me."

Believer, do you know this rest?—this heavenly freedom from the troubles that encompass, and the woes that affright? Do you hie from the troublous strife of dull mortality to the fount of everlasting strength—the God of all peace, and rest, and consolation? Do you trust under the shadow of Jehovah's wings? O, my brother, if you do not know this blessedness, then you are but half acquainted with the fullness of divine mercy and goodness. Learn to rest in the Lord. Strengthen your faith by the precious promises of his word. Cast all your cares upon him, and find in him an ever present help.

And you who are out of Christ—you who like the troubled sea, have no rest, will you not learn to rest in God? Will you not come to him whose yoke is easy, and whose burden is light? Will you not make him the rock of your refuge—your strong tower into which you may flee and be secure? O, tempted, wavering, doubting, downcast sinner, come and find rest in Christ. Cast on him all your cares, all your sins and sorrows, and enter into rest—rest that shall be lasting as eternal years, and calm and joyous as the air of Paradise. O, weary one, Rest in the Lord.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Conference.

The third meeting of the Rock Island and Eastern Iowa Conference was held in Cordova, Ill., July 3d, 4th and 5th, 1857.

Met at the chapel, July 3d, nine o'clock, A. M. After reading of the scriptures by Eld. M. Chandler, (Rom. 12,) and a hymn (No. 845) by Elder Spencer, with a season of prayer, conference was organized. Eld. N. W. Spencer was appointed President, Eld. M. Chandler Vice President, and G. W. Dean appointed Secretary. Opening discourse by Eld. H. H. Janes. Text, Psalms 133: 1. The following brethren were appointed a business committee: P. B. Morgan, H. H. Janes, and Wm. Blackman. Adjourned to meet at one o'clock, P. M.

Conference met at one o'clock. Brn. Howell and Mansfield, of McHenry Co., invited to a sitting with the conference.

Cordova Church. Delegates; G. W. Dean, H. B. Gilbert, and G. W. Turner. Organized the church last Oct.; now numbered about twenty-seven, with many brethren and sisters whose names are not with us on the church book. By the vigilant effort of Bro. Chandler, they have a good chapel which they have hoped would shortly be paid for, without farther embarrassment to Bro. Chandler. Last winter had a precious revival of religion, the effects of which continued yet. Elder Chandler and Morgan now supply them with preaching. Congregation good. Have a Sabbath School.

Princeton (Iowa) Church. Delegates; Wm. Blackman, B. Williams, J. C. Murphy, and A. Lancaster. During the season past, the church has somewhat declined by reason of some moving away; others have died, and others have neglected the assembling of themselves together; yet a few have been added to the church. Have it yet in contemplation to build a house of worship. Have preaching by Brn. Morgan and Chandler.

Moline Church was represented by Bro. N. Branch, Jr. Their church has greatly declined by brethren removing, yet some of the true children of God are there. Worship in a Hall. Have no preaching except from transient preachers. Are hoping for a revival. Adjourned to hear preaching by Eld. N. W. Spencer, from Isa. 2: 22. Preaching in the evening by Eld. John Howell.

Conference met Saturday morning, at nine o'clock. Reports continued.

Wilton (Iowa) Church. Represented by Bro. J. Covell. A church had been organized there during the past winter resulting from God's blessing them with the labors of Eld. P. B. Morgan. Have a good prospect before them. Said of Muscatine, (Iowa,) there were a few prominent and worthy men who confess the truth, and thinks with a suitable effort a good interest might be established there. Of Fair Port, (Iowa,) he said, Bro. Morgan gave a few discourses there last winter, or fall, and with apparently good effect; was quite an interest to hear again on the subject of our blessed hope.

Green River. Of this place Bro. Morgan said, there were a few worthy friends in that place, yet desiring help, and he doubted not that with a suitable effort much good might be accomplished. There is already the nucleus of a good church there. Hoped they might soon have help.

Camanche, Iowa. Bro. Currier said there were no brethren in that place looking for the Lord except himself and the family of Bro. Fenn, recently from Ct. Bro. Chandler recently spent a Sabbath there and found some interest to hear. Bro. Chandler said he had labored awhile during the past winter in Elizabeth, Joe. Davis Co., where are some good substantial brethren, as likewise at Brush Creek, where he spent some time. They need help.

Bro. King, of Sterling, Whiteside Co., (Ill.) late of Ogle Co., said, except his family, he was alone in that place—a village of some 3000 inhabitants; yet he desired, as formerly he had done, to enjoy the influence and help of the Advent brethren. Had never had an Advent sermon in that place. He would urge the Macedonian cry,—"Come over and help us."

The cause in DeKalb Center, DeKalb Co., was represented by Eld. Janes. Said it was a church which came into existence by the blessing of God attending the labors of Eld. S. Chapman. Was called to its charge when he first came west, some two years since; but by many friends removing west, they were nearly broken down, yet their congregations continued good. New doors were constantly opening. Bro. Janes wept that his circumstances would not permit him to do more for the many destitute regions.

Eld. Spencer said the church in Shabbona Grove, DeKalb Co., (Ill.,) had been considerably reduced by removals, declensions and death; yet there are a good number striving for the Kingdom, and who are willing to sustain laborers among them. Other places in his vicinity might have good accomplished with judicious labor.

Brn. Howell and Mansfield said of the cause in Harvard, McHenry Co., (Ill.,) they had a substantial, organized church in their place of nearly forty members. Worship in a large, pleasant Hall. Have a Sabbath School in connection with the Presbyterian and other brethren. The entire church were believers in the truth of immortality only through Christ, and what is termed the "Age to come," although on the latter subject he (Bro. Howell) never preached to them. Did not make a hobby of any thing.

Report of the business committee accepted and adopted by the conference.

Whereas, we are now living in days of imminent peril to the church, during which we may daily look for the glorious Advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, therefore,

Resolved, That as a conference we signify to the churches, that we earnestly believe it to be the duty of Adventists in the West to make large sacrifices, and a more earnest and continuous effort than has ever yet been made to save our cause from spiritual barrenness and death.

Whereas, in the present condition of Western Advent churches, and the caus of God generally, as represented in this conference, we believe that much might be done for the furtherance of the cause of God by the labors of an efficient Evangelist, therefore,

Resolved, That we feel it incumbent upon us as a conference, to appoint and support an efficient Evangelist to travel within the bounds, or region of this conference.

Resolved, That such Evangelist be required to appoint and attend a conference with each church herein represented, and any other churches signifying their desire to co-operate in this arrangement—to arrange with them for preaching, and otherwise labor for their upbuilding.

Resolved, That such Evangelist have the general superintendence of all Missionary matters appertaining to this conference; seeking suitable places and men for such labor, and suggesting the same to the standing committee provided for in the Constitution of this conference, who with himself shall have authority to make appointments, disburse funds, &c.

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of such Evangelist, while surveying this field, to look with special care for such young men as are, or may be called to the ministry, employing them where and as his judgment will allow, commending such of them as evince the possession of the necessary gifts and graces, to the attention of the next conference for such encouragement as it can bestow.

Resolved, That such Evangelist be also required to act as the Agent of this conference in receiving collections and subscriptions on behalf of the Conference and Missionary Fund.

Resolved, That the conference pledge such Evangelist the sum of ($500,) five hundred dollars for the ensuing year, which sum shall be paid out of the conference fund, if not otherwise received, which sum may be increased if, in the judgment of the committee in auditing his accounts, his family or traveling expenses justly require it.

Resolved, the Evangelist appointed by this conference be subject to the cognizance of the conference committee, who shall have authority, upon sufficient reason, to silence or suspend such Evangelist, and appoint another in his stead.

Resolved, such evangelist be appointed by ballot.

Whereas, we have a mutual interest in the common cause of our Divine Master, and whereas we believe much might be done, both for our mutual good and the visible advancement of God's cause, by establishing a common fund, therefore,

Resolved, That we establish a fund known as the "Conference and Home Mission Fund."

Resolved, That each church make such effort as it can toward this end, which money shall be placed in the hands of this conference, and appropriated according to its discretion; which appropriation, with the amount received from each individual, or church, shall be printed with the minutes of the conference.

Whereas, we recognize in the distribution of tracts and religious publications a powerful auxiliary to the work of enlightening men in the gospel; and whereas, Bro. N. Branch, Jr., of Moline, (Ill.) has at this time some hundreds of dollars worth of tracts and publications on hand which may be obtained at eastern wholesale prices; therefore,

Resolved, that this conference establish a "Tract Fund," for the purpose of supplying the Evangelist, destitute places, and poor brethren, with publications for gratuitous distribution.

Resolved, That until such fund can be established, we urge upon our brethren the importance of at once supplying themselves with tracts from Bro. Branch, as an opportunity placed within our reach by the good hand of Providence for this end.

Whereas, for want of a mutual understanding and general co-operation in arrangements and labors among Advent churches in the west, we are doing but little to what we might otherwise do; therefore,

Resolved, That Elders P. B. Morgan, M. Chandler, J. Howell, N. W. Spencer and H. H. Janes be appointed to draft and lay before our churches a plan* which shall suggest arrangements suited to the several wants of the churches.

Resolved, That we recommend a number of Tent meetings to be held with the N. E. Mission Tent during the summer, in localities convenient for the gathering of our brethren, and that those meetings be seasons of especial effort for the advancement of God's cause in those localities.

Whereas, after mutual consultation it is the mind of this conference that it could more effectually subserve the ends for which it was organized by being formed with an annual conference with the appointments of several quarterly conferences; therefore,

Resolved, That the plan of forming an annual conference, with such quarterly conferences, embracing all the interests identified with the Advent cause in the state of Illinois and contiguous regions, be urged upon the consideration of the brethren and churches, forming this and other conferences in the region, and such arrangements be entered into, if thought expedient, at the next regular sitting of this conference. Voted, said Evangelist receive his pay quarterly.

After twice balloting, Eld. P. B. Morgan was unanimously chosen Evangelist and agent for the ensuing year, being allowed three months in which to make a visit to New England,† before entering upon his work as Evangelist.

Voted, the minutes of this conference be printed in the Advent Herald, World's Crisis, and Prophetic Expositor.

Voted, we now receive contributions or pledges for the "Conference and Mission Fund;" when the sum of one hundred and eighty-seven dollars was pledged.

Voted, to adjourn to meet in such place as the conference committee shall deem wise. C. W. Dean, Secretary.

*A plan was drawn and adopted by conference, and will appear in pamphlet form.—Sec.

†Where he has now gone.

For the Crisis.

The "Root of Bitterness."

"Looking diligently, lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled. Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birth-right." Heb. 12: 15, 16.

We are to look diligently, lest three evils arise; (1) lest any one fail of the grace of God, (2) lest there be a root of bitterness, (3) lest we act like Esau, who sold his birth-right.

Mark! Christ had come—the "Priest after the order of Melchisedec—the royal Priest of the Most High God." He had made his offering and gone into heaven, as the accepted Son of God. But, he had promised to come again the second time unto salvation. Then the voice that once shook the earth, will shake not the earth only, but also heaven. Our "God is a consuming fire." This, in its outline and detail, is the grand field of thought herein embraced. Here, between the cross and the kingdom—the first and second advent—lies the christian race! This race we are to "run with patience," encouraged by the cloud of ancient witnesses for God, and our Lord's example—aided also by the constant sanctions of "eternal judgment."

The "root of bitterness" is that "evil heart of unbelief," or purpose which leads off from the Way—which produces failure in the race, and leaves its subject, like Esau, with the birth-right lost. Simon, the sorcerer, took such a root, and went off into that bitterness when he offered to buy the Holy Ghost! The Jews took up such a root of bitterness, when they went into idolatry. Deut. 29: 18. The "root" of all such departures from God, produced the "bitterness of death."

Few or none seem to know what this "root" is, its relation to "the race set before us." But as the gospel produced fruit unto holiness, so this root is the opposite, producing gall and wormwood, bitterness and death.

Brethren, this is addressed to us primarily, and not to the world outside. Let us beware! mere knowledge—profession—will not save us; we must have "the root of the matter in us." This "root," is faith in God's truth, and its fruit is unto holiness, and the end is everlasting life. The root of bitterness to the primeval pair, was the Tempter's lie which, when acted on, "brought forth death."

This root to Israel was the error which led them from God into apostasy and perdition.

This root to us, is any teacher or evil theory which diverts from faith in "the way, the truth and the Life."

The way, is the sphere of the Christian's race!

The race is as long as the truth, and the truth as it is in Jesus, must needs be embraced in its length, and breadth, and depth, and height, in order to attain the crown of life.

To divert a believer from the truth, by any false views, to plant this root of bitterness, is to be like Esau; a profane person. Such sinners do indeed destroy much good; and thereby many are defiled.

"Beware" how you teach down, or explain away the truth in any of its aspects, or in any of its parts. Let the whole way of truth come out in all its divine fullness, and its essential relations. Let the day of the Lord—the thousand years—the reign of Christ, to "put down all rule, all authority and power," the types, with the law—the prophets and the Psalms, all stand and be fulfilled. Let Judah and Israel, Jerusalem and the nations, have their position in the way and place of God. Let there be no root (or opposite theory) to produce a rejection of the good word—the way of life, at any point in our race. The race is through God's revealed plan. Beware of the least departure. It tends to failure—it savors of this evil "root."

J. B. C.

Good for Evil.

A little boy came to his mamma one rainy afternoon, as he returned from school, and said, "Mamma, may I go just down the street with a little girl that goes to our school?"

She replied, "No, my son; it rains."

He said, "Why, ma', I must go."

"Well, then," said his mother, "go if you must."

On his return, she asked if the girl was a favorite of his.

He said, "O, no; she treats me very ill, worse than any other scholar in school."

"Then why do you wish to go with her?"

He said, "You have taught me that we must do good to them that despitefully use us, and she had a chair to take home, and I did not know of any other way to do her a kindness, so I thought I would carry it for her, and that would be rewarding good for evil."

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"THE LORD LOOKETH AT THE HEART."

Not by the smile that lights the brow,
Not by the beaming eye,
Not by the word upon the tongue,
Thou judgest, O Most High!

Not by life's shifting circumstance—
A lot of good or ill,—
But through the outward garb and mien,
The heart thou viewest still.

The heart, the strange, deep, human heart,
Meets thy all-searching gaze;
Thou seest its guile or purity,
Through right or erring ways.

God looketh at the heart, and guilt
In vain his glance would fly;
But basks the righteous soul beneath
A Father's smiling eye.

Oh! ye who bear the Master's cross,
And in his griefs have part,
Betrayed, accused, oppressed and scorned,
God looketh at the heart!

Maria T.

Obituary.

Died very suddenly in Hampshire, Kane Co., Illinois, on the 18th day of February, 1857, Malantha Hayden, aged sixty-five years.

Domestic Summary.

IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.

PREPARATIONS FOR FIGHTING ON BOTH SIDES.

St. Louis, July 21.

Kansas advices state that the Free State municipal ticket was elected at Lawrence on the 13th. Mr. Blood is Mayor.

A gentleman from Kansas states that at a public meeting on Thurday, 16th, it was determined to resist the U. S. troops, if an attempt was made to collect the taxes, under the territorial law. A gentleman had met Gov. Walker ten miles from Lawrence, with seven companies of infantry, and he said he would arrange matters peaceably if possible, but that he would use force if necessary. The Free State men were hurrying on to Lawrence, and Gen. Lane had been sent for.

Gov. Walker was encamped outside of Lawrence, with eight companies of Dragoons, on the 17th. The citizens had decided not to negotiate with him. They will not resist the troops unless fired upon, when civil war will be declared. Gov. Walker has warrants for the arrest of eighty officers and other citizens of Kansas.

Gov. Walker's Movements.—Lawrence, July 21.—Gov. Walker entered Lawrence yesterday, with eight companies of dragoons under command of Col. Cook. He has camped close to town in a threatening attitude.

His proclamation, issued at Leavenworth, and dated the 15th inst., declares that he will not allow the people to adopt a city charter. He went through Lawrence on his way to Leavenworth, last Monday, to see to this, but never spoke of it in Lawrence. His duplicity has enraged the people. They are determined to pay no attention to him, and will not negotiate with him. Although the town officers were elected last Monday, they have as yet taken no step, not even been sworn in. Gov. Walker has warrants for the arrest of those who were voted for, and for many other prominent citizens of Lawrence. The design is to stop the August election, when the Topeka Constitution is to be submitted to the people. The people will not offer any opposition to the federal troops, unless they fire on them, or commit some other outrage, when civil war will at once be declared. They are resolved not to tolerate any more such villainy.

The Utah Expedition.—Washington, July 20.—The main body of troops destined for the Utah expedition, are expected to take up their line of March to-day from Leavenworth.

Washington, July 22. The President and Cabinet fully endorse Gov. Walker's proclamation. A despatch received to-day says that a collision between the troops and the "rebels" is inevitable. A special express messenger started for Kansas this afternoon with despatches for Gov. Walker and Gen. Harney.

Horrible Poisoning Affair.—Twenty Children poisoned in Cincinnati,—Cincinnati, July 22.—Twenty children on Buckeye street, a densely populated German neighborhood, were poisoned last evening, by eating lozenges, which had been scattered along the street by a man and two boys unknown. Two children are dead, and many others are not expected to live. The lozenges were found to contain equal parts of arsenic, sugar, and flour. The man had been previously seen offering packages of these logenzes to persons in the street. The poisoners have thus far eluded arrest.

Lost Aeronaut.—M. Godard, who ascended in a balloon at Philadelphia on the 4th, came down near Wilmington, left his assistant, and immediately ascended again, with one passenger, since which nothing has been heard of them. Of course they must have perished. Nothing has ever been heard of the aeronaut who ascended at Milan, Erie county, N. Y., last year, and was last seen passing toward Lake Erie.

Arrest of Gamblers at Chicago.—We learn from the Chicago Democrat that a noted gambling den in that city, said to be one of the worst in the country, was entered on Thursday last by the police and sixteen men and boys arrested. The place had been the resort of a number of citizens of Chicago having the "highest pretences to respectability," who have held high offices, and some of whom, the Democrat says, "have been on almost every grand and petit jury within our remembrance." The following paragraphs show how such resorts are managed:

"They have their regular lawyers, whose position in society makes them above suspicion, who see that special bail is always provided, and that some one who frequents the house is always upon the jury, in case any of these men are brought up for trial.

There are little boys connected with it, whose business is to decoy other boys—lads in places of trust, such as bank clerks and others in places of trust, and who have the handling of money, being preferred.

The sons of some of our church members, and of one clergyman at least, have passed hours and hours playing at ten cents a game in this den."

Items.

Cool Water. The following simple method, it is said, will keep water almost as cold as ice:—Let the jar, pitcher, or vessel used for water, be surrounded with one or more folds of coarse cotton, to be constantly wet. The evaporation of the water will carry off the heat from the inside and reduce it to a freezing point. In India, and other tropical climes, where ice cannot be procured, this is common. Let every mechanic and laborer have at his place of employment two pitchers thus provided, and with lids or covers, one to contain fresh water for drinking, the other for evaporation, and he can always have a supply of cold water in warm weather. Any person can test this by dipping a finger in water, and holding it in the air on a warm day; after doing this three or four times he will find his fingers uncomfortably cold.

Average Duration of Human Life.—Prof. Buchanan, in a recent lecture before the Mechanics' Institute at Cincinnati, said that in the latter part of the sixteenth century, one-half of all who were born died under five years of age; the average longevity of the whole population was 18 years. In the 17th century, one-half of the population died under 12. But in the first 60 years of the eighteenth century, one-half of the population lived over 27. In the latter forty years, one-half exceeded 12 years of age. At the beginning of the present century, one-half exceeded 40 years; and from 1838, to 1845, one-half exceeded 43. The average longevity at those successive periods, has been increased from 18 years in the sixteenth century, up to 43,7 by the last reports.

The Mustache in the English Pulpit.—A writer in a late London periodical states that nearly all the English clergymen living between two and three hundred years ago wore the mustache. In his list of those who wore the beard on the upper lip, we find the well known names of John Donne, George Herbert, Robert Herrick, Jeremy Taylor, Thomas Fuller, and Robert South. The famous John Knox and the celebrated John Bunyan wore the mustache; also Wicliff, Cardinal Pole, Archbishop Cranmer, Bishops Ridley, Latimer, Jewel, Holbech, Thirdly, Goodrich, Skip, Day, Archbishop Laud, and a host of others.

Cure for Rheumatism.—A correspondent of the London Medical Circular vouches for the relief he has experienced in the liberal use of lime, (fresh lemon) juice, whilst laboring under the paroxysms of rheumatism. By repeated indulgence in the above simple acid, for the space of three days, avoiding all stimulating liquids, the most confirmed rheumatism will, he says, relax, and the tone of the muscular and nervous system will be restored to its usual character. The fact was first established by the circumstance of the Jews being, as a general body, scarcely ever affected with the above disease, and this particular exemption from the malady under consideration, as affecting the disciples of the Hebrew persuasion was, and has been attributed to the very free indulgence which the above people exercise in their dietary consumption of lemon juice.

Idiots.—Idiotcy is arrested development. There is in all cases a deficiency of brain, a low physical organization, or functional disorganization. The humane and accomplished Dr. Wilbur says, that out of a class of twenty pupils only three could count ten. Their most universal fault was gluttony. Their great want is the power of attention. Many cannot talk; it often requires two or three years to enable them to utter a single word distinctly. In almost all cases home treatment only confirms the malady. In three hundred and fifty-nine cases, all but four originated in parents who had brought on some confirmed disease by the violation of the laws of nature. In every single instance, the four excepted, either one or both parents were either very unhealthy, scrofulous, disposed to insanity, indulged in animal excesses, or had married blood relations. Let every reader commit to memory these five causes, for to have an idiotic child, how terrible the infliction!

More than one-fourth of three hundred and fifty-nine idiots were the children of drunkards; one out of every twenty was the child of the marriage of near relations; in one such family, five children out of eight were idiotic. If then health, temperance, and chastity are not duties, then are we irresponsible.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Unparalleled Longevity.—The oldest person we ever heard or read of in modern times, says the St. Louis Democrat, was a slave woman called Aunt Till, belonging to Capt. Lewis Bissell, who lives near this city. She died on the 8th instant, at the extreme age of one hundred and thirty years.

The Heat of the Earth. By experiments made during the last year by Professor Paizzi Smyth, at Edinburgh, with a series of earth-thermometers imbedded in the earth at varying depths, it was proved that there was a gradually increasing heat of one degree Fahrenheit for every forty feet of depth, so that at less than 2 1-2 miles water would boil, and at less than 100 miles deep all things must be in a state of fusion.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Circassian.

St. Johns, N. F. July 22.

The steamer Circassian, Capt. Powel, from Liverpool 11 inst., arrived at this port at 4 1-4 o'clock this afternoon.

General News.—The English House of Lords have defeated the Jewish oath bill by 34 majority.

Naples is tranquil.

There have been further slight disturbances in Spain.

The submarine cable is expected to be all on board the Niagara by the 20th of July.

Mazzini has escaped from Italy.

The King of Prussia is on a visit to the Emperor of Austria.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

General Campmeeting at North Wilbraham, Mass., commencing August 31st, to continue one week. We expect a large and good meeting.

Campmeeting.

Bro. Grant:—Having just returned from Lynn, where I spent yesterday with the church looking for the return of their Lord, I found quite an interest among them to have a Campmeeting about the middle of September at their place. Upon looking it over, I think it a good place to have one, and will be as easy of access for our brethren in Mass., Me. and N. H., as any place that can be selected; and it seems to me that the cause of Christ and truth might be greatly promoted by having a free, liberal Campmeeting at Lynn, where the lovers of Jesus can gather once more, to exhort one another, as we see the day approaching.

If there is found to be an interest among the churches for this meeting, and the Lord will, you will see a call for it in the papers.

L. Boutell.

Boston, July 27, 1857.

N. B. Let all our brethren interested in this Campmeeting write immediately to the Crisis office, signifying their desires, that we may act together. L. B.

Bro. Thomas Smith appoints to preach at Lincolnville, Me., (Young Town) the first Sabbath in August.
Holden, (Clewley neighborhood) second Sunday in August.
Orrington, (Advent Chapel) third Sunday in August.

The Lord permitting, I will be with the church at Cheshire Street, Ct., August 9th, and Bro. Turner Aug. 23d.

For the brethren, H. Munger.

Bro. E. Whitney appoints to preach in Lowell, Aug. 9th.

Bro O. R. Fassett will preach in the Free Chapel, at West Poland, Me., Aug. 2.

J. Partridge.

Providence permitting, we shall hold a Grove Meeting at North Raymond, on the farm of Bro. Thomas Morrill, on the road leading from Gray to West Poland, about five miles from Gray Corner, to commence the 7th of August, at half past ten in the A. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

J. Partridge.
O. R. Fassett.

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings at Casco, Holden's Corner, at the Union Meeting House, Aug. 13, and over the Sabbath.

J. Partridge.
O. R. Fassett.

Campmeeting.—Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at South Adams, commencing on Monday, the seventh day of September next, to continue over the following Sabbath. The believers of the Second Advent of the Lord are invited to attend. Necessary provision will be provided for man and beast. Further notice will hereafter be given. Brn. invited—R. V. Lyon, H. L. Hastings, R. E. Ladd, and M. Bachelor.

Wm. F. Stitt,
Z. Campbell,
A. Cummings.

Discussion.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 18, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ, has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

John Chapman,
In behalf of the Brethren.

If the Lord will, the church in Lynn, Dyehouse village, may expect Br. A. M. Higgins to be with them the First and Second Sundays of Aug. instead of next Sunday.

A. M. H.

If the Lord will, the church in Salem may expect Sister S. J. Higgins to be with them the First and Second Sundays in Aug., as requested. A. M. H.

Bro. A. Fox appoints to preach at
Winsted, Ct., Aug. 9th
Waterbury, where Bro. Denny may appoint, Aug. 12th
Bridgeport, at the Old Chapel, Aug. 16th
and at the New Chapel at 5 o'clock, or in the evening, as the Brn. may appoint.
Cheshire, where Bro. Dudley may appoint, Aug. 20th
Cheshire Street, Aug. 23d
Lovely Street, Canton, Aug. 30th

Bro. H. Pratt appoints to preach in Worcester, Mass., Aug. 2d

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Carmel, Me., Saturday eve., 6 P. M., Aug. 8th
" " Sunday, Aug. 9th
Bangor, Me., Wednesday eve., Aug. 12th
Hermon, Me., Saturday, Aug. 15th
" " Sunday, Aug. 16th
L. Boutell.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 9. M. Grant.

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

Elder E. Burnham appoints to preach in Lowell, Mass., Fourth Sunday in July

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at Warner, N. H., Aug. 2d

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at Canterbury, in the Town Hall, July 26th

Bro. Boutell will preach in Salem the first Sabbath in September. Temple Hardy.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach At South Hope Saturday 8th, Sunday, Aug. 22d and 23d. Will be at Camden by the first Friday boat, 21st, from Bangor.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at the 1st Baptist (colored) Church in South Kingston, Saturday evening, Aug. 1st
Twice the following Sunday, Aug. 2d, at the Advent Chapel, Peace Dale, and in the evening at the Colored Church above named.

For the Brn., J. T. Dixon.

Bro. R. R. York appoints to preach at Brunswick, Aug. 2d
South Gray, Aug. 9th

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in the following places:
Peacedale, (as Bro. Dixon may arrange,) July 28th and 29th
Appanauge, (will the Brn. meet me at Appanauge depot?) Thursday, July 30th
River Point, (where Bro. Taylor appoints,) Friday, July 31st
Providence, Sunday, Aug. 2d. Third meeting where Bro C. O. Towne may appoint,—perhaps with Bro Osler's charge.
Roxbury, Mass., Monday evening, Aug. 3d
Boston, Tuesday evening, Aug. 4th
Worcester, (at Bro. D. T. Taylor's charge,) Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th

If these appointments interfere with others, please notify me before I arrive. These are not decrees,—only propositions.

Hiram Munger.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Clay, evening, (meet me at Brewerton, morning stage,) July 29th
Albany, N. Y., (evening,) July 30th
W. S. Campbell.

The Lord willing, I will preach the word at Round Pond, (Union Meeting House,) 3d and 4th Sabbath in July.

Thos. Smith.

A Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a tent meeting in North Dana, commencing Thursday, August 6th, and holding over the Sabbath, of believers in the primitive faith of the church; viz., the personal coming of our Lord, and the literal resurrection of the dead, and the restitution of the earth, and in making ready a people for these great events by taking the new covenant of Jesus Christ, in all its parts, without addition or diminution, for the basis of church building and government, as the only law by which the temporal, civil and ecclesiastical affairs of all the members of the body are to be regulated and governed.

We invite the lovers of truth to come and unite in laboring with us in this good and best of all causes. With us christian character is a test of fellowship, and that to be gained, as Peter says, by being begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

Some of God's servants will be present to preach the word. We invite all classes to come and hear, and then judge. Prove all things and hold fast that which is good. For the Brethren,

D. E. Moulton.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

F. Densmore 104, L. Lockwood 124, H. Wheeler 127, C. Swift 118, M. Umbler 122, B. N. Childs 126, Jerusha Damon 130, James Estex 125, Eli Hamblin 130, S. P. Thayer 91, N. Clark, Jr., 128, T. J. Atwater 126, Dana Newton 117, F. P. Smith 126, Minerva Green 109, H. Hadlock, $1 each.

W. Tisdale 157, F. F. Watson 130, N. G. Jones 152, O. Hodge 126, A. Barrett 123, $2 each.

A Carlisle 112, E. G. Hayden 112, 50 cents each.

A. J. Densmore 21 cents.

For Books and Tracts.—Jerusha Damon, $1; Mrs. G. L. Humphreville 33 cents; John Morrison, $1; A. N. Seymour, $2.

Books Sent.—Jerusha Damon, Mrs. G. L. Humphreville, John Morrison.

Bro. A. N. Seymour's P. O. address is Reading, Hillsdale Co., N. Y.

Geo. L. Teeple's P. O. address is Arlington, Sibley Co., M. T.

B. P. Manning's P. O. address is Oil Mill Village, N. H.

Bro. Jonas Merriam's P. O. address is Concord, N. H.

Bro. Walter Pratt's P. O. address is Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid—hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Death not Life—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 6 cts.

Tracts.—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred.—Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves, 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

WAITING FOR CHRIST.

When will Earth's night be gone,
Her storm and gloom all o'er?
When will the beams of fadeless morn,
Her Eden light restore?

When will her wastes rejoice,
And peaceful flocks there graze?
Her verdant hills resound with voice
Of never-ceasing praise?

When shall we cease to mourn
O'er Earth's unhallowed strife?
When will our absent Friend return,
To give the better life?

When will the weary rest,
Their cares and trials o'er,
And strike their harps among the blest,
Where sorrow comes no more?

Haste, Lord, we sigh and weep,
We wait Thy voice to hear,
And mournfully our vigils keep,
Till Thou in might appear.

MARIA.

Greenland, N. H.

For the Crisis.

"HOW LONG?"

How long, dear Lord, ere thou wilt come
Our lonely hearts to cheer?
How long ere thou wilt come and reign?—
We long to view thee near.
O come, and cheer our sorrowing hearts,
We long thy face to see;
O come and take thy weary bride
To dwell, dear Lord, with thee.

We look abroad o'er earth's domain,
We hear thy children cry,—
How long, O Lord, ere thou wilt come,
And bring redemption nigh?
How long ere grief and pain shall cease,
And tears be wiped away,
And joys untold our hearts shall cheer,
Mid realms of endless day?

How long ere sleeping saints shall wake,
And leave their dusty bed,
And enter through those pearly gates,
Those golden streets to tread?
How long ere Eden all renewed
In robes of living green?
How long ere saints may roam with thee,
Beside life's cooling stream?

How long ere we may pluck the fruit
From off life's healing tree?
How long ere thou wilt sup with us,
And we may sup with thee?
O, haste that bright and joyful day,
When grief and pain shall cease;
Now "let thy kingdom come," we pray,
And crown thee, Prince of Peace.

H. E. FELTON.

Upton, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Sanctification.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Volumes have been writen on this subject, and yet how little is understood, and still less sinks into the heart and becomes incorporated with the life and being of God's dear children. Says Paul, Heb. 12: 14, "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord," Again, it is written, (1 Pet. 1: 16,) "be ye holy, for I am holy." And our Savior exhorts, (Matt. 5: 48,) "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." The Savior does not mean that we are to become perfect Gods, but perfect christians: that is, be as perfectly cleansed from sin and all its pollutions as Christ was free from sin. To attain this position, that is, to be a Bible christian, we must be sanctified; and though volumes have been written, it is seldom brought down to its true scriptural meaning. The Bible should be our only guide.

To sanctify, is to set apart; it is to free the creature from the curse that sin has brought upon it, and make it fit for a free and holy use. 1 Tim. 4: 5. The creature is sanctified by the word of God and prayer. There are three parts to this work, two of these belong to us, and until we do our part, we cannot expect God will do his. Let us humble ourselves, and see to it that our part is performed with meekness and fear, not in our own strength or name, but in the all-prevailing name and strength of Jesus, our Advocate.

The first work is to sanctify ourselves; set ourselves apart for his service; dedicate ourselves unreservedly to him; cut loose from the world and let our entire nature be consecrated to him. See the following scriptures with their references:—Lev. 11: 44; Num. 11: 18; Josh. 3: 5; 7: 13; 1 Sam. 16; 5.

After we have done this, (not before,) we may proceed to the second, which is, to sanctify the Lord; that is, set God apart as the only object of our hopes, our desires, and our worship. Ps. 8: 13; "Sanctify the Lord of hosts himself; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread." This is not a slavish fear, but a fear to offend God. We see that God found fault with Moses and Aaron. In Num. 20: 12, he says,—"ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel." How did they not sanctify him? By showing some distrust of his word. It requires strong faith to thus do our part in this work of consecration, and when we have done our part with all the heart, God will sanctify us by his truth, and fill us with his grace—cleanse us from all unrighteousness, and prepare us for his coming and kingdom; then we shall love his appearing, and long for the time when we shall awake in his likeness, and share in the unsullied glories of the everlasting kingdom of God.

I. K. BELLOWS.

New York, July 7, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Temptation of Jesus.

Some have queried in relation to the nature of our Savior's temptation in the wilderness. It is thought that what is called his temptation was nothing more than simply the effort of the tempter, and had no respect to the effect produced by that effort; that Christ was unmoved by it, not feeling any inclination to comply with the temptation.

If our Lord was not to be tempted by Satan's effort to tempt, why was Jesus driven by the Spirit into the wilderness, there to fast "forty days and forty nights," and then was not sick, (!) but was "an hungered," when Satan tempted him to "command that these stones be made bread?"

Christ "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin!" Heb. 4; 15. What! in all points tempted like as we are, yet feel no effect produced by that effort? Again, we ask, if Christ was not tempted 'like as we are," and that "in all points," how harmonize the declaration of the very learned and inspired Apostle, when he says, "For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." Heb. 2: 18. Abstractly against, Divinity alone, it may be true that he was not moved by it; but in reference to our Lord, it must be that he "suffered being tempted;" which implies in the connection, that the suffering came from the temptation, or the statement would be without force, when the expressions are coupled together in the same connection.

T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., July 20, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. II.

BRO. GRANT:—I have but little to report, except that I find the brethren, in their individual capacity, with whom I have formed an acquaintance, in this State, to be among the best I have known. I see cause to regret the work of the past, in this part of the field. It is to be hoped there may be recovery in many places—if there is time—if there is not, then this state of things may be one of the features of the great condition in the preparation for the end; but I cannot apprehend the subject in this light. Here are the sad results of the scenes through which the cause has passed since 1843. I find some of the relics of that former life and power, and having been a believer and a preacher in the cause then, I cannot but feel deeply when I find the surviving brethren of that magnificent wreck, and some of those who came in later, will hail my labors gladly. The meetings here closed well.

W. S. C.

Buffalo, June 22, '57.

For the Crisis.

Short and Profitable Sentences for Christians.

(SELECTED BY P. TANDY.)

26. Beware of talkative christians; they are dangerous characters: wise christians are "swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath."

27. Try every doctrine you hear by the word of God; receive nothing upon man's say-so: "Prove all things."

28. Private prayer is your chief preservative from sin, temptation, and error; how sadly is this duty neglected!

29. You are always welcome to call upon God; for, "now is the accepted time."

30. All persons, who are true christians, are praying and seeking to be Christlike.

31. Satan is always studying how he may injure you; you never found him asleep. "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation."

32. God is good, and merciful. He says, "Let me hear thy voice; come near unto me, that I may bless thee."

33. Grace thrives by frequent meditation on portions of God's word; therefore, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly."

34. Meditation upon heavenly and divine things endears Christ, and feeds devotion.

35. Expect troubles from every quarter; you are born to them; "In the world ye shall have tribulation."

36. There is some promise in your Bible exactly adapted to every trying hour.

37. True spirituality loves free grace and holy precepts.

38. Fellowship with God produces, strengthens and increases hatred to sin.

39. The glories of this vain world, which are so eagerly sought by the world, always lose their charms when Jesus is spiritually enjoyed.

40. The knowledge of divine things flows through prayer, reading, meditation, and observation. Hence, Jesus says to all his loving disciples, "Occupy till I come."

41. The rich mines of Gospel truth invite to labor; labor should be coupled with much earnest, secret prayer; and these together will be sure to increase our spiritual possessions.

42. Never expect spiritual wealth while you are indulging spiritual sloth. "Woe to them that are at ease!"—"this is not our rest."

43. The more holy the truth, the more it will be opposed by carnal-minded men. Those that are not for Christ, are against him.

44. Free salvation lays you under infinite obligations.

45. The greater your privileges, the greater is your debt.

46. The natural tendency of your carnal nature is to lead you to admire error.

47. Study to be quiet, except when duty calls upon you to speak for God and his cause.

48. Always have a word with God, before you enter into conversation with men.

49. Interline your discourse with ejaculations.

50. You have a place in society familiarly your own; endeavor to find where it is, and keep it.

From Eld. A. Ross.

BRO. GRANT:—Never did I feel so much like a pilgrim and stranger, as I do in these days. Truly I can say,

"No foot of land do I possess,
No cottage in this wilderness,
A poor wayfaring man.
I lodge awhile in tents below,
And gladly wander to and fro,
Till I my Canaan gain."

I do want to feel reconciled to my lot, but I cannot help sighing for home. There is a sacredness associated with that name, home, unlike to aught else. O when shall my aching heart find rest? When will cares, wild and billowy tossings, cease to break around me? When shall I get where my heart will no more deceive me,—where the friendship of those we love will prove sincere and abiding, where uncertainty will no more spread its dark mantle over our brightest hopes,—where sorrow's poisoned barb will no more pierce,—where despair's wild and cheerless vision will no more disquiet our breasts,—where enemies, whose tongues are like drawn swords, will no more disturb the harmony of God's saints? When will death cease to perform its strange work in dissolving those relations and associations so sacred to us here? I am thinking that all that causes our hearts to ache, our bosoms to heave with anguish, our eyes to run down with tears, will, in a little time from this, be forever done away by the brightness of His coming, who once carried our sorrows, that we might share his joy; who bore our sins that we might be clothed with his righteousness; who shared our grief, that we might drink freely from the fountain of his divine consolation. O blessed day! we give thee welcome! we wait thy coming more than they that watch for the morning. Haste, ye slow revolving seasons, and wheel away a shattered world, that our eyes may behold a sight to which they are strangers yet—a world chaste and pure in principle, over which custom and prejudice bears no sway.

A. ROSS.

From Eld. M. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel it time I said a word for the Crisis. The subject at present upon my mind is the glorious change to take place at and after the coming of Jesus. John, in Rev. 21; 4, says, "the former things are passed away." One scene passes off, and another series of events takes their place.

I. What passes by, no more to be repeated? Sin, that has deluged the earth, and turned man almost into a demon. Death, the wages of sin. By one man's sin, death entered into the world, and made earth a grave-yard. Sorrow, tears, pain and woe, that have followed in the path-way of sin, shall be no more. The earth's curse removed. The curse being removed, the effects will cease forever.

II. The new scenery to pass before us. The Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. Holiness instead of sin. Everything that lives and moves in the territory of the kingdom of Jesus will be pure. "Holiness to the Lord," will be seen everywhere. Endless life will be enjoyed by the inhabitants of the new creation. Who can realize it? life without dying. There shall be no more death—that belongs to the things that have passed aaway. Health, peace, prosperity, unity, brotherhood, everywhere, at all times, and for evermore. Earth redeemed from its curse becomes cleansed and delivered from every ill that sin has brought. The glory of God will shine upon it from one end to the other, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. Num. 14: 21. Heaven and earth unite. God and man become one—angels and men companions. Yes, "there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

III. When we look at the past, and at the present, and believe in the future destiny of earth and its inhabitants, we can but exclaim, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." When we read of, and see the disasters, misfortunes, woes, murders, blasphemy, crime, sorrow and tears, it seems truly that it would be an act of benevolence to bring this state of things to an end; as the only hope for earth is to have her rightful King take his throne. We may rejoice in the thought that soon we shall see the end of this, and the beginning of glory that will never have an end. I have no doubt there will be changes, but they will be from glory to glory. Cheer up, waiting pilgrim, soon thy sun will rise that will never set. The days of thy mourning will soon be ended.

I have only named the outlines of the great whole. I am ever afraid of being too long in my letters and sermons; but once in glory, we shall feel that the longest letters and sermons upon the subject will seem meager. Let us bear up under the ills of the present, that we may be counted worthy of the future. Amen.

MATTHEW BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Vt., July 3d, '57.

From Eld. W. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—One week ago last Lord's day, in company with Bro. Larkin Scott, of Hancock Co., I went into Missouri and filled an appointment. Some things I will pen that may be of interest to the readers of the "Crisis." We held the meeting in a very comfortable (presbyterian) house. A very good congregation was present, during the day. The word spoken was listened to with apparently much interest and conviction. There were some signs that convinced us of this fact, such as,—"the house is opened for you any time except one Sunday in the month," which was their regular day of worship.

I might mention many things, but will leave them for another time. One fact, however, I must pen, which all ought to know and will be glad to know, no doubt, as it is most astonishing, and has never been published. The fact is this. David Blum, of Clark Co., Mo., one year ago, the last of June, swallowed twenty-four needles, and is a well man to-day, and more fleshy than ever before, so says his brother. The circumstances were as follows:—

Mr. Blum—who is twenty-eight years of age, at the time above mentioned took out of his pack (he was peddling at the time,) a paper of different sized needles for the purpose of mending his clothes. After selecting one of a proper size for his purpose, he put the paper between his teeth with the end in his mouth, open, and for some cause raised his head suddenly; the needles, twenty-four in number, slipped out of the paper into his throat, and down they went. He was a good deal alarmed, well he might be. This was in the morning. He ate no breakfast, yet said nothing to any one about what he had done. He was in some pain, during the morning, but dinner came, and he ate heartily. He soon grew worse; his chest began to swell; however, he did not make it known to any one, until eight and forty hours had passed. A physician was called, as soon as he made the fact known, but what could be done? he must die! was the conclusion. What remedies were administered, I did not learn. His chest continued to swell until it was of an enormous size, and he was in intense agony. He soon became deranged, and remained so for some four weeks. About six weeks after he swallowed the needles, they began to make their appearance on the surface. The first came out on the back of his neck, between his shoulders. Others soon made their appearance in different parts of his body—more on his back, on the account of his position, perhaps, when sick. Two came out on the bottom of one foot, and one on the bottom of the other foot. Thus they continued to make their appearance, in the form of boils, until twenty-one needles, out of twenty-four had been taken out of his system, and he now has them laid away in a choice place for any one to examine. I remarked the needles were of different sizes when swallowed. They now have the appearance of being nearly the same size. The larger ones seem to have been affected when in the system, more than the smaller ones.

In about four months he began to recover, and has been improving since, and now feels well as formerly, and is more fleshy than ever before. These facts I had from his brother, Jacob Blum, both of them residing in Kossouth, Clark Co., Mo. The physician who attended him, was Dr. H. Snyder, of Ashton, Clark Co., Mo.

A few words more, and I close. We held a meeting in this place last evening. Some of the trustees (perhaps only one) of the Methodist church, who were over much righteous, shut the house against us. We repaired to the Hall, and had a very good, and, I trust, a profitable time.

My health is improving. I have got so I can preach and write some without its seriously injuring me. God be praised!

WALTER PRATT.

Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

Choice Selections.

THE BEAUTIFUL HEREAFTER.

In the beautiful hereafter
Once again the Eden trees—
Life's undying harmonies—
Shall from mortal dust outbloom,
Sunshine triumph over gloom.
Man now treads the burning rafter
Thrown across the burning sea—
Hark! the angel sings to me:

"In the beautiful hereafter,
Once again the Eden trees,
Out from God's own harmonies,
Shall upon the earth unfold,
Blooming through the age of gold.
Vain is thy derisive laughter,
Critic; can a single sneer
Blot out Summer from the year?"

In the beautiful hereafter,
Hark! I hear that angel-strain,
God in man's own heart shall reign,
Man become a Spirit pure,
Earth in heaven's own form endure;
Seraph hosts shall re appear,
Then shall bloom Love's endless year.

—Practical Christian.

From Zion's Herald.

Remarkable Answer to Prayer.

The following is truly remarkable, related by one in whom perfect confidence may be placed:—

About twenty-five years since, my husband, of whose death a short account was published in the Herald, of Feb. 1, 1854, lent a sleigh and harness to a man calling himself John Cotton, to go some twenty miles, and be gone three days. Cotton was quite a stranger among us, having been in our place but six weeks. During that time he had boarded with my husband's brother, working for him a part of the time and selling clocks, of which he purchased a number, the remainder. Three days passed, but he did not return. The fourth went by; we began to think he had absconded. On inquiry Mr. P. found that the clocks had been purchased on trust, and all sold for watches or money; that he owed sixty dollars towards his horse, and had borrowed of the brother with whom he boarded, horse-blanket, whip, and mittens. Now it seemed sure that he was a rogue; but what could be done? Pursuit was useless after such a lapse of time. My husband felt his loss severely, for we had little property then, and what we had was the product of hard labor. But he was a christian, and I believe always made his business a subject of prayer. About three weeks passed away. One evening, having been out longer than usual, he came in, and with his characteristic calmness said, "H., I shall not worry any more about my sleigh and harness; I think I shall get them again." "Why do you think so?" said I. His answer was, "I have been praying to God to arrest Cotton's conscience, so that he will be obliged to leave them where I can get them, and I believe He will do it." From this time, which was Wednesday evening, he seemed at rest on this subject. The next Tuesday morning, as he stepped into the Post Office, a letter was handed him from Littleton, N. H. It was written by the keeper of a public house there, and read thus:

"Mr. P. Sir:—Mr. John Cotton has left your sleigh and harness here, and you can have them by calling for them.

Yours, &c., J——N N——N."

He returned home and started for L., went there the same day, some forty miles, found sleigh and harness safe, with no encumbrance. The landlord informed him that on the Wednesday night previous, (the same night when his mind was so sweetly relieved in prayer,) at twelve o'clock, a man calling himself John Cotton, came to his house calling for horse-baiting and supper, would not stay till morning, but wished to leave the sleigh and harness for a Mr. S. P., in M., Vt. Also requested the landlord to write to Mr. P., and stated that he took them for him on a poor debt. He started off at two o'clock at night on horseback, with an old pair of saddlebags and horse blanket, on a saddle with one stirrup and no crupper, on one of the coldest nights of that or any other year. He took the road leading through the Notch and we have never since heard from him.

H. C. P.

The Bible.

"If God should restore me again to health, I have determined to study nothing but the Bible. Literature is inimical to spirituality, if it be not kept under with a firm hand. A man ought to call in from every quarter whatever may assist him to understand, explain, and illustrate the Bible; but there in its light and life, is all that is good for man—all important truth is there, and I feel that no comfort enters sick curtains from any other quarter. My state is an admonition to young men. I have been too much occupied in PREPARING TO LIVE, and too little in LIVING. I have read too much from curiosity and for mental gratification;—I was literary when I should have been active. We trifle too much. Let us do something for God. The man of God is a man of feeling and activity. I feel, and would urge with all possible strength on others, that Jesus Christ is our ALL AND IN ALL."—Cecil.

THE SECRET OF A HAPPY HOME.—Yes, if you wish to make your neighbors and your family happy—if you would see calmness and evenness of temper developed in your children—if you would lighten the cares and smoothe the path of the companion of your bosom—do not irritate, or scold, or be in a passion when your humor is crossed, but remember that others have hearts as soft as yours, and let the sunshine of Christian meekness and gentleness always beam from your eye. How happy will be the circle in such a case! Ay, this christian temper is about the only requisite to make firesides happy—places which husbands and children will regret to leave, and be glad to return to. Let the husband be indulgent then to the annoyance of his ever-working, and often over-working wife; and let the wife always meet him with smiles when he comes home, perplexed with the cares of business; and let both be forbearing under their mutual imperfections, and homes will be more as God intended them.

For the Children.

George and his Little Sister.

A little boy asked his mother to let him lead his little sister out on the green grass. She had just begun to run alone, and could not step over anything that lay in the way. His mother told him he might lead out the little girl, but charged him not to let her fall. I found them at play, very happy, in the field.

I said, "You seem very happy, George? Is this your sister?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can she walk alone?"

"Yes, sir, on smooth ground."

"And how did she get over these stones, which lie between us and the house?"

"O, sir, mother charged me to be careful that she did not fall, and so I put my hands under her arms, and lifted her up when she came to a stone, so that she need not hit her little foot against it."

"That is right, George; and I want to tell you one thing. You see now how to understand that beautiful text, 'He shall give his angels charge concerning thee, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.' God charges his angels to lead and lift good people over difficulties, just as you have lifted little Anne over these stones. Do you understand it now?"

"O yes, sir, and I shall never forget it while I live."

Can one child thus take care of another, and cannot God take care of those who put their trust in him? Surely he can; and there is not a child, who may read this story, over whom he is not ready to give his holy angels charge.

ALL startling things are gathering and crowding around us in such clusters, and with so striking magnificence, that the most worldly men are beginning to feel that interpreters of prophecy are not, after all, fanatics and madmen; that the apocalypse is not a stupid or impenetrable mystery, but an inspired book; and that the Bible is not behind but far in advance of the age in which we live.—Cumming.

REMEMBER THIS.—Children, when any little boy or girl is always talking to you about the faults of others, you may be sure that they are in the habit of talking to others of your faults. Reprove such, and if you cannot reform them, shun them.

No man is wise or safe but he that is honest and virtuous.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1857. WHOLE NO. 101. VOL. V. NO. 23.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"I AM A STRANGER ON THE EARTH."

'I'm a stranger on earth" 'mid its tumult and strife,
I am longing to enter on eternal life;
The sick heart grows faint in this valley of tears,
I weep, while I wait till my Savior appears.

I'm a stranger, alone through the gay crowds I roam,
An exile, I sigh for my country and home;
I'm wearied with toiling, but never shall rest,
Till my aching head leans on a kind Savior's breast.

I'm a stranger on earth, I'm a sojourner here,
I haste from its scenes, all too death-like and drear;
O when shall I enter the regions of peace?
How long are the year of the captive's release?

I'm a stranger on earth, but I'll soon be at home,
In the mansions prepared in the blest world to come;
And then shall my wand'ring and weeping be o'er,
A stranger, an exile, a mourner no more.

MARIA T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Fault Finding Church.

No. III.

"I wish our minister would preach in a manner to interest the mass of people, and then we should have more to attend, and get along easier; and people would not be always complaining of his severity and oddities, and especially of objectionable doctrine." Well, who have you heard complain? "Why I don't like this and that." Then you are the fault finder. Do you want a man to tell you your duty and help you to do it? or do you want a "flash preacher?" "I have nothing to say, myself, but many are dissatisfied." I fear the course you take will make more trouble than they all together. Better give him a chance, and above all, pray for him. "Brethren, pray for us." The "brethren" will pray for the minister.

Some are complaining of doctrinal preaching—others of preaching without setting forth the distinctive features of our faith all the time; and yet others, who have a standard of their own, and a faith of their own, make a part of their work religiously to contemn all that does not harmonize with their own notions. They are an everlasting pest! Excrescences! Now I wonder who is to be followed? Who is to be gratified? If we undertake to please one, we will displease the others, if not the whole. If we please men, how can we please Christ?

Has not the Lord called the minister? Yes. Then let him do the Lord's work. He is "not a novice." If he is, then he got into the ministry by some great mistake. But he preaches too loud, or too low; too fast, or too slow; too short, or too long; too plain in style, or too much embellished,—and what beside, in manner? He is a kind of public property, where every one can hack and hew, and cut down or pile up, or fling what he wants to throw away. There! You will do well to look out that you do not "touch the Lord's anointed and that you do his prophets no harm." But he steps proudly—walks with his head up; well, it is a good thing for him. Better everybody do it. Then his eccentricities, his earnestness, his eloquence, or impediment in speaking! I suppose God called him; if he did, I can hear him, and gladly, and be instructed. Where did the Lord tell us that the minister must mouthe out his words and dole out his sentences to just such a measure, and tone it off, so as to be solemn? Does not God want him to speak? Let him speak, then. "But," says one, "he laughed, or cried, or acted it all out." Well then, I believe he felt the force of the subject.

Garrick said, when asked why actors did so much with fiction, and preachers so little with truth,—"It is because we speak of fiction as true, as if we believed it; while you speak of true things as false, as if you did not believe them."

"But he stood stock still—made no motions, but spoke right on, or read." May be he missed it. But some of the best and most instructive sermons I ever heard in my life were delivered that way. "Too plain." God wants you to see a plain path. Showed you the "old path," did n't he? Walk in it.

A great Actor said of Wesley's sermon to children, which had not a word of over two syllables,—"'Twas not a great sermon, but none but a great man could have preached it." "Too flowery"—"too high-flown"—"too deep," &c. If he has a gift let him use it—may hit that high-perched sinner, if he does not you. Will you help? Will you help in the gospel? Paul had help, from men and women.

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

John the Baptist; or, Elijah the Prophet.

Our first object is, to inquire whether John the Baptist is, or was Elijah the prophet. To this end we would first call the attention of the reader to the third chapter of Malachi. "Behold, I will send my messenger, . . . even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in." This was spoken to the Jewish nation which was looking for the coming of the Lord, who is here styled "the messenger of the covenant whom ye (the Jewish people) delight in." Now the facts are, the Jews did not delight in Christ, or his message, or the covenant of which he was the messenger. Therefore, John the Baptist was not the forerunning messenger, or Christ was not the true Messiah, for there are but two horns of the dilemma, and we must take one or the other. But if we admit that Christ was the Messiah, then it refers to his second advent and not to his first, and the forerunning messenger is yet to come.

Again; "But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth?" We ask, who did not stand, and who did not abide his first advent? Here the second coming is certainly alluded to, and John is not the forerunner of the second, but of the first advent. Again; "And he (Christ) shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." As this purifying, purging, and cleansing of the sons of Levi did not take place at the first coming, we have again the two horns of the dilemma—Christ was not the Messiah, or John was not his forerunner. But if Christ is the Messiah, this refers to his second coming, and his forerunner is yet future. Again; "Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years." This was not a fact at his first advent, but remains to be fulfilled at the second; and so there remains a messenger to forerun a second coming of the Lord, who will purge the sons of Levi, that they may offer an offering in righteousness. The text is true, and must be fulfilled somewhere, either in the past or future. It is not in the past; therefore, it must be future. But this requires a future coming of the Lord, and a future messenger.

Now, whether John was the Elijah or not, depends upon whether the prophet had his eye on the first or second coming; and from this and the fourth chapter it is self evident he had his eye on the second, and he positively announces the coming of Elijah the prophet "before the great and dreadful day of the Lord," in the which "who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth?" Since the first coming is not the whole subject of this prophecy, John the Baptist is not the whole messenger referred to. But the prophet has not left us in the dark; for he has told us plainly that he meant Elijah the prophet, and calls him by name. All this will not weigh against John's being the forerunner of the first coming; we frankly admit that, for it can be proved elsewhere. Here lies the difficulty: there has not been sufficient attention paid to the prototype and antitype, which are always one, in as strict a sense as Christ and the church are one, and that the Father and the son are one. The first advent is the prototype of the second, and both are one. So John is the prototype of Elijah, and both are one; and as nothing in the history of the first advent will prevent the second coming of Christ, so nothing in the history of John the Baptist will prevent the coming of Elijah the prophet. Christ has said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father;" yet we do not believe that he and the Father are one and the same person, but one in purpose, power and majesty. So John is the Elijah in spirit and purpose, but not in person; for one was translated and the other beheaded.

We now turn to the New Testament for further light on this question. The first text that arrests our attention is Matt. 11: 13, 14,—"For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John. And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come." This was spoken to the multitudes concerning John. "And if ye (the multitudes) will receive it, this is Elias;" and if they will not receive it, (as they did not,) then John is not Elias, in any sense of the word, as far as this text alone relates. But we grant more than this text alone can be made to prove; we grant that John was the prototypical Elijah, inasmuch as the first coming was the prototype of the second, and that the first was the real coming of Christ, and both comings are one, but not one event, for there are more than eighteen hundred years between them.

But we have further evidence that Elijah will yet come. In Matt. 16, Christ taught the doctrine of the resurrection, and of the coming of the Son of Man, to reward every man according to his works; and, as recorded in the next chapter, he took three of his disciples upon a high mountain and gave them a vision of his coming and his kingdom, and of the resurrection, and going down from the mountain, he charged them to tell the vision to no man till the Son of Man be risen again from the dead. "And his disciples asked him, saying, why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?" That is, why do the scribes say Elias must come before the resurrection? And he said, "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things." Observe, he used the future tense here—shall first come; i. e., before the resurrection. But he knew his own resurrection would take place before the "resurrection at the last day," and must be preceded by the coming of Elias; for he had just told them Elias would come before the resurrection. Therefore he said, "Elias is come already." Now if the "Elias is come already" is all the coming of the Elias, the resurrection of Christ is all the resurrection there will ever be. "Elias truly shall come" is a future coming, and "Elias is come already," cannot prevent Elias' future coming, any more than the fact that Christ is come, will prevent his second coming. So the most that can be said of the two expressions, "Elias shall come," and "Elias is come," is, that there are two comings of Elias, let him be whom he will.

But we have admitted John was the prototypical Elijah. And we now admit the resurrection of Christ is the prototypical resurrection at the last day, and that in both cases both are one, for Christ is the resurrection, (John 11: 25,) and there is no resurrection but him. We have further evidence in this case. John 1: 19-25,—"And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? And he confessed and denied not, but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? and he said, I am not." What can we ask more? Shall we give the lie to John who spake by the Holy Ghost? Let this settle the question. They asked John if he was Elias; that is, whether he was the person, and he said, No. Hence, we are to look for Elias; for Christ said "he truly shall first come."

EDWIN TOWNE.

Kennebunkport, Me.

For the Crisis.

Salvation.

"Salvation, O! the joyful sound!
'Tis music to my ear;
Fain would I sound it out so loud,
That earth and heaven might hear!"

Paul and Silas said to the Philippian jailer, "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Acts 16: 31. Saved from what? Why, from sin, and all its sad and awful consequences! What a glorious salvation! Do you wonder the great Apostle to the Gentiles called it a great salvation? Not only could Paul and Silas, and the jailer, and others anciently be saved, by believing in and obeying God, but we may now be saved, by doing our Father's will. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." I believe that our God is the God of salvation.

All men by nature are sinners, and consequently need salvation. How shall we get it? By fearing God and keeping his commandments. David says, "his (God's) salvation is nigh them that fear him." He says in another Psalm, "He will beautify the meek with salvation." Again, "Salvation will God appoint for walls." O! what safety there is in the salvation of our God! This salvation is not only present, but we have the immutable promise of Jehovah that it shall be everlasting salvation! How beautiful are the feet of him who publishes this salvation to an unsaved world. Not only is the believer in Christ to experience the benefits of this salvation, but the earth shall see the salvation of God.

I do believe there is salvation, full and complete salvation for all God's dear children. Though they are the minority now, they will be the majority by and by. Let us, with the prophet Jeremiah, quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. Zechariah, the Lord's prophet, says, "the king cometh and having salvation." We know, brethren and sisters, that salvation is of the Lord; so says Jonah. Many thousands can testify that the gospel is the power of God to salvation unto every one who truly believes it. Now let us work out our salvation with fear and trembling, trusting in God without fear or trembling; then we shall finally obtain deliverance with eternal glory.

Are any destitute of salvation? the scriptures are able to make you wise unto salvation by meekly yielding to its divine teaching. But, if we choose to willfully neglect so great salvation, we cannot escape the judgments of God.

I firmly believe that Jesus will soon appear "without sin unto salvation." May we, dear Brn. and Srs., truly trust in God, that we may be kept by his mighty power, through faith unto salvation. I am anticipating a home in the kingdom with you; "I long to be there!" Then, let us be faithful unto death, and we shall receive a crown of life, and a home in the everlasting kingdom of our God. Amen.

Yours in hope, P. TANDY

For the Crisis.

Backbiting.

Those persons who watch for an opportunity to strike an enemy in the back, thrust at him when he cannot be expecting an attack, or, under professions of friendship, wait, lurk in the dark, skulk about like a hidden Indian, to let fly an arrow when his adversary's back is turned, are the objects of universal execration.

Take an example. Joab took Abner by the beard—an endearing way of approach—and proposed to kiss his brother, as he called him. So Abner thought, but he smote him "under the fifth rib"—fatal place—and because the sufferer was off his guard, he "died as a fool dieth." But who can be always on his guard? And who can control the tongues of other people? They will bite if they will; and if the opportunity offers, they will, and always bite in the back—"strike, but conceal their hand."

There are several animals which are more given to this mode of attack, either upon acknowledged enemies and victims, or indiscriminately upon friends and enemies; but the most prominent are the dog and the wolf. Perhaps these will furnish all the elements which appear in the character of the backbiter, but it requires some of the most vicious and ignoble beasts to designate this despicable moral delinquency of character!

The wolf will follow on the track of the traveler till the darkness of the forest or of night obscures his operations; will bark and howl, collect a pack, and always endeavor, from behind, to seize the prey. So it is with the backbiter.

The dog is similar in his habits. He will bite and teeth-tare, snarl and snap, when the back of a being whom he dare not face is toward him. He may get a little confidence to follow on, barking, because his own noise has collected others of the same stamp; but when the presence of the object of hubbub comes, the whole batch will fly. So it is with the backbiter. The presence of the object of his hate, malice, jealousy or envy, is dreaded. He will never go and tell him his faults, not even to save his brother from danger; but he will say something when he is not present to injure, or reflect, to lessen the influence or standing of another who may have been more fortunate or faithful than himself, in securing a good reputation.

The backbiter! What is he like? Like the tarantula, which lies in the chink of the wall to bite when the innocent, unsuspecting victim is in sleep. Like the scorpion, that is hidden in the wood you gather. Like the serpent which strikes the heel, who buries his poison fang in the very spring of life! He is morally brother to the leopard, or the cat, which creeps, lies still, goes round, follows on, always waits to spring upon the prey, but never comes up in front, like a man! He would not counsel to reform, give advice, caution—No! but he would speak of little things—magnify faults—repeat what somebody has suggested—guess a good deal, and to be revenged for a real or imaginary wrong! Ah! too many ever seek for building material among ruins. Cease! cease, in the name of christianity! Do you not know it is injurious?—wicked?

You will throw a stone into the lake; the circling ripple will reach the shore; so a word in spite—the bite at the back—will reach the outer circle of community. You may blandly claim to wish no harm to any one, speak even of the intended sacrifice as honorable, while you exalt qualities which you assume exist, exciting the bad passions of the populace, and then cry, like your prototype, "mischief, thou art afoot, do what thou wilt." God did not intend man should be always looking over his shoulder to see who should come behind; if so, we think he would have made him Janus-faced, or set his head on a swivel; so you may conclude you should not approach him either with physical or moral weapons behind his back.

Shall, then, the evil end? It is unnatural! opposed to all manly pride! ungentlemanly! unchristian! forbidden in the gospel! an old eating sore! despicable! devilish!!

"But I am not guilty!" Most happy to hear that, if you speak the truth. "Nor I," says another. "But stop, let me see! I was saying something against such a neighbor, a few days ago," and not to the person concerned? "It might not have been true." But suppose it was; until you knew, and had a proper motive, and time and condition of things, you came very near calling on your cousins, at least!

What is the object? To stay the evil! Prate about your brother or sister! Will you longer? This backbiting is a great sin before God, and all know it, whether direct lies are told or not; and it is known by a fearful consequence, for "if ye bite and devour one another, ye shall be devoured, one of another." Look over the field. What mangled bodies! plenty of skeletons!

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

Faith and Works Inseparable.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS:—Nothing will absolutely hinder our justification in the day of judgment, but the want of works, which are the fruits of believing—the fruits of love and faith. If I am not mistaken, the doctrine of faith and works turns upon the following propositions. They exactly answer to the grand directions of the Gospel. Wilt thou enter into life? Believe. Wilt thou stay there? Believe and obey. Wilt thou be numbered among the sheep in the great day? Endure unto the end; continue in well doing; that is, persevere in faith and obedience. To believe, then, and obey, or, as Solomon expresses it, "fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." Therefore, a professor of the faith without genuine obedience, and a pretender to obedience without genuine faith, equally miss their aim; while a friend to faith and works put in their proper place, a professor of the faith which works by love, hits the gospel mark, and so runs as to obtain the prize. 1 Cor. 9: 24. The true and faithful witness spoke the two following, and equally express declarations; "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the the wrath of God abideth on him;" (John 3: 36,) and,—"The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth, they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 29.

See that boatman upon yonder river. The unwearied diligence and watchful skill with which he plies his oars point out to us the work and wisdom of an experienced Christian. What an even, gentle spring does the mutual effort of his oars give to his boat! Observe him; his right hand never rests but when the stream carries him too much to the left; he slacks not the left hand unless he is gone too much to the right; nor has sooner recovered a just medium than he uses both oars again with mutual harmony. Suppose that he constantly employed but one, no matter which, what would be the consequence? He would only move in a circle; and if neither wind nor tide carried him along, after a hard day's work he would find himself in the very spot where he began his idle toil. This illustration needs very little explaining. I shall just observe, that faith without works is like using only the right hand oar; and works without faith, like him who plies only the oar in his left hand. One makes an endless bustle about grace and faith, and the doctrine of the Kingdom; the other, about charity and works; but both, after all, find themselves exactly in the same case. Not so the judicious, unbiassed believer, who will safely enter the haven of eternal rest, soon to be given.

He makes an equal use of the doctrine of faith, and that of works. Each is in its own place. Paul to the Ephesians says, "For by grace ye are saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." And we are called to direct ourselves, that is, to occupy till the Lord comes, by making a proper use of our talents according to the parable. Matt. 25.

God has given to man the two oars, or, if you please, the equal wings of faith and obedience; charging him to use those grand powers according to his word. It is our duty, our interest, to obey him without reserve. We see, when the crafty tempter had made our first parents believe that if they ate of the forbidden fruit they should be as God himself, how possible, how easy it was for them to venture upon an act of rebellion. By sucking in the venom of the serpent's crafty insinuation, they became disobedient; therefore, death was the wages. James gives us a melancholy account of this fatal error. While faith slumbered, lust conceived and brought forth sin, and sin finished, brought forth death; for as a disbelief of our Creator, productive of bad works, sunk our first parents, so, a faith in our Redeemer, productive of good works, must instrumentally raise their fallen posterity.

It might be asked, which is most necessary to salvation, faith or works? I would propose a similar question. Which is most essential to breathing, inspiration or expiration? If replied, that, the moment either is at an end, so is the other; and therefore both are equally important,—I return exactly the same answer. Humble faith must be by the breath of spiritual life. Then, obedient love will gratefully return it, and make way for a fresh supply. When it does not, the spirit is grieved; and if this want of co-operation is persisted in to the end, the sin unto death is committed, the spirit is quenched in its saving operation, and the apostate will die the second death. Again: if faith has the advantage over works by giving them birth, works have the advantage over faith by perfecting it. "Seest thou," says James, speaking of the father of the faithful, "how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?" And if Paul affirms that works without faith are dead, James maintains, "faith without works is dead," also.

Once more. Christ is always the primary, original, properly meritorious cause of our justification, and consequently of our salvation, is to set the Bible aside." Faith, therefore, so far as it implies an unshaken confidence in God and a firm adherence to his will, is as eternal as love and obedience. But when it is considered as "the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen" which are essential properties of a believers faith in this present state of things, it is evident that it will necessarily end in sight, as soon as this present evil age closes; and terminate in enjoyment, as soon as God's glory appears without a veil. Let us, therefore, equally decry dead works and dead faith; equally recommend living faith and its instant fruits.

"His adorable will let us gladly fulfill,
And our talents improve,
By the patience of hope and the labor of love."

M. H. Morrison.

New Glasgow, June, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Time.

Dear Bro. Grant:—Truth is easily attained; but error costs a great deal of perverted reason. Seven days make a week, and a week is a measure of time, and no part of eternity. Six days are appointed to labor, and the seventh to rest. All agree that we are not later in the Great Week of time than near the close of the sixth day. There is, therefore, one day more before the end of time. This is the Great Day of the Lord,—the Sabbatism—the rest that remains to the people of God; this rest is under the reign of Messiah on the earth.

Now whatever thousand years we find in the past, we cannot find the seven thousandth until the six thousandth is past; for every past thousand must be inside of the six thousand, and still there is one thousand to come, ere time can end.

This truth is clear and self evident, and needs no labored argument to sustain it; and it does not cost the unnatural and perverted play of the faculties of the mind to embrace it. Let the children of the light, and of the day meditate on these things.

Veritas.

Bro. P. S. W. Davo writes from Strawberry Point, Iowa:—"The cause here is on the gain. I have just returned from a two days' meeting. One united with the church. In regard to the Free Mission Library, I have received the widow's mite—one dollar from Jerusha Damon. I am thankful that one felt willing to respond to my call. I have set the dollar's worth of books at work. Every dollar will be placed in the Mission Library, that is sent to me, and as much more as I am able to spare myself. And if no more are willing to help us out West, that amount shall be kept rolling until Jesus comes. A great field opens here, and I long to see the time when some one can spend their whole time in the work. I hope soon to hear from others. Brethren, remember me at the throne of grace that I may be successful in preaching the truth and winning souls to Christ."

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 29, 1857.

Rich Man and Lazarus.

Lk. 16: 19–31.

No. IV.

(Concluded.)

As we have before remarked, we understand that the Savior gives a condensed history of the Jews and Gentiles by means of this parable,—the rich man representing the Jews and Lazarus the Gentiles. This is not a new theory got up by those who believe in the sleep of the dead, or by Universalists who believe all men will be saved; but was believed and taught by such men as Lightfoot Whitby, Wakefield, Theophylact, James Bate, Dr. Gill and many others. Says Lightfoot:—

"Whosoever believes this not to be a parable, but a true story, let him believe also those little friars, whose trade it is to show the monuments at Jerusalem to pilgrims, and point exactly to the place where the rich glutton stood. Most accurate keepers of antiquity indeed! who, after so many hundreds of years, such overthrows of Jerusalem, such devastations and changes, can rake out of the rubbish the place of so private a house, and such a one too, that never had any being, but merely in parable. And that it was a parable, not only the consent of all expositors may assure us, but the thing itself speaks it. The main scope and design of it seems this,—to hint the destruction of the unbelieving Jews."

Whitby says:—"This is only a parable, and not a real history."

Says Wakefield, an able translator:—

"To them who regard the narration as a reality, it must stand as an unanswerable argument for the purgatory of the papists."

Theophylact, an ancient christian writer, says:—"By the rich man is signified the Jewish people." Although he applied it also to the concerns of the next life, he says:—

"Lazarus was the Gentile people, poor in divine grace and wisdom, and lying before the gates; for it was not permitted to the Gentiles to enter the house itself, because they were considered a pollution."

Dr. Gill makes a two-fold application of it, and says the death of the "rich man" may be understood to represent "the political and ecclesiastical death of the Jewish people."

James Bate, M. A., Rector of Deptford, says:—

"We will suppose, then, the rich man who fared so sumptuously, to be the Jew, so amply enriched with the heavenly treasure of divine revelation. The poor beggar who lay at his gate, in so miserable a plight, was the poor Gentile, now reduced to the last degree of want, in regard to religious knowledge. . . . The beggar dies, and is carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom; that is, he is engrafted into the church of God. And the rich man also dies and is buried. He dies what we call a political death. His dispensation ceases. He is rejected from being any longer the peculiar Son of God. The people whom he parabolically represents are miserably destroyed by the Romans, and the wretched remains of them, driven into exile over the face of the earth, were vagabonds, with a kind of mark set upon them, like Cain, their prototype, for a like crime; and which mark may perhaps be their adherence to the law." [For the foregoing quotation, we are indebted to Bro. Storrs' six sermons.]

We have introduced these testimonies to show that the exposition we give was not got up to favor the sleep of the dead, or those who believe in universal salvation, but to give a common sense view of the parable in harmony with the rest of the scripture. We are fully persuaded that the rich man represents the one house of Israel, composed of the two tribes, Judah and Benjamin; and the five brethren, the other house, or the ten tribes, who were carried captive by Shalmanezer seven hundred and twenty-one years before Christ, and have not returned to this day. They are denominated the ten lost tribes of Israel. These two houses of Israel are frequently mentioned after their separation, which took place in the days of Rehoboam and Jeroboam; hence the prophet Isaiah is taught to say, when speaking of the coming of Christ,—"he shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence, to both the houses of Israel." The sequel of the Jewish history has proved the truth of this prophecy. As the rich man was taken to represent the two tribes, Judah and Benjamin, who occupied Jerusalem when the Savior was on earth; it is rational to suppose that the five brethren should represent the other ten tribes who were dwelling among strangers in foreign lands.

The rich man, like the elder brother in the parable of the prodigal son, occupied a favored position, but was unwilling to welcome the poor man to his hospitalities. The elder brother had lacked no good thing, and would not have felt the least privation if he had kindly welcomed his poor brother home, and rejoiced with his father;—so the rich man was abundantly supplied with earth's choicest blessings, and would have suffered no loss, if he had granted the poor man's request, who only asked for the crumbs; or like the younger brother, to be a servant; but the elder brother—(the Jews,) and the rich man representing the same, would confer no favor upon the poor man—(the Gentiles,) but in both cases he is finally exalted, and the rich man humbled. Jesus had come to preach the gospel to the poor, but the rich man, (the Jews) instead of co-operating with him as he should have done, would not receive Christ because he befriended the poor;—like the elder brother, he would not go in to rejoice over lost sinners found, but would rejoice when he found a lost sheep, thus showing that he cared more about saving sheep than sinners,—more about money than eternal salvation.

We now come to inquire, who is represented by Lazarus? As already intimated, we answer,—the Gentiles. What is meant by the death of the beggar, and his being carried to Abraham's bosom? As this is a parable, the death cannot be literal, nor the entrance into the bosom of Abraham. It will be noticed that nothing is said about the burial of Lazarus. We understand his death to signify a moral and political change in the condition of the Gentiles in consequence of the Savior's work accomplished in breaking down the wall between the Jews and Gentiles, and receiving the latter into the new covenant, for when the Gentiles embraced Christ, they became "Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." The Gentiles died to their idolatrous worship, became the followers of Christ, and have been highly exalted, both morally and politically; while the Jews have died both morally and politically, and still lie in a buried condition, "trodden down," or tormented by the Gentiles,—the poor beggar who once sat begging at their gate, but was not even allowed to share the least favor in common with them. The Jews would "have no dealings with the Samaritans" because they permitted Gentiles to have some privileges in their city; but they have since been tormented in their political hades, or grave, for nearly eighteen hundred years; scattered among all nations, denied the privilege of holding offices of trust; in short, they have been placed in the same condition in which they tried to keep the Gentiles; "but now he (the beggar, or Gentiles) is comforted, and thou (the rich man, or Jews) art tormented." How perfectly the Savior illustrated the then future history of the Jews and Gentiles by this parable, which completed his answer to the charge preferred against him by the Pharisees at the commencement of the 15th Chap.,—"this man receiveth sinners and eateth with them." The Jews, like the elder brother in the parable of the prodigal son, had received "good things," and Lazarus, or the Gentiles, "evil things," but for hundreds of years their relative condition has been reversed. We think this truth was the important idea that the Savior wished to communicate by means of the parable.

As is often remarked, "we do not believe that parables should be made to go on all fours;" i. e., we do not think that Jesus intended we should look for a correspondence between every particular point mentioned in the parable, and that which it represents. For instance, in the parable of the lost sheep, mentioned in chap. fifteen, we have 1, one hundred sheep.—2. One strays away and is lost.—3. Ninety-nine are left in the wilderness, while search is made for the lost one.—4. When found, he puts it on his shoulders and goes home.—5. He calls in his friends and neighbors to rejoice with him. Who can suppose that the Savior intended we should look for an act in the plan of salvation corresponding with each of these five particulars? The simple idea is, that when a lost thing is found, we feel joy. This is expressed in ver. 7, when he says,—"likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth." So in the parable of the rich man, we do not expect every little item is to have a corresponding event in that which is represented.

The gulf. If the gulf is to have a correspondence in the history of the Jews and Gentiles, it must represent something that prevents a Jew, while he continues in his Jewish faith and customs, under the old covenant, from joining the Gentile christians; and at the same time will not allow a christian, as such, to unite with the Jews. From this consideration, we think the gulf may represent the new covenant, "established upon better promises," of which Jesus was the mediator. The Jews rejected this covenant confirmed by Christ, and were married again to the law, from which Christ and the apostle Paul most plainly declares they were divorced; consequently, they became adulterers in refusing to come into the new covenant, and be married to Christ, as we endeavored to show in our first article on this subject. The Gentile christian cannot join the Jewish church and continue a christian, because he would be throwing away Christ, and connecting himself with the law, which is divorced; hence the new covenant stands as a gulf between Jews and Gentiles.

The five brethren. As has been already intimated, we understand that they represent the ten lost tribes of Israel, who were carried captive by Shalmanezer seven hundred and twenty-one years before Christ. They were not joined with the Jews (the other two tribes) in condemning and crucifying the Savior; and therefore they are represented as being in a safer and better condition than the rich man. We think Paul refers to them when he says,—"Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved." When they went into captivity, they took the scriptures with them, hence it is said, "they have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them."

In conclusion, we remark, we can see no reason for believing this parable was given to show the state of the dead between death and the resurrection, because, in the first place, such a view seems to be foreign to the subject then under consideration; and in the second place, it would be contradictory to plain and positive texts of scripture, which describe the condition of man in the intermediate state.

Voice of the Church.

Says the Worcester Daily Journal of the above work,—"Study and research evidences itself in every line of the book which we have now before us. The object of the writer is to show what has been the 'Voice of the Church' for eighteen centuries upon the subject of the Millennium, or on the coming of Christ. The first testimony cited is traditionary, and then comes the verbal and written testimony of the ablest and most distinguished theologians and scholars the world has ever known.

The work is full of the choicest knowledge upon this peculiar topic, and though the reader may differ with the writer, still the book is a choice one for every Biblical student or scholar. It shows that the writer has been unceasing in his labors, and he has brought together in the compass of a volume, what the reader could not find in many whole libraries.

The work is worthy of a place upon every christian's table, and we bespeak for it a fair and candid perusal, as there are in it the choicest extracts from the rare writings of the very earliest christian scholars."

For sale by H. L. Hastings, No. 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., and at this office. Price $1.00. Postage 18 cts.

For the Crisis.

The Faith of Milton.

This MS. was prepared as a preface to his tract on the state of the dead.

It may be a matter of encouragement to some who have been called fools and blockheads for believing the plain statements of the scriptures, to learn that men of former times, of acknowledged genius and piety, have deduced the same opinions from the word of God, and have borne with becoming fortitude the same reproach for believing them.

Says Milton in his treatise on "The Reason of Church Government,"—"As for those terrible names of sectaries and schismatics, which you have got together, we know your manner of fight, when the quiver of your arguments, which is ever thin, and weakly stored, after the first brunt is quite empty, your course is to betake you to your other quiver of slander, wherein lies your best archery. And whom you could not move by sophistical arguing, them you think to confute by scandalous misnaming; thereby exciting the blinder sort of people to mislike and deride sound doctrine and good Christianity under two or three vile and hateful terms." The friends of truth in latter times are not entirely unacquainted with this "manner of fight." The same kind of opposing feeling develops itself in a similar manner.

It is quite possible that the publication of Milton's belief in the sleep of the dead will do but little toward increasing the reputation of the greatest English poet that ever lived, but still, it may be that persons will suspend their judgment a little, and be more sparing in the bestowment of contemptuous epithets upon the believers in a doctrine which is sustained by reasons sufficiently cogent to command the faith of one whom admiring multitudes have for successive generations delighted to honor. It may be that some persons, possessing more bigotry than brains, will continue a course of impudent and contemptuous exclusiveness towards those who choose to believe with many of the primitive christians, and many of their most pious successors, concerning the nature of man and his state in death.

If, in the language of Milton, "This is a subject which may be discussed without endangering our faith or devotion, whichever side of the controversy we espouse, how unwise and unchristian will it be to consider those as enemies to us or to our common Lord whose faith may differ in some respects from our own.

It is not expected or desired that men should embrace the doctrine of the sleep of the dead because Milton believed it. Milton was a man liable to err. The grand question is not, merely, what was his faith? but what were the grounds of it? Whence was it derived, from the traditions of men, or from the word of God? The title of the book from which his views are taken is, "A Treatise on Christian Doctrine, compiled from the Holy Scriptures alone." Is this the fact? Let the christian reader judge.

It will be difficult for the candid to convince themselves that Milton, in the face of all the opposition and reproach attendant upon such a course, and possessing no earthly inducements to prompt him to it, should deliberately reject the time-honored systems with which he was surrounded, and embrace an unpopular and unscriptural opinion. He must have had reasons for his course. He acknowledged no authoritative teacher but the word of God. Did that word furnish ground for his conclusions?

He says: "Since it is only to the individual faith of each that Deity has opened the way of eternal salvation; and as he requires that he who would be saved should have a personal belief of his own, I resolved not to repose on the faith or judgment of others in matters relating to God; but on the one hand having taken the grounds of my faith from divine revelation alone, and on the other, having neglected nothing which depended on my own industry, I thought fit to scrutinize and ascertain for myself the several points of my religious belief by the most careful perusal and meditation of the Holy Scriptures themselves." After alluding to the "wretched shifts," the "quibbles of the grammarians," the "misconstructions of scripture," and "the hasty deduction of erroneous inferences" with which he so often met among the writings of theologians, "owing to which causes, the truth was sometimes as strenuously opposed as if it had been an error or heresy—while errors and heresies were substituted for the truth, and valued rather from deference to custom and the spirit of party, than from the authority of Scripture," he says: "According to my judgment, therefore, neither my creed nor my hope of salvation could be safely trusted to such guides. . . . . I deemed it, therefore, safest and most advisable to compile for myself, by my own labor and study, some original treatise which should be always at hand, derived solely from the word of God himself, and executed with all possible fidelity, seeing that I could have no wish to practice any imposition on myself in such a matter."

After continuing for several years in the diligent pursuit of this object, he saw fit to communicate the result of his inquiries to the world at large, in view of which purpose, he says: "I hope to meet with a candid reception from all parties, and that none at least will take unjust offence, even though many things should be brought to light which will at once be seen to differ from certain received opinions. I earnestly beseech all lovers of truth, not to cry out that the Church is thrown into confusion by that freedom of discussion and inquiry, which is granted to the schools, and ought certainly to be refused to no believer, since we are ordered to prove all things, and since the daily progress of the light of truth is productive far less of disturbance to the church than of illumination and edification." "Concealment is not my object; it is to the learned that I address myself. . . . I at least wish to submit my opinions to men of a mature and manly understanding, possessing a thorough knowledge of the doctrines of the gospel; on whose judgment I should rely with far more confidence, than on those of novices in these matters. And whereas the greater part of those who have written most largely on these subjects have been wont to fill whole pages with explanations of their own opinions, thrusting into the margin the texts in support of their doctrine, with a summary reference to the chapter and verse; I have chosen, on the contrary, to fill my pages, even to redundance, with quotations from Scripture, that so as little space as possible might be left for my own words, even when they arise from the context of revelation itself."

As it regards heresy, he says: "For my own part, I adhere to the Holy Scriptures alone—I follow no other heresy or sect. I had not even read any of the works of heretics, so called, when the mistakes of those who are reckoned for orthodox, and their incautious handling of Scripture, first taught me to agree with their opponents whenever those opponents agreed with Scripture. If this be heresy, I confess, with Saint Paul, (Acts 24: 14,) 'That after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets'—to which I add, whatever is written in the New Testament. Any other judges or chief interpreters of the christian belief, . . . I, in common with the whole Protestant Church refuse to recognize.

For the rest, brethren, cultivate truth with brotherly love. Judge of my present undertaking according to the admonishing Spirit of God; and neither adopt my sentiments, nor reject them, unless every doubt has been removed from your belief by the clear testimony of revelation."

The preceding extracts will give the reader some idea of the principles upon which Milton proceeded in the investigation of divine truth. H. L. H.

[The views of Milton on the state of the dead are given at large in the seventh, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth chapters of his Treatise on Christian Doctrine. These portions have been republished in a tract by H. L. Hastings. Those who wish to know his views more fully are requested to read the tract. For sale by the publisher and at this office. $3 per 100. 5 cts single.

From Sr. M. Mathews.

To the dear Brethren and Sisters:—While perusing the columns of the "Crisis," this morning, I could but say to myself, truly, we are a highly favored people. We have not merely the Bible in our ranks, but I think we can confidently say we have a thorough understanding of the principle doctrines it promulgates. And although we may not meet personally to mutually unite our songs of praise to Him who is the giver of each good and perfect gift, yet our many voices do mingle into a harmonious one ere they are borne on high on the lips of winged messengers. What though insurmountable hills, unfathomable oceans and meandering rivulets form a great separating line between us and those of like precious faith; still they do comfort us from afar. Dry that tear, pilgrim! Thy God is not unmindful of your present good, and future spiritual welfare. He has visited the professed churches and called out the Paul-of-Tarsus-like. There he has revealed his glorious plan of redemption, and men (not demons) have come forward and in simplicity admired the broad platform of Truth.

Yes, tho' many scorn the truth, which is "altogether lovely," bless God! there are a precious few who obeyed the voice superior, when He called aloud, "Come out from among them." They admire truth's beauty. How firm is their foundation! I have lately been thinking of you, brethren and sisters, as a people, and it appears to me that you are what might be called an independent people. I ask, what is wanting to make you such? Have we not preachers of truth? Songsters who sing with the understanding? Have we not houses in which we may meet in bands of two or three, at least? Of course there may be a few exceptions, still these are not left forgotten, nor unprovided for. Imagine an illustration. Behold yonder cot. It wears the very aspect of poverty. Enter, thou poor, despised "news-boy." You know not that yours is an errand which angels are wont to perform. The door creaks on its time-worn hinges. The light of day scarcely dwelleth in the dreary apartment. Almost hidden from your gaze, in a remote corner of the lonely house (!) lieth a poor emaciated human form. Reader, look upon your hoarded gold; then behold there thy suffering sister.

You are roused from your dream by a low moan. You approach the bed, (?) and the mourner exclaims, "Thank God! he has come!" "Who has come?" Not her life-companion; for he has gone to the more silent home of the tomb, to which the widowed one is fast tending. Observe closer. See! in the almost rayless room she holds before her tear-dimmed eyes a paper. Strange! She calls it her "Comforter." Brother, see what a blessing your well-spent $2.26 is. Comforter, indeed! And it is far more acceptable to her while she is aware that the comforting, encouraging, and well-timed articles she reads, were all penned by those "of like precious faith."

Yes, brethren and sisters, those bits of prose and poetry, that you are permitted to read from week to week, are not the products of those who add to and subtract from the word of God. They are from the pen of dear ones who are waiting, with the poor widows and orphans, to enter a purer, healthier climo, beyond the rude boundaries of time, who wait the dawn of the morning light—that morn which endeth not in night.

Our God is, indeed, very merciful. He careth for us all, rich or poor, young or aged, learned or unlearned. No "respecter of persons" is he. All may trust in him. He is willing to bless and save the weakest believer that hangs on His name. He hears our cries. He answers, in his own good time, our petition. He grants us life and health in a good measure. He upholds us 'mid all storms of the enemy. And Oh! unspeakable love! he promises us a home in glory! There eternal ages may roll, but no grey hairs will adorn our brow. Age, old, trembling, death-preceding age will not intrude upon the ransomed ones there. The day eternal will soon dawn, beloved pilgrims. Cheer up! We are almost home. Home! sweet name! Home! where Jesus shall reign forevermore. Haste! Lord, thy chariot wheels! We long for thee!

I am thy sister with thee sighing,
While kindred dear around are dying.

M. Mathews.

Danville, C. E.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. III.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I left Buffalo on Wednesday night, and after a pleasant and expeditious passage by the boat, arrived here at seven o'clock P.M. yesterday—I immediately began to "travel" to find some brethren in the Lord. After the usual inconveniences and with much less trouble than I sometimes have, I came to Bro. Beards, Michigan, who not having room in his own house took me to Blindbury Hotel where I am comfortably domiciled at present. I have been at work to get notice in the papers and obtain a hall, &c., for Sunday, and have succeeded. Here the brethren have been scattered and mostly gone back to the churches, a part having gone into erroneous views of the kingdom, baptism, &c. W. S. C.

Detroit, Mich., June 26.

Rejection.

For the Crisis.

Bro. Grant:—I have an item of news from this quarter which exhibits the spirit of the times in religious matters. The subject of this action of "rejection" is a zealous and devoted christian brother, who has for many years been united with the Freewill Baptist denomination, and believed it his duty to appoint meetings and improve his gift in exhorting the people. Within the last ten years he has become convinced that the views we, as Adventists, teach, are correct; and, further, that immortality is only obtainable through Christ, and has so taught the people, until the Elders of that church could not endure it longer. So they brought this brother before their conference; chose one of their number to take the chair and ask him such questions as he saw fit, refusing to allow him any explanation of his views, but confined him to a simple answer. After the action had been taken, Bro. Dorrs asked for a copy of their doings and received the following, which we copy verbatim:

"June 18th, 1857.—Met at 4 o'clock in the P. M. according to adjournment. Bro. Ezra Dorrs having been charged of preaching heresy,

Voted, to resolve ourselves into a committee of the whole. Bro. J. Frost in the chair.

Voted, that the chairman question Bro. Dorrs in regard to the doctrine he preaches. 'Bro. Dorrs, do you believe in the unconscious state of the dead?' 'I do, and so preach.' 'Do you believe in the annihilation of the wicked?' 'I do, and so preach.' [Bro. Dorrs says he objected to the term, and told them he preached their final destruction.]

Voted, in our opinion the charge is fully sustained by his own confession, and other testimony introduced to sustain the charge.

Voted, that we reject Bro. Ezra Dorrs.

J. Williams, Clerk."

The above is a specimen of much that has gone on and is in progress in the religious community. This shows us the kind of opposition we must meet if we attempt to preach the gospel of Christ in its fullness. From what acquaintance I have had with Bro. Dorrs for the last ten years, I believe him to be a devoted christian and an inoffensive man, fellowshiping christians wherever he finds them, and actively unites to labor with such, although it may not be his duty to preach. He told me that the ministry who thus "rejected" him as an "heretic," fellowshiped him as a christian, and told him they did not doubt his christianity. "Whatsoever makes manifest is light."

I. C. Wellcome.

For the Crisis.

"A SISTER'S LOVE."

"Day after day I stand gazing after him, stretching out my hands to the unknown shore, calling on him for some assurance that he still is, and is not lost forever, but all in vain; and the beautiful faith of my life reels under the first stroke. God forgive me, but I cannot help uttering,—"If a man die, shall he live again?" Were the world mine, I would give it to be assured on this one point, upon which never in my life before has fallen the shadow of a doubt." Extract from a letter by a lady who had recently lost a brother.—Waverly Magazine. April 11th, 1857.

Weary with watching, worn and full of sorrow,
My aching heart looks forth with yearning sighs,
For some fair star to herald in the morrow,
For some bright token of the morn to rise.
O how I gaze, along time's surging billows!
And watch the dimness that before me lies,
And long to see, beyond the realm of shadows,
A shore of light and blissfulness arise.

O that I might, in its supernal splendor,
Behold the face of him for whom I long,
Whose heart was bound to mine by love-links tender,
So sweet, so holy, gentle and yet strong.
O could I see him through the clouds that gather,
And view him rising safely from the wave,
And meet him, in the presence of "Our Father,"
Before the throne of Him who died to save!

Ah! shall I ever, in the mighty future,
Behold thy face, no more made sad by pain;
Shall I behold thee, O my dearest brother?
"If a man die, say, shall he live again?"
O is there e'er the brightness of the morning
Beyond the murky clouds and shades of night?
With anxious, trembling heart, I wait the dawning,
Which breaks in glory on death's dismal night.

Peace! my sad heart, in death's dark, silent shadows,
Once, long ago, thy Savior, Christ, laid low;
He sank beneath these gloomy, gurgling billows,
And loving ones wept o'er him in their woe.
But on that darkness dawned a glorious day-spring,
When he, the conqueror, in the wondrous strife,
From the dim shadows and the dark waves rising,
Disclosed the glories of immortal life.

Then, peace! my heart,—let joy light up thy sorrow,
Let no sad doubt intrude to give thee pain;
From Christ who died strong consolation borrow,
Through him the dead shall surely "live again."
O then look forward from earth's imperfection,
From sin and sorrow, darkness, clouds and gloom,
And seek to share that glorious resurrection,
Foreshown by Jesus and his opened tomb.

H. L. Hastings.

Rochester, N. Y.

A French writer is represented as calling dyspepsia "the remorse of a guilty stomach."

Brave actions are the substance of life, and good sayings the ornament of it.

Laziness travels so slow that poverty soon overtakes her.

The Roman forum is now a cow market, the Tarpeian rock a cabbage garden, and the palace of the Cæsars a rope walk.

Good Rules for All.—Profane swearing is abominable. Vulgar language is disgusting. Loud laughing is impolite. Inquisitiveness is offensive. Tattling is mean. Telling lies is contemptible. Slandering is Devilish. Ignorance is disgraceful, and laziness is shameful. This is the road in which to become respectable. Walk in it. Never be ashamed of honest labor. Pride is a curse—a hateful vice. Never act the hypocrite. Keep good company. Speak the truth at all times. Never be discouraged, but persevere, and mountains will become molehills.

For the Crisis.

PENITENCE.

Guilty, great God, before thy throne
I cast myself in ruin lost,
My numerous sins and crimes I own,
And bow with woe and horror tost.

Guilty, great God, thy broken law
Most loudly doth my sins declare,
And many a violated vow
Hurries me downward to despair.

O whither, whither shall I turn,
From all my woes to find release?
O Sinai, how thy lightnings burn!
Hark! Calvary speaks of rest and peace!

Jesus, canst thou receive again
The wanderer to thy wide-spread arms,
And love and save the ruined man,
Who quakes and flees in guilt's alarms?

O Jesus, didst thou die for me?
Wilt thou my guilty soul receive?
All trembling to thy cross I flee,—
O help me, Lord—"I do believe."

E. O. S.

A Suggestion.

I see there is a disposition among the brethren in different places where I have traveled, to have a number of small campmeetings, to try to advance the cause of God among them. I think a more economical way would be, to omit the campmeetings and have conferences in different localities as the brethren may desire. This would save much expense, and more good would be done with the same amount of labor. I think the cause demands an extra effort this Fall, for the salvation of our fellow-men; and probably, if there is a request made from different quarters for conferences, God will put it into the hearts of some of his servants that are competent for the work, to attend to such calls. Think of this, brethren, you that have asked my advice; here you have it. It would be a good place at the Wilbraham meeting to make your wants known, as there will be a large gathering of God's watchmen, as well as workmen.

Hiram Munger.

[We think Bro. Munger's is an excellent suggestion, and that great good might be done by putting it at once in practice.] Ed.

Domestic Summary.

BREAKING UP OF MORMONDOM.

MORMONS RETURNING IN DISGUST—THEIR OPINIONS OF ZION.

From the Plattsmouth (Nebraska) Jeffersonian.

A train consisting of about one hundred persons with twenty wagons, passed through this place on Friday last, on their return from Utah to the States. They formed part of a company of two hundred persons and forty teams; but some distance back the remainder took the road for Leavenworth. They left Salt Lake about the 20th of April, and were on the road a little over two months. They bore the appearance of persons who had seen much trouble and privation—being reduced in body, and dejected in mind. A more pitiable set of persons we never beheld. They rejoiced that they had at last reached a land where they could once more live at ease.

The account of their experience in Utah was touching in the extreme. In the narration of what they endured they seemed to approach the subject with reluctance and feelings of horror in calling to mind their sufferings, but in the course of their remarks would invariably become animated, and break out in expressions of indignation at the cruelty and oppression which they endured. They declared the whole system to be but a grand scheme of robbery and sensuality on the part of those in authority. It is not by direct compulsion, they stated, that the property of their followers is taken, but by means of religious enthusiasm. This is inspired by the promise of great spiritual rewards, and by setting before them the example of Scripture characters; that as Job received an increase above all his former possessions, so should they, by their self-sacrificing, reap an increased reward, both of temporal and spiritual possessions.

After all their property was exhausted, then the policy of their rulers would change, and their conduct would be such as to say, "Get away if you can." If any one should become dissatisfied and desire to leave, they were publicly denounced, and the whole church forbidden to purchase any property they might wish to dispose of. From that day they would be subjected to the insults of the entire community, if not absolute danger of their lives. One person stated, that in order to get away, he had to sell his farm, clandestinely at that, for sixty dollars. They reported that one man went out with $3000, and was returning in the train, with his team only, and had not enough to eat. Another, who had a farm worth there seven thousand dollars, sold it for thirty-five dollars. A man by the name of George Brooks, (if we recollect aright,) who had considerable grain and goods stored in his house, on incurring the displeasure of the elders, had the sides of his house literally stove in, and his property all carried off, he only escaping with his life.

When the train first approached we inquired whether they were from California or Utah. An old man who was standing near replied—"We are from Beautiful Zion."

"What is your opinion of Zion?" we inquired.

His reply was:—"I went once in search of Zion, but will never go out again till I know where it is to be found. It is the worst Zion that I ever set my foot into."

We inquired concerning the hand-cart trains, and the true reason of employing them. They said that it was the greatest piece of cruelty that was ever perpetrated; that it was at times horrible to behold the condition of those who arrived in that way; that frequently their hands and feet were frozen, and their limbs, from the effects of fatigue and exposure, swollen to more than twice their natural size; that sometimes, when they were able no longer to pull the carts, the women and children were loaded with the baggage, and proceeded thus until they fell down from sheer exhaustion; and that, after arriving in this condition, they would die off like "rotten sheep," as they expressed it. They stated that one reason for forming hand-trains, was, that those who came in that way, on becoming dissatisfied, would have no ready means of returning, and that those in authority curse the emigrant trains which pass through on their way to the Pacific, as they afford means for dissatisfied persons to escape.

In speaking with one quite intelligent young man, he stated that he had been there nearly four years, and that the reason he did not leave sooner was because he hoped it would be getting better. He remarked that if he should meet a train going through, he would do all that he could to persuade them not to go; but if they persisted, he could only leave them to find out by sad experience. The company report that four or five hundred men were going to leave this spring, and are probably on the road by this time.

Three Ministers Mobbed in Kentucky—Disgraceful Proceedings.—Cincinnati, July 26.—At Cummins, Rockcastle county, Ky., on Sunday, while Rev. John G. Fee was preaching, an armed mob forced their way into the church, seized him and two other ministers who were with him, Rev. J. Richardson and Rev. J. M. McLean, and, after abusing and insulting them, finally decided that they should be taken out of the county. Mr. Fee was struck on the head, and considerably injured. On the way out, a distance of ten miles, every opportunity was improved by the mob to insult and abuse their victims, and they heralded through the neighborhood they passed that they had three horse thieves that they were going to lynch. The immediate cause of the outrage was the attempt to establish a school in that town.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Europa.

Halifax, July 29.

The Royal Mail Steamship Europa, Capt. Lott, arrived at this port at 10 o'clock this evening, bringing dates from Liverpool of Saturday, 18th instant.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The shipping of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable on the Agamemnon was to be finished the day the Europa sailed. The Niagara has over a thousand miles on board, and her portion would be finished the following week. The continued test of the coil has been very satisfactory, and at Cork, whence the vessels will sail about the first of August, experiments will be made through the whole length of the cable. Insurances had been effected on the safe laying of the cable at rates ranging from 10 per cent upward, but many stockholders were sanguine enough to prefer running their own risks.

FRANCE.

The poet Beranger is dead.

The French police, according to a letter in "Nord," of Brussels, continue to display the greatest activity in the researches after all the villians suspected of having taken part in the late conspiracy. About thirty have been arrested at Marseilles and on the frontier.

The harvest prospects throughout France are most cheering. In some places the reaping is over.

ITALY.

Tranquility prevails. It is asserted that the recent movement was planned in London, and therefore the Italian court, backed by Austria and France, is about to protest against the asylum which England affords to troublesome refugees.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I will preach in Jamaica, Vt., Rawsonville school-house, Sunday, Aug. 9th.

S. W. Bishop.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Bethlehem, Ct., Aug. 15th
Roxbury, Sunday, Aug. 16th
Lanesville, Aug. 21st
Bridgeport, (at the old chapel,) Sunday, Aug. 23d
Northfield, Aug. 30th

C. Goodrich.

Bro. Grant:—If my health will admit, I propose to be with the Brethren at Kennebunkport the 22d and 23d of August.
Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29th and 30th
Roxbury, Mass., Sept. 3d
Providence, R. I., Sept. 5th and 6th
Communications from Brethren will be thankfully received at either place.

N. F. Nason.

General Campmeeting at North Wilbraham, Mass., commencing August 31st, to continue one week. We expect a large and good meeting.

Campmeeting.

Bro. Grant:—Having just returned from Lynn, where I spent yesterday with the church looking for the return of their Lord, I found quite an interest among them to have a Campmeeting about the middle of September at their place. Upon looking it over, I think it a good place to have one, and will be as easy of access for our brethren in Mass., Me. and N. H., as any place that can be selected; and it seems to me that the cause of Christ and truth might be greatly promoted by having a free, liberal Campmeeting at Lynn, where the lovers of Jesus can gather once more, to exhort one another, as we see the day approaching.

If there is found to be an interest among the churches for this meeting, and the Lord will, you will see a call for it in the papers.

L. Boutell.

Boston, July 27, 1857.

N. B. Let all our brethren interested in this Campmeeting, write immediately to the Crisis office, signifying their desires, that we may act together. L. B.

Bro. Thomas Smith appoints to preach at Lincolnville, Me., (Young Town) the first Sabbath in August.
Holden, (Clewley neighborhood), second Sunday in August.
Orrington, (Advent Chapel) third Sunday in August.

The Lord permitting, I will be with the church at Cheshire Street, Ct., August 9th, and Bro. Turner Aug. 23d.

For the brethren, H. Munger.

Bro. E. Whitney appoints to preach in Lowell, Aug. 9th.

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at Warner, N. H., Aug. 2d

Providence permitting, we shall hold a Grove Meeting at North Raymond, on the farm of Bro. Thomas Morrill, on the road leading from Gray to West Poland, about five miles from Gray Corner, to commence the 7th of August, at half past ten in the A. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

J. Partridge.
O. R. Fassett.

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings at Casco, Holden's Corner, at the Union Meeting House, Aug. 13, and over the Sabbath.

J. Partridge.
O. R. Fassett.

Campmeeting.—Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at South Adams, commencing on Monday, the seventh day of September next, to continue over the following Sabbath. The believers of the Second Advent of the Lord are invited to attend. Necessary provision will be provided for man and beast. Further notice will hereafter be given. Brn. invited—R. V. Lyon, H. L. Hastings, R. E. Ladd, and M. Bachelor.

Wm. F. Stitt,
Z. Campbell,
A. Cummings.

Discussion.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 18, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

John Chapman,
In behalf of the Brethren.

If the Lord will, the church in Lynn, Dyehouse village, may expect Br. A. M. Higgins to be with them the First and Second Sundays of Aug. instead of next Sunday. A. M. H.

If the Lord will, the church in Salem may expect Sister S. J. Higgins to be with them the First and Second Sundays in Aug., as requested. A. M. H.

Bro. A. Fox appoints to preach at
Winsted, Ct., Aug. 9th
Waterbury, where Bro. Denny may appoint, Aug. 12th
Bridgeport, at the Old Chapel, Aug. 16th and at the New Chapel at 5 o'clock, or in the evening, as the Brn. may appoint.
Cheshire, where Bro. Dudley may appoint, Aug. 20th
Cheshire Street, Aug. 23d
Lovely Street, Canton, Aug. 30th

Bro. H. Pratt appoints to preach in Worcester, Mass., Aug. 2d

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Carmel, Me., Saturday eve., 6 P. M., Aug. 8th
" " Sunday, Aug. 9th
Bangor, Me., Wednesday eve., Aug. 12th
Hermon, Me., Saturday, Aug. 15th
" " Sunday, Aug. 16th

L. Boutell.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 9. M. Grant.

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

Elder E. Burnham appoints to preach in Lowell, Mass., Fourth Sunday in July

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at Canterbury, in the Town Hall, July 26th

Bro. Boutell will preach in Salem the first Sabbath in September. Temple Hardy.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach At South Hope Saturday 8th, Sunday, Aug. 22d and 23d. Will be at Camden by the first Friday boat, 21st, from Bangor.

Bro. R. R. York appoints to preach at South Gray, Aug. 9th

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in the following places:
Providence, Sunday, Aug. 2d. Third meeting where Bro C. O. Towne may appoint,—perhaps with Bro. Osler's charge.
Roxbury, Mass., Monday evening, Aug. 3d
Boston, Tuesday evening, Aug. 4th
Worcester, (at Bro. D. T. Taylor's charge,) Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th
If these appointments interfere with others, please notify me before I arrive. These are not decrees,—only propositions.

Hiram Munger.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Clay, evening, (meet me at Brewerton, morning stage,) July 29th
Albany, N. Y., (evening,) July 30th

W. S. Campbell.

The Lord willing, I will preach the word at Round Pond, (Union Meeting House,) 3d and 4th Sabbath in July.

Thos. Smith.

The Lord will, Bro. R. E. Ladd will preach in Thorndike the 3d Sunday in August.

The Lord will, Bro. A. M. Higgins will preach in Springfield the 3d Sunday in August.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Eliza Sackett 126, G. S. Hastings 123, J. N. Berry 98, T. J. Philbrook 114, J. Boman 120, J. U. Piper 126, D. H. Caverly 130, C. L. Chase 130, M. G. Dunham 130, H. Chase 129, B. Lord 127, $1 each.

J. A. Cole 135, M. A. Clark 143, Hannah Butler 107, J. Stone 116, $2 each.

B. C. Bancroft 117, 50 cents.

For Books and Tracts.—A. Wheeler, 36 cents, M. G. Dunham, $2.00.

Books Sent.—M. G. Dunham, A. Wheeler, T. Smith.

To Correspondents.

M. G. Dunham—We have sent you the concordance and tracts by express.

M. A. Clark—All right.

Bro. Shepherd—The tracts are received.

Bro. A. N. Seymour's P. O. address is Reading, Hillsdale Co., N. Y.

Geo. L. Teeple's P. O. address is Arlington, Sibley Co., M. T.

B. P. Manning's P. O. address is Oil Mill Village, N. H.

Bro. Jonas Merriam's P. O. address is Concord, N. H.

Bro. Walter Pratt's P. O. address is Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Death not Life—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion; between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel-plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 56 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 8 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 9 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each [illegible] pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the [illegible]—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

ARMAGEDDON.

Pale morn o'er earth is shedding
It's rays of sickly light;
Dim is the sun in heaven,
Clothed with the vail of night.
Ah! fearful are the omens
That earth gives forth around;
The hearts of men now tremble,
At nature's direful sound.

The storm now wildly gathers,
And darker grows the gloom;
Peace from the earth is soaring,
Still weeping o'er its doom.
But hark! the rush of armies
From o'er the ocean's wave,
And from each land is swelling
A tide all fierce and brave.

List to the preparation!
To battle's proud array!
How wrathful wave the banners
On this eventful day.
Thy plain, O Armageddon,
Is dark with bursting war!
It shakes with rushing chargers
Gathered from lands afar.

Lo! 'tis the day of carnage!
The day by bards foretold;
How wildly sound the summons
As earth's last scenes unfold.
Once more rings the clarion,
That calls to conflict dire;
O God! how rush the nations
To glut their vengeful ire!

Hark! hear the roar of battle!
How shake the hills around;
To final shock of conflict,
Which shall o'er earth resound.
'Tis come—the day of slaughter—
How fearful is the strife
Between brother and brother
Whose thirst for blood is rife.

How fierce is this wild struggle!
The strong of earth are there;
It is the day of vengeance,
And all must drink their share.
Thousands are wildly charging
On earth's embattled plain;
While on its fields are lying
The ghastly forms of slain.

Still on, the battle rages,
'Till Armageddon's plain
Flows red with crimson rivers,
That ne'er shall flow again.
'Tis done! The strife is ended!
Above the earth all gory,
The banners red are waving
O'er youthful and the hoary.

They slumber there together,
With hate still on their brows;
Where each had met in conflict,
And madly wrought their vows.
Gather, ye fowls of heaven,
Eat, ye, the flesh of slain;
Drink, ye, the blood of slaughter
That fills the battle-plain.

It is the voice of heaven
That says "Devour the dead;"
Then feast, ye, at your leisure,
Fearless of harm or dread.
O earth! thus ends thy harvest,
Thy mighty conflict's o'er;
Thy night of woe is ended,
And war has fled thy shore.

Awake! daughter of Zion,
Put on thy bright array;
Rejoice! thou lonely captive,
For sweetly dawns thy day.
The joyous day of gladness
Beams brightly o'er the earth,
Loud bursts the song of triumph
O'er new creation's birth!

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

Vernon, Vt.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Fear.

I am aware that talent with time might contribute a volume replete with interest on this notable passion—the strongest perhaps our Creator has pleased to implant within the human breast. But I only design to say a few things; they may come within the range of common-place, but such as I have I give.

This, as well as every other passion incident to human nature, seems implanted by our Creator for the most wise and beneficent purposes; yet is in danger of being perverted, coming into exercise when and where our Creator did not design, and vice versa. Sudden fear often has a formidable effect on the physical system, causing a deathly paleness, dire disease, and sometimes immediate death. Physiologists tell us, "the effects of sudden fear are first communicated to the heart; it ceases to propel the blood to the surface of the body and through the lungs; hence, that deadly paleness."

Before the birth of Christ, it is known that at a time when men were terrified with a view of distressing events, and could not themselves discern the cause, being ignorant of the true God, and feeling the need of foreign aid, the Greeks made a deity of the passion of fear, which was afterwards worshiped by the Romans; both nations seeking relief by addressing to it vows and prayers. This deity was represented by a head with the hair erect, the countenance raised toward heaven, the mouth open, and a terrible aspect. A deity representing paleness was its inseparable companion.

There are two kinds of fear; filial and servile. The first begets "peace like a river." It also introduces us into the school of Wisdom. It is pure in its nature—odorous as the evening zephyr of June, when the fragrance of flowers perfumes the whole atmosphere. The second is so very unlike this in its nature and effects that, at first, it would seem almost improper to class it under the same name, were it not for the different adjectives. The very highest authority for classing things under the right names designates the painful emotion of servile fear, as "Torment"—a phrase expressive of the deepest pain and keenest anguish.

Look at the surging billows of the boisterous deep, when, in its fearful agitation it "casts up mire and dirt," and you have a picture, drawn by the Holy Spirit, of those subjected to servile fear—conscious an unsettled difficulty exists between themselves and One who holds all might and power in his hands—their tearful eyes and throbbing hearts often proving that they feel it to be "a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Yet they make little or no effort to secure a reconciliation, though adequate means are abundant for such settlement. They neglect this "great salvation," and make no account of the divine Days-man which has been provided at infinite cost, and who is perfectly competent to make a most amicable adjustment of the whole matter. The blood of God's eternal Son is of little or no moment to them; they feel no sympathetic interest to search and see whether there ever was sorrow like unto his sorrow. Jer. 1: 12. Yet, often the recollection of his promised wrath on those "who would not that he should reign over them,' fills them with such fearful apprehensions, they suspend the laws of nature. The natural appetite has gone—sleep has departed from their eyes and slumber from their eyelids, while the Spirit "convinces them of a judgment to come." While the positive command of Self Denial! thunders in their ears, they hesitate. Meantime Satan turns his gilded baits, causing them to glisten to his own advantage and secure their ruin. They are not of the class who are wholly reckless and unbelieving—they believe about as much as a class of beings spoken of in James 2: 12, and stand at last denominated as the fearful, and take their part with the "abominable, murderers, liars," &c., which is the lake of fire and second death. Rev. 21: 8.

Cullen, when speaking of fear as the cause of disease, says, the best preventive is, to fortify the mind by understanding. and availing ourselves of the remedial means adapted to our disease, putting as far away as practicable the idea that it is incurable. This is doubtless correct of other causes of fear. When cause for fear exists, never try to persuade ourselves or others to the contrary, but learn and use the best remedies within our reach: then calmly trust in Him who numbers the very hairs of our head and knows when one of his tiniest creatures fall, though it be valued at but a half-penny. Would that those might adopt this rule who, instead of loving the appearing of Christ, are terrified at the thought of meeting him in judgment. Impenitent friend! (for such I consider you, if you do not love the appearing of Christ,) there is the most extreme danger in your case, which you must concede if you will allow yourself to reflect on the subject. Just think on what a brittle thread your life is suspended! Ere another diurnal revolution, those delicate air vessels may cease their respiration, and you sleep until Gabriel's trump shall call you to the settlement of the great day!

The scriptures teach that the coming of the Lord will burst so suddenly and unexpectedly on the great mass, that they will not only be surprised but terrified beyond measure, as saith the prophet,—"All faces are turned into paleness." Jer 30: 6. It would appear from Amos 8: 8, and Luke 21: 6, that many will actually expire through fear. (See Camp. Trans) They once thought a certain class made too much ado—were too much excited, &c.; meantime they cast off fear and restrained prayer until hope had forever fled. Now they are too much excited to listen to reason's voice—they even entreat the inanimate rocks to help them. Rev. 6: 16. But they, obedient to their Maker's voice, flee, or melt away like wax before the flame. And in this their extreme agony, not one ray of sympathy is allowed them to even dilute their terror. Instead of sympathy they are derided by Him who alone had power to help them. Please read Prov. 1.

Do not try to exculpate yourself on the ground you have never committed heinous crimes—have never lied, stolen, murdered, &c. God does not thus excuse you. Read, if you please, the last sentence pronounced on the ungodly in Matt. 25: 41-46, and you will there find it was not for specified crimes; but what? Ah! it was cruel neglect! "Because" you paid no attention to his entreaties; you continued to do as you pleased: now He will neglect you forever! Hear him:

"Because I have called, and ye refused. I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded; but ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof: I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh; when your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you. Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me: for that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord: they would none of my counsel; they despised all my reproof."

O sinner! be excited ere it be too late!

Your friend,

BEULAH MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct., July 20, '57.

For the Crisis.

A Letter.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—For the first time I attempt to address the friends of Jesus through the "Crisis." As I view the judgment almost ready to burst upon a slumbering church and an unthinking world, I feel impelled to write. O may the Spirit of the living God guide my pen! Write, thine own self, my Savior, and peradventure some pure minds may be stirred up by way of remembrance.

The fearfulness of the times strikes me through with dread. And when I look around and see the condition of the church and world, my soul is stirred within me. Look where you will, what do you see? The signs of Jesus' coming nearly all in the past—prophecy nearly all fulfilled, and the wrath of God ready to be poured out upon a guilty world. Brother, sister, where are you? Indulging yourselves in habits strictly forbidden in the scriptures? Keeping your Lord's money to indulge in dress, tea, coffee, tobacco and snuff, or buying gold and gewgaws for your children, with which to cultivate their pride? All these things you can dispense with. In what respect do you sacrifice your feelings or appetite? Is it any more than your reasonable service to present your bodies a living sacrifice to God? Dear friends, wake up! Watchman upon the walls of Zion, wake up! You preach to the people to present themselves a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God; do you do it yourself? Would you like to have Jesus come and find you indulging in the disgusting habit of chewing tobacco, which is injurious to the health, and in its effects nearly as bad as ardent spirits, and much more filthy?

The time has come when we must be honest with ourselves, honest with God, honest with our fellow men, and live so that they can have no evil thing to say of us. Do we do it? O that we could say, here, Lord, I am; do with me as seemeth good in thy sight. I have done what I could. I have sacrificed my ease, comfort, pleasure, reputation, fashion, and every unnecessary habit. I have had an eye single to thy glory in every thing. I have kept the faith, and contended earnestly for it. The brother or sister that can say this is a happy child. And they can say, "come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Such are truly waiting; they have been doing all they could. Christ can "present them without spot or blemish" when he shall appear. We shall wish in that day we had been more faithful, labored more for the salvation of our fellow men, thought less of ourselves, and done more to promote God's glory. The hour of his judgment is come. I believe that the next great event to be looked for is the sign of the Son of Man. Do we realize these things? Do we believe them?

Watchman, what of the night? Tell us, tell us, what of the night? We look to you for instruction; we have a right so to do. The Lord have mercy on those who are saying in their hearts "my Lord delayeth his coming." The saints of God are sighing for home.

"The church in an agony waits
To see her dear Lord in the air."

The worn out earth is ready to burst asunder, and its fires consume a guilty world. Confusion, death and destruction are prevalent everywhere. Madness and fury reign in the hearts of men—man killing his fellow man, and thirsting for blood as the beast for his prey.

O what a scene to behold is this world! What must be the feelings of that God who cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance? Who so loved the world, he gave his only begotten Son to die? Will he always bear with a rebellious race? No, no; the time is coming when he will laugh at their calamity, and mock when their fear cometh. Then "let us who are of the light walk as children of the light, redeeming the time because the days are evil." May the blessing of God rest upon the weary, who are sighing for home, and keep them from the evils that are in the world. Soon the cry will be heard, "behold he cometh." Who will be ready to meet him?

A weary traveler, H. B. H.

From Sr. P. Woodard.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel enabled by the grace of God to write one word of encouragement to the saints, and one of warning to the wicked. It was through the columns of your little paper that I was led to see the error of my ways, and straightway repented of them. It was three years ago that, in view of the judgment, and the penalty imposed upon those that love not God, I fled to the ark of safety. Since then I have greatly erred in many things, but God has forgiven me.

Christian, press forward; the end is nearer than when we believed. Soon the opening heavens will reveal the Son of Man in all his glory. What rapture will then fill our hearts, as we look upon him whom we have loved! Our sorrows will then cease, and joy unspeakable take possession of our minds.

But, on the other hand, what will be the feelings of the disappointed sinner? The most lamentable cries will then rend the air. If the eye of an unbeliever should chance to rest upon these lines, may he take the warning before it is too late. Remember that Jesus is our Savior NOW. But when he rises, mercy ceases, and judgment reigns; then the cries of the wicked cannot reach the ear of the Almighty. He is soon coming, and if you would abide his wrath, flee to Jesus while there is room. May the Lord have mercy on you.

Dear Brn. and Srs., lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh. Soon the morning will break, and Jesus will come. Pray for me, that I may resist the temptations which are around me; being young, there are many. May the Lord save his waiting ones from doubting. Remember the words—"Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be. Yours in hope, PRISCA.

Hebron, N. Y., 1857.

From Bro. D. B. Wyatt.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still traveling as an itinerant. I find the churches are pretty well furnished, some of them with ministers, others, however, are destitute.

Holiness is increasing in the churches, but many revivals are needed. We must not believe that our warfare is over. Our warfare will continue till the end. The wheat is with the tares till the harvest. Then it will be gathered. Hallelujah.

I have learned that Bro. Billings has departed from his labors. He died in West Troy, and is lamented. Tears fell freely on his account yesterday.

I am not an adventist, but I feel to sympathize with the christian church who mourn his loss and listened to his counsels. May his dear children be provided with comfort and a Fatherly care from heaven.

"He wept not himself that his warfare was done,
The battle was fought, and the victory
won;
But he whispered of those whom his heart
loved the most,
'Tell my brethren for me, that I died at my post.'

He asked not a stone to be sculptured with verse;
He asked not that fame should his merits
rehearse;
But he asked as a boon, when he gave up
the ghost,
That his brethren might know that he died at his POST.

And can we the words of our brother forget?
Oh, no! they are fresh in our memory
yet;
An example so sacred shall never be lost,
We will bare in the work—we will die at our post."

Blessed servant of God! thou hast died in a noble cause—died on the field. Sleep then in Jesus. Thy name and thy memory is blessed. Thou art still living in the hearts of the church. Noble servant! choosing to die for thy Savior. We will hail thee bye and bye on the plains of immortal felicity. Adieu! till we meet again.

Blessedness is found in meekness, holiness, and communion with the Savior. "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom."

"Thrice happy who his guest retains;
He owns, and shall forever own,
Wisdom and Christ, and heaven are ONE."

The Christian Conference at Woodstock was an interesting one. I was enabled to preach three times. Here is a large Christian Church of over two hundred members. Signs of a revival appear in their midst. A groaning in many of them for the salvation of the impenitent, and an interest for meetings indicate it. Elder Kidder is laboring with that church, and is a useful and talented minister.

West Randolph has lately been favored with a blessed outpouring of the Spirit. Seventy persons, I am informed, have been forward for prayers.

Concord, N. H. is blessed with a powerful revival. Fifty converts or more have found pardon; and the work of the Spirit is progressing. Happy is that man who hath found comfort and forgiveness Come to Jesus. Come and find rest unto your souls. D. B WYATT.

Woodstock, June 29th, 1857.

Choice Selections.

The Torn Pocket.

"My dear," said Mr. Huston to his young wife, as he rose from his breakfast table, "I wish you would mend my overcoat pocket. The day is pleasant, so that I can leave the coat off without inconvenience."

"Very well, my love," was the reply, and a moment after the front door closed on the husband, who departed to the store, where he filled the place of a responsible clerk.

Mrs. Huston rose to attend to her domestic affairs, and, occupied in them, soon forgot the torn coat-pocket. About noon, she had finished her work, and having a spare hour before dinner, she sat down and took up a late novel. In this way she continued to overlook the torn pocket, until the meal was over, and her husband had again left the house, when going to look for the over-coat, she found that Mr. Huston had put it on, the weather having grown colder.

"O well, it will do to-night," said the wife. "I suppose he will scold when he finds I forgot it; but it can't be helped now."

The truth was, Mrs. Huston was what is called "a good, easy woman;" that is, she never intentionally harmed any one, but was only thoughtless and forgetful—her sins were those of omission. So she found no difficulty in dismissing all uncomfortable thoughts concerning the torn pocket; and resuming her novel, was soon deep in the miseries of the heroine.

About dusk there came a violent ring at the bell. It was a magnetic ring, as it were, and expressed anger, or great tribulation, if not both. It made the somewhat nervous Mrs. Huston start with a little shriek. She stopped reading and listened.

Directly the servant opened the door, and the step of her husband was heard, but heavier and quicker than usual. Her heart unaccountably began to beat faster. "O dear," she cried to herself, "what can be the matter?"

She was not long left in doubt. Her husband came at once into the sitting-room, emotions of rage and suffering alternating perceptibly in his face. Frightened at demeanor so unusual, the wife looked up, her lips parted in terror, and unable even to welcome him as usual.

"See what you have done," cried Mr. Huston, passionately, taking off his overcoat, turning the torn pocket inside out, and throwing the garment into his hearer's lap; "you have ruined me with your negligence."

"What, what have I done?" gasped his wife at last, as he sternly regarded her. "Has anything happened?"

"Anything happened? Didn't I tell you I was ruined? I've lost five hundred dollars, and been discharged because I lost it; and all because you didn't mend my pocket. Nor is it the first time, as you know, that you have neglected to do what you ought. You are always forgetting. I often told you you would rue it some day."

"But how did it happen? Can nothing be done?" timidly said the wife, after a while.

"How did it happen? In the most natural way possible. I had a note to pay for the firm; and as the bank lay in this part of the town, I brought the money up to dinner: and, on going out, put it into my over-coat pocket, supposing you had mended the rent. When I reached the bank, the money was gone. It was then nearly three o'clock. Almost frantic, I came back to within a few steps of the door, hoping to find the money on the pavement. It was madness, as I might have known; but I looked again and again, asking everybody I met. At last I went back to the store. But the news had preceded me. The notary had already been there to protest the note; and my employers would not hear a word of excuse—I was discharged on the spot."

As he ceased speaking he threw himself on a chair by the table, and buried his face in his hands. His discharge was, indeed, a terrible blow. Without fortune or anything but his character to depend on, he saw in his loss of place, and the consequent refusal of his employers to recommend him, a future full of disasters. And all for what? All because his wife could not remember the simple duty.

No wonder, in this hour of trouble, that he turned away from her, and buried his face in his hands. No wonder he felt angrily toward her, author of this evil.

For a while Mrs. Huston knew not what to do. The tears ran down her cheeks, but she feared to approach her husband. "He will drive me away," she said to herself. "But I have deserved it all, I have deserved it all."

At last she ventured to approach him, and at last he was induced to listen. With many tears she promised never to be neglectful again, "which she would never forget."

Nor has she forgotten it. Years have passed, and the Hustons are now comparatively well off; for, after a while, Mr. Huston obtained another situation, and finally became a partner in the house.

But to this day, when the wife sees either of her daughters negligent, she calls the offender to her, and tells, as a warning, the story of THE TORN POCKET.—Ex.

From the Christian Messenger.

Pearls.

Grace is but the seed of glory; glory is the maturity of grace. Grace is but the bud of glory; glory is grace full blown. Grace is but the blossom of glory; glory is the ripe fruit of grace. Grace is glory begun; glory is grace ended.

It is useless to rise with the lark, if we rise not with her towards heaven.

He that thinks he hath no need of Christ, hath too high thoughts of himself; he that thinks Christ cannot help him, hath too low thoughts of Christ

Christianity is the good man's text; his life is the sermon; alas how few stick to their text.

A man who puts aside his religion because he is going into society, resembles a person taking off his shoes because he is about to walk on thorns.

We are never beneath hope while we are above hell; and we are never above hope while we are beneath heaven.

Laziness grows on people; it begins in cobwebs and ends in iron chains. The more business a man has to do, the more he is able to accomplish, for he learns to economize his time.

In all good things give the eye and ear full scope, for they let into the mind; restrain the tongue, for it is a spender.

When a man is holy, then God is gracious; a holy life is a continual prayer.

Repentance is the best argument to move God to mercy.

It is not the happy death that ensures happiness, but the holy life.

Hope for the best, get ready for the worst, and then take what God sends.

In all your actions remember that God sees you; and in all his actions endeavor to see him. That will make you fear him; this will make you love him.

How to Move the World.

A lesson, which, if well learned, would be of vast benefit to many thoretical reformers of the present day, is taught in this incident, which we take from a work on the life and sayings of Socrates:

A Grecian youth, who saw the errors and follies of the people, and wished to reform the world, once exclaimed:—

"Oh, that I were rich, and famous as an orator, I would move the world so soon. Here are sins to be plucked up, and truths to be planted. Oh, that I could do it all. I would reform the whole world—and that so soon."

Socrates, hearing the youth, said:—

"Young man, thou speakest as silly women. This gospel, in plain letters, is written for all. 'LET HIM THAT WOULD MOVE THE WORLD, MOVE FIRST HIMSELF.' It asks neither wealth nor fame to live out a noble life. Make thy light thy life; thy thought, action. Others will come round, and follow in thy steps. Thou asketh riches to move the world. Foolish young man, as thou art, begin now. Reform thy little self, and thou hast begun to reform the world. Fear not, thy work shall never die."—Ex.

Ways of Doing Good.

Sometimes the Christian has an earnest desire in his heart to do good in the world, but he cannot call to mind immediately the means by which this may be accomplished; and in order to assist the memory, we sketch a few ways in which good has been done and the work of the Lord prospered.

Gathering children into the Sabbath School; scattering tracts; visiting the sick; reading the Bible to those who cannot read it themselves; conversing with Christians upon the subject of religion; speaking words of truth and love to the disconsolate; writing letters to absent friends and to those who are out of Christ. —Zion's Herald.

GRIEF knits two hearts in closer bonds than happiness ever can; and common sufferings are far stronger links than common joys.

HAPPINESS is that inward, sweet delight, that arises from harmony between our will and God's will.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1857. WHOLE NO. 102. VOL. V. NO. 24.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LIFE'S VOYAGE.

O, while life's eddying current rolls,
And speeds our mote-like barques along,
Great God, sustain our trembling souls,
And bid our anxious fears be gone.

How speed we on! the hurrying tide
Sweeps us along the dangerous way;
With arrowy swiftness on we glide,
In storm or calm, by night or day.

Great God, to thee our fainting souls
Would turn in every doubt and fear;
While life's swift current round us rolls,
O, grant that we may know Thee near.

And when the speeding years are past,
That mark the scenes of mortal woe,
Gather our storm-tossed barques at last,
Where Life's pure waters gently flow.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Living for Christ.

Living for Christ is not waiting "for the church to be in a better state," as we often hear the remark, or for "others to be holy," or to "act right,"—but that we have this work in our own hearts; i. e., to endeavor to be as upright, as sincere, candid, gentle, kind, benevolent, economical, true, good, as we expect everybody to be in the earth renewed!—"to walk as in the day"—in order to be saved from the wrath of God, when he comes to take vengeance on an ungodly world. This is an example of living for Christ. This is all that is to be said when such a life is to be characterized; and such a manner of life is nothing more than simply carrying out the surrender which one makes of himself to Christ when he trusts in him for salvation.

To live for Christ is not something which should make an individual particular, and to stand apart from the body of disciples of Jesus; it should only be peculiar to them in contradistinction from those who are living for the world; (and there is a volume of meaning in these words, living for the world, in contrast with "living for Christ!") All the followers of Christ should alike live for him, for they all alike have covenanted to do it, and in the case of all, this is alike reasonable. The obligation does not rest on the minister any more than on the physician, the man of letters, the humble mechanic, the rich, the poor. It does not rest on the mother any more than on the father; on the servant than the master. On all these, on all classes, on every individual of every class and grade, who is trusting in Christ, the obligation to live for Christ presses with a weight which no finite mind can estimate; for the obligation is founded in their being redeemed from eternal death by his most precious blood.

The religion of Jesus Christ is practical in every principle and precept given by him. "Be ye holy." Holy living is the internal and outward development of holiness. Holiness is an all-controlling principle of the life; as a living reality to be believed and confided in, and as a sentiment always to be cherished and realized, is characterized, as a matter of human experience, by many phases, from its earliest developments to its final consummation when redeemed from a sin-cursed earth. It composes all the mysteries of godliness. Why then, O ye who profess to be followers of Jesus, oppose the only thing that will complete the robe of righteousness, that will give admittance to the "Marriage of the Lamb?" The commad is imperative, and always in the present tense, to the church who heard the words audibly spoken by Jesus himself, to all who have lived since, and especially to those who are living when Jesus comes: for the command is,—"Stand ready, waiting, watching."

To live for Christ is not to seclude ourselves from the world, or even from those who may falsely profess Christ, or differ in opinion,—but go forth, letting your light shine. "But they oppose; they persecute; they don't believe;"—the command is still, "Let your light shine;" "deny thyself;" "take up thy cross." "But it does no good." Ah! you know not; if but one is saved among the multitude, it would be worth a life of labor.

I do believe if even the professed church who are looking for the immediate coming of Christ, lived what they profess, feeling a sense of the injunction and admonition recorded for them in Rev. 3: 15,—"I know thy works, that thou art neither cold or hot; I would that thou wert cold or hot," &c., that they would arise and rally together—live the gospel—let it shine forth in their lives in all its purity and practicability. But it is a "little flock," and Jesus says, "fear not;" and as the church is the temple where the Holy Spirit dwells, my inference is, that as members decrease, power will increase, so that even Satan will be foiled in his last attempts to seduce the whole world and to deceive, if possible, the very elect. "The Lord knoweth them that are his." How comforting are these words in this time of desolation and confusion;—"And no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." A refuge in Christ! Eternal life! who can estimate? Nothing mortal is to be compared.

T. F. S.

Concord, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Reflections.

Where, O my soul, is thy zeal for God? Why so slothful? Does not this cause in which thou hast enlisted demand all thine energies? Hast thou not spiritual foes to conquer, who are many, and fierce, and strong? Are they not watching to see thy halting, to lead thee astray and gain the victory? When wilt thou awake from this dreamy lethargy? When wilt thou be in earnest? He whom thou dost profess to follow was in earnest when he left the courts of glory and came to a lost and ruined world. He was in earnest when he went about urging men to repent and "flee from the wrath to come;" pleading with them to take refuge in him. He was in earnest when he laid down his life to redeem the guilty. He is in earnest now as at the mercy-seat he intercedes.

Think, O my soul, of those who have fought the good fight and finished their course. Have they not counted their lives as naught that they might gain the great salvation? Have they not with joy endured toil, and hardship, and persecution, and shame, so that they might reign with Christ, and share in the eternal weight of glory? Think, my soul, of the perishing around thee. Hast thou no care for them? Doth not the joy which thou hast tasted, the anticipation which thou hast had of the kingdom of glory, the love of Jesus, constrain thee to point thy fellow-sinners to the way of life? Wilt thou slumber while there is one heedless, unthinking one to whom thou mayest raise a warning voice?

O, awake! gird on thine armor; let righteousness be stamped upon thy brow. Look to Him, who is "mighty to save," for strength, and go onward! He who is thy life will soon appear. Happy wilt thou be if thou art ready to meet him.

O, ye ministers of the gospel of salvation, will ye not tell us much of Jesus? Tell us of his love, his meekness, his compassion, his bright and holy example, his power to save.

Show us plainly the plan of redemption; help us to see that we have not now to atone for our sins, but to bring forth fruits meet for repentance. Speak often to us of the great reward,—the glorious inheritance, the eternal triumph, the shout of victory at the coming of our King!

Julia L.

For the Crisis.

"Lord, what wilt Thou have me to Do?"

The above inquiry is made three times in the New Testament, with the inspired answer given in each place in clear and distinct words; yet no Bible truth is so little understood as the answer to the above question. Let the same inquiry be made in this age of human wisdom, and the answers would be as numerous as the sects in Christendom, and as different from the other as are their conflicting opinions. In the days of ancient Israel God had specific conditions on which he would forgive the transgressors of his laws. Those conditions complied with were the only means of securing his favor.

We may read all the sayings of Christ previous to the commission given to the Apostles to go out and preach the gospel to all nations, and yet not know God's revealed plan of forgiveness. Matthew records it,—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Matt. 28: 19. Mark records it,—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 15–16. Luke says,—"That repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Luke 24: 47. Put the three together, and we have the specific work for our salvation. It is no more nor less than to believe the gospel, repent of our sins and be baptized; and the promise is that we shall be saved.

On the day of Pentecost, under the preaching of the gospel by Peter, sinners were "pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2: 37–38. The conversion of Saul of Tarsus, recorded in the 9th chapter of the Acts, most clearly presents the teaching of the apostles on the doctrine of remission. The extraordinary circumstances of the light from heaven, and the voice of Jesus, are not to be expected in all conversions; but the conditions are what we wish to know. When Saul was convinced of his wrong course, he deliberately inquired, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou shalt do." (Mark, it was something to do, not get.) He accordingly obeyed; and one Ananias, a resident disciple in Damascus, was instructed to go and "tell him words whereby he should be saved." The words are recorded in Acts 22: 16,—"And now, why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." But this is enough to show Heaven's ordained plan to convert sinners and introduce them into the body of Christ. It is true that faith is mentioned as the only condition, in many places; such as, at the jailer's conversion,—"believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." But obedience is always understood, if not expressed; therefore the jailer was baptized the same night, or "straightway." Acts. 16: 33.

May the Lord open the eyes of the people to know his ways, and give them hearts to walk therein, is the prayer of your brother in hope, Manning Cury.

Delhi, Mich.

For the Crisis.

Fear.

No. II.

In addition to the "few things" recently mentioned on this subject, perhaps a few scriptural examples may prove a lasting benefit to those who have made up their minds to be governed by the word of God. The causes of fear in the human heart are numerous. There is a large class of persons so organized as to be constitutionally timid. With large cautiousness, small combativeness and destructiveness, they will be naturally timorous. Others, possessing large reverence and small self-esteem, may be so overawed as to quite undervalue their own gifts, fearing to use them; and like the servant who received the one talent, (Matt. 25: 29,) bring upon themselves condemnation. Again, the pure in heart may be so overawed (without condemnation) by a voice of heavenly sublimity as to produce FEAR, and cause a suspension of physical strength. This appears to have been true of Daniel and John. Rev. 1: 17; Dan. 10: 10. A view of heavenly glory and grandeur caused the Apostles of our Lord to be "sore afraid" on the mount of transfiguration. The same is true also of those devout shepherds when honored by a heavenly Messenger, who announced to them the birth of the Savior, a radiance of bright glory encircling them. But mark! this kind of fear is quickly dispelled. Daniel and John were men who allowed their affectionate interest for the cause of God to absorb every other feeling of their nature; and when God saw fit to reveal heavenly wonders to them, he well knew the weakness of human nature. Their sense of sight seemed to overpower every other faculty of their being, until the sweet modulations of the King's voice, and the gentle pressure of his right hand aroused their senses of hearing and feeling, by which their fears were immediately dispelled, and their hearts greatly elevated and comforted by the enjoyment of this divine familiarity and holy encouragement.

But if fear is excited by a consciousness of guilty disobedience against heaven's laws when supernatural phenomena occur—when the elements are lashed into fearful commotion, the vivid lightnings flash and thunders roar; or, when disease makes us feel the grave will soon be our house, we need not expect the interposition of Divinity to allay our fears, unless hearty contrition is manifested, and the weapons of rebellion cast away forever. But let not the saints, who are dear to the God of the elements as the apple of his eye, (Zech. 2: 8,) be terrified, "though the earth be removed;" for he often addresses them in language similar to the following: "Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isa. 41: 10. There is danger of even saints imbibing infidel notions relative to their great Creator as condescending to notice trivial things like "hairs," and "sparrows." But wherever we find one enjoying deep communion with God, we find the same closely marks his providences. An incident which occurred a few years since may serve to illustrate this point. An affectionate husband and wife were out at sea when there arose a terrific thunder-storm. As the vivid lightning shot out its incessant glare, the lady became much frightened; but observing the placid serenity of her husband's demeanor, she inquired, "are you not afraid?" He instantly drew a sword, girt at his side, and brandished it in a fearful manner over her head. She stood unmoved, betraying no emotions of fear. He then returned the question, "Are you not afraid?" "Ah no!" she quickly responded, "that instrument of death is in the hand of my HUSBAND!"

The case of the servant before alluded to, who received the one talent, affords an example awfully striking, and may impart a lesson of eternal value to those who will give heed to its timely warning. At the great final reckoning he makes FEAR his apology for not improving his Lord's money: "I was afraid." But what did he fear? Perhaps the very same that some of the one-talented fear in the 19th century! They have fear that their ONE will not (in the eyes of their fellow-beings) appear to good advantage by the side of fives and tens; a fear of being denominated ignorant, or, persons of one idea, &c. &c., on to the end of the chapter of self-consequence. It was unquestionably "the fear of man" that deterred the servant from using the talent his Maker had seen fit to commit to his trust,—a snare by which thousands are entrapped to-day—a snare which, if it remain unbroken, will engulph its possessor in the same remediless ruin!

How long will God's professed children continue to despise the day of small things? Just so long they will remain dwarfish! How long will they insult their Maker by concealing under a bushel what he has commanded to be placed on a candlestick? Some seem to forget that different sizes of these "lively stones" are necessary to perfect this "spiritual house." 1 Pet. 2: 5. What if some one were to tell the mason, as he collects his stone for a wall, that there was no necessity for those little bits! I presume he would feel, if he did not say it, that he understood the business much the best. What if the carpenter were told those small pins he uses to hold the massive timbers were of no use? He would tell you the safety of the whole superstructure rested on the use of these small pins. What if it were insisted that, if such consequences hung on their use, they should be MADE LARGER. He would reply that they could not subserve that important end if they were larger.

Another cause of fear, and which subjects a large class to bondage all their life-long, is DEATH. Though "we must needs die," because the fiat of Jehovah has gone forth—"dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return"—yet, the weight of this chain that thus ever depresses, may be so lightened that we may become "exceeding joyful," though momentarily subjected to his iron grasp. Because there exists an important Personage who is all-efficient to deliver from this bondage, and one who has manifested the deepest sympathy in the matter; has counted no privation a suffering too great to attain this end; condescending at last to enter death's mansion house through the ignominious door of the cross, that he might possess himself of the keys wherewith to unlock this gloomy door that has so long barred his bride from his sight, and give her everlasting deliverance from the fear of death. Yet it would be more congenial to our nature to remain with that part of the family which remain awake; but if we become too weary to sit up longer, and a kind father lays us away to sleep, let this be our solace that he has promised to awake us in time to attend the grand Coronation and the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. Those that remain alive will gain nothing in this matter; no, they shall not go before those that sleep. The very same kind of chariots will be commissioned to escort them on their bright, seraphic pinions to the heavenly palace—the holy City, God himself has built for the purpose. Yea, and how safely will they bear them up without danger of dashing against a stone. "O hail! happy day!" Now who will FEAR to use what the Lord has committed to their trust, whether it be little or much, and thus forever part with all this glory? Who?

Beulah Mathewson.

Bakerville, Ct., July 20, '57.

For the Crisis.

Hope to the End.

"Cast not away therefore your confidence, (in our Lord's coming) which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he (Jesus) that shall come will come, and will not tarry."—"Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Brethren, suffer with long patience unto the coming of the Lord. "Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh . . . Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience." Jesus says, as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in his day. Noah warned the world of its coming destruction for a long period of time, and showed his faith by his works, in building an ark of safety for himself and them that believe God. God was long suffering in the days of Noah. He was the same to the Jews, and he has been long suffering to the Gentiles. Abraham, and all the saints, of whom the world was not worthy, obtained a good report through faith, but received not the promised inheritance; for they cannot be made perfect without us. The children of Israel were tried in the wilderness for the space of forty years, after having tasted the fruit of the promised land. And was not Elijah, the prophet of God, who tried the false prophets of Baal, (1 Kings 18) tried, when the Lord was about to take him into heaven? For he told his servant Elisha to tarry at Gilgal, while the Lord sent him to Bethel. And after journeying thither, he is sent to Jericho, and after all had to cross the Jordan before his translation.

And is it not now as it was in the days of Noah and Elijah? Has there not been distress of nations, with perplexity, according to prophecy? Has not the proclamation, "Behold the bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him," been sounded? The vision has been written on tables and made plain. The everlasting gospel has been preached to them that dwell on the earth,—"fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come. And worship him that made heaven and earth, the sea and fountains of waters." God has given warning to the world, by his servants, of those things that are coming on the world; but the world is still saying, "where is the promise of his coming?" and are crying peace and safety; but sudden destruction is coming upon them, and they will not escape.

But, brethren, we are not in darkness. The Lord has guided us through the tarrying time, as he did the children of Israel in the wilderness; and by us he hath tried the world, and warned it, and is now trying us. But the saints when tried will be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ. Then we shall receive the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls. Let us therefore be sober and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ." Let us be obedient. The Lord will surely come. This generation shall not pass till all be fulfilled. "The end of all things is at hand.

John Morrison.

New Glasgow, C. E.

For the Crisis.

"Be Ye Holy."

This command, although it teaches so plainly and directly the possibility and necessity of a holy heart, is not allowed that attention which it deserves, even by those who profess to have "passed from death unto life;" and some even deny that it is any thing more than an object to be pursued, but never obtained in this life before the moment of death. We, however, profess to believe in and enjoy this gift of God to man, and know by experience that it is possible for the christian to be holy here; to live in the enjoyment of the witness that the BLOOD OF JESUS has in it a cleansing power, to such an extent, that it is able to cleanse from all sin.

We have often wondered why no more is said about holiness in the communications that appear in the religious papers of the day. It is true that there is some talking, but the greater part of it savors too much of controversy, and a striving about words to no profit, among those who profess to believe it; so that the inquirer after salvation, instead of learning the way to receive this blessing, is perplexed by a labyrinth of difficulties, and knows not which to receive of all these theories

If, instead of this, experience on the subject was told more; if he who enjoys the blessing of "perfect love" would speak of the deep things of God, there would be more strong desires created among God's people to possess it than there are now; and these desires would prompt to effort that would result in the enjoyment of the blessing. Thus, there would be more power in the church; there would be such an influence going forth from the holy heart that would make the ungodly tremble on every hand.

Brethren and Sisters, do you enjoy the blessing of perfect love? Then tell us your experience, through the "Crisis," of your trials and temptations in relation to this particular blessing, and how the Lord has delivered you? This will encourage one who is a brother in the Lord, and others of the flock scattered abroad.

Ho Tis.

From Bro. C. F. Churchill.

Bro. Grant: —I wish to address a few words to my dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad. Beloved friends; my heart is cheered from time to time when I read the sweet promises left on record, for the hope of the people of God, of the mansions preparing, and the glorious kingdom soon to be established; with the sweet promise of Jesus soon coming to resurrect the dead and reward all the saints, who weep and lament now. To them shall be given glory, honor, immortality—eternal life.

O ye waiting and tired ones, press on a little longer; soon you will possess the kingdom forever. When you meet with trials and discouragements, cast your cares on Him who is able to bring you off conqueror, yea, more than conqueror.

Your brother looking for the coming of the Just One,

C. F. Churchill.

Aroostook, Me.

From Bro. E. O. Allen.

Dear Bro. Grant: — You may say, through your paper, that I am in Oakfield, Wisconsin, Fond Du Lac county, on the Military Road from Milwaukie to Fond Du Lac, and between Waupun and Fond Du Lac, five miles from Waupun, twelve from Fond Du Lac. If there is any Advent preacher out in this section, or any that are coming this way, invite them to call on me.

Your brother waiting for the hope of eternal life, Ethan O. Allen.

Oakfield, July 26, 1857.

From Bro. W. J. Hobbs.

Bro. Grant:—We are still pilgrims and strangers in this world of sin; but Oh! the blessed promise to them that endure unto the end!—"the same shall be saved." Dear Brn. and Srs., the Lord is coming, and I feel it my duty to try and be ready to enter into that glorious kingdom, where parting will be known no more. Bless the Lord! Let us fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life. Let us take heed lest there be in any of us an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God.

Dear Brn. and Srs., it pains me much to say that I and my beloved wife are the only ones in this place that continue to cling to the glorious faith. O that some of God's ministers would find their way into this part of his heritage. There are many souls perishing for the sincere milk of the Word. We believe in the Advent doctrine fully, and often have the finger of scorn pointed at us, being accused of believing heresy, because we do not believe in an intermediate state. But I rejoice in the hope of a glorious immortality when Christ comes. Truth will stand. God's truth will prevail in spite of men or devils.

In conclusion, I would say, I am with you heart and hand, to suffer, labor, weep and pray for union, permanent, christian union. I pant for it; my whole heart earnestly prays for it, and I have pledged myself, before my Heavenly Father on my knees, to labor for it continually. May God grant it. Amen. "O Lord, I beseech thee, send now prosperity."

Your unworthy brother,

Warren J. Hobbs.

West Ossipee, June 28th, 1857.

Aerial Machine.—Viscount Carlington, of Swift's Heath, Kilkenny, has patented an aerial machine, with which he anticipates obtaining great results. The aerial chariot in form is something of the shape of a boat, extremely light, with one wheel in front and two behind, having two wings slightly concave fixed to its side. It is also provided with a tail, that can be raised or lowered at pleasure, and which serves for giving an elevating or declining position, and is worked by a cord.—Mechanic's Magazine.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 12, 1857.

To our Subscribers.

We are now near the close of another Vol., and of the second year since the Crisis became a subscription paper, and we wish to say to our patrons that our prospects look encouraging, and we feel assured that we enjoy the approbation of our Divine Master, while endeavoring to comfort his flock in publishing our family paper. We solicit your prayers, accompanied with practical efforts to sustain the cause we love so well. We feel very grateful for the many encouraging letters received from our readers, and wish to say, that their effect is sensibly felt by your editor;—they are like a relief guard to the weary soldier, or companions to the lonely traveler, and the hearty amen to the timid and trembling preacher. They give us new life and make our burdens light. We seldom publish these notes of encouragement, lest some should say we are glorying in the praise of men, but they are a "board of relief" to us, and we hope we shall not be permitted to do anything by which we shall be deprived of this source of comfort.

A few words about our financial matters. If our brethren and sisters will pay what is now due on this volume, we shall be able to meet all our bills, and commence the new Vol, Sept. 3d, free from all embarrassment. Come, dear Brn. and Srs., give a lift now, and let us have a paper free from debt, and free for the poor. Thus far, we have supplied, without money and without price, all the poor, who have desired our paper, that were not able to pay; and we wish to continue the same course, and send none empty away. Preachers of the gospel also have it free, as it is expected they will act as agents, and frequently have to pay the postage when they send money for others; and besides, most of our preachers are obliged to practice the most rigid economy, in order to keep out of debt, and it is hoped the church will send money enough to supply them with a free paper. We hope you will hear Jesus say at last,—'I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me." When explaining himself, he says, —"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Let all remember the poor, for in so doing, you help Jesus; he accepts the kindness as though he was the actual recipient. We trust we shall not be obliged to cut down our poor list, but have the means to add more, and also to scatter tracts among those who are destitute of the great truths we love so well, and prize so highly. Now is the time to work. Our days of toil are almost o'er, and the home of peaceful rest will soon be in the possession of the faithful. Let none "be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Remember, Brn. and Srs. we need what is now due on this Vol., and hope to receive it immediately. M. Grant.

For the Committee.

Fare to Campmeeting.

The fare to the Wilbraham Campmeeting from Boston and back is $3.00. From Worcester and return $1.75. One third off from regular price from intermediate stations between Worcester and the campground.

Tickets to be had of Bro. Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. Boston. Our brethren will please inform Bro. Adams how many tickets they wish, and forward the money to him, according to the prices named.

Those who take the cars at Boston can get their tickets by calling at Bro. Adams' store, 167 Hanover St. Remember, the R.R. Co. will sell no tickets at their depots, at reduced prices, for the campmeeting.

N.B. The campmeeting is near the Wilbraham depot and not North Wilbraham as has been advertised. The campmeeting is in North Wilbraham, but there is no such depot. Get tickets for Wilbraham.

Write Plainly.

The following, from an exchange paper, is presented for the benefit of those who write for the Crisis.

Why will not people write plainly—those that can? Write with good ink, none but black; and not make i and e alike, n and u, a and o, l and t, and so on; and why write capital I and J both like I? Dot your i's, cross your t's, be very careful in making every letter of names of persons, places and things distinctly; and if you are writing for the press, or any paper of considerable length, leave off all the flourishes—these are wearisome to the printer's flesh.

The Church.

While the press is chronicling what appears to be a large increase of crime in almost every section of our country, the church is lamenting the decrease of vital piety, and philanthropists are endeavoring to find some preventive.

The above is from the Boston Herald, Aug. 5, '57. We remember Jesus said, "The Scripture cannot be broken." Well, "what saith the Scripture?"—"In the last days . . . . Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." The press speaks of a "large increase of crime in almost every section of our country." This shows that the apostle was inspired to give a correct description of the last days. What else does he say? That men "in the last days" will have "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." What is the true testimony given at the present time?—"The church is lamenting the decrease of vital piety, (not formality) and philanthropists are endeavoring to find some preventive" The Lord foreseeing this state of things, foretold it to the apostle, and now we see its fulfillment, demonstrating, in connection with other things, that we have come to the last days, and that "the scripture cannot be broken."

Spiritualism.

"The Spiritualism of the present day is that which Jesus preached eighteen centuries ago."

The foregoing is a statement copied from one of the papers of the Spiritualists. If we would ascertain the truth of the above proposition we must glance at the sentiments of Spiritualists, and compare them with the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles.

The following was clipped from the Boston Daily Bee of July 25th, '57. After it is read, we think the reader will need no argument, or quotations from Scripture, to show him the contrast between Christianity and Spiritualism. Jesus and the Devil can be no wider apart.

PRACTICAL SPIRITUALISM.

Whatever views may be entertained as to the origin of the so-called spiritual phenomena, all sensible and right-minded people will join in condemning the pernicious and even revolting doctrines which are put forth by some of its devotees. At a convention of spiritualists in Ravenna, Ohio, on the 4th and 5th insts., the monstrous doctrine of "free love" was avowed and defended by a married woman in the most unblushing manner, and in the coarsest language. According to a Ravenna paper, Mrs. Lewis of Cleveland declared that she was in favor of universal freedom, and that loving whomsoever she chose was a part of that freedom, and to confine her to love one man was an abridgment of her rights She said that "although she had one husband in Cleveland, she considered herself married to the whole human race. All men were her husbands, and she had an undying love for them" She said also, "what business is it to the world whether one man is the father of my children or ten men are? I have the right to say who shall be the father of my offspring."

Mr. Kellogg, of Newton Falls, was exceedingly desirous to have it understood that he believed nothing in the Bible; that it was all a lie, and that only knaves and fools would pay any attention to its commands. He believed reason and intelligence to be supreme, and was emphatically a higher law man. He said that if "Jesus Christ were on earth and should utter anything contrary to his views of right, he would not believe him any sooner than if the devil had said the same thing."

One of the speakers said he "would not exchange places with St. Paul if he would give him heaven to boot."

A Mr. Robinson said that he "could live just as well without God, as God could without him. He didn't thank God for anything."

Revolution A-Foot.

The thunders begin to mutter ominously throughout the length and breadth of Europe. Italy, trodden down by its native priesthood and its alien soldiers, is heaving like a pent volcano. The strong towers of the church begin to totter, and the crash is near at hand. The crowned and mitred heads are in danger, and the sickle is sharpened for the harvest.

The above calls to mind what our Savior said in answer to the question of the disciples, when they wished to know what would be the sign of his coming, or how it would be known when his return was at hand. He answers in Luke 21: 25–26, and says, —"And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Truly, it seems as though the harvest is about ready for the sickle, and that soon the reaping will commence. According to the declaration of the prophet, when "the harvest is ripe," "their wickedness is great." When we look over the world, it seems as though the cup of iniquity must be about full. Well has the poet said,

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time;
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime."

A Request.

Bro. Grant:—I take this opportunity to say through the Crisis to those who have subscribed for it by my request, I really hope you will be punctual in your remittances to the Editor, for the paper, and hope you will be so edified and blessed in reading it that you will continue to keep it, and lend it to your friends and neighbors.

Yours in hope,

A. N. Seymour.

[Bro. Seymour will please accept our heart-felt thanks for his successful efforts to advance the interests of the Crisis.

Ed]

Information.

Those designing to bring tents to the Wilbraham Campmeeting will have a suitable place selected and saved for them if they will send me the length and breadth of their tent. Small family tents can find abundant room. There will be two or more tents for the accommodation of pilgrim strangers, that have no tents, so that all will be provided with tent room Don't forget your blanket if you come, as it will be very necessary for your own convenience. A boarding table for all that wish, on the ground, also provision for sale for the accommodation of those that choose to board themselves. No pains will be spared to make the meeting pleasant and profitable unto godliness. This will be the main object of the meeting.

Hiram Munger.

For the Crisis.

Rejoice Evermore.

1 Thess. 5: 16.

A fragment from the waste papers.

He must be exceedingly ignorant of the power and influence of the gospel of Christ who imagines that it brings only melancholy emotions to the mind, or, who thinks that its tendency is to spread a curtain of cloud above its votaries. The gospel, it is true, does discountenance that riotous mirth which the worldling cherishes and seeks—that miserable apology for rejoicing —whose course is madness and whose end despair; but while it casts from you the counterfeit it shows you the true coin; while it dashes from your lip the intoxicating bowl it leads you to drink of that pure river which flows from beneath the throne of God!

Thus the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, and peace, and the apostles were ever exhorting the believers in Christ to rejoice evermore. We may find great cause for rejoicing when we contrast our present with our past condition.

By nature we were children of wrath, even as others; but, behold "what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." Once we loved not our Lord Jesus Christ, and we were cursed with a curse; now, Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, and instead of the lightnings, the thunderings, the flames and the curses of the "fiery law," we behold the meek Man of sorrows going up into a mountain and opening his mouth in blessings upon the wondering hearers there.

Once we were servants of sin suffering, a grievous bondage beneath an iron yoke; but now, being made free from sin, we become the servants of righteousness, having our fruit unto holiness and the end thereof everlasting life. Once we were like the troubled sea that hath no rest, we were wicked and had no peace; but now we may have peace like a river and constantly possess the heavenly Comforter and enjoy its hallowed influence in our hearts.

Once we were weary and heavy laden; burdened with sins we bowed downward to the dust; now we have listened to and proved the veracity of Him who says, "come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Once we were without God and without hope in the world; but now God hath loved us and given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace.

O what incentives to rejoicing are here found. We were once guilty before God —now justified by faith; once vile and sinful—now cleansed by the blood of Christ: once exposed to wrath—now sheltered beneath Jehovah's wing. And all this is through the grace of God. Well may we then rejoice in the Lord.

While some rejoice in their wealth, others in their honors; some in their beauty, others in their strength; and some, like the disciples, that "even the devils are subject" to them, be it ours to rejoice, rather, that our names are written in heaven, that we are the adopted children of the great I Am.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Universal Resurrection.

Bro. Grant:—I cannot uphold the negative of the question, "will the wicked dead be made alive?" because I do not see that such a doctrine can be supported from the Scriptures; but I do see plainly taught therein the affirmative, the doctrine of the resurrection of all men from the dead. And the much controverted text, "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," I think is one instance of such teaching; for the term all signifies the whole, and is alike expressive of number in both its connections with the text. Hence, "all in Adam" means the whole numerical world of mankind, embracing all that have died, as well as all who will die; so, "all in Christ" means the same aggregate number, without diminution. Then, as the said whole world do die the natural death, through Adam, even so the same universal world will be made alive from that death, through Christ, in the resurrection. That this is the true meaning of the text may be seen from the immediately preceding context; — "for since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." Likewise, from the parallel passage,—"as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men, unto condemnation, even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."

In further promulgation of this doctrine it is expressly declared,—"there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just, and the unjust;" that "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Thus it appears, that all the dead, whether good or bad, shall have a resurrection, or be made to live again. Is not this the plain, literal teaching of every one of the foregoing passages of Scripture? Wherein, then, does this language differ from positive proof of the affirmative? And, besides, in no other sense, than by the general resurrection of the dead to life, can Christ be called the Redeemer of the world—the Savior of all men—He that giveth life to the world. So, in reference to this same universal redemption from death, are to be understood the expressions —"I will ransom them from the power of the grave"—"I will redeem them from death." Nor is this all. There are other texts, which, though not literally expressed, yet by implication as strongly prove this point as do the preceding positive ones. These are,—"God hath appointed a day, in which he will judge the world in righteousness."—"We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ."—"He cometh to execute judgment upon all."—"Death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged, every man according to their works." Now, if there is no resurrection of the wicked, how can these solemn declarations of a future judgment, upon all and every man, even of those who had been dead, ever be verified? Can all these be judged at the day appointed, when only a small part of them will appear at the judgment? Or, can the wicked be judged when they remain dead and know nothing? The response to each of these inquiries is readily given; no, they never can; such an occurence is impossible in the nature of things. There must, therefore, of necessity, be a previous universal resurrection from the dead, in order to the possibility of an universal judgment; and such a resurrection is, indeed, understood to be taught in the texts with as much certainty as though the same was expressly written. Hence, here is additional valid proof for the affirmative.

Then, from all this collective testimony, how very unreasonable is it, not to believe the doctrine thus conclusively demonstrated. On the other hand, the negative theory is against the Scriptures. It not only opposes the foregoing revealed assurances of a resurrection of the wicked, but it is not in accordance with other divine declarations, in regard to their future punishment. This doctrine assumes that there is no future condemnation to the wicked dead, for the reason, they have had their judgment and final punishment already; that being executed upon them in full at and before their death. Whereas, the word says the judgment is after death; that the "wicked are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished"—at Christ's appearing and kingdom, when he will judge both the quick and the dead. Then will the wicked be destroyed with the brightness of his coming. Their end is to be burned—cast into the "lake of fire, which is the second death." Do not these passages directly conflict with such an assumption? Besides, this doctrine contradicts the evidence of experimental facts; for we know by almost daily observation that the wicked, in this world, do not come to their end in any such way and manner. They are not here arraigned before the tribunal of Christ's personal appearance, nor are they burned in the lake of fire, whereby they suffer a second death; but we see they are permitted to live and die, as much exempted from such penal suffering as are the righteous. With what propriety then, is it alleged that the wicked dead have their judgment and final punishment in this world? Verily, if this threatened doom be not executed upon them beyond the grave, then will they never have suffered it; but will forever have escaped all such judicial punishment in both worlds. In such case, these denunciations of Divine wrath will prove to be only so many false and deceptive menaces.

Again, if the wicked have no bands in their death, and we cannot discern them from the righteous by their extra sufferings in this life, how is this doctrine of no future punishment to the wicked dead, reconcilable with the following additional scriptural assertions; that "surely the wicked shall not go unpunished;" but there shall be a discerning between them and the righteous. The wicked shall be "burnt up, root and branch;" and the rightoous shall tread them as ashes under their feet. Are there not here, again, other inseparable discrepances to this system? how, then, can that be a true doctrine of the Bible which so palpably contradicts it? Certainly, the truth never comes in collision with itself.

I must therefore conclude that the doctrine of the non-resurrection of the wicked is untenable, and not to be accredited. But the opposite doctrine, that of a universal resurrection from the dead, is tenable, because it is not only in accordance with the general tenor of the aforesaid cited texts, but in some of them it is specially enforced by a "thus saith the Lord;" consequently, is entitled to our most reliable and unshaken belief.

Isaac Dimmick.

Vermillionville, Ill.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. IV.

Bro. Grant:—If it were wise to speak of trials and complain of difficulties, or profitable to enlarge upon the unpleasant features of the struggle to impart light and truth upon the kingdom of God, and immortal life through Christ, I would speak of many things—losses and crosses—but I would hardly dare to refer to much that in a private conversation might be interesting, for even the apostle regarded it as "folly." But one of the most wicked things we have to suffer is anxiety. While others have the liberty to act and make advancement, we must confine ourselves to a certain limit, and suffer at times, inexpressibly from suspense. I would not have been hired to stay here a week for a large sum, but staid as a matter of duty, and regard for the truths which I represent, suffering intensely all the time, and at last see far less effected than I wished; but I leave it to the final day of settlement. I have, so far as I had opportunity, preached the gospel of life eternal to them, and shall now feel that I have accomplished my mission in this beautiful city, and may pass to other parts.

W. S. C.

Detroit, June 29.

There is an End.—To every thing beneath the sun there comes a last day—and of all futurity, this is the only portion of time that can in all cases be infallibly predicated. Let the sanguine then take warning, and the disheartened take courage; for to every joy and to every sorrow, to every hope and to every fear, there will come a last day; and the man ought so to live by foresight, that while he learns in every state to be content, he shall in each be prepared for another, whatever the other may be.

High Wages.

A. What wages does Satan allow you for swearing, young man?

B. What do you mean?

A. I mean what I say! Do you have high or low wages?

B. I don't get any wages.

A. From the manner in which you pour out oaths, I supposed your wages must be very high.

B. Well—they are not.

A. So I see, and allow me to tell you, that you work cheap, very cheap, cheaper than any person I ever heard of. I never knew of any one having such miserable wages for so much labor.

B. There is something in what you say, and I will——

A. Yes, yes—there is something—cheap work, cheap work, I tell you. Just look—you lay aside the character of a well bred man and gentleman; you injure the feelings of all your best friends, and in fact inflict pain upon all civil people who hear you swear; you dishonor the name of your Maker, and run the risk of losing your precious soul, and all for nothing. Young man, I tell you you work for a hard master—and you work cheap—very cheap indeed.—Uncle Jonathan.

Don't Grumble.—He is a fool that grumbles at every little mischance. Put the best foot forward, is an old and good maxim. Don't run about and tell acquaintances that you have been unfortunate. People do not like to have unfortunate people for acquaintances. Add to a vigorous determination a cheerful spirit; if reverses come, bear them like a philosopher, and get rid of them as soon as you can. Poverty is like a panther—look it earnestly in the face, and it will turn from you.

Censoriousness.—There is crept into the minds of men at this day, a secret, pernicious and pestilent conceit, that the greatest perfection of a christian man doth consist in the discovery of other men's faults, and in wit to discourse of our own profession.—Hooker.

Ilems of Information.—Turkish Titles.—"The Sublime Porte" is the official title of the government of the Ottoman Empire. The Ottoman Emperor is called Sultan, Grand Sultan, or Grand Seignor. Pacha is the governor of a province, and has his own army in his own province, distinct from the grand army of the empire. Bey is a sub-governor under a Pacha. The Divan is the Council of State, and consists of the principal ministers. The Reis Effendi is High Chancellor of the empire, and stands at the head of all the body of attorneys—which body is supposed to contain the best informed men of the nation. Cadi is a sort of judge or justice of the peace.

Obituary

Died, in Limington, Me., July 22, Joseph H. Farnham, oldest son of Bro. Joseph Farnham of Portland, Maine, aged fourteen years and four months.

"Farewell, sweet boy, thy gentle form
We here consign to peaceful rest;
Early conveyed through life's rude storm,
Thou'rt gone to mingle with the dust.
As flowers that fade at opening day,
Thus quickly hast thou passed away.

While bending o'er thy little grave,
With meek submission we may say,
God's will be done, our Father gave,
Our Father took the child away:
His own it was, his right to claim,
And ever blessed be his name."

E. Osgood.

—:o:—

Fell asleep in Jesus, at Cambridgeport, Mass., July 27, 1857, Velzora A., wife of George W. Dane, and daughter of Lemuel and Frances S. Smith of Bangor, Maine, aged nineteen years and eight months.

The subject of this notice was early taught the importance of giving her heart to the Lord. She was the subject of many prayers; but neglected to consecrate herself to the Lord, although at times she was awakened by the Spirit, and almost persuaded to be a christian. For a few months before her death, she was more thoughtful, and took delight in reading her Bible. She was confined to her bed one week, during which time her thoughts were directed heavenward. When her physician decided she could not live through the night, she was unmoved, calm as the summer's eve. In a few moments she began to confess her faith; said she, "I have always believed in the Advent faith. I believe it to-day. Every thing indicates the coming of the Lord." She then confessed her faith in Jesus, prayed a few moments, gave herself into the hands of her heavenly Father, and then called all her friends, one by one, giving them a solemn warning, exhorting them to meet her in the Kingdom. She then broke out in the following heavenly language:—"O, I see my Savior! O how precious! O how I love him! How I long to be with him!" She then requested the writer to sing an hymn, and pray with her, which was complied with. She responded with a full soul to every sentence, saying, "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly," and calmly fell asleep. Her funeral was attended on the 29th.

Thus we have laid our darling child in the grave, but we sorrow not as others which have no hope; for we believe that "as Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

"The grave yields up its precious trust,
Which long have slumbered in the dust,—
Resplendent forms ascending fair
To meet the Savior in the air."

F. S. Smith.

—:o:—

Died in New Boston, N. H., July 18, 1857, Mrs. Sarah Small, widow of the late Benjamin Small; formerly the wife of Mr. Thomas Patch of Francestown, N. H., aged 87 years and 10 months.

[Vermont and Western papers please copy.]

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, Aug. 5.

The Royal Mail Steamsip Persia, Capt. Judkins, arrived at this port at 8 o'clock this morning. She left Liverpool at half past 11, on the morning of the 25th ult.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The resignation of Baron Rothschild was announced, and a new writ was ordered for an election in Lon lon, to fill his place.

A public meeting was held by the electors of London on the subject, and a pledge was given to again return Rothschild as one of their representatives in Parliament. A resolution was also adopted, calling on the government to use its entire influence for the immediate settlement of the Jewish question.

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH CABLE.

The proceedings in regard to the Atlantic telegraphic cable continued to increase in interest.

The shareholders of the company at Liverpool had given a grand banquet to the officers of the Niagara and Susquehannah, and the completion of the shipping on the Agamemnon was celebrated by a grand fete in the Park of Sir Calling Earldy, near Erith, on the Thames.

Nearly a thousand persons were present at the latter entertainment, including Prof. Morse, Mr. Cyrus W. Field, Henry Raymond, Capt. Sands, of the Susquehannah, and others.

Mr. Field in returning thanks for a toast, read a letter from President Buchanan stating that he should feel much honored if the first message across the Atlantic should be one from Queen Victoria to the President of the United States, and he should endeavor to answer in a spirit and manner becoming the great occasion.

An important alteration in the arrangements for laying the cable has been determined upon, and the plan now is, instead of commencing in mid ocean, to submerge the whole cable in a continuous line from Valentine Bay, Ireland, to Newfoundland. The Niagara will lay the first half from Ireland to the Middle of the Atlantic. The end will then be joined to the other half on board the Agamemnon, which takes it to the coast of Newfoundland. During the whole process the four vessels will remain together, and give whatever assistance is required. Constant communication is to be kept up with the coast of Ireland during the progress of the work, and the wires are at once carried from Killarney to Valentine Bay, so as to connect with the British and Irish lines.

FRANCE.

One of the arrested Italians is said to have made a full confession of the details of the recent conspiracy.

The Pays says that the British Government has already communicated to Mazzini that, although England would continue to afford an asylum to political refugees, he could not any longer be allowed to fit out expeditions against foreign States on English soil.

It is also stated from other sources that the British Cabinet had promised to subject Mazzini to a strict surveillance.

The Paris correspondent of the Independence Belge says that the sending out of some French and English vessels of war to Tunis is spoken of.

The Moniteur alludes to the discovery of the Italian plot to assassinate the Emperor Napoleon, and says that it was concocted in London, placing Mazzini and Ledru Rollin among the accomplices to it.

ITALY.

It is said that a Convention is to be signed among the sovereigns of the Italian States, with the exception of the King of Sardinia, to guarantee each other against revolutionary attacks.

JERUSALEM.

A letter from Jerusalem on the 30th of April states that, a few days before, mass was celebrated for the first time in the Church of St. Anne, in that city, which was performed with some pomp. The Abbe Martin delivered a sermon, in which, after thanking the Abbe Napoleon for having got back the church, he insisted that the French Government ought to require the restoration of the Church of St. Helen at Bethlehem, and of other sacred edifices, which are either "audaciously usurped" by the Greeks, or turned to profane uses for the Turks. The mass was attended by the French Pilgrims then in Jerusalem. The Paris correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says that, "according to the latest French advices from Jerusalem, the number of pilgrims congregated there was about fifteen millions—two thirds of them of the Greek faith. The latter testify the most zeal and devout belief in relation to the Holy Sepulchre. Ten years hence Jerusalen will be visited as familiarly as Rome now is,—pilgrimage will have lost its old character and import.—Ex.

GERMANY.

It is reported that a meeting of the Emperors of Russia, Austria and France is to be brought about very shortly, on Bavarian Territory, and various movements are adduced in confirmation of the rumor.

The King of Prussia had returned from his visit to Vienna. It is believed, in Germany, that his visit has been connected with a reconciliation between Russia and Austria, which the king is highly desirous of effecting.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Quebec, Aug. 9.

The screw steamship Indian, Capt. Jones, from Liverpool, Wednesday, 29th ult., arrived at this port to-day. Her news is four days later than that by the Persia.

General News.—The armies at Madras and Bengal remained firm. Baron Rothschild was returned to Parliament from London, without opposition.

The continental news is unimportant.

The London Times remarks that as Canton is now in the power of Britain, there seems no substantial reason why this should not obtain for England all the objects of the expedition, without further bloodshed or military operations.

The mutiny was spreading among the troops of the Bengal army.

Later—India.—The mutiny in the Bengal army had increased. The insurgents still hold Delhi.

The Chinese fleet have been destroyed after two severe engagements.

Hong Kong dates are of June 10. In an engagement the Chinese had fought with unexampled obstinacy. The British had 83 killed and wounded. Major Kearney was among the killed.

Population of Constantinople.—Mr. Goodell writes:—"The population of this city is estimated, in geographies, books of travel, &c., at only about 600,000. But this estimate is much too small even for the city itself. It is not founded upon any data whatever, and it has been the same from time immemorial, one copying from another. In such a country as this, it is indeed very difficult to ascertain the truth; but, several years since, I adopted two ways of approximating toward it. One was, ascertaining the number of houses, and then reckoning ten souls to a house, which is very moderate, considering that so very many of these houses are occupied by more than one family, and often by more than two. The other was, ascertaining the number of men in business who paid the capitation tax, and doubling this number for the women and children of both sexes, (which is also moderate,) and then reckoning the Turks as equal to all the others. In both these ways I arrived at just about the same conclusion, viz., that the city itself cannot contain less, certainly, than about 800,000 souls; and the city, with its suburbs, about one million and two or three hundred thousand. But whether more or less, it is certainly a great world of perishing sinners. And instead of wasting time in doubts as to the certainty of the estimated population, let us rather lay hold at once, and endeavor to pull them out of the fire."

Domestic Summary.

Murderous Gang at Leavenworth—Two Men Hung by Lynch Law.—St. Louis, Aug. 5.—Advices from Leavenworth state that much excitement exists there, growing out of the robbery and murder of a man named Stephens. Two men named Baines and Quarles were arrested, charged with the murder, and their confessions disclosed the existence of a regularly organized band of robbers and murderers. Several apparently respectable citizens are implicated as confidantes of the band. Baines and Quarles were hung under Lynch law.

Later Accounts.—Advices from Leavenworth of Monday, state that Woods and Knowlton, the companions of the two men hung on Friday, were being tried by the Judges of the Vigilance. The people were intensely excited, and expressed a determination to lynch the prisoners at all hazards. Gov. Walker and Judge Lecompte had addressed the people, but failed to pacify them.

Revival Among Slaves.—Rev. J. M. C. Breaker, of Beaufort, S. C., within the last three months, has baptized by immersion 350 persons, most of them negroes. This was the result of a revival during the last six months. July 12 he baptized 223 converts—all blacks but three—and the ceremony, although performed with due deliberation, occupied only one hour and five minutes. This is nearly four a minute, and Mr. Breaker considers it a demonstration that the 3000 converted the day of Pentecost could easily have been baptized by the twelve apostles—each taking 250—in an hour and thirteen minutes.

The aggregate marine losses of July were eighteen vessels, of which five were ships, three barques, three brigs, and seven schooners. Total value of property lost, $710,700. During the seven months of the present year, the vessels lost number 386, and the total value is $10,943,200.

Trouble with the Indians.—Dubuque, July 29.—St. Paul dates to the 26th inst. are to hand. An express from the Sioux Agency had arrived, and reported that 10,000 Indians were defying the United States troops, and that a renewal of hostilities was unavoidable. The settlers were flying to the forts for protection. Gov. Medary was endeavoring to preserve the peace. He sustains the action of the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, in suspending the payment of the annuities until the Sioux Nation deliver up the infamous band of murderers. This the Sioux refuse to do, and are trying to bring about a collision with the government troops. A telegraphic despatch from Secretary Floyd, refusing the request of Gov. Medary for arms and volunteers for defence, occasioned some excitement. Two hundred men had prepared themselves, and were determined to march, if need be, for the protection of the frontier.

Famine in China.—The Friend of China, of May 9th, received by the last Overland Mail, says that the famine prevailing in that country exceeds all that the oldest living man has ever witnessed. The rebels are making progress, the capital of the province of Kwang-Si, Kwei-Lung, having fallen into their hands. In the province of Kwangtung, the famine is so severe, that even the women are forming themselves into bands of robbers, have seized the sword and gone forth plundering in order to obtain sustenance.

LAWS OF NEWSPAPERS.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers from the office where they are directed, they are held responsible until they have ordered them discontinued and settled their bills.

3. If subscribers remove to other places, without informing the publisher and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for while in arrears to the publisher, is evidence of intentional fraud.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

Vigilance Committee in New York—Excited Meeting—Men found murdered in our Streets—Resolutions.

New York, July 30, 1857.

To the Editor of the Boston Journal:—For a long time we have had intimations that New York would yet be under the rule of a Vigilance Committee. Such an organization was formed last night in the 5th and 8th Wards. Murders are becoming rather common—too much so to make one feel comfortable who has to travel off of the main streets after ten o'clock at night. Women are picked up dead in the streets. Men are garroted and left for dead. On Monday night a quiet and respectable citizen of New York, by the name of Augustus Van Lieu, was found dead in Canal street, near Mercer street. When the body was discovered, some miscreant was seen attempting to complete the robbery begun by the assassin. On Tuesday night a spontaneous meeting was held of the citizens of the 5th Ward, and on Wednesday night a concerted meeting was held of the people of the 5th and 8th Wards.

The meeting was large and exciting. A set of inflammatory resolutions were passed, indicating that no man had the least guaranty of personal safety in New York—that no man could walk the streets at his leisure without fear of bodily harm—that the police were inefficient and of no value in the preservation of life, or property, or the public peace—that the people of New York can have no relief but in the formation of a vigilance committee—and that such a vigilance committee be formed at that time, which was done. It is true that the men in this new movement have no great character at stake, and have no great influence. But such an organization is a dangerous element in a community whose safety is only found in submission to law and obedience to the powers that be, and in such an inflammable population as ours. Such an organization at this time throws among us a new element of discord, and may yet demand the bayonet of the military to put out this spark of mischief. The murder of Muller unavenged—the death of Anderson, whose murderer could hardly be kept out of the hands of an excited and enraged population—the incipient riots each night or two between the "Dead Rabbits" and the "Bowery Boys"—indicate that a strong and wise hand on our population will alone save us from anarchy and violence.

The foundation of the largest cotton factory in the world has just been laid in Russia, on the island of Cronholm, in the river Narova, between its two cataracts. It is in the form of a grand square, and will possess 1672 windows, 20,000 gas burners, and will employ 3000 workmen.

Six men have been hung by mobs in Iowa within the past eight weeks.

The Cost.—An editor of a public journal observes: "When we consider the universality of the use of tobacco, and the fact that some men spend $10, $60 or $100 yearly for cigars—if this town uses 20 per cent. less than the average, $9000 is devoted to the weed yearly; about twice what we raise by tax for schools; about enough to build the High School house, about which we tobacco-chewers have quarelled so much; enough to buy a twenty-five cent delaine dress for each adult female in town, a pair of boots for each lad, and a five dollar bonnet for each lass in town; to pay the salaries of all our ministers, and cover all our contributions for benevolent purposes. The city of New York, according to the authority of McGregor, consumes $10,000 a day on cigars, and but about $8500 on bread

Correspondence.

From Bro. Ladd.

Dear Bro. Grant:—As my name is mentioned in connection with a meeting appointed to commence Sept. 7th, I wish to say that my sympathies and interests are identified with the General Campmeeting at North Wilbraham, and mean to throw my whole heart into it, and expect and believe it will be the best meeting we have ever enjoyed, both as to its influence and its success. To this end, I trust that we shall come together to preach and to practice the pure, unadulterated word of the living God, and if any of us have any peculiar and distinctive hobbies, let us leave them at home, and come together with an honest purpose to do and get all the good we can, and to "bear one another's burden,"—not to pack new burdens on one another. I hope and pray that it may be a free meeting—free for every thing but sin,—free gospel, free spirit, free air, free speech, but no wrangling. Let us lay aside all this, if we have had it, and come together to worship God in the beauty of holiness, and show by our forbearance and love for one another that the spirit of Christ dwells within us. It would give me great pleasure to attend another meeting, but I do not expect to be able to do so.

Let the tribes of the Lord's host come up to the Wilbraham meeting with the whole panoply of God, and it shall be seen and known that there is yet light in the camp of the Lord, and that we are not following cunningly devised fables.

R. E. Ladd.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Bro. Grant:—Elder Barns, with whom I was to have a discussion, commencing on the 18th of Aug., has been called to give up an excellent wife to the cold embrace of death. From a regard to his feelings and to suit his convenience in the circumstances, we have agreed to defer the commencement of the discussion for one week, which will bring it to the 25th of Aug. instead of the 18th. Will you please change the notice accordingly.

Please allow me to state also, that I am to have a discussion with an Elder Vail, in the town of Bronson, Huron Co., Ohio, on the 15th and 16th days of Aug. next, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M., of the first day. Subject,—"The true nature and destiny of man." The discussion will be held, either in the Standish School House or in the Congregational Meeting House. Probably the latter.

Yours for the truth, L. P. Judson.

Northfield, Ohio, July 27, '57.

—o—

Providence permitting, I will preach at the Town Hall, in Williamsburg, Mass., Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, (Aug. 27th, 28th and 29th,) and over the following Lord's day.

Brn. and Srs. from the neighboring towns are requested to attend. M. Grant.

—o—

Br. E. Bellows appoints to preach at South Killingly, where Bro. Spaulding may appoint Friday evening, Aug. 28th
Axe Factory, Ct., Sunday, Aug 30.

—o—

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Bethlehem, Ct., Aug. 15th
Roxbury, Sunday, Aug. 16th
Lanesville, Aug. 21st
Bridgeport, (at the old chapel,) Sunday, Aug. 23d
Northfield, Aug. 30th

C. Goodrich.

—o—

Bro. Grant:—If my health will admit, I propose to be with the Brethren at Kennebunkport the 22d and 23d of August.
Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29th and 30th
Roxbury, Mass., Sept. 3d
Providence, R. I., Sept. 5th and 6th

Communications from Brethren will be thankfully received at either place.

N. F. Nason.

—o—

General Campmeeting at North Wilbraham, Mass., commencing August 31st, to continue one week. We expect a large and good meeting.

—o—

Bro. Thomas Smith appoints to preach at Orrington, (Advent Chapel) third Sunday in August.

—o—

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings at Casco, Holden's Corner, at the Union Meeting House, Aug. 13, and over the Sabbath.

J. Partridge.
O. R. Fassett.

—o—

Campmeeting.—Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at South Adams, commencing on Monday, the seventh day of September next, to continue over the following Sabbath. The believers of the Second Advent of the Lord are invited to attend. Necessary provision will be provided for man and beast. Further notice will hereafter be given. Brn. invited—R. V. Lyon, H. L. Hastings, R. E. Ladd, and M. Bachelor.

Wm. F. Stitt
Z. Campbell,
A. Cummings.

—o—

Discussion.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 25, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

—o—

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

John Chapman,
In behalf of the Brethren.

—o—

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Carmel, Me., Saturday eve., 6 P. M., Aug. 8th
" " Sunday, Aug. 9th
Bangor, Me., Wednesday eve., Aug. 12th
Hermon, Me., Saturday, Aug. 15th
" " Sunday, Aug. 16th

L. Boutell.

—o—

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

—o—

Bro. Boutell will preach in Salem the first Sabbath in September. Temple Hardy.

—o—

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach At South Hope Saturday 8th, Sunday, Aug. 22d and 23d. Will be at Camden by the first Friday boat, 21st, from Bangor.

—o—

Bro. R. R. York appoints to preach at South Gray, Aug. 9th

—o—

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in the following places:
Providence, Sunday, Aug. 2d. Third meeting where Bro C. O. Towne may appoint,—perhaps with Bro. Osler's charge.
Roxbury, Mass., Monday evening, Aug. 3d
Boston, Tuesday evening, Aug. 4th
Worcester, (at Bro. D. T. Taylor's charge,) Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th

If these appointments interfere with others, please notify me before I arrive. These are not decrees,—only propositions.

Hiram Munger.

—o—

The Lord will, Bro. R. E. Ladd will preach in Thorndike the 3d Sunday in August.

—o—

The Lord will, Bro. A. M. Higgins will preach in Springfield the 3d Sunday in August.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

E. Wakeman 88, E. Norton 133, E. Lloyd 92, Wm. Shepherd, J. Bodge 100, W. B. Bartlett 114, B. Hopkins 127, M. Allen 127, W. H. Brown 127, R. Wilkinson 104, A. Coombs 128, Sally Winship 127, H. Phelps 127, Miss W. Stephens 123, C. H. Thompson 128, H. B. Mead 111, J. Bushman 115, Mary Cooper 117, $1 each.

H. Barnett 152, P. J. King 149, J. Lord 153, $2 each.

Ira Quimby 91, C. Fox 114, S. Elliot 114, 50 cents each.

H. Bishop 42 cents; R. Thompson 105, 50 cents; W. T. Higgins 91, $4 for subscribers in Worcester.

For Books.—H. Bishop 58 cents; A. J. Wigent $3, Florrella Bliss $3.30, R. B. Reed, 25.

Books Sent.—H. Bishop, A. J. Wigent, R. B. Reed, Florella Bliss.

For the Poor.—Haunah T. Miller, $1.00.

To Correspondents.

Bro. E. O. Allen—Bro. H. L. Hasting's P.O. address is 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y. Bro. Walter Pratt's P.O. address is Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

The P.O. address of Bro. A. Fox is Cold Spring, Mass.

A. J. Wigent—We send your books and tracts by mail in three packages.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half pent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Death not Life—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 35 cts.; per dozen, $3.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 5 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

JESUS.

Jesus is the Wonderful,
Jesus is Immanuel;
Branch of righteousness is he,
The Alpha and the Omega.

Jesus is the Mighty God,
The Faithful, Everlasting Word;
Prince of Peace shall he be called,
Our Rock, our Refuge, and our shield.

Jesus is the Michael,
The Holy One of Israel,
Father of everlasting rest,
In whom all nations would be blest.

Jesus is the Gentiles' Light,
In him the Father doth delight;
Tower of the faithful flock,
To sinful Jews a Stumbling-block.

Jesus in our Hiding-Place,
His lips are full of truth and grace;
Jesus is our Counselor,
To judge the nations and make war.

Jesus is the woman's Seed,
To him all nations must give heed;
Jesus is Messiah, Lord,
Who'll rule at length with iron rod.

Jesus is salvation's Horn,
David's root, Israel's First-born.
Let this message go abroad,
Jesus is the Son of God!

A. Ross.

For the Crisis.

GOD IS LOVE.

Yes, God is Love; his love is seen
Through all his works around;
While all beneath, abroad, above,
Declare this truthful sound.
Where'er we turn, though far we roam,
Beneath Italian skies,
Through Greenland's cold and barren waste,
This truthful thought ne'er dies.

Each birdling, warbling through the skies,
Each plant, and root, and tree,
But bear the impress of a God
Of love and majesty.
All nature speaks in praises loud,
This theme of Heavenly birth;
All things unite in chorus loud,
To speak his noble worth.

And shall proud man refuse to join
This hymn of glorious praise?
Awake! my heart, awake! my tongue,
This noble anthem raise.
Come each, and all, the chorus swell,
Unite to praise this God,
The blessed, the Eternal One,
Forever more adored.

C. A. Moore.

South Creek, Pa.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Am I a Christian?

How oft do I ask myself this question, and ever feel to respond, thou alone, O God, knowest the hearts of the children of men! Thou alone canst penetrate the secret recesses of the heart, and find what is therein concealed from mankind; which, perhaps, were it made known in its true light, would present nothing but deformity, which now appears to be goodness and piety; or, a beautiful panorama of loveliness, goodness, and devotion is shown, which, unveiled, would exhibit nought but hyrocrisy and vain deceit. From the sincerity of my heart I feel to exclaim, "search me, O God, try thou my reins and my heart, and see that there be no wicked way in me. Make me to feel my littleness, that I may ever be clothed with that beautiful and most befitting garment of humility. Make me to feel that I am thine, and the workmanship of thy hands, and that I am nothing of myself, but through thee am what I am, thou heavenly Life-giver. May I henceforth seek diligently for that holiness of heart without which no one can see God."

I ofttimes think it would be the greatest consolation to know that I am accepted of God, and that he owns me as his child. Would that this were the desire of every professing christian's heart. Would that the following questions could be answered daily by every professed follower of Christ.

Do I love the Lord with all my heart? Do I love his laws and his commandments? Do I prize his holy word, and find sweet consolation in perusing its blessed contents? Am I a universal lover of mankind? Am I willing to relinquish all those bright anticipations of future happiness in pursuing the pleasures of this world, for Christ's sake, to become a reproach and a by-word among worldlings? Am I willing to renounce those bright hopes of future honor and fame, which buoyed up my spirits in an hour of sorrow? Am I willing, if need be, to suffer penury for his sake, if by so doing His name may be glorified? Am I willing to renounce the world and its pleasures, that I may better prepare myself for an entrance into God's everlasting kingdom? Do I keep myself unspotted from the world, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this wicked world? Do I seek to do my neighbor good, at all times, and under all circumstances? Do I visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction, and pour the oil of consolation into their stricken hearts? Does the thought of Jesus' soon coming to earth give me pleasure?

These, truly, are test questions. Oh! let us each one try to keep them ever in mind, that we may feel the assurance of our acceptance with God, that at his appearing we may joyfully exclaim,—Lo! this is my God; I have waited for him, and he will save me.

Help me, O God, to watch and pray,
On thee to cast my care;
And if on earth I long should stay,
May this e'er be my prayer:—
Cleanse from all sin, all pride subdue,
Help me to love thy laws;
In all my acts may nought accrue
To e'er disgrace thy cause.

C. A. Moore.

South Creek, Pa.

For the Crisis.

Short and Profitable Sentences for Christians.

(SELECTED BY P. TANDY.)

51. Be not discouraged by past failures in duty; but confess to God, beg his assistance, and try again.

52. Satan will be sure to oppose you, if what you are doing is for the glory of God.

53. Rashness generally ends in folly and shame; young christians are exhorted to be sober-minded.

54. Peace of mind is produced by firm reliance on God's promises.

55. Fervent charity is the greatest and the best ornament a christian can wear.

56. Forgiveness, or rendering good for evil, is Godlike;

57. But unforgiveness, or rendering evil for evil, or evil for good, is diabolical.

58. In all you suffer for righteousness, sake, Jesus sympathizes with you.

59. Nothing takes place by chance; all is ordered, or permitted by the Almighty Lord;—

60. Therefore, the wisdom and mercy of God will be seen written on every event which concerns you.

61. Trust the plain and positive promise of God, when you cannot see through the dark clouds of providence.

62. The present gloomy night of sin and sorrow will soon terminate in a bright and glorious morning.

63. Every pain you feel is absolutely necessary; but God doth not afflict willingly, or for his pleasure, but for your good.

64. God is love; however circumstances may vary, He never changes.

65. You cannot trust man too little, nor God too much.

66. Under all your trials, go to Jesus; go now.

67. When enemies are more than ordinarily cruel, think of Jesus,—what he endured for your sake.

68. Out of love to yourself you ought to pray for your enemies.

69. Ascertain that God is with you, then bid slavish fear depart.

70. Daily refresh your memory with God's truth; make it a light to your feet, and a lamp to your path.

71. Follow the Lord, and keep his company, and he will always bear your expenses, and keep you safe from the fear of evil.

72. The Lord may lead you round, as he did the children of Israel in the wilderness; but he will lead you right.

73. Always resist Satan in the Lord's name and strength, and answer him with God's word.

74. Go to God as a sinner, repenting and forsaking sins; he always receives such.

75. Never forget that Jesus had you in his eye, when He died on the cross!

For the Crisis.

Self-Praise.

Stop, brother preacher. It seems you are practicing self-praise for fear others will not praise you. But what a time you make of it. Why that is not the old-fashioned preacher's "head-work," but fist-work. Hold up your hand, and see if it is not nearly blistered by coming in contact with that uncushioned desk so often. What are you up there for? Is it to mellow the wooden desk? or to preach,—not blackguard? You tell us of other people's faults; what if we tell you yours? Now don't get in a passion, for "it is a poor rule that will not work both ways." Now just cool down a bit and stop that roaring rabble. "How it sounds for a minister." If you have anything to say, say it and then sit down. Do not hint at the faults of this denomination or that one; but, for the Lord's sake, just dip your "hot tongue" into the cooling stream of Charity, and then you can preach. "Why should you trouble" the sects "before their time?" Yes, brother, we know you can preach,—you have enough to preach about—have the Bible to sustain you,—then why don't you preach? We don't want any kind of blackguarding. I can do that myself, any one can; we hear plenty of that on week days; but O give us something more substantial on the hallowed Sabbath,—doctrine, or anything that will keep a poor soul alive.

There, now, that's right! give us a full description of "things to come," and, instead of a vainly-lit countenance, you will see one of deep, deep thought and concern. But you must bridle your tongue, or you will spoil all this. Just hist now. Don't order that young mother to leave the house, because her baby makes a little fuss. Who blames the dear little creature? Probably "imitation" is the king of its organs; it is trying to imitate the howling that is heard from the pulpit. Then, brother, "do as you would be done by." That mother has never had an opportunity of hearing you before, and her feeble constitution assures her that she must never expect another. Then, thou shepherd of the sheep, be gentle, speak soft words of heavenly origin to that trump-awaiting ear. Speak gently. Soothe the heart and dry the tear. O don't be a "man of war" instead of peace. Now use reason, I pray you. How you talk! "She might have left the baby with papa, if she must come to meeting." How unreasonable! Don't you think "papa" is as anxious to hear "the gospel" as mamma is? Then do not look so savagely sour, but calmly, meekly comfort the feeble minded. Look here, brother! how would you like to stay with a baby and let its mother attend meetings Sabbath after Sabbath, if you can't bear to hear a very little of its crying now? You complain of small congregations, do you not? Well, then, let the babies in, and mothers will follow. You must not expect all the young maidens to surround you; for they are at the "quite fashionable" parties these times. You say you want to preach to "candid minds," do you? Then let that baby and mother come in. Old women are called "better hearers" than young care-for-nothing-but-pleasure girls. "Preach the gospel," is your command. Then do it if you can; if not, you had better walk home and take care o the babies there. Let the occupation sober you. I dare say it would. Then you can appear as a preacher. Now, brother, just come down a few inches in your own estimation and talk soberly. Never brag or boast. Never defy others to do so and so. It does not look Christ-like, certainly. "Blessed are the meek." We don't want you all smiles and "soft-soap;" nor do we want you all frowns and "vinegar," by any means. Give us "the Word," and we will smile or frown at our leisure, according to its influence.

O let thy blessing, Lord, attend
Thy Holy Word till time shall end.

Danville, C. E.

From Bro. P. Tandy.

Bro. Grant:—I am still a stranger and a pilgrim here; and I desire always to live as such, and show to the world that I am on the Lord's side. I have professed to have come out from the world, and I want virtually to be out of the world; that is, from its spirit and practice. Jesus did not pray that his disciples might be taken out of the world, but that they might "be kept from the evil." I wish to be willing to live the whole of my appointed time; but this mortal life is a burthen to me. I long for deliverance. I want to see my King in his matchless beauty!

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day!"

Let me say to the dear Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, that I do feel it to be a great and very important thing for us to be christians;—practical christians! consistent christians!! There is much chaff, but little wheat! "Many are called, but few are chosen." Out of the ten leprous persons that were cleansed by our Lord, only one returned to give him glory. I awfully fear (I don't know as I am right,) that not more than one tenth part of the professing world will finally enter the kingdom of God. How few there are living godly in Christ Jesus!—How very few there are believing all of God's truth, and strictly squaring their lives by it! "He that heareth these sayings of mine," says Christ, "and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man." Now, if we are really the friends of Christ, we shall love to do his will. What is his will concerning us? His will is, that we keep his commandments. We should love God, love his children, love the perfect law, "and grieve not the Holy Spirit, whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption."

It is but a little more than three years since I left the Baptist church, embraced the advent faith, acknowledging my error and the traditions of my fathers, and was, and am still anxious to know the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. "Error," as Bro. Burnham says, "will do us no good;" but it is doing much harm. O, I long to see Satan, with all his lies, fall like lightning to the ground! I do want Christ's Kingdom to come, and his will to be done on the earth, as it is now done in heaven by the angels of God; for "they do his pleasure."

I want to tell the good Brn. and Srs., that Bro. E. Burnham came and visited us the last of March, and delivered three very interesting, and we hope profitable dis courses. Those that were true Adventists, that heard him, were refreshed, and greatly benefitted. I can say I received new encouragement to fight out the good fight of faith; and I am now no less determined to pursue the shining way to the land of Canaan, to the City of our God. May God abundantly bless our beloved Bro. B., and give him divine consolation now, and ultimately a seat in his everlasting Kingdom. O may the Lord greatly bless every faithful laborer in the vineyard; succeed and prosper their efforts, and make truth to prevail over error. I design to keep a "pilgrim's tavern" while I live here, and any of God's humble, faithful servants, that come this way, are earnestly requested to call.

Pray for me, that I may do the will of the Lord always. Yours in hope,

P. Tandy.

Choice Selections.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS ECHO.

True faith, producing love to God and man,
Say, Echo, is not this the Gospel plan?
The Gospel plan.

Must I my faith and love to Jesus show,
By doing good to all, both friend and foe?
Both friend and foe.

But if a brother hates, and treats me ill,
Must I return him good, and love him still?
Love him still.

If he my failings watches to reveal,
Must I his faults as carefully conceal?
As carefully conceal.

But if my name and character he blast,
And cruel malice, too, a long time last;
And if I sorrow and affliction know,
He loves to add unto my cup of woe;
In this uncommon, this peculiar case,
Sweet Echo, say, must I still love and bless?
Still love and bless.

Whatever usage ill I may receive,
Must I be patient still, and still forgive?
Be patient still, and still forgive.

Why, Echo, how is this? thou'rt sure a dove;
Thy voice shall teach me nothing else but love.
Nothing else but love.

Amen! with all my heart, then be it so;
'Tis all delightful, just and good I know:
And now to practice I'll directly go.
Directly go.

Things being so, whoever me reject,
My gracious God me surely will protect.
Surely will protect.

Henceforth I'll roll on Him my every care,
And then both friend and foe embrace in prayer.
Embrace in prayer.

But after all those duties I have done,
Must I in point of merit, them disown,
And trust for Heaven through Jesus' blood alone?
Through Jesus' blood alone.

Echo, enough! thy counsels to mine ear
Are sweeter than, to flowers, the dew-drop tear;
Thy wise, instructive lessons please me well;
I'll go and practice them. Farewell, Farewell.
Practice them. Farewell, Farewell.

—N. Y. Observer.

Bad Habits.

It appears that certain Methodist ministers chew tobacco and spit over the floors of their hospitable entertainers during the good time of Conference. We presume this is not confined to the Methodists in question, nor exceptional as to time or place. "Sister Gifford"—bless her tidy heart—as it seems from a letter of the Rev. Rufus E. King of West Martinsburg, was ready to accommodate at her house three preachers of the Black River Conference who did not use tobacco, and Mr. King tells the brethren they do not know the trouble they cause the kind families who entertain them by not being like the three.

Squirting tobacco-juice is emphatically not apostolic. We read of the primitive teachers of christianity doing coarse, hard work, but we never hear of their forgetting good manners. Indeed, Bishop Hooker emphatically calls St. Paul a gentleman. But imagine the apostle taking a quid out of his mouth and then expectorating a shower of nasty saliva, before he began his famous oration! And is it less improper for the preacher of the Gospel now-a-days to chew and spit? Figure him at a Conference, where he rises to enforce, with oratorical generalizations, the great interests of the church and humanity, and prefacing his discourse by spitting out the nastiest of poisons! Shame on such clerical uncleanliness! It may befit felons and rowdies—but gentlemen and christians never!

How to Fall Asleep.

The great point to be gained in order to secure sleep is escape from thought, especially from that clinging, tenacious, imperious thought which, in most cases of wakefulness, has possession of the mind. I always effect this by the following simple process: I turn my eyeballs as far to the right or left, or upward or downward, as I can without pain, and then commence rolling them slowly, with that divergence from a direct line of vision around in their sockets, and continue doing this until I fall asleep, which occurs generally within three minutes, and always within five at most. The immediate effect of this procedure differs from that of any other which I ever heard to procure sleep. It not merely diverts thought into a new channel, but actually suspends it. Since I became aware of this I have endeavored innumerable times, while thus rolling my eyes, to think upon a particular subject, and even upon that which before kept me awake, but I could not. As long as they were moving around my mind was a blank. If any one doubts this, let him try the experiment for himself. I wish he would; let him pause just here and make it. I venture to assure him that if he makes it in good faith, in the manner described, the promise of "a penny for his thoughts," or for each of them, while the operation is in progress, will add very little to his wealth. Such being its effect, we cannot wonder that it should bring sleep to a nervous and wakeful man at night. The philosophy of the matter is very simple. A suspension of thought is to the mind what a suspension of travel or labor is to the weary body. It enjoys the luxury of rest! the strain upon its faculties removed, it falls asleep as naturally as the farmer in his chair, after toiling all day in his field.—Dr. Binn's Anatomy of Sleep.

Family Devotion.

What a cheerful radiance is diffused through the family circle by fireside piety! It is not enough that each one pray alone. Parents and children are bound together by holy ties, and it is fitting that they should join in bending before that Maker, on whom they all depend. The safety and happiness of each are dear to all, and they can pray for each other with a united heart. See them at their morning devotions. How sacred is the hour, when, as the sun is just rising on a new day, they form a circle around the fireplace, the old father in the midst. Here is a scene for a painter! Here are sons and daughters grown to manhood and womanhood, and perhaps children climbing their parents' knees. By turn they all read from the Scriptures, and it is sweet to hear the little voices mingling with the husky and trembling accents of age. Then they kneel, and if prayer ever is heard in heaven, it is such as ascends from this group of affectionate worshipers.

The whole service has occupied but a few minutes, yet how marked the influence of that brief devotion. How tender is this family as they rise from their knees. The brothers and sisters disperse to their several occupations with a light step and a cheerful heart. The effect of this morning prayer will last through the whole day. How rash and presumptuous are they who rush forth to duties and trials with no such preparation of spirit. How likely are they to be plunged into passion and bitterness before its close.

And when the evening shades appear, this family assemble again. They are about to commit themselves to sleep—the image of death. They thank God for his care through the day, and pray that He who never slumbers nor sleeps would watch over them through the night. Then they sing a hymn, and as their humble notes rise and float away, it seems as if some bird of heaven, stooping to their windows, had poured forth into the hushed night the melody of a celestial song.

We have seen many families, intelligent, refined to a very high degree, yet without religion, and it always seemed that there was wanting somewhat of moral beauty and loveliness. Their minds were cultivated, their dispositions amiable, and their manners polished; yet there was a certain charm which the eye sought in vain. It was the moral tone and elevation which religion gives to the human soul; a kind of unearthly, spiritual light, like the halo with which the old painter surrounded the head of our Savior. An artist has recently painted the Adoration of the Magi, and he has illuminated the dark stable of Bethlehem with a supernatural light. Not less heavenly is that moral radiance which beams on every forehead, and in every eye, where all hearts are touched with the sweetness and serenity of prayer.

Take away this family altar, this Bible, this sacred hymn, this morning and evening devotion, and does not the day become dark? Has not the home lost something of its attractiveness? Those who live without family prayer, have no light in their dwellings. They may live in palaces, but their palaces are dark as dungeons.

Would that all who are so happy as to have a home and a family, would bless them with such gentle piety. Our religion is too much a public affair—a religion of the street or of the church, rather than of the family and of the heart. There is no want of harmony between these duties, and it is not necessary to disparage the one in order to exalt the other. But it does seem that if there is any spot where a good man should show his excellence, it is at home. There should parents keep their lamps always trimmed and burning, that children may see their light, and be led to God by their faithful and affectionate piety.—N. Y. Evangelist.

For the Children.

Mother Won't Let Me.

A number of boys, with books in hand, were passing up street, on their way to school. They were talking with animated countenances, apparently upon a subject of common interest.

"Hallo, Sam," said one of them to a boy who was just come up to them; "are you going with us this afternoon?"

"I do not know," answered Samuel. "Mother does not know whether it is frozen hard enough for safe skating today: I am afraid she will not let me go. It is always the way when there is any fun to be had—mother keeps me at home."

"Just like my mother," replied his companion; "she is always afraid I shall be drowned, or get run over, or be killed in some way or other. She has not let me coast in the street with the other boys all this winter. I must always promise to go off with my sled into the field."

Edward Torry, who was walking by the side of the two boys, was a listener to their conversation. He said nothing; but when the boys looked towards him, expecting from him some remark upon the subject, they saw a tear in his eye, which he turned away his head to conceal. It was not difficult to judge what were the feelings which called it forth. A glance at his mourning suit reminded the boys of their companion's situation.

It was but a few weeks before that he had been bereaved of an affectionate mother, and they conjectured correctly that their conversation had brought her to his mind. Edward was thinking of his mother, and his reflections were something like the following: "These boys think it very hard to be looked after so closely, and not allowed to run into dangers, and so I used to do; but the time may come when they would give the world to have some one who would care for them as their kind mothers do now. Oh! if I could only have my good mother again, how willing I should be to give up every one of my plays to please her."

Now, no mother ever wished to deprive her children of enjoyments. Any boy will find his mother more ready to confer a pleasure upon him than to enjoy it herself. The reason why she may be unwilling in any case that he should go upon the water, or to coast in the streets, or to skate upon the river, is, not that she wishes to deprive him of enjoyment, but because she is afraid he will meet with some injury. Sometimes, perhaps, the mother is apprehensive of danger, when none in reality exists. She is afraid the bay or river is not frozen sufficiently for skating, when it really is so; she is unwilling her son should venture it, though he may know with perfect certainty himself that there is no danger.

Well, now supposing that in such a case he should cheerfully give up his plan of skating, simply because his mother wishes it, and seek his amusement in some other way: or suppose even that he should stay at home, and have no play at all, for any one afternoon, if that should be his mother's wish, would this be a greater privation than she has endured for him a hundred and a thousand times, and which she is ready, at any time, to endure for him again? Where is the boy who would rather his mother should suffer anxiety and apprehension for a whole afternoon, than to forego himself the pleasure of spending it in any particular way that he has chanced to fix upon!

Caution to Boys.—The Home Journal, in condemning the tobacco-using propensity, so strong of late among boys, mentions the following fact:—

"A few weeks ago, a youth of sixteen arrived in this city to prosecute his studies with a view to professional life. He came from a distant State, and was to remain here for some years. A week or two after his arrival, he was seized with a paralysis in both legs, which advanced upward till nearly the lower half of his body was benumbed and apparently lifeless. The most distinguished physicians in New York attended the case, but no relief being afforded, the unfortunate young man has been taken on his way home, and there is but little hope of his recovery. The cause of his disease is stated by the physicians to be tobacco-chewing—a habit which he early acquired, and persisted in to the time of his attack."

Success prompts to exertion, and habit facilitates success. Habit also gives promptness, and the soul of despatch is decision. One may write a book, or paint a picture, while another is deliberating about a plant or a title-page. The more we do, the more we can do. If we go forward with spirit and confidence, we shall succeed. The best are idle half the time, and he who does nothing, renders himself incapable of doing anything, while capacity is invigorated by occasions of necessity. Our expenditure of intellectual wealth makes us rich, and we acquire ideas by imparting hem.—Sumerville Star.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1857. WHOLE NO. 103. VOL. V. NO. 26

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

TEXTUAL SONGS.

"The memory of the just is blessed."—Prov. 10: 7.

On the scroll of the past
Where many a name
Stands written in glory,
And blazoned by fame,
See monarchs and warriors,
The great and the brave,
The wise and the beautiful,
Gone to the grave.

In the darkness and silence
And dust of their bed,
Say—Can ye discover
The greatness that's fled?
How empty the pageantry,
Splendor and po er,
When even their memory
Liveth no more!

'Tis only the righteous
That live in their death,
And leave reputation
Outlasting the breath.
When princes and statesmen
To silence have gone,
The fame they have left,
Like the sun, shineth on.

E. W. B. C.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

"If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him."

There is comfort in the thought, sad though it be, that Jesus suffered when on earth; that he drank of the cup of human woe, whose bitter drops we must taste so often. 'Tis sweet in the hour of trial, in those dark hours when the heart knows its own bitterness and must bear its burden alone; when human sympathy is sought in vain and human aid cannot reach our sorrow, to think that somewhere, though now we see him not, there is One who yet beholds us and is touched with the feeling of our infirmities; One who was made perfect through suffering—Jesus, our great High Priest, passed into the heavens, who, "ere we can offer our complaints," is "present with his aid."

We know that the God who made us fully knows our hearts, but we can more readily understand how in every trial Jesus can sympathize, when we recollect that "He has felt the same." We can more easily believe that every throb of our troubled hearts stirs the bosom of our Savior, when we think of him as the Man of Sorrows—from the manger in Bethlehem to the cross on Calvary "made acquainted with grief."

Has poverty held us all our life time in bondage, and, like the cruel task-master, appointed our daily portion of toil, and want, and care? Well, Jesus "became poor," and sojourned among the lowliest of earth. He knew hunger, and thirst, and weariness, as the brief incidents on record of his life show. Have we learned the full meaning of that word—homeless, and felt the "yearning anguish" of the stranger's heart? Jesus had no home. Heir of all things, he called no spot on earth his own, and had not where to lay his head. Have friends betrayed our trust, or failed us in the hour of deepest need? Jesus was betrayed by one of his chosen followers; and when the dark hours of agony and death drew on, "all forsook him and fled." Has God's word believed and professed caused our kindred to forsake us or become our foes? It is written of Jesus, "neither did his brethren believe on him;" and where he had been brought up, blameless and harmless, as every act of his life must have been, he could not do many mighty works because of their unbelief. Have we foes? Are we persecuted, slandered, falsely accused—rewarded with hatred for love—with evil for good? Jesus, whose whole life was the echo of that angel anthem warbled so sweetly through the skies at his birth—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," had enemies. He was hated without cause, was accused of many crimes. They said he had a devil, and was mad, and dissuaded the people from hearing him. And while he went about doing good they pursued him with unpitying, relentless malice, till his life was taken from the earth.

Are we sometimes sinking in deep waters, and cry, with one of old—"all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me,"—while our God himself seems as it were to hide his face from us? O, come to Gethsemane; see! there beneath its deep shades he kneels alone—our Savior; and more than mortal anguish gushes in those great drops of blood falling down to the ground, and is moaned forth in that prayer—"O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." Hark! that strange, mysterious cry that rises from Calvary—"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" Are we tremblingly looking down into the grave and shrinking from its silence and darkness, the heart turning clingingly to light and life? The chill, dark shadows of the "land of forgetfulness" enwrapped the Son of God. Jesus poured out his soul unto death.

Would that we had learned to rejoice, even, that we are made partakers of Christ's sufferings, counting our divers temptations all joy. There is something precious in suffering with him, as well as cheering in the hope of reigning with him; something which only the believer can learn, which only the tried soul understands. To think "I am suffering with Jesus," can sweeten even affliction, and give calm and patient resignation in every trial. O this fellowship of suffering! It is more than the communions of our seasons of joy; it brings us nearer to Jesus and keeps us in closer union with him. The promises are dearer when earthly hopes have died. God's strength is made perfect in weakness. We prove the sustaining power of the Everlasting Arm, when other supports are gone. God is our all when we have nothing else. And then we know what it is to say—"it is good for me that I have been afflicted."

Child of sorrow! child of God! a little longer we'll suffer with him, and then reign—reign where sorrow and pain will not be known; where temptation cannot come; where joy will be unmingled and enduring. Reign with Jesus.

MARIA T.

Cold Spring, Mass.

The Faults of the Minister Again.

No. IV.

"That sermon was too long! pity he could not have stopped when he got through." True; but another will complain that the other brother was as brief, and so we will let the preaching pass. "How that man did appear in the pulpit!" What is the matter? "So different from what we have been accustomed to see." Well, that is one great difficulty. There never ought to be a pulpit. "How," said Daniel Webster, "would a lawyer act boxed up in such a thing as that?" "But he was so coarse and plain in dress." Rather an honor to him than otherwise. "Such old fashioned garments!" Might have been second-handed—worn by some more fashionable man years before. "Don't shave"—"pays but little attention to the toilette anyway"—"wears a felt hat, black cravat, or none at all." Say on! Let us have the comfort—open necks, sound throats, loose, light hats, and cool heads, and your "clergy" may have the trappings; we are men thrust into the vineyard of the Lord.

But another will find fault with the "minister's ways"—white choker, black coat, &c., and who can suit the whole? "I don't think the minister lives any better than I do." Do you think he lives as well? You ought to do as well as you can; and if you can help the brother to live any better, 'tis your duty to be about it, especially to give him counsel, &c. "But our minister ought not to do this, or that, or allow his family to do it." Perhaps not; but you will not mend the matter by faulting him—better tell him! But you do not know his trials, nor the afflictions he suffers, one of which is, that he has to be dependent on the church; and his family, if they can manage, in addition to the scanty supplies of the church, to get the comforts and conveniences of life together, cannot be permitted to enjoy them without gossip and scandal. If he has manly independence about him, even in speaking out what he believes, you will fret! Oh! my soul is sick of trying to satisfy. "He has no right to worry—please God!" If the minister goes to work, you will say, "he has denied the faith."

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

The Influence of the Press.

———"Still lifts the Press its arm abroad,
To guide all-curious man along life's road;
To cheer pure genius, pity's tear to start,
In TRUTH's bold cause to rouse each fearless heart;
O'er male and female quacks to shake the rod
And scourge the unsexed thing that scorns her God;
To hunt corruption from its secret den
And show the monster up, the gaze of wondering men."—ALGER.

In every country where the press is left free from all restraint, freedom, religious as well as political, in a great measure exists. In no country where the press is wholly free from governmental control, is the right of every one to "worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience" lawfully questioned. Where was ever known a tyrannic monarch, since the invention of printing, who did not hate the institution of the press? Where was ever known a bigoted sectarian, seeking self-aggrandizement and power, by the promulgation of error, who did not heartily despise the press? It is the aim of the bigoted disciple of error to crush free discussion; hence his opposition to and misrepresentation of every institution that serves to promote it.

Years ago, when the religious liberty which sought an asylum on the shores of this country was in danger of being wrested from its adherents, it found no more powerful defender than the press. It was determined to force all to contribute to the support of the perverted doctrines of the Church of England. The consistent lovers of a pure christianity declined to do so. The free press upheld them, and advocated freedom of conscience. "We must muzzle the press," said the High-churchman, "and then they will submit. The press is a most seditious institution." But Providence was on the side of the humble, and the songs of thanksgiving and prayer continued to ascend, from the pine forests and lakes of Maine, to the bright Savannahs of the sunny South. Since then times have changed. Too many of us, the descendants of those humble Christians, have lost our vigils; we have grown weary of watching for the roseate hues of the morning of immortality. The foot of the red man is no more in our borders, his trail is dim in the far West; but we forget the freedom we enjoy and the sufferings our ancestors endured when they were not even safe in attending meeting; and we endeavor to hush the little monitor within by crying—"peace, peace;" "a little more slumber, a little more folding of the hands to sleep." "Knowledge has been increased." Our land is now dotted with cities, and villages, and hamlets, even as the blue veil which is stretched between us and the unknown regions is dotted with stars. The press, too, has increased in a wonderful ratio, and, in proportion, there are more papers which shed a beneficial influence; and while their number has increased, the number of bad publications has also increased. But shall we condemn them all because the privilege of the freedom of the press is abused? The same rule might apply to men, and we could reason, that, because there were bad men, therefore the whole race of men, good as well as bad, should be annihilated. Surely this would not be consistent. Bad men have increased in a much larger proportion than a bad press, in this country, at least.

But while bad men have increased, and while so many of us have forgotten the examples of our fathers, there are still some humble ones who continue to worship their Deliverer in the old primitive way. They may be scattered over the land, with but a few in a place, here and there a hamlet, but the same God that listened to the vesper-laden zephyrs of the wilderness hears them, and their prayers and thanksgivings are sweeter to him than the perfume of ten thousand flowers. And while bad men are so numerous, what more potent way of reclaiming them than the existence of a pure press? While humble Christians are so scattered, how can they be reached more easily than through the press? Every week the little "white-wing messenger" is ready to carry its burden of thoughts on christianity to every home in the land that shall desire it, and—

"Prepare the way for liberty and truth,
And break the barriers that, since earth began,
Have made mankind the enemy of man."

How many are there who would not be willing to pay for a paper a dozen times over, if they really believed that once a year, even, it would be the indirect cause of making the angels strike their harps and sing for joy? It is written that the "Angels rejoice when one sinner repenteth!" How many times, think you, when some offending one has taken up a sheet, filled with christian doctrines which have directed him to search his Bible, and he thereby has become converted,—how many times, I say, over such a conversion, has the home of the angels reverberated with the ravishing music of ten thousand times ten thousand golden harps? How many times have their voices broke forth into singing songs sweeter than that when the "morning stars sang together?" HE who knoweth all things alone can tell.

How important, then, is the influence of a pure press! Who will refuse to sustain it? There are, doubtless, articles published in all papers, at times, which do not suit all their readers in particulars of doctrine. But will you throw the whole away, because somebody refuses to see through your spectacles? I cannot believe you so uncompromisingly sectarian as that. Truth seeks the light! Error covets darkness. Free investigation is the very life of the press; it is the life of all institutions or societies where thought is brought into action. If you were fishing for shad, you would not be so inconsistent as to throw away the whole "haul" because a "shiner" happened to get entangled and was drawn up with your other fish. Certainly not! You would think a man a fool who would do so. Then why throw away a paper because it may occasionally contain an article that you have no taste for? It is equally inconsistent.

Well, to come to a point, if you really believe it does good—if you think there is enough of the pure golden ore of truth in it to make up for the occasional particles of dross, is it not your duty to help support it? I have asked you the question, answer it to your own heart. Do you not know that hundreds have no other preacher? Why, the little Crisis has quite a congregation. Its circulation is now twenty-three hundred and seventy-six. Let us suppose that each paper is read by six persons, probably more, on an average, but we will keep within bounds; some copy may be read by only one and others by over a dozen persons, so I think I am safe in saying that the average number of readers of the Crisis is six to each copy issued. Well, six times twenty-three hundred and seventy-six are fourteen thousand and two hundred and fifty-six. Then the readers of the Crisis number, if my estimate has been correct, fourteen thousand two hundred and fifty-six! That's quite a congregation, I should say! Probably all do not read the paper through; there are usually some in every congregation who go to sleep some time during the sermon.

If you think the Crisis is a paper calculated to do good, here is a chance for you. There are many copies sent free, therefore it is requisite that all those able to pay should do so, and use all their endeavors to obtain new paying subscribers. Those who are in arrears, should pay up, and pay in advance. The advance pay system is the best, as it enables the publishers to obtain their paper and printing without embarrassment.

The influence of the press may be questioned by some; they have a right to their opinion. I have an equal right to mine. I have my preferences in regard to papers, but do not choose to speak them now. All have an equal right to their preferences. But while we maintain our preferences, it is our duty to see that those preferences are correct and truthful. In my opinion, the press, as a whole, has ever been the friend of religious freedom, willing to see the truth investigated, when it has been left free from government and priestcraft to act for itself. Civilization, education and christianity have generally trod in its footsteps when it has been free. It has opened the sesame of truth, and scattered the seeds of purity broadcast among the mountains and the valleys. It has shed its purifying and elevating rays on many a home, and its light of truth, clear as the vermilion of the rainbow, has made glad many a family circle. Who shall tell of those it has pointed to a "better way?"

J. H. T.

Boston, Aug., 1857.

For the Crisis.

The World's Jubilee.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—In glancing over Anna Silliman's late work entitled, "The World's Jubilee," we discover a number of very beautiful and truthful passages. Believing that they may be interesting and profitable to those who are looking forward with happy anticipation to that glorious epoch, even the celebration of "the marriage supper of the Lamb," in the "holy city," we transcribe a few of the finest and send them to you, hoping that you will give them a place in that vehicle of truth, (The Crisis,) which we trust God will never cease to bless, as such, to the everlasting good of many.

In speaking of the perpetuity of the earth, and showing the absurdity of the popular belief; i. e., that it will ultimately be annihilated, together with all the bright luminaries around us, while the redeemed will necessarily have to be translated "to some other sphere, where they may enjoy their immortality," she remarks;—

"Such a course appears improbable; for we can see no reason why the race of man should terminate after it has been recovered to holiness, nor any thing to be gained by a removal of the righteous from the earth after it has been filled with the glory of God. Who can even conjecture where a better place would be found for the enjoyment of immortality in a resurrected body? We cannot suppose that man's body [or man] will be raised from the dust, that he may spend his eternity in roaming through the regions of space, without any place that he can call his home. If this is to be his future destiny, in what society and circumstances will it be realized? Will Christ and the redeemed form one vast throng moving from world to world? or will they be separated, and each one seek happiness as suits his fancy? If separated, when and where will they re-assemble?—for their union will require a time and place for meeting. Will any of the stars now visible be the heavenly mansions where Christ will hold his court? Which of these bright orbs will or can contain any thing that will better inspire us with love to Christ, than the place where he suffered for our redemption? Why, if God glorifies, should he not also perpetuate this earth for the Kingdom of his Son? Why should not the saints find their eternal rest and glory where they endured their toil and degradation? And why should not Christ reign over [or with] his people in that world where he died for their deliverance, rather than efface the memory of his love from their hearts, by removing them from the earth, and destroying the scene of his sufferings?"

Speaking of popular belief being no test to the truthfulness of any position, she thus dilates;—

"The popularity of this belief (i. e., the complete annihilation of the world, as is taught by the orthodox) in an enlightened christian community, is certainly a presumptive argument in its favor, but it is by no means an absolute confirmation of its truth. Theological traditions are often as firmly believed as historic fact and sometimes exercise a greater power over the conscience than even the law of God. In our Savior's time 'tradition had made the commandment void' among those whose business it was to study and explain the law, and similar examples are not wanting in the present day. From this we may learn that popular belief, even in the (professed) church, is not to be relied upon as incontestible evidence of truth; and in trying the correctness of any professed scriptural doctrine, it is proper that our inquiry should be, what do the scriptures teach, rather than what does the church believe. If the popular belief in the annihilation of the earth, when tested by this rule, should be found at variance with express declarations of scripture, and the texts which are relied on for its support can be reconciled with the earth's perpetuity, this doctrine, time-honored as it is, should yield to the force of truth. . . . The fall of man, though it marred God's work, could not alter his original design; for why should he, who not only has all power in his hands to accomplish his will, but also sees the end from the beginning, suffer his purpose to be foiled by the device of the Devil and the weakness of the woman? He certainly was as able to restrain the Devil in Eden as he is now, or as he will be when he shall commission his angels to bind him and cast him into the bottomless pit; and it would then have required no more interference with man's free agency to preserve the integrity of the woman, than it does now to recover a sinner from the error of his ways, or to secure a christian in the path of obedience. If it was his original design to perpetuate men throughout eternal ages upon the earth, it would not be inconsistent with this purpose that our first parents were allowed to transgress, and the race condemned to taste for awhile the bitter fruits of rebellion. This may have been permitted that the experience of evil resulting from sin might, in future ages, operate upon the recovered race as motives to obedience. If at the time of the judgment, a part of mankind who are then living upon the earth, instead of being transfigured or destroyed, shall be delivered from the curse, and have the blessing lost by the fall restored to them and the glorified saints are then to reign upon the earth, the sufferings they experience in this present life may be a necessary part of that discipline by which they will be qualified for this government. This would even make the fall of man ultimately beneficial to the world; and by making the greatest evil thus produce the greatest good, exhibit the far-sighted wisdom of God's designs. But to allow the world that 'he formed to be inhabited,' in its very commencement to be marred by sin, and that too by the head of the race for whom it had been created, while yet alone in the world, and in a state of comparative ignorance respecting the result of his transgression, and then to suffer the evil effects of this transgression to accumulate until the race shall terminate, and the world be given over to utter destruction, looks very much like God's being foiled in his purpose, and making the world in vain. Unless he has expressly declared that this is his determination, it seems like charging him with foolishness to anticipate such a termination of terrestrial things. In the text under review, [Isa. 45: 17, 18,] we think he expressly disavows such a design. The inspired account of the creation also indicates the purpose of its perpetuity; for it is said when God had finished the world he looked upon his work, and pronounced it all very good. How could the Allwise and merciful Creator regard the world with this complacency, if the curse which he knew so soon would blight its beauty was to be consummated by its annihilation? As he has provided for man's recovery from his fallen condition, we see no reason why he should not also provide for the recovery of man's inheritance. If the weakness and sin of the first Adam subjected the world to the curse, it is but natural to expect that the strength and holiness of the second Adam will restore it. It has been given to him by the Almighty Father for his inheritance; and during his brief sojourn here he manifested a power over all created things, not merely sufficient to accomplish this work, but in accordance with such a design. If the infinite Creator, when he had finished our world, after surveying his work pronounced it all very good, its restoration to its original perfection seems not beneath the Redeemer's dignity."

We close these Extracts with the following appropriate and consolatory remarks to the poor and despised ones who have no name nor place in this present wicked and heaven-daring world. We trust by divine grace that they will prove more than ordinarily refreshing to all such, especially to the tried, and worn and weary pilgrim who is "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ."

"There will be great changes in the world when the Lord Jesus shall take the Kingdom, and moral worth is made the ground of preferment. When tested by this principle, how many of the great will be abased; how many of the humble will be exalted! The wisdom of the greatest statesman will become ignorance and confusion, when compared with the intuition of those to whom judgment will be given. The glory of the most renowned conqueror will fade into oblivion, as the powers of the world to come are brought into action. Ancestral pride will vanish before the honor of being adopted into the family of God; and royal alliances sink into insignificance when compared with the dignity of being enrolled among the brethren of Christ. The splendor of the great will become dim, before the effulgent robes of righteousness in which the saints will be arrayed—that heavenly dress of matchless purity, the token of God's approbation, which malice can never injure, and calumny can never spot. Then the wrongs of the injured will be avenged, the rights of the meek will be asserted. The 'merciful will obtain mercy,' while to the hard-hearted and the oppressor, the judge will say,—'Pay me that thou owest.' Those who are now persecuted for righteousness' sake, will then rejoice and be exceeding glad, for their reward in heaven will be great.' 'The pure in heart shall see God.' And to the servant that shall be found diligent in his Master's work, the King will say,—'ENTER THOU INTO THE JOY OF THY LORD.'"

Yours in gospel bonds, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

Elizabeth City, N. J., July, '57.

From Sr. A. Ongley.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, greeting, especially those with whom in former days I have taken sweet counsel, and walked to the House of God in company. Dearly beloved in the Lord; how oft fond memory brings to mind those scenes of sacred peace and pleasure, now gone, forever gone, and there is no probability that I shall ever behold your faces again in this vale of tears; but though absent in body, yet often am I present in spirit with you, and often are you borne in the arms of faith and on the wings of prayer, to the throne of grace and the choicest of heaven's blessings invoked to rest on you.

How often I think of the little church with which I was first connected after I came out of Babylon, of the perfect confidence we had in each other, of the perfect love and union among us. I have never found such a church since. Oh! how dear to my heart is each member of that church. But where are they now? where that happy company that met in Conference at Bro. Wood's wagon shop? where are those who were buried with Christ by baptism at that Conference? That baptismal season I never shall forget. Such a happy company I have never seen together before nor since, but they are now scattered abroad, and never will all meet again on this sin-cursed earth. Some are asleep in Jesus—blessed sleep!—how I long for the time to come when they shall waken. Others have gone West; some to one state, some to another, Others still live in Van Buren, and I humbly trust are ripening for the Kingdom. Savior, "let thy kingdom come."

Dear brethren, keep yourselves unspotted from the world a little longer; take heed to yourselves, lest at any time you should get overcharged with the things of this world, and that day come on you unawares; for it is near, it hasteth greatly. Watch, watch! And the dear brethren in Cato, who came out with me on the time in '54, have you kept yourselves all ready to hail the coming King? are your garments pure and unspotted from the world? are your lamps well burning, and your vessels filled with oil? If so, happy are ye; if not, let me entreat you, in the name of the Lord, to repent, and do your first works, lest the candlestick be removed out of its place. We enjoyed many happy seasons together in '54; it was easy to live religion then, when the current moved that way, and swept all opposition before it; but when the time passed, and the current swept the other way, it was not quite so easy. But don't give up the ship—our Father's at the helm.

"We've [illegible] astern, and many storms
The Lord hath brought us through;
We're looking now ahead, and lo!
The land appears in view."

To the brethren in Syracuse, Seneca Falls, Waterloo, and other places, with whom I have formerly been associated, I would say, arm yourselves with the whole armor of God. Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, which is the gift of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Thanks be to God for this unspeakable gift. Beloved, what are all our sufferings and trials here, if we can but gain that precious boon? What exceeding great and precious promises are left on record in God's holy book, for the consolation of God's dear children while passing through this wilderness of woe. Precious Bible! how I love it; 'tis all we need for food and medicine, shield and sword.

Finally, brethren, farewell. May the God of peace be with you, sanctify you wholly, and preserve you blameless unto his heavenly Kingdom. So prays your sister in Christ. ADAH ONGLEY.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 19, 1857.

"Individualism and Primitive Piety Revived."

"Twenty years ago, in the city of Hamburg, a band of seven brethren assembled in a shoemaker's shop, laid their hearts upon the altar of God's service, (mark the language!) and formed themselves into a church, of which Mr. Oncken was chosen pastor. Now behold the results! The little church of seven members has multiplied itself into fifty churches! Ten thousand souls have been hopefully converted; fifty millions of persons have heard the true gospel; and eight millions of pages of tracts, and four hundred thousand copies of the scriptures have been put into circulation.

"How has this work, under God, been accomplished? Let us learn from the pastor's own lips: 'All our members are initiated and instructed into a regular system of operations. Every man and woman is required to do something for the Lord, and thus the word of the Lord has been scattered. We have now about seventy brethren in Hamburg, who go out every alternate Sabbath, two by two, preaching the gospel: and by this means, the whole of the city has heard the precious name of Christ. We think that all the talents in the church should be brought out. A list of the brethren who can speak is kept, and they are sent from village to village to preach on the Sabbath, and they go out as the church directs.' It is stated that there is scarcely a female member of the church in Hamburg, who has not two or three Bibles and a parcel of tracts to distribute; and that, in a single year, through the six hundred members of the church and its pastor, every family in that city of one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants, was visited for the purpose of religious conversation and the distribution of books. And there is this remarkable circumstance besides,—that though these devoted men and their brethren in other parts of Germany form less than fifty churches, they keep up preaching at nearly four hundred stations."—Amer. Missionary.

Dear Brn. and Srs., the foregoing presents us an example worthy of imitation. It is Apostolical christianity revived. How different from the sickly, faint-hearted, ease-loving, pleasure-seeking professed christianity of the present day, that is developing itself around us. Who is ready to engage in the work like those Brn. in Hamburg? Where is that spirit of self-denial that has ever characterized the church whenever it has accomplished any thing for the cause of truth? I most firmly believe the sentiment, that "every man and woman" that professes the christian religion has something to do in bringing sinners to Christ. This should be our great work. For this object Christ came into the world, and after setting us an example, he has left us to carry it out till called to meet him in glory, or to fall asleep in death.

No church can prosper that does not labor for the salvation of sinners. They may understand every minutiæ of doctrine, and still be barren and unfruitful in the work of righteousness. Demons believe and understand doctrine, and were the first to proclaim that Jesus was the Son of God, but they do not labor for the salvation of men, but their destruction.

Come, ye children of the Lord, gird on the armor, and forth to the warfare with renewed energy. We have rested long enough to be fully refreshed. Like those Hamburg brethren, scatter tracts to the starving multitude, and follow them with your prayers and exhortations. Now is the time to work. Our time is short, and wickedness is increasing. The tracts are lying on our shelves, and should be sent out at once to arrest the attention of the multitude rushing to perdition. Let us do all we can, so that we shall not be condemned among slothful servants, who knew their Master's will and did it not. We have some most excellent tracts and books that are adapted to these times, and they should be flying like Autumn leaves.

We hear an echo—"I would be glad to do something, but I have not the means." My brother! my sister! deny thyself for Jesus sake. Do you know that the tea, coffee, tobacco, and rich food are ruining your constitution? producing an uneasy state of mind, and an impatient disposition? This fact is most fully established with abundance of testimony. From thirteen years' experience, I know the happy effects of abstinence from all these things. Save the money now spent for tea, coffee, tobacco, rich food, jewelry, and other worse than useless articles, and devote it to the Lord for scattering tracts among your neighbors, and your natural and spiritual health will be greatly improved. Instead of crying, "O my leanness," it will be, "Come and hear what the Lord has done for me." Try it.

Fare to Campmeeting.

The fare to the Wilbraham Campmeeting from Boston and back is $3.00. From Worcester and return $1.75. One third off from regular price from intermediate stations between Worcester and the campground.

Tickets to be had of Bro. Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. Boston. Our brethren will please inform Bro. Adams how many tickets they wish, and forward the money to him, according to the prices named.

Those who take the cars at Boston can get their tickets by calling at Bro. Adams' store, 167 Hanover St. Remember, the R.R. Co. will sell no tickets at their depots, at reduced prices, for the campmeeting.

N.B. The campmeeting is near the Wilbraham depot and not North Wilbraham as has been advertised. The campmeeting is in North Wilbraham, but there is no such depot. Get tickets for Wilbraham.

How the Crisis "Stands."

The Crisis, as a subscription paper, has now been published about two years; and thus far, we think, the Lord has remarkably opened its way. We are now near the close of Vol. 5, and are nearly free from debt or embarrassment. May the Lord enable us to keep so. There is a little due Bro. Grant, for his services from week to week, which can be paid at once if those of our brethren who are behind with their subscription will pay up. You will do so, will you not good children? Come, help us to "owe no man anything." Let us have one paper that will not need to dun, dun, dun continually. You, our subscribers, have done well—now do a little better! If all will pay up promptly we can send out more free papers to Father's poor ones. Will you not help us in this matter? We have confidence in you, dear brethren, that you will respond to this note at once. Only pay up promptly and the Crisis will more than sustain itself.

EDWIN BURNHAM,
For the Committee.

Voice of the Church.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

To those who have no desire to investigate the subject which constitutes the argument of the book, it will yet prove a valuable manual of reference from its brief notices of the authors quoted.—Rochester Democrat.

It is designed to prove,—and the attainment of that purpose is asserted,—that the doctrine of the conversion of the world, or a Millennial period previous to its destruction is of recent origin. . . . A great amount of Scriptural and other evidence to support this idea is furnished, and the book will no doubt attract attention and excite inquiry and discussion among religious people.—Rochester Union, June 7th.

For sale by H. L. Hastings, No. 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., and at this office. Price $1.00. Postage 18 cts.

"Prayer and Fasting."

We would recommend to our Brn. and Srs., that they observe Friday, Aug. 28th, as a day of fasting and prayer, in behalf of our coming camp meeting at Wilbraham. Let us all humble ourselves before God, repenting of our sins, asking him to revive his work in power among us.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me, through the Crisis, to solicit aid from the friends of suffering humanity, in behalf of Bro. G. L. Teeple. He writes me that he and his father-in-law are in straightened circumstances. His father-in-law has commenced improvements on a piece of government land in Silby county. Arrived too late to get in crops, can get no work to do in that new region, and are living in an open log shanty, with no prospect of getting a better place for winter. The charge on their freight has taken all their money but three dollars. Now friends, make no excuses, but do up some money in a letter, and direct it to George L. Teeple, Arlington, Silby county, Minnesota.

W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota, August 6th, 1857.

[Brn. don't shut up your bowels of compassion, but remember Jesus says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." ED.]

For the Crisis.

Guess-work.

I would say to those friends that lately inquired of me why the conductors of the "Crisis" used so poor paper to print such valuable matter on,—I had observed it, and guessed that it come enough cheaper to send the paper to a good number of the poor, that could not pay, and loved to read it as well as we. One said, "if this is the case, I will be satisfied." Another said, "I have not seen it these three weeks." This person borrowed it when he could. I took the opportunity to remark on this, and said I believed every person that loved the reading of it enough to go two miles after it, ought to take it, and could earn enough while running after it to pay for it. This secured one subscriber, and $1.00 advance pay. On going to the Office, I found I had guessed right. Bro. Grant said the cheap quality of paper used, saved enough to send the paper free to at least fifty poor pilgrims who could not possibly have it any other way.

I think the brethren, and especially the preachers, ought to take a more decided interest in getting subscribers. A little effort made by the brethren (and sisters too,) would swell the subscription list sufficiently to place the paper on a firm footing, and liberate the office from embarrassment, and let the actually poor pilgrim enjoy the reading of the Crisis on good paper. "The poor always ye have with you." Come, brethren, let us make an effort to do something in this matter.

Another thing. We ought to lend our papers to such as will read them. This is a very easy and successful way to increase the interest in others to look at the Hope. I have found a number that have become interested in this way, and have embraced the truth and became paying subscribers. Brethren, lend your papers; scatter light; work while the day lasts. All can do something, if it is nothing more than carrying the paper to your neighbor, and living out the principles of the Bible; thus our influence will tell.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Chicopee Falls, Aug. 8, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. V.

BRO. GRANT:—Reaching my journey's end for the day, the village of Buchanan, Mich., on Thursday, July 2d, I preached in the evening to a good congregation, and found a home with Bro. Fox. Here is a church continuing in the faith, that should take hold with new zeal, and by making an effort to secure pastoral labor would no doubt flourish, sufficiently to observe that such a plan is owned of the Great Head of the church.

Thence, I proceeded to Michigan City, from whence I expected a team to take me to Bro. Wells'; but being thrown upon my own forces of locomotion, by the failure of a letter to reach Bro. F. H. B., I made a pastime of walking eleven miles after about 7 P. M. This is one of the "perils" of the work in these times, and on such a road as that.

Last Sunday was a good day at Union Mills. How the field whitens in all this region! In passing about, the scenery is most grand; and at this season prairie and barren, marsh, grove, are all inviting. How can one, who loves the gospel, and desires to behold its fruits, but earnestly desire its progress in a new and rich country like this? C.

Stillwell Prairie, July 10.

For the Crisis.

The Glorious Prospect.

My soul is joyful in view of the bright and glorious prospect which is just ahead. Glory to God! Not far distant, I can view by faith the hills of Zion, robed in immortal beauty. The sacramental host of God's shining elect seated among the vine-clad hills of Eden; the city whose street is of pure gold; the river of the water of life, clear as crystal; and in the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, is the tree of life, which bears twelve manner of fruits and yields the same every month: and the leaves of the tree are for MEDICINE! Alleluia! For the Lord God and the Lamb are the light of the city.

Dear brethren, my longing heart is there! My wings are already plumed for glory! Gladly would I drop this mortal clothing, and put on immortality, and with all the redeemed throng, step on to Eden's towering heights. But I must wait till my Redeemer shall come, traveling in the greatness of his strength. O Lord, give me patience to wait, courage to endure hardness as a good soldier of the Prince of peace, and strength to labor in his vineyard till he comes. And then, with all the sanctified, I shall be gathered and come into possession of the Kingdom of God, never more to part. What! never more to part? No, no! Glory to God!

Yours, on the march for glory. Amen.

R. V. LYON.

Woodstock, Ct., Aug. 1, 1857.

For the Crisis.

What is Duty?

I would pen a few thoughts arising from reading a resolve that the Pittsburgh Conference of the M. E. Church passed at its recent session.—"Resolved, that we look with the most decided disapprobation upon the practice, now so prevalent among our people, of the putting on of 'gold and costly apparel,' and the following the gaudy and fashionable novelties of the age; and recommend to the members of the M. E. Church that propriety and simplicity of apparel which becometh men and women professing godliness."

How sad the spectacle presented by some professing christians! The maxims, fashions, policy, pomp and show of the world have so far obtained their practical sanction as to have thrown far back into the shade the christian rule of life which God hath given in his word. They join hands in justifying the theatre, the dance, and other intoxicating forms of worldly amusement, which the world itself is before them in denouncing as inconsistent with the "high calling" of the christian. Most melancholy is the thought that the young disciples, who once were kneeling at the feet of Jesus in penitence and prayer, and receiving his heavenly benediction, have been, and yet may be, by the example and cruel teaching of such, tempted aside into those bewildering paths which lead far away from their Father's house. Professing christian! have you an answer ready for the blood of souls, when the Judge of all the earth shall make inquiry?

Christians are exhorted to "present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, and acceptable to God;" an offering wholly devoted; a living, perpetual sacrifice of holy acts. "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Come out from among them, and be ye separate. "Soberness" and "vigilance," with "lamps trimmed," and "lights burning," looking and waiting, is the state of preparation enjoined for the uncertain hour of the Bridegroom's coming to judgment.

But, it is argued, "the young must have recreation and amusement." Ah, no! not such as frivolity and dissipation propose. There are abundant resources of health and happiness which heaven hath provided, infinitely satisfying, and where lies no danger of mistake. There is holy rest as well as holy work. A mortal, accountable being, whether young or old, realizing his position in this world, the affairs of which are fast winding up, and the retribution of eternity hastening on, desires no resources of mere excitement and for passing away his brief span of time. He shuns the path where doubt lies. The unceasing aim and effort of his life is to "perfect holiness in the fear of God," knowing that without holiness no man shall see the Lord; and to keep himself "unspotted from the world," that when He who is our life shall appear, he may be found in the commanded state of watchful readiness; or, if permitted to sleep a little while, he may be ready to come forth in the morning of the first resurrection, for "on such the second death hath no power."

If professing christians would only stop and ask themselves the questions,—would God be glorified, his cause advanced, and souls saved? or, should they be willing to go from there to the judgment, methinks they would seldom if ever be found at the theatre, the dance, the pic-nic party, the Caravan and Circus, or any such like places where frivolity is carried on. Christians will not be there because they know with certainty that their post of "waiting" is not at the theatre, nor in the dance, or at any such scene of amusement, since Christ hath not promised to meet them there, with—"Peace be unto you," or the final salutation of their acceptance,—"Well done, good and faithful servant." We are commanded to abstain from all appearance of evil. We cannot serve God and mammon. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

O fellow christians, "be not deceived; God is not mocked." "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." "Cease to do evil, and learn to do well." We are nearing the judgment, and what is done must be done quickly. God help us to be up and doing and work while the day lasts. O may we be an example unto others, by adorning our profession, not by the wearing of gold and plaiting of the hair, &c., which is contrary to the word of God, but by a well ordered life and a godly conversation.

S. E. A. BOGUES.

Painesville, O.

For the Crisis.

The Types; And the Harvest of the World.

In view of our approximation to the day of Judgment, and the awful solemnities that will attend that stupendous day, it becomes a question of the most thrilling interest to inquire, at what season of the year may we expect the redeemed will be gathered home, and "the Sanctuary be cleansed?" Much has been written on the subject, which I think is sustained by the scriptures, but more can be said without exhausting its interest. The question itself involves another of peculiar interest, i. e., at what season was the Creation? And if we can ascertain the season of the one, we need not be at a loss to decide that of the other; for the dates will meet at last, at the same point of the same month, when the circle of six thousand years is filled up.

There was a tradition that the world was created in the month Tisri, which seems to be sustained by the practice of the Jews. Josephus says, "Moses appointed that Nisan should be the first month of their festivals, because he brought them out of Egypt in that month; so that this month began the year, as to all the solemnities they observed to the honor of God, although he preserved the original order of the months, as to buying and selling, and other ordinary affairs." This original order of the months, it seems, began the civil year, at the appearance of the first new moon after the autumnal equinox; for the flood began in the second month, which, Josephus says, was Marchesvan, the eighth of the sacred year; so that the ark rested on the mountains on the seventeenth day of the seventh month of the civil year, which was Nisan. It has been supposed that the date of the original year was lost during the sojourn of Israel in Egypt; that they adopted the practice of the Egyptians while there; (who began their year at the overflowing of the Nile, about our October,) that when they forsook Egypt, the date of their original year was retrieved, and fixed in the spring, where it first began. But the above assertion of Josephus relative to the flood, shows that the original year began in Tisri, which is the seventh month of the sacred year; and, indeed, to suppose that the world was created in the spring, would be at variance with the analogy between God's harvest and man's harvest. The fruits of the ground were ripe at Creation, which would naturally lead us to suppose that the earth was created in autumn, because our general fruits are ripe at that season of the year. True, there were three harvests among the Jews; the barley harvest, the wheat harvest, and the general harvest. The first two were harvests of first fruits, and could neither of them typify the harvest of the world, for that will be the harvest of the very last fruits of earth; but they are each a foretaste and pledge of the final ingathering at the close of the year. The general harvest was gathered in the seventh month, Tisri, just previous to the feast of tabernacles; and as no fruits were gathered in but those that were good and useful, its likeness may be seen in the Harvest of the world, when all the redeemed will be gathered home. This feast was kept on the fifteenth day of the seventh sacred month, Tisri, which is called "the year's end." Exod. 34: 22. "Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year. Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread, . . . and the feast of harvest, the first fruits of thy labors, . . . and the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year." Exod. 23: 14–16. These scriptures show conclusively when the original year ended, and consequently when it began; i. e., the season of Creation.

The sacred festivals appointed in the law of Moses were memorials of some great transactions which preceded them; and they are likewise typical figures of some very solemn events, to which they reach, as antitypes.

1. The Sabbath was a memorial of God's rest, after six days' work of creation, of their miraculous deliverance from Egyptian bondage, (as appears from Deut. 5: 12–15,) and also of the old covenant. But it was a type of the seventh thousand years; of the deliverance of a soul from the bondage of Satan, and of the New Covenant, the last mentioned of which could not be valid till sealed with that blood which was poured out upon the cross. That seal was applied to his church the very day in which he rose from the dead, when "he breathed" on his disciples, and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." It reached its substitute on the first day of the week, i. e., as soon as the Sabbath passed away.

2. The Passover was a slain lamb, whose blood stricken on the doorposts averted the wrath of God. It was a memorial of their being passed over, when the first-born of Egypt were slain. It was a type of the Lamb of God slain, to take away "the sins of the world;" whose blood sprinkled on the heart of the penitent sinner purifies and calms the troubled conscience, and releases the sinner from deserved punishment. The lamb had been slaughtered and eaten, on the fourteenth day of Nisan. So Christ our Passover was slain for us on the same day. The Paschal Supper was superseded by the Supper of the Lord, "the same night in which he was betrayed," and is to continue a memorial of his death till he shall come again.

3. The seven day's feast of unleavened bread that followed the passover commemorated their perilous travel to the Red Sea, on the last of which they passed through the sea. It was the type of an awakened sinner fleeing "from the wrath to come," and his laying hold of the only hope set before him, which results in songs of deliverance. It also represents Jesus during his whole life, pure and holy, yet "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief"—"harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners," honoring and magnifying the law of God while suffering its dreadful penalty, instead of rebels who had broken it.

4. In the first fruits of the barley harvest we see his debasement, in "the form of a servant" and the lowliness of his birth, going about doing good,—by relieving the distressed—pure from all sin, laid in the grave and rising therefrom on the very day in which the barley sheaf was waved in the temple of God—an earnest of the first resurrection, and the whole harvest of the world.

5. The Feast of Weeks memorialized the giving of the law; but it was a type of the miraculous descent of the Holy Spirit, at the opening of the gospel, and it reached its antitype or substitute on the day of Pentecost,—the same day of the same month, in which the law was given. It was a wave-offering of fine flour mixed with leaven, and like all wave-offerings it denoted a resurrection; but it must be a spiritual resurrection, to which all new-born heirs of grace attain when they put off "the body of the sins of the flesh" and rise to "newness of life." It was also a meat-offering, and represented fruits, as did all meat and drink-offerings. Jesus said, "my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed." "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day;" which must be by faith, for it is the Spirit that quickeneth. This feast was fulfilled on the sixth day of the third month, Sivan, when thousands were "sealed by the Holy Spirit unto the day of redemption." The beasts slain and burnt on the altar at this feast, represent Jesus in the intensity of his sufferings as the fulfiller of the law; which was here proved, by the exhibition of the fruits of the Spirit on that day. And by the loaves being two, it is probable that both Jews and Gentiles were intended, and both brought into the fold and baptized. This was one of their great yearly feasts; but unlike the others, it was not to continue seven, but only one day; probably alluding to the day of grace. "They shall be of fine flour; baken with leaven; they are the first-fruits unto the Lord." Unleavened bread or grain, represented a pure offering; but leaven not so, for no leaven could be burnt on the altar of God. Paul speaks of a certain class as having "the first-fruits of the Spirit;" Rom. 8: 23. Again, chap. 6: 5,—"Who is the first-fruits of Achaia unto Christ." James also says, "Of his own will begat he us, with the word of truth; that we might be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures." These scriptures teach us what those first-fruits were; and probably all who were the called of God according to his purpose, in the primitive age, were "the first-fruits unto God and the Lamb." Leaven mixed with fine flour, denoted something corrupt. So sin is mixed with all our best performances; but if our offerings are presented in the name of Jesus, they are acceptable and delightful to the Father, while his Son is glorified in us, and by us. The fine flour represents a thorough work of the Spirit, and consequently the "old leaven" must be purged away, that there may be an entire new lump; for "even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us." It has been supposed that this feast represented the Saints, at the first resurrection; but they put on in corruption, when they arise, at least, they are raised in incorruption, which cannot be represented by leaven. So that it is evident that this feast reached its antitype on that illustrious day, when men of all nations under heaven spoke in a language which all could understand, "the wonderful works of God." All meat-offerings were to be seasoned with salt. "Neither shalt thou suffer the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking to thy meat-offering." Lev. 2: 13. Salt denoted integrity, sincerity, perseverance, soundness in the faith, and purity, and also the perpetuity of the covenant of God. "Ye are the salt of the earth."

(To be concluded.)

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA.

HALIFAX, August 11.

The Royal mail steamship Canada, Capt Lang, which left Liverpool at 3 P.M., Saturday August 1, arrived at this port at half-past 3 o'clock this afternoon.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Prince Napoleon visised Victoria at the Isle of Wight, and the Emperor and Empress of France were expected there about the 5th of August.

Rumors were current that the British government intended to send 10,000 additional troops to India.

CHINA.

Further details of the naval operations of the British in Canton river, state that on May 27, thirteen junks were destroyed, and on the 28th twenty-seven heavily armed junks were captured. On the 8th of June 2000 British naval force were engaged, and captured a fort and took or destroyed 127 junks, mounting over 900 guns and 9000 men. The British lost 3 officers and 8 men, and had 56 wounded, some mortally. Gen. Burnham and Staff arrived at Hong Kong June 10. Lord Elgin was at Singapore.

Letters from France say that the harvest surpasses expectation.

It is reported in Paris that the result of the late elections proved so unsatisfactory to the Emperor, that a modification of the universal suffrage system is contemplated.

SPAIN.

Talavera has been declared in a state of siege, on account of a destructive fire, which the Governor attributed to revolutionists.

ITALY.

The grain crops are magnificent. At Genoa, wheat, which sold a month ago at 33 francs, had fallen to 23 francs.

RUSSIA.

Cholera was prevailing extensively at St. Petersburg. On the 21st the number of cases was 174.

The ratification of the treaty of commerce between Russia and France were exchanged at St. Petersburg on the 16th.

TURKEY.

A London paper says—"It is now anticipated not merely that France will refuse to recognize the validity of the Moldavian elections, but also that she will peremptorily insist at Constantinople on the return of the Kaimakan Vogorides."

Should Turkey refuse, as is very probable, it is believed that France will propose to call the Paris Conference together to decide the question. The affair, altogether, looks gloomy.

INDIA.

Details of Indian news already telegraphed reached London on Friday night, July 31. Rumors were very prevalent that Delhi had been re-taken, but according to the latest authentic accounts, dated June 17th, it was still in possession of the insurgents. It was very generally believed in London on Friday evening, on the strength of a communication from the East India House, that Delhi had fallen. After the close of official hours, an advance took place in consols, on the strength of the rumor.

The Bombay Times of July 1st says rebellion is universal in the Bengal army, and even the 70th native Infantry, which was publicly thanked by the Governor General in person for its loyalty, three weeks before, had been disarmed.

The fall of Delhi will do more to quench the rebellion than anything else.

In Calcutta and its neighborhood, there had been much excitement, and a conspiracy for a general rising, on the part of the Mussulman population, had been discovered, and a regular plan for the capture of the city seized.

The defence of Calcutta had become a subject of great anxiety to Europeans. The government had yielded to the pressure, and consented to the enrollment of a corps of volunteer guards, to patrol the streets at night. The inhabitants keep themselves armed, and public buildings, hotels, and other principal places, are garrisoned by sailors belonging to ships in the river.

The French Consul at Calcutta called together all the French inhabitants, and captains of French vessels, and desired them to furnish and equip armed men to watch over the safety of the European community. The French families were taken on board the vessels.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

PILATE'S DEFENCE FOR CRUCIFYING OUR LORD.

"Albinas, there's a fearful odds
To be afflicted by the Gods,
Or banished by the king's decree.
O cruel fate! ah! wretched me!
The Romans hold in low disgrace,
Whom Cæsar banished from his face,
The Jews regard me to this hour,
Severe Proconsul, clothed with power;
The christians hold me in disdain
As one, who hath their Savior slain.
Albinas, could I stay that rod
Which smote the lovely Son of God?
The Jews and fates they did agree,
To hang Messiah on a tree."
"Their God! ah! Pilate, did you say,
Impious wretches, to obey
A God that's in a manger born,
And on a cross hung up with scorn?"
"Beware, Albinas, O beware!
For all that's lovely, good, and fair,
Hung on his brow with graceful mien—
More perfect man was never seen.
He was the fairest of the fair,
No mortal could with him compare.
His words were wisdom, love and truth,
Yea, every grace adorned this youth;
To laugh he never had been seen,
To weep he oftentimes had been;
And when he wept, the numerous crowd
Who saw his grief would weep aloud.
He made the elements obey—
The tempest on its angry way
Is hushed in silence,—with the wave
Retires into its peaceful grave.
He walks upon the watery deep;
His voice awakes the dead from sleep;
The lunatic, and palsied limb,
And sick are all restored by him.
He oft would speak to angry Scribes,
And Priests, and Pharisees besides.
(A stiff-necked, and rebellious race,
Hypocrites with disfigured face.)
The rich, the opulent and proud,
Would often mingle with the crowd;
To them he'd say in terms severe,—
You have your consolations here.
It's easier for a camel high
To enter through a needle's eye,
Than you, who are defiled by sin,
At Heaven's gate to enter in.
For such plain dealings with the Jews,
His course I left for him to choose
For three long years; when all their ire
Seemed bursting forth like smothered fire.
I feared lest I some course should take,
They would an insurrection make."

C. CHURCHILL.

[To be continued.]

Obituary.

Died, in Alma, Alleghany Co., N. Y., July 7, 1857. Sister Rosannah Bryant, of consumption, aged sixty-six years.

Sister Bryant, with her husband, came from the East into this section of country when it was comparatively new; and now many, very many, besides a large circle of near relatives, mourn her loss and retain her in such deep and abiding memory as is eminently due to those virtuous pioneer settlers who have passed away. The writer gratefully remembers, when he used to go long distances by doubtful by-paths to preach God's word to the small companies of noble-hearted sons of toil assembled in private houses, with what christian welcomes he was sure to be greeted by Bro. and Sr. Bryant, and what refreshing seasons of divine worship he enjoyed at their dwelling. He baptized her twenty-three years ago. Her husband dying left her in the care of good and faithful children, whose happy homes have been hers ever since. She lived a zealous and devoted christian. The truths of Revelation were precious to her, and she held them in a living faith. It is interesting to remember with what earnestness she cherished the sentiment of the oneness of all God's children. Living soberly, righteously and godly she looked forward to the coming of the Lord and the resurrection as the time when all who meekly follow Christ on earth will receive eternal life. She fell asleep not in the delusive notion that she should live somewhere as a disembodied spirit while dead, but in the unfailing hope that though she died she should live again as Jesus died and rose again.

A discourse was preached by the writer from Ps. 17: 15. May the large circle of mourning friends be comforted by the promises of God in his word which reveal his eternal purpose that they who sleep in Jesus shall be raised up at the last day. John 6: 40.

JOSEPH SELDEN.

Willing, N. Y., July 17, 1857.

Died in Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 6, of scarlet fever, Ida Melissa, youngest child of Stephen B., and Louisa M. Munn, aged one year and five months.

A treasure laid away till Jesus comes.

"But Oh, our house is desolate,
Gone is its sweetest flower."

L. M. M.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

General Campmeeting at North Wilbraham!

Our brethren abroad have made a demand on us, or rather have expressed a great desire for another "Independent Campmeeting" at North Wilbraham, Mass. What shall we do? Shall we respond to their desire? I think we must, or perhaps do more harm than good. We have concluded to commence the meeting on Monday the 31st day of August next. We give this timely notice that all who wish to attend such a meeting may arrange so to do.

We call this an Independent Campmeeting, because we intend that it shall be independent of all sectarianism and partyism. We invite all to attend it who are interested in, and love the immediate appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ. We expect at this meeting a general gathering of the "waiting ones." It seems to us that it cannot be otherwise, as this will be centrally located for the friends of the cause.

Come, Brethren and Sisters, in the Lord's name, help! Make all the preparation you consistently can to attend, we beseech you, for "is there not a cause?" We feel lonely and pilgrim-like, and it will be well to meet, and greet, and cheer each other once more on the journey. Will you come from the East, and West, and North, and South, and sit down once more in the anticipation of the kingdom?

The objects of this meeting are twofold.

1. To comfort and strengthen one another.
2. To endeavor to benefit, with the truth, all who will attend the meeting, who are not yet ready for the kingdom of God.

We shall expect each Brother and Sister at this meeting, to speak and act as he, or she may think God requires, with a view to the best good of all concerned. We desire no public debates or controversy, but let each speak independently of others, and in the spirit of Christ. It is the general desire of the friends that Bro. Munger be Superintendent of this meeting, inasmuch as his acquaintance with that part of the country and long experience in these matters render him the fittest person that can be selected. We can all confide in his integrity and faithfulness. We trust he will comply. We would say in conclusion, that it will be well for our friends in all parts, where they can, to associate and prepare tents and bedding, &c., for themselves, so as not generally to be dependent, as many individual cases must necessarily be. The cloth which is used for tents can be taken by the several families which purchase it, after the meeting, and be used for domestic purposes. In some cases, tents may be more cheaply hired. We will try to get the fare on the railroad from Boston to Wilbraham reduced, if possible, and thus help our Eastern friends; and should we succeed, will give notice in season. Perhaps other brethren will do the same on other railroads.

Get tickets for Wilbraham—the Campground is near the Wilbraham depot.

And now, Brethren and Sisters, we submit this matter to you in the Lord. Act right.

EDWIN BURNHAM,
For the Brethren.

P. S. Provision for man and beast will be made as usual. E. B.

—o—

New Hampshire State Conference.

BRO. GRANT:—Being appointed at the last Conference, to fix on the time and place for holding the next State Conference, I take this method to notify the friends that the time for holding it, will probably be somewhere from the first to the middle of Oct.; but in regard to the place, it is not yet decided. A few brethren at Loudon Village have expressed a wish to have it holden with them. Shall it be there? or is there some place better calculated to convene the meeting?

Will those interested write me on the subject that I may be able to fix on the best place? Hope the friends will speak soon, that I may have time to give seasonable notice.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Aug. 17, 1857.

—o—

Grove Meetings.

Providence permitting, there will be Grove meetings as follows:

Sunday, Aug. 23d, at Bean-Hill, Chichester, N. H., about six miles east of Concord.

Sunday, Aug. 30th, at Loudon Mills.

Sunday, Sept. 6th, at Marden's Corners in Epsom.

If the weather is not pleasant on the above days, the meetings will be held in barns, houses, or halls.

All are invited to attend who have ears to hear the gospel of Jesus Christ.

JOHN G. HOOK.

—o—

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, a tent meeting will be held in Lanesville, Conn., on the line of the Housatonic R. R., 30 miles north of Bridgeport, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 16th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. All, who can, are invited to attend. Provision will be made for the accommodation of all those from other places, as far as possible. The ministering brethren are invited to attend as the way may be opened, and preach the Word as the Lord shall direct. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductor that they wish to stop at Lanesville Station. The 6.15 A. M. and 6.35 P. M. train from Bridgeport, arrive and stop at Lanesville at 10 o'clock, A. M. and 8.45 P. M.

LEVI R. TEEPLE, and L. MILLS,
For the Brethren.

—o—

Bro. Whitney appoints to preach at East Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 23d.

—o—

I have appointments to preach as follows: The 4th Sabbath in Aug. at Waterloo; the 5th at Canterbury, in the Town Hall; the 1st in Sept., at Loudon Ridge; the 2d Sabbath in Sept., at New Loudon, at the red school house, in the northeast part of the town, near Hemphill's Mills; 3d Sabbath at the Free Meeting House at East Weare Village.

T. M. PREBLE.

—o—

CONFERENCE at North Hermon, commencing Thursday, Sept. 17th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

P. S. Friends generally invited to attend.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at Portland, Sept. 13th. If supplied, please write immediately.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Canandaigua, Thursday eve'g, Aug. 20th
Bro. Reynolds, please circulate the appointment.
Syracuse, Friday eve'g and over the following Sunday, Aug. 21st and 22d
Albany, Wednesday eve'g, Aug. 26th
Chester Factories, Thursday eve'g, Aug. 27th
Jawbook, Sunday, (where Bro. Hall may appoint,) Aug. 30th

H. F. CARPENTER.

[Give Bro. Carpenter a hearty welcome. He is a worthy brother.—ED.]

—o—

Providence permitting, I will preach in Salem, Aug. 23d

M. GRANT.

—o—

Bro. J. S. White appoints to preach in Boston, Aug. 23d

—o—

Bro. Israel Damman appoints to preach at Portland, Me., the fourth Lord's day in Aug. Dover, N. H., Aug. 30th, where the Brn. may prepare.

Will some one meet him at the depot, Saturday, on the arrival of the train connected with the boat.

—o—

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren at Lovely Street, Avon, Ct., Sunday, Aug. 23d.

S. B. MUNN.

—o—

Providence permitting, I will preach at the Town Hall, in Williamsburg, Mass., Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, (Aug. 27th, 28th and 29th,) and over the following Lord's day.

Brn. and Srs. from the neighboring towns are requested to attend.

M. GRANT.

—o—

Br. E. Bellows appoints to preach at South Killingly, where Bro. Spaulding may appoint Friday evening, Aug. 28th
Axe Factory, Ct., Sunday, Aug. 30.

—o—

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Lanesville, Aug. 21st
Bridgeport, (at the old chapel,) Sunday, Aug. 23d
Northfield, Aug. 30th

C. GOODRICH.

—o—

BRO. GRANT:—If my health will admit, I propose to be with the Brethren at Kennebunkport the 22d and 23d of August.
Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29th and 30th
Roxbury, Mass., Sept. 3d
Providence, R. I., Sept. 5th and 6th

Communications from Brethren will be thankfully received at either place.

N. F. NASON.

—o—

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT NORTH WILBRAHAM, MASS., commencing August 31st, to continue one week. We expect a large and good meeting.

—o—

Bro. Thomas Smith appoints to preach at Orrington, (Advent Chapel) third Sunday in August.

—o—

CAMPMEETING.—Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at South Adams, commencing on Monday, the seventh day of September next, to continue over the following Sabbath. The believers of the Second Advent of the Lord are invited to attend. Necessary provision will be provided for man and beast. Further notice will hereafter be given. Brn. invited—R. V. Lyon, H. L. Hastings, R. E. Ladd, and M. Bachelor.

WM. F. STITT
Z. CAMPBELL,
A. CUMMINGS.

—o—

DISCUSSION.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 25, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

—o—

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

JOHN CHAPMAN,
In behalf of the Brethren.

—o—

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

—o—

Bro. Boutell will preach in Salem the first Sabbath in September. TEMPLE HARDY.

—o—

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach At South Hope Saturday 8th, Sunday, Aug. 22d and 23d. Will be at Camden by the first Friday boat, 21st, from Bangor.

—o—

The Lord will, Bro. R. E. Ladd will preach in Thorndike the 3d Sunday in August.

—o—

The Lord will, Bro. A. M. Higgins will preach in Springfield the 3d Sunday in August.

—o—

BRO. GRANT:—Elder Barns, with whom I was to have a discussion, commencing on the 18th of Aug., has been called to give up an excellent wife to the cold embrace of death. From a regard to his feelings and to suit his convenience in the circumstances, we have agreed to defer the commencement of the discussion for one week, which will bring it to the 25th of Aug. instead of the 18th. Will you please change the notice accordingly.

Yours for the truth, L. P. JUDSON.

Northfield, Ohio, July 27, '57.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

To Correspondents.

A. M. Stark—Money received. We have received the letter directed to Bro. P.

B. Wheelock—All right.

Bro. Preble—We have received some of your books.

Business.

THE RECEIPTS.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

J. Gregory 143, D L. Moulton 134, S. C. Berry 130, W. Berry 130, M. A. Hodgson 130, H. McCullock 106, H. Hopkins 128, J. B. Potter 123, J. Clough 130, A. Youngman 104, J. H. Stevens 114, J. Gray 104, S. Webster 154, S. Crockett 130, C. Perry 130, D. T. Cooper 89, C. E. Mack 130, B. Wheelock 154, R. Burrell 130, W. A. Marsh 104, $1 each.

B. L. Clark 153, R. N. Stetson 153, H. Dixon 130, $2 each.

S. Griswold 115, 50 cents; C. A. Warner 133, $3; J. Foster, postage, 26 cents; Mrs. Rogers 117, 50 cents.

FOR THE POOR.—J. Foster, 74 cents.

FOR BOOKS.—W. Hunt, $1; S. Crockett, 25 cts.

BOOKS SENT.—W. Hunt, P. M., S. Cook.

Bro. A. N. Seymour's P. O. address is Reading, Hillsdale Co., N. Y.

B. P. Manning's P. O. address is Oil Mill Village, N. H.

Bro. Jonas Merriam's P. O. address is Concord, N. H.

Bro. Walter Pratt's P. O. address is Mendon, Adams Co., Ill.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6 00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE.—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe, by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single—or $3 per hundred—Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Right Counseth—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE ATONEMENT.

TO A SISTER.

On Calvary's deeply blood-stained height,
A towering cross is reared;
And lo! the clouds are robed in night,
The sun has disappeared.

The Roman soldiers boldly stand
Anear the accursed tree;
While Jesus prays for that vile band,
Sinner, he prays for thee.

He feebly bows his dying head
Beneath the chastening rod,
And lo! a purple stream doth flow,—
It is "the blood of God!"

No human sacrifice is there,
It is the annointed ONE;
'Twas Christ, the "word made flesh," who said,
"Father, thy will be done!"

Jesus, all that did constitute
The Savior we adore,
Then died, yet rose triumphantly,
To live forevermore.

Wilt thou this precious truth deny?
Wilt thou his words forget?
"O touch me not, woman, for I
Have not ascended yet.

What, angels! were ye slumb'ring when
The conquering Spirit fled,
And left a "mortal body" then,
Inactive, cold, and dead?

Were ye asleep? surely, methinks,
Vast multitudes should come,
And bear a spirit far away,
To its eternal home.

Away, thou all blasphemous thought,
Behold a Savior slain!
"Lo! I am he that once was dead,
But now I live—to reign."

Angels, ye knew your stations well;
And lo! your wings do wave,
Where the Redeemer calmly sleeps
Unconscious in the grave.

Had "not ascended?" No; and ye
Are sent, 'mid Nature's gloom,
By God, and gladly ye obey,
To guard the Savior's tomb.

MARIA.

Danville, C. E.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

TO BRO. S. DWIGHT.

Wilt thou share in Christ's suff'rings, and scorn to repine,
To claim the sweet promise—"Fear not thou art mine?"
Through great tribulation wilt thou never complain,
To wash thy robes white, in the blood of the Lamb?
Canst thou say "though he slay me, I'm trustingly thine,
Though the clustering fruit is cut off from the vine,
The meat from the field, and the herd from the stall,"
Say, canst thou still joy and rejoice through it all?
Is there any reserve in that warm heart of thine,
Of what he has given, thou would'st not resign?
Hast thou brought as an off'ring, the flower of the flock,
The pride of the garden, hast thou refused not?
Every weight laid aside, through the dear Savior's grace,
Each darling sin crucified, strong for the race?
Then lift up thy head, for the Kingdom is thine,
The promise is due thee—"Fear not! thou art mine!"

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Charlemont.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Faith.

The christian is especially favored of God, in the power that is given him to believe in the promises, so that he shall be always victorious in whatever battle he may engage. As we wrestle against principalities, and powers, and against spiritual wickedness in high places, we need faith in God, that our labor shall not be in vain. In these days of unbelief, when professors of religion are not all possessors, and so little of the baptism of the Holy Ghost is experienced by a majority of nominal christians, there is need that those who profess to love God indeed should have faith, simple—yet strong, unyielding; "a faith that laughs at impossibilities, and cries it shall be done."

How easy it is to have faith in God. Why, it is only taking God at his word, believing he will do, simply because he says he will. No matter if the unbelief of the ungodly tells the christian, "it is all nonsense for you to talk about religion," Faith tells him 'tis not in vain; and it not only tells this on the strength of the promises of God, but it shows him how sure they are by its effects. Were the christian obliged to believe without experiencing any result of his faith, there would be some chance for him to yield; but glory to God, he does not stop here; he can point to effects as the tangible evidence, that when he says, God does at this moment bless my soul—God does now convict the sinner, he receives just what he asks for. He may, it is true, be obliged in some instances to cling to the naked promise without seeing the effect of this faith, but he is not left entirely without evidence; no! for he has the "witness in himself" that his prayer is answered, so that he may go to the sinner for whom he has prayed, and say, although he may be met with a laugh, "you are convicted of sin."

The days, blessed be God, of apostolic faith have not "all passed away." It is the privilege of the child of God now, through faith, to "quench the violence of the fire, escape the edge of the sword out of weakness be made strong," to subdue and triumph over the enemy; to see eternity and the joys of Heaven as realities, although surrounded by the mist and fog of sin. The days, we say again, of apostolic faith are not all in the past. Were sinners converted then by scores? they can be now. Did the faith of the apostles bring down the promised baptism of the Holy Ghost? Faith can do the same now; "for all things are possible to him that believeth."

If this is Faith and its effects, then any thing short of it is sin; for the same power will move the arm that moves the world now, that has moved it before. Israel's God still is ready to undertake for those who trust his word, and will lead them on to certain VICTORY. If this is faith, then he who has it in exercise will be active in the work. "Can a man take up fire and not be burned?" Neither can a man have faith without setting his whole religious machinery at work to "turn the world upside down." Glory to God, the devil may oppose, the wicked may revile, yet God through his people will work.

Brethren and sisters, "have faith in God." Stand firmly grasping his promises with faith's iron grasp, and, though you wrestle for the blessing, you can say with Wesley,—

"Lame as I am, I take the prey,
Hell, earth, and sin, with ease o'ercome;
I leap for joy, pursue my way,
And as a bounding hart fly home."

HO TIS.

For the Crisis.

We'll Meet Again.

Yes, we will meet again. What! can we meet again? Yes, it is true. Father, mother, brother and sister, dearly loved and cherished friends may part. That tie that binds true hearts together may be severed. It may be rent asunder in a moment, and those hearts, which have been twining closer and closer together for years, may be disunited. When we cast a glance around us, and our eye rests upon those that we dearly love; those whose society throws a gleam of sunshine upon our pathway, and fills our hearts with joy and gladness; when we see the cheerful smile wreathing that countenance that bespeaks life and animation, and which is like a sudden sunshine, awakening sacred delight in the mind; when we see the rosy tint of health upon the cheek, and activity and hope in every motion; when we see those mild, bright eyes resting so affectionately upon us, and hear that gentle voice speaking in tones of affection and kindness, we wonder, and the inquiry arises,—can all these beauties pass away?

We look again. Where are they? The places that knew them, now know them no more. Ah! they are gone. That cheerful and healthful countenance is now marked by the pallor of death; that eye which once beamed with heavenly lustre is now closed in death. We pause, we look, we wonder. Has that eye forever closed upon me? Can I never more behold its mild beamings? Can I never more listen to the sweet and heavenly strains that fell from those lips? Is that voice forever hushed in death? Will we never meet again?

Yes, we will meet again. The cold, damp prison-house cannot long retain its victim. There is a power greater than that. There is one who has burst its bands and come forth, taking possession of its keys, who will shortly unlock the tomb and bid the prisoners come home. When the last trumpet rends the tomb, that friend will hear its voice, and arise from slumber. But why? to tread this dreary earth as before, where sickness and sorrow are its unwelcome visitants, and sin reigns triumphant? Oh no. The earth will then be robed in beauty. There will be no more blight, no more storms, no more conflicting emotions; but from this earth which has been so long polluted by sin, which is the receptacle of all that is evil and unholy, there will spring up the new earth in Eden's first bloom. Then that countenance will bloom in immortal beauty; that eye will never lose its lustre, but will glisten as the stars forever and ever. Smiles will ever wreathe that brow, and that voice will ever be heard in singing praises to its Maker. Sin will no more abound. There those that meet will never part again. Death hath no more power over them. Oh! what raptures of joy will swell from the assembled thousands of earth's parted friends, who have met to part no more. There, around the throne of Jesus, will meet all those who sought for glory, honor and immortality, by a patient continuance in well-doing.

Reader, will you be there? Are you striving to live a life of holiness? Have you taken the yoke of Jesus upon you and learned of Him who is meek and holy of heart? Have you confessed his name before a world lying in wickedness? Oh! if not, lay your all at Jesus' feet; love him and serve him. Be not conformed to this world. Let not the vanities and follies of earth take your affections, but place them upon the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world. Though thy sins be as scarlet, he will make them white as snow: though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. Come, love him with all thy heart. Confess his name, and thou shalt have a glorious inheritance in that world of light. Soon he will call his sheep from wandering, and thou shalt meet that friend who so long has been slumbering in dust, and enjoy those beauties that are in reserve for the good.

M. A. MOORE.

Conesus, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Seventh Chapter of Romans.

BRO. GRANT:—I think you or some other brother could give "meat in due season" to some, by giving a few words of comment upon this chapter. It seems to be imperfectly understood by the majority of those with whom I converse concerning it. Some suppose it refers to the Christian under the gospel, and adduce as proof, the fact that the apostle uses the present tense, as, "I am carnal," &c., which tense they think he would not use if he designed to represent his state while under the law, or that of the sinner. They argue, also, that such an expression as, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man," can be no other than the language of the Christian.

On the contrary; if each of the following passages, and others of like import, refer to the Christian under the gospel, I am unable to reconcile them. For instance; Paul says, in the 14th verse of this chapter,—"I am carnal, sold under sin." And in 23d verse he represents himself as being brought "into captivity to the law of sin," &c., and then in the 8th chapter, 2d verse, he says, "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

Query.—How can an individual be a captive under a law, and be free from that law, at one and the same time?

Again,—in the 19th verse of this 7th chapter he says,—"For the good that I would, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do." But in 1 Cor. 9: 27, he says, "I keep my body, and bring it into subjection." Now, if both these texts apply to the Christian, in what sense does he bring his body into subjection, while he is continually doing that which he knows to be absolutely wrong?

In another place the christian is represented as "overcoming the world," but in this chapter he seems to be continually overcome by it, if it applies to him. I might give other examples, but if I am understood, these are sufficient. If any brother should feel disposed to give a few words of explanation it might not be time spent in vain.

HIRAM.

Trescott, Me., July 23, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Short Sermon.

MATT. 16: 24.

"Then said Jesus unto his disciples, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."

Christ is our guide-board, not with letters effaced, but with the name and direction all legibly written; and not only does he point the way but himself walks therein, saying to us, "Come! follow me!" He is the captain of our salvation, and does not, like some generals, sit in the tent with spy-glass in hand, but himself heads the army.

Of what must we deny ourselves? We must not give the reign to any unholy inclination; must bridle, curb, and subdue every carnal passion; must not eat or drink to gratify a vitiated appetite. 1 Cor. 10: 31,—"Whether, therefore, ye eat, or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God." We must not love the world. "If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him."

How can we tell whether we love the world?

I. When we will let the indigent suffer for food or apparel, and at the same time have an abundance; and see their children clad in the oft repaired garment, our own clothed and decked, and have frequent change of garment; and the poor child's parents, though industrious and prudent, can not meet in congregation for the want of wholesome garb; while our family are eating like epicures, theirs are pinching for the plainest sustenance.

II. When we will let men perish in unbelief and ignorance because the truth is not in their hearing. The most of professed christians know nothing about self-denial. For the sake of saving others, they have never deprived themselves of one meal, or one night's rest, nor one of life's comforts. When they can spare something just as well as not, and meet all their own cherished ends, they will bestow a few mites, and perhaps make out ten or fifteen dollars in the course of the year, and then wonder why there is no more interest in meetings, and why there is no more good done, and why the minister is so dull; when the poor soul has been overtaxed, both in body and mind, all the weary week, for the sake of keeping soul and body together, and Sunday morn goes to his or her appointment, "like the wounded snake who drags his slow length along." For, in spite of faith and zeal, ministers will, like other folks, realize their mortality and infirmity. But the servant is not above his Lord.

We must crucify the love of dress. In 1 Tim. 2: and 1 Pet. 3: is given the rule for this important matter, in unequivocal language; yet the mass of women who profess faith in the Book, openly and repeatedly transgress it plainest requirements when it comes in contact with their love of show and vanity. And they also adorn their daughter in God-forbidden ornaments, and yet flatter themselves that the Lawgiver will accept of them in the great day approaching, and say to them,—"Well done!"

What A. Judson experienced in Maulmein among the Karens has been felt in miniature by many a Gospel minister. The multitudinous houses of ill-fame—those breathing-holes of the infernal regions, are mostly peopled by those who love showy garments, and having no laudable means to obtain them, they sell themselves to sin, and with their associates become that polluting, incurable leprosy of the earth.

You professed christian women, by adorning yourselves in garbs of gaiety, have made an ordinary, plain dress disreputable, and its owner despicable: and for this very reason many of you have mourned over a fallen sister or daughter. May all of you see your error, and by repentance find forgiveness.

We must deny the reins to that most unruly member, the tongue. Please read James 3d chapter. We are not to talebear; (Lev. 19: 16,) nor be whisperers; (Prov. 16: 28,) nor use filthy words; (1 Cor. 15: 33) nor corrupt comunications; (Eph. 9: 29,) nor indulge in vain bablings which eat as doth a canker; (12 Tim. 2: 16–17,) this disease has destroyed many a promising child. Now, my brother, or my sister, when the old man is aroused, and you are aching to express your burning indignation, then open the valve which, while it opens communication with heaven shuts it against cursing, gives time for that volcano within to be extinguished without either eruption or earthquake, and remember the crucified One said, deny thyself—take up thy cross, and FOLLOW ME.

MARY A. SEYMOUR.

Cambria, Mich., Aug. 2, '57.

From Bro. Wm. Allen.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS of like precious faith scattered over this vast creation, who are groaning with me for deliverance, lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh. He that is to come will come. Although the world, and backslidden Adventists may say, not only in words but in their hearts, "my Lord delayeth his coming," let us gird on the armor tighter, and run like one of old with our fingers in our ears, crying—"Life! life! eternal life!"

Never did we live in a time when we needed more of the grace of God to keep us on the track to the everlasting kingdom of God, than we do at the present time. For one I never felt more like a pilgrim and stranger. Especially since my companion died, have I felt "lonely and weary." She looked for the same "blessed hope;" but she now sleeps in Jesus. She will come again from the land of the enemy. She will burst the tomb, and come forth shouting, "Victory! Victory!" over death and the grave. What a glorious hope is ours! I am glad that Jesus died and rose again, taking the keys of death with him. He can open and no man shut again.

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day!"

My heart aches when I see the state of things in our ranks, especially as they are here, where was once a loving band, united, and strong in the Lord, as many of our brethren very well know. We have no preaching. A few of us meet together half a day on Sunday, to comfort and exhort one another. I went to Bristol last Sunday to get some crumbs from Bro. Fox, and got them, and went on my way rejoicing. I find here and there traaveler, that has not given up, but can wield the sword of the Spirit.

I see Bro. Munger has skipped over us in his late appointments. Perhaps he thinks he can do us no good. I know we are very low, but the physician ought not to leave his patient as long as there is life. Yours, in hope of seeing a better day.

WM. ALLEN.

New Britain, Ct.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

ZION IN CAPTIVITY.

PSALM CXXXVII.

Beside the rivers of Babylon,
There we sat down in sorrow lone,
And wept when we remembered Zion,
In desolation left alone.

Beside dark Babel's flowing river,
Our harps upon the willows hung;
We mourned as mourns the captive ever,
Our songs of gladness left unsung.

But they who into bondage led us,
Required of us glad joy and mirth;
Alas! forgot they how we sorrowed,
For Zion fair that gave us birth?

How shall we sing the songs of Zion
Until our days of grief be o'er?
How can we chant those lays to strangers
We sweetly sang in days of yore?

Thou art in ruins now, O Zion!
But still with love I cherish thee;
For sweet to us the mem'ry still,
When in thy streets we walked so free.

But should I thee no more remember,
O then thou'lt let my speech depart!
Then too, let my right hand be withered,
And still and pulseless be this heart.

O Lord! remember us in bondage,
Propitious smile upon thy land;
Haste! then, the fall of Babel's daughter,
And free again our captive band!

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

Vernon, Vt.

Choice Selections.

The Upas Tree.

Most people have heard of the celebrated Grotto del Cane in the vicinity of Naples; a grotto so called because dogs are the animals usually selected to show by their suffering and death how dangerous it is. The Grotto del Cane may be entered by a grown-up human individual with impunity, because the poisonous gas, on which its energy depends, is so heavy that it does not rise sufficiently high to be breathed, though a dog's nose and mouth being below the level of the poisonous emanation, the animal soon dies. The poison valley of Java is something like the Grotto del Cane on a gigantic scale. There is a difference, however, between the two as regards the kind of poisonous gas contained in each. That of the Grotto del Cane is carbonic acid gas—the same gas which is evolved from burning charcoal, from ginger beer and soda water, champagne cider, and brewers' vats; but the poisonous air of the Java valley must contain, from the description we now have of it, other gases than the carbonic acid. Most probably the gas to which its energy is due to hydro-sulphuric acid, or sulphureted hydrogen; but the chemical reader shall judge for himself from the description of Mr. Alexander Loudon, who visited the pestilential spot in July, 1830. . . . Mr. Loudon heard for the first time of the poison valley, called by the natives "Gueva Upas," July 3, 1830, during a walk one morning with a native chief, who told him there was a valley only three miles from Batum, which no person could enter without forfeiting his life; and that the bottom of the place was covered with the skeletons of birds, and beasts, and human beings. Mr. Loudon having communicated this intelligence to some of the Dutch authorities, it was agreed that a party of exploration should be made up, and the poison valley should be visited. "I had heard," says Mr. Loudon, "that a lake existed on the summit of one of the mountains, and that it was dangerous to approach very near the banks of this lake; but of the poison valley I had never heard before; the accounts of it now were so very extraordinary that I did not believe them."

Early on the 4th of July, 1830, Mr. Loudon and his fellow-excursionists set out on their exploration. The valley, as correctly stated by the natives, was only three miles from Batum. So far was there from being an absence of vegetation in its vicinity, as had been anticipated, that a Daendels—a gentleman in the Dutch service—ordered a path to be made through the dense brushwood, to facilitate the progress of the explorers. Mr. Loudon took with him two dogs and some fowls, as subjects of experiment. Arriving at the foot of the mountain, they left their horses, and scrambled up the mountain side, holding on for security by the branches of trees. The explorers were very much fatigued before they got up, the path being very steep and slippery. When within a few yards of the edge of the valley, a sickening, nauseous, suffocating smell was experienced; but no sooner did Mr. Loudon and his companions come close to the place than the smell ceased. Mr. Loudon shall now speak a few words for himself: "We were lost in astonishment," he relates, "at the awful scene below us. The valley was an oval excavation, about half a mile in circumference—its depth from thirty to thirty-five feet. The bottom quite flat; no vegetation—not even a blade of grass—but abundance of stones, like river-stones in appearance, and covered thickly with skeletons of human beings, tigers, pigs, deer, pea-cocks, and a great variety of other birds and animals. . . . One adventurous person proposed to enter the valley—a proposal, however, which Mr. Loudon considerately declined, and which the proposer himself did not carry into practice. All managed, however, by exercising great care, to descend within eighteen feet of the bottom. Still no difficulty of breathing was experienced; only a sickly, nauseous smell. The deadly character of the emanations of the valley may be judged of from the result of certain painful experiments made. A dog was fastened to the end of a bamboo, eighteen feet long, and sent in. Some members of the party had stop-watches, by which the exact duration of life in the valley was determined. In ten seconds the animal fell on his back, overcome by the poisonous gas; he neither barked nor moved his limbs, but continued breathing for about eighteen minutes. The second dog broke loose from the bamboo, and walked in of his own accord to the spot where the other dog was lying. He then stood quite still for ten seconds, when he fell on his back, and only continued to breathe for seven minutes.

The first of the fowls was now thrown in; it died in a minute and a half. A second fowl was dead before touching the ground. On the side of the valley, opposite to where Mr. Loudon stood, he saw the skeleton of a human being bleached quite white, and lying on a large stone. The skeleton was lying on its back, with the right hand under the head. . . . Till fairly into the valley, a stranger would not be made aware of the character of the spot; and, once in, there is no return.

It is a pity that Mr. Loudon, when he was about it, did not procure a bottle-full of the gas which pervades this poisonous locality. Had he done so, analysis might have settled the nature of it. The chemical reader, however, will be convinced, from various points of the description, that sulphureted hydrogen, if not the sole gaseous poison there, must be a constituent of it to a very large degree. And a very terrible poison it is, too. Some years ago a curious experiment was made with it at the Veterinary College of Lyons. The object proposed was to determine whether a horse could be killed with it by mere absorption through the skin. For this purpose the poor animal was inclosed, all but the head, in an india-rubber bag, containing air mixed with twelve per cent. of sulphureted hydrogen gas. The conditions of the experiment of course permitted the horse to breathe atmospheric air; nevertheless he died. This is the gas which accumulates in grave-yards, cesspools, and other places where animal matter is collected. Accidents originating with it have been particularly frequent at Paris, where the conditions are such that large amounts of animal matter accumulate, and are allowed to remain for considerable periods in domestic establishments. Surely all who are interested in the sanitary welfare of the community ought to be stirred up by the reflection, that through our want of caution we are often allowing the very gases that constitute the destructive properties of the upas valley, to do their deadly work upon the population in the midst of us.—[Ladies' Repository.

The Girl that never told a Lie.

A little girl once came into the house and told her mother something which was very improbable. Those who were sitting in the room with her mother, did not believe her, for they did not know the character of the little girl. But the mother replied at once, "I have no doubt that it is true, for I never knew my daughter to tell a lie." Is there not something noble in having such a character as this? Must not that little girl have felt happy in the consciousness of thus possessing her mother's entire confidence? Oh, how different must have been her feelings from those of the child whose word cannot be believed, and who is regarded by every one with suspicion! Shame, shame on the child who has not magnanimity enough to tell the truth.

The Cross of Christ.

Christ's cross is the christ-cross of all our happiness; it enriches our darkness with light; it restoreth the troubled soul to rest; it bringeth strangers to God's acquaintance; it maketh remote foreigners near neighbors; it cutteth off discord; concludeth a league of everlasting peace; and is the bounteous author of all good.

QUARLES.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Office of Publication, over George T. Adam's Store.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

Number 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1857. WHOLE NO. 104. VOL. V. NO. 26.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

A GEM.

Forgive thy foes; nor that alone—
Their evil deeds with good repay;
Fill those with joy who leave thee none,
And kiss the hand upraised to slay.

So does the fragrant sandal bow
In meek forgiveness to its doom;
And o'er the axe at every blow
Sheds in abundance rich perfume.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Love of God.

Unsearchable! Immeasurable! Boundless! Eternal love! Love which passeth knowledge,—infinite as its Source! And what has this love wrought? From the beginning, man has been its elected beneficiary. The bliss of Eden, participated by Adam and Eve, was the love of God encircling them; breathing from every flower—beaming from every gem—warbling from bird and rivulet—speaking in the brilliance of the firmament—glowing in the effulgence of the virgin days,—everywhere the echoes of their Eden whispered—God is love.

Yes, the love of God has ever been following the course of man; or rather, it has been leading him. Though terribly has he fallen, when compared with his primitive estate, the hand of love has been extended to save and uplift him. And now, though wayward still, and forgetful of infinite mercy, every heart experiences the operations of a mighty power, winning and wooing it back to purity and faith.

And was it not love, matchless love! which sent from the bosom of his Father the Blessed Yaveh—the promised One from the foundation of the world? O who can understand the depths of that affection which sacrificed the Heir of Heaven—the Eternal Son, to redeem by his agony and life-blood, a race of God-forgetting, ungrateful sinners! Truly, it passeth knowledge!

Jehovah beheld the corruption of earth. Justice wore a threatening aspect. Hope wept. Mercy tremblingly lingered. Shall they perish? No! Love conquered. "He saw there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor; therefore his arm brought salvation." Yea, He "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, . . . that the world through him might be saved!"

The suffering One—the man of sorrows has been to earth and fulfilled his mission of humiliation. Man, wretched and undone, through him has hope, and joy, and peace. The morning-star of his spirit has arisen, scattering the murky shades of doubt and despair. His dungeon of fear is illuminated by the angel-presence of Hope—twin-sister of Love. Faith seizes the heavenly future, and waits with throbbing heart the consummation of Love's stupendous plan, in the coming kingdom and glory of the once crucified but now exalted King—the Prince of Peace—who is to come, completing the mission of love, perfecting earth anew, disinthralling man from death, exterminating the power of evil, and bringing into an eternal oneness with himself and the Father, those for whom he died, and who have trusted in his Name. This is the blessed love of God! Have we any share in it? M. A. G.

For the Crisis.

"Can't Write."

How do you know? Have you ever made a trial? "O yes, I have often written articles for a friend's Album, the Academical Journal, and our village Lyceum; but I can't write for the 'Crisis,' somehow." So says young Twenty-One. Can't write? Indeed! Why, how long is it since I received that long, expressive' well word-chosen epistle from you? "But that was a—well, a business letter." Then you can write nothing but "business" letters, eh? Very well; then is it not your "business" to write for the edification and comfort of some lone, way-faring pilgrim? Indeed it is, if you love Jesus. Is not any thing in which you take a deep interest as much your "business" as any one's? Probably the Lyceum, &c. &c., more particularly interests you; but, sister, is that right? O, let nothing appear more interesting than the building up of one another in their most holy faith. Let the Lyceum and such things as you mention be but secondary in your estimation.

Come, now, just try hard. Let us hear from you, so that we may know you are alive. How do you know but the "old contributors" are blind, or crazy, or are just going to be? Why, should that be the case, what would become of the "Crisis?" Just picture to your imagination the fatal consequences! Our wearied Brother Editor, if not blind, and crazy, too, would be forced to write all himself or borrow poisonous articles from his neighbors. Otherwise our highly-valued paper will be found among the missing. Now, youthful brother and sister, just make one effort at writing and let our Editor judge whether your composition is worthy publication or not. It will improve your mind at least, and how do you know it "can do no one good?" You've enough to occupy any steel pen; so just go about it. Haste! Time flies swiftly! God seeth you! MARIA.

Danville, C. E.

For the Crisis.

What hath God Wrought?

This, my brethren and sisters, is a question worthy of our most profound and humble consideration. And profitably may we reflect upon his creative power, wisdom and goodness displayed in the things which do appear; and yet, perhaps, more profitably upon his goodness and benevolent designs toward the children of men, and what he hath wrought for his people in answer to prayer. When we look at their early history we find that in a miraculous manner God wrought for them in answer to faith and prayer. And have not our hearts often burned within us with gratitude to God, and we have felt to take courage while pursuing their history and contemplating God's care and goodness toward them? Surely they have. But do we need to go back to past ages for a demonstration of God's tender compassion and goodness? I tell you nay. But, as individuals, have we not in our pilgrimage erected our pillars to perpetuate the remembrance of what God hath wrought for us in answer to prayer? I think we have; and how oft do we with pleasure and gratitude call to remembrance those times, when God granted us deliverance and consolation. "Oh! that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

It is in this (that God answers prayer) that we have strong consolation to lay hold of the hope set before us. Were it not for this, where would be the ground of our hope? where our consolation and our rest in this evil time, while the trials, cares and burdens of life, with the influences and iniquity which surround us, weigh heavily upon us? But—"we which believe do enter into rest." In the midst of this tumultuous time, while all combinations and associations are being shaken, he, whose faith is in God, who wears the yoke of Christ, finds rest as the fruit of obedience, and in answer to faith and prayer. And as God has made us to be helps to each other to the "building up on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost," it does appear to me that it would be useful, to cheer the heart and strengthen the faith of each other, for those who can, to give a clear account of special answer to prayer; (i. e., in an extraordinary manner,) to do it humbly to the praise of God and the comfort of his children, through the columns of the Crisis. I was glad to read that in the Crisis of July 29th, and hope to read many more, for I love them. S.

For the Crisis.

THE NEW JERUSALEM.

There is a city for the just
Who now are sleeping in the dust;
An "house" of "many mansions" fair,
Which Christ ascended to prepare.

This city bright is now above,
Where dwells the holy Lord of love;
But down to earth it will descend,
When Gentile times shall have an end.

Jerusalem! immortal name!
Let saints proclaim thy glorious fame;
Thy beauties rare, thy vast extent,
Invite an angel's measurement.

Jerusalem! we wait for thee,
We long thy pearly gates to see;
We long to walk thy streets of gold,
And bask in glory now untold.

Jerusalem! O, quickly come!
We long for our unending home;
We long to dwell in thy clear light,
Where glory shall dispel the night.

Jerusalem! thou city fair,
No splendor can with thine compare;
To earth descend, and here remain,
While Christ, our holy King, shall reign.

W. SHELDON.

Vermilion, M. T.

For the Crisis.

"Let not your Heart be Troubled."

These are the words of Jesus. What power and yet what sweet simplicity is contained in them. How expressive of feeling. What tenderness and love is embodied in these few words. Who has not felt the softening and enlivening influence of the spirit that is contained in them? When the heart is troubled, when perplexed and wearied with the cares and trials of life, when the heart in its sadness would fain exclaim, O that I could rest, and be at peace; then, when all earthly comfort is of no avail, when the heart is like the troubled waves of the sea, and needeth only the still small voice, speaking peace to its angry and boisterous waves, to lull them into a gentle and quiet slumber,—the words of Jesus fall touchingly and sweetly on the heart;—"Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

O, Christian! let not your heart be troubled. Fear not, neither be dismayed; for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom. Although the trials, vexations, and sorrows of life may roll mountain high upon you, yet, in the midst of these sorrowing scenes, Jesus says, "let not your heart be troubled." Thou who hast long wandered a pilgrim and stranger on the earth, waiting for the return of your absent Elder Brother, art thou weary of his so long delay? Is thy heart faint, and thy soul disquieted within thee? O, be not troubled. He has gone to prepare a place for you. Soon he will return, and receive you unto himself, where thou canst reign with him forever in those mansions full of glory. M. A. MOORE.

Conesus, N. Y.

BRO. GRANT:—Bro. Ladd's remarks in reference to the campmeeting at Wilbraham, South Adams, moved me to say a word on the subject. My sympathies are with the Campmeeting at W——, and I mean to be there and hope it will be a grand rally of the saints; but still, I feel for the people in the region of Adams on Cheshire. There can but a few go from that region to Wilbraham, and they might save themselves labor and expense by so doing, but shall nothing be done for the unconverted at home? I hope some will try to comply with the wish of the brethren who in their zeal for God and truth, and love to the souls of men, have found it in their hearts to appoint a meeting at South Adams. I know I shall not offend Bro. Ladd in so writing. I love the whole family. I go to Wilbraham to feast upon the truth flowing from the lips of others, as there will be laborers enough there without me. I go to South Adams to labor. My heart says peace be with all those that are in sympathy with God and truth. The Master will soon be here. Let us all be at our post. M. BATCHELOR.

For the Crisis.

The Types; And the Harvest of the World.

(Concluded.)

6. The next regular feast in succession was the feast of trumpets, kept on the first day of the seventh month, Tisri. It was called a "Sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets; an holy convocation." This was commemorative of creation, "when the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy." It was a type of the proclamation of the gospel. "Cry aloud," says Isaiah, "spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions; the house of Jacob their sins." "The priests shall blow with the trumpets . . . . "in the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months. Ye shall blow with the trumpets over your burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings, that they may be to you for a memorial before your God. I am the Lord, your God." Num. 10: 10. "David brought up the Ark of God, (to Jerusalem) with gladness . . . with shouting and sound of the trumpet." The burnt-offering represented Jesus as slain without the camp, and burnt in the furnace of his Father's wrath; not only a willing, consenting, but a voluntary offerer of himself, choosing to become a propitiation "for the sins of the world." In agony he glorified his Father, by meek submission and perfect obedience to all his requirements; and all this, that we, his ungrateful abusors, might escape merited vengeance. This feast probably reached its antitype when the Holy Spirit descended the second time, on the apostles and all their "company;" (Acts. 4: 23–33,) when "the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and spake the word of God with boldness. And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they held all things common. And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurruction of the Lord Jesus; aud great grace was upon them all."

As this feast was a memorial of creation, we expect to find something expressive of the same when it reaches its substitute; and in this we are not disappointed. After Peter and John had been liberated from prison and persecution, "they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them. And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is." This, probably, was on the first day of the seventh month, the fourth new moon after Pentecost, when the proclamation of the gospel took the place of the silver trumpets; for here, the apostles and their companions began to "lift up their voice like a trumpet." They blew the gospel trumpet over his death and resurrection, by preaching Christ crucified, as our whole burnt-offering, and risen again as the sacrifice of our peace-offering. This feast also was kept for one day only, and must represent the gospel-day till "the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door." The ministers of Christ, ever since the days of the apostles, have been sounding this trumpet, determined to know and preach nothing (as a way of escape for sinners) "but Jesus Christ and him crucified."

The foregoing feasts I regard as chronologically fulfilled, having reached their antitypes on the same day of their appointment, with the exception of the Sabbath; the seventh having been superseded by the first day of the week, which is substituted as a memorial of the resurrection of Christ, and to continue as a holy day, till swallowed up in the great Jubilee Sabbath at the day of Judgment; and all their substitutes will reach to the Harvest of the world, when the sickle will be thrust in, and the earth be "reaped."

7. The next great solemnity under the law was the day of atonement, which was very solemnly observed on the tenth day of the seventh month. It was a memorial of sin and its deserts; and all were required to humble themselves, to afflict their souls with fasting, humiliation and penitence, from the ninth at even, to the tenth at even. In the sacrificial observances of this fast of expiation, we discern Jesus, appointed by the Father and eminently qualified to make atonement for the sins of the whole world, stripped of his robes of light and majesty, and clothed in a pure but humble manhood, standing at one and the same time the God-honoring and sin-atoning sacrifice, and the devoted, laborious High Priest, diligently pursuing his astonishing work. "The Lord laid on him the iniquities of us all;" and as our scape-goat he bears them all away "into a land not inhabited." Jesus is "led up," or "driven into the wilderness" by the Holy Spirit, "to be tempted of the devil. And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he afterwards hungered." We all know that entire abstinence from food for one day is painful; and how much would pain increase each succeeding day till the fortieth was attained? And "he was with the wild beasts of the desert, harrassed and tempted by Satan." Probably the light of his Father's countenance was withdrawn, and he had a sense of his frown and wrath against him, as our sin-offering. Satan's malignity is implacable, though he must have been sure of defeat.

My soul! contemplate the spotless One, as led away into a solitary desert, and left in darkness and distress, deprived of the vision and comforting smile of his Father; assaulted with the most horrid suggestions of the devil; suffering with cold and hunger; wrestling in prayer; struggling against the blasphemous enticements of the tempter; enduring untold sorrow and anguish, due only to the sinner. Unsuccessful in his first attempt, he (Satan) makes a second effort to seduce him, and with daring outrage proposes presumption. Again he is foiled with the sword of the Spirit. Still unblanched, Satan, with insufferable insolence, offers the glory of "all the kingdoms of the world" as a price for innocence. This was not to be borne, and with a word he gave him a most deadly thrust, saying, "get thee hence, Satan; for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Here the devil was forced to fall under the irresistible hand of the mighty Conqueror. After gathering himself up, he quit the field in shame and confusion. "And behold, angels came and ministered unto Him." Thus this sinless victim came out of the furnace, unscathed, having borne our sins away into "the land of forgetfulness." "He became sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." "For in that he suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted. And "in all points was he tempted, like as we are, yet without sin." O gratitude—how cold the word, for love so infinite, so undeserved, so amazing as this!

As our slain-goat, Jesus atones for all our sins, dying "for our offences," and rising again "for our justification;" "and having made peace through the blood of the cross, by him to reconcile all things to himself." This solemnity also being observed but one day, must represent the whole atoning day of salvation—from the day in which he was washed, and anointed God's High Priest, to the day when he shall leave the mercy-seat; though the morning of its antitype broke more fully upon the world when he entered "the most holy place," which will terminate when he shall appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation. He went into the celestial oracle, "not by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood. He entered in once into the Holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." As our Advocate he appears to plead for us, having put on his robes of glory, to offer the pure incense of intercession before the throne of God. Nothing but his blood can render anything we do acceptable to God. We are a company of miserable sinners, saved only by grace, daily contracting pollution, and as often requiring remission; and it becomes us to mourn over our transgressions as the cause of all his suffering. In this antitypical day of expiation, we see him, as Daniel did, finishing transgressions, and making an end of sins; making reconciliation for iniquity, and bringing in "everlasting righteousness" for a whole elect world. As this feast did not reach the morning of its antitype, chronologically, I think we may expect it will terminate on the day of its observance. I regard the prophecies as very nearly fulfilled, especially the typicals, and believe the time will very soon come when "the heavens shall depart as a scroll;" when "not the earth only" will be shaken, "but also heaven." True, we do not yet see the Armageddon-gathering, but we are sure of one thing, that "He will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness; because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth."

In the feast of the tabernacles we have a memorial of the encampments of the Hebrew in the wilderness, and a type of our own pilgrimage to the promised land; but the antitype of the feast of harvest has not been reached; but in the other solemnities we have foretastes and pledges, by which we can see "the day approaching," when the saints will be called to "the Marriage Supper of the Lamb."

In all these sacred feasts and oblations we are reminded of the finished work of Creation and Redemption; the deliverance of God's people, the destruction of his enemies, the giving of the law, the opening of the gospel and descent of the Holy Ghost. Jesus, in his person, fullness and work, is the End and Substance of them all. He is our whole burnt-offering, who appeased stern justice, and glorified all the divine perfections in our stead. Jesus, our sin-offering, removes our sins, and atones for every crime. Jesus, our peace-offering, pacifies an offended God, quiets the conscience, and comforts the heart. Jesus our meat and drink-offering, nourishes the soul, by his flesh and by his blood. All our poor services, offered through him, are pleasing to God, and the joy and satisfaction of his own once aching heart. In the Passover, he is sacrificed for us. In the Pentecost, he fulfils the law. In the blowing of trumpets, he is the Herald of salvation from morning to evening of the gospel-day, proclaiming by his ministers, good news to all the ends of the earth through a crucified Redeemer.

O sinner, mark it well; "now is the day of salvation." Can you reject it, when purchased at such an infinite cost? O be wise; escape for thy life, lest thou be consumed! Saints of my God, we shall soon meet our best Beloved, and cast our crowns at his feet—greet each other—rehearse the conflicts of life, and joyfully exchange them for the "purchased possession," to sing glory and praise to God and the Lamb forever. Amen.

B. P. HILDRETH.

Westford, Aug. 2, 1857.

A wise man will desire no more than what he may get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and live contentedly.

Wisdom requires three things—knowledge to discern, judgment to weigh, and the resolution to determine.

From Bro. W. N. Houghtaling.

Bro. Grant:—I feel it a privilege and a duty to do what little I can for the benefit of the little flock to which the Father has promised the kingdom. Dear Brn. and Srs., although the trials and temptations we have, sometimes seem hard to endure, we can think of Him who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin, and cast our care upon him, for he careth for us. Although we are cast out as evil, and counted, the off-scouring of all things, yet, thank God that we are so greatly blessed as to be persecuted for Jesus' sake; for a little while and he that is to come, will come and will not tarry.

I have not been privileged with worshiping with those of like precious faith as some of you have, and I have felt enough of the pains of this world to know how to prize a world where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never come. I do rejoice in the hope of ere long seeing Jesus, and, with you, being made like him. and embracing the loved ones that we have laid in their dusty beds, who will come forth robed in immortality—eternal life.

Brn. and Srs., don't look back now, for the Kingdom is soon coming. I know that I have walked in bye and forbidden paths since I have shown to the world my faith in the resurrection, but my resolve for the future is, to walk that strait and narrow way which is laid out for the righteous. I want to live daily so that I can lift my heart to God and cry, "come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Dear Brn. and Srs., if you are weighed down with trials and afflictions, the best method I know is to go away alone in some secret place and lay the case before the God of heaven. Thus, you may get a blessing the world cannot give, and feel as though you had a friend exceeding ll earthly friends, one who knows how to uccor us when we are tried and tempted. lory be to God! I feel just like praising him now, although, like Paul, I don't know but after all I shall be cast away; but my trust is now in God, and I hope and pray that by the prayers of the little flock I may endure unto the end, and with you be gathered soon to praise him unmolested. Your unprofitable brother,

William N. Houghtaling.

Shelburne Falls, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Christian Suffering and Consolation.

There is no class of men who suffer more than the Christian. Such is his relation to the world, and such the character of his work and the power of temptation that, while in this life, he must suffer; and this suffering is necessary in order to bring him into sympathy with Jesus. Did Jesus suffer? then he who suffers for his sake must sympathize with him and will feel a stronger attachment to the cause for which he died.

That which causes the most effort to obtain is valued most; and, as the christian is situated, there is a necessity that, if he endures to the end, he must value religion, because he, like his Master Jesus, must suffer for it. But why must he suffer? He is living antagonistic with the world; a living condemnation to those who follow after its foolish fantasies, and that too when he has just left the same path himself. Although converted to God, there are, because of his peculiar relation to earth, strong allurements to turn him aside, and he must endure the pain of watching, lest he fall into the snare and become a prey to the demons of darkness. There is coupled with this watching, an anxiety that he when tried shall not fall, but shall stand strong, shielded as with a wall of fire. Nor is the world alone the cause of suffering, for the "Word" says, "A man's foes shall be they of his own household," and the christian finds there are those who profess to be brethren, who are false, and he is brought to suffering by the abusing of his confidence, and a want of sympathy. Oh! how cruel is the wound received from one covered by the garb of friendship!

Again. The true follower of Jesus suffers pain in his interest for the salvation of souls. Is a sinner dying without hope? The Christian feels it, and great is the anguish he endures. He travails in pain. There is, in short, no rest for the pilgrim here, only as it comes in the manner Paul teaches. For he says "as the sufferings of Christ abound in us so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ." 2 Cor. 1: 5. What a consolation!

Although thou oft art tried, my brother, there is a source from which there shall flow to thy heart the oil of consolation, which shall ease the pain of suffering and make the heart rejoice. That source is Jesus; he is the soul's Good Samaritan. Trials, then, are welcome; for He whose we are and for whom we suffer will not leave us, but will console us, not only by his presence here, but with the promise of Rest. Rest in Glory, in the New Creation.

Then let us cast our fears behind,
And press with vigor on;
Toil with a calm and cheerful mind,
Until our work is done.

We then shall have a sweet release,
Glory will fill the soul,
As from the fount of endless peace,
Streams of salvation roll.

Fair Salem's arches then shall ring
With shouts of victory;
Each saint of God with joy shall sing—
This rest was bought for me.

Ho Tis.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 26, 1857.

Close of the Volume.

This number closes Vol. 5, and we hope that all will renew their acquaintance with us, and we will spare no pains to make our friendship mutually profitable and pleasing. Our correspondents and contributors will please accept our heartfelt thanks for their valuable favors, and we trust that all will continue to bless us with their soul-cheering and instructive articles. Let us all unite in love, in the strength of the Lord, to help each other through the christian warfare, bearing one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Carist.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we have aimed to do the best we knew how, but still, we feel that we need your indulgence, and trust a mantle of charity will be thrown over our weaknesses and failings, and hope to be surrounded by your prayers, that we may be filled with wisdom, and be able to do all to the glory of God, and make our paper one that he shall delight to own and bless. Our Father in heaven is witness that we have no object but his glory in publishing the Crisis, and we pray that it may not be continued a single week, when it ceases to accomplish this object.

The remainder of our pilgrimage journey must be one of peril, trial, vexation and tribulation, and we shall need all the aid and sympathy we can possibly obtain from each other, in addition to our own watchfulness and prayer, that we may be able to stand; and if we try to help ourselves and one another, the Lord will add his blessing and bring us safely home to the promised land. I am fully satisfied that we shall soon see the King of Kings and Lord of Lords in all his glory. Are we all ready to meet him? Are our hearts pure? Is there no root of bitterness within? no grudge towards any one? Are we of that class who "offend not in word" and speak evil of no man? If so, the reward will be great, "for the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it." Prov. 2: 21. "The pure in heart shall see God."

New Subscribers.

We appreciate the noble efforts of many of our readers in obtaining new subscribers, and we would remind all, that it is a good time now to make renewed exertion. Let each get one new subscriber, and some can get many, and then we shall be able to supply the poor, and have some to give to those who know nothing of this blessed hope, who, at the coming of the Lord, shall be as stars in our crown of rejoicing. The world is flooded with trash; but little is published at the present day that is calculated to lead men to serve the Lord. and help them to prepare for the coming kingdom. God has most graciously opened our eyes to behold wondrous things in the blessed Bible. and shall we put the light under a bushel? It is our duty to make a sacrifice to send it to others. Brn. and Srs., will you help? Come, let us all feel a common interest in this great and glorious enterprise. Work, work for the glory of our great King in trying to persuade people to become his disciples. Help scatter the truth among them. Talk with your neighbors, lend them your paper, let us all have more of the spirit of Jesus which prompted him to go about doing good.

To any one who shall send us four new subscribers, we will forward, post paid, a bound vol. of Dr. Ramsey's great work on "Spiritualism,—a Satanic Delusion," or the same amount in any tracts or books that we have. Let all feel that they can do something in helping us sow the Bible seed of truth among the perishing multitudes. We hope the preaching brethren will engage anew in the work. Our interests are mutual. Arouse for the contest! The powers of darkness are against us, but the Lord will conquer.

Groaning Creation.

Truly the "whole creation groaneth." Sorrowing and sighing, pain and sickness, rum and misery, despair and death, lying and cheating, poverty and distress, pestilence and famine, whirlwinds and hail-storms, floods and tornadoes, shipwrecks and destruction, thunder and lightning, oppression and misrule, earthquakes and volcanoes, rioting and war, robbery and ruin, licentiousness and debauchery, suicide and murder, all combine to cause a fulfillment of this scripture,—"Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth." All seem satisfied that there must be a change soon, in morals, politics, earth, atmosphere and ocean; and yet but few are looking to the right source for deliverance. Paul, when speaking of the heavens and earth, and the change that is to take place in them, says, "they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed." How evident it appears that this change is needed. How is it to be accomplished? Is it by democratic or monarchical institutions? Mormonism or Spiritualism? Catholicism or Protestantism? None of these, but by the personal, literal, and visible coming of the Son of Man,—Jesus of Nazareth. The apostle, when speaking of him after his ascension to heaven, says,—"whom the heavens must receive until the time of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Jesus is to bring back and restore the Eden state, and good men are once more to be in paradise, of which the poet has well said,—

"No chilling winds, or poisonous breath
Can reach that healthful shore;
Sickness and sorrow, pain and death
Are felt and feared no more."

All nature seems uneasy for the change, and the children of the Most High are crying, "come, Lord Jesus," and "come quickly." They long to see the glorious King of Kings—the Prince of peace. We do not wonder the poet said,—

"Come and reign; come and reign,
Jesus, on thy throne;
And, O, it fills my heart with joy
To know we're almost home."

What we have written was suggested by reading several articles in our daily papers, like the following from the Boston Journal, and many thrilling records of the awfully bloody deeds and black-hearted crimes that are multiplying on every hand.

Violent Storms.—This season is an unparalleled one for violent storms. Scarcely a week passes that we are not called upon to record several in various parts of the country. We learn from the Detroit Advertiser that on the 31st ult., a second terrific hail storm visited Clinton, Mich. The rain fell in torrents, accompanied by hail stones said to be in many instances larger than a goose egg. These huge balls of ice, driven as they were before a furious gale of wind, severed the corn from the root, totally destroying whole fields of the most promising corn, besides doing great damage to other crops. Almost every window looking to the North was demolished. One man declares that the hail was driven with such force as to penetrate through the siding of his barn which was built of inch white wood lumber.

A violent storm of rain and hail passed over the city of Montreal on Friday evening, and a great amount of rain fell.

The Quebec Journal contains a graphic description of a water spout which devastated the parish of St. Eleazor, county of Beauce, on the 18th ult., furnished by the parish priest, who was an eye witness.

"A large and dark cloud was overhanging the place on Sunday forenoon, 18th July, when a noise, as that of the sea in a storm, gave warning of the approach of something unusual. Soon the cloud seemed to burst, letting fall towards the earth a long train, somewhat in the shape of a tunnel, with the small end turned downward. It revolved rapidly, hissing like escaping steam, and swinging to and fro, and imitating the contortions of a snake. When the small end reached the ground it lifted and carried away in its revolving impetus whatever it came in contact with. Boards, timber, stones, and portions of houses were whirled in the air and thrown at a distance with a fearful report.

"Several houses were thus razed to the ground. One horse and three cows were drawn up by the power of suction to the water spout, and after being raised high in the air, were let gradually down, they escaping uninjured, and were only covered with mud. Five carts were carried to a great height and thrown across some fields into the woods, being smashed by the fall. Large trees, such as maple, have been uprooted and removed a distance of five acres. This phenomenon, although disastrous and awful, must, however, have been a sublime sight."

On the 31st ult., the city of Toronto experienced a very severe thunder storm. The rain poured down in torrents, and quite a tornado passed over a portion of the city, carrying away dust, straw, hay, and other light substances in a spiral form to a considerable height into the air. The low grounds of the city were completely flooded, and the inhabitants in some parts of the eastern end of the city, had to get ingress to their houses by ladders to the upper floors.—[Boston Journal.

The following is from the Banner of Light, a Spiritualist paper published in Boston. It may be seen from this article, what demons are promising and preparing to do. We shall not be taken unawares if still more wonderful manifestations are witnessed, for the word declares that these "spirits of devils" (demons) are to be "working miracles" just before the Lord shall "come as a thief" upon them, when "their folly shall be manifest unto all men" as was that of "Jannes and Jambres" who withstood Moses and Aaron, just before their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. We expect that men aided by demons will withstand the truth in the same way, as saith the Scripture, just before the return of our blessed Master, to gather his down-trodden, cross-bearing, self-sacrificing, and self-denying children from their present bondage, into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, where joy eternal and peace forever reigns.

"COMING EVENTS."

"The following communication from a spirit, we have received from a friend in Philadelphia. The indications it alludes to as premonitory of coming events, will be recognized as actually existing. For nearly two years past we have been advised of the fact here stated. A large number of mediums, those who have been made greatly useful in the cause of spiritual truth, have remained apparently inactive for a long time. Many of these have repeatedly remarked their condition and alluded to the future as far exceeding in form, and mode, and utility of spirit communication all that has yet been received. They have waited long for the coming Messiah, (the newly developed Truth,) and have been severely tried, both in mind and body.

Wonderful as the manifestations of the present day seem to many, we feel that they are as nothing when compared to those which are yet to be unfolded to them. Believe me, I make no idle assertion when I say, even those conversant, as they think, with all kinds of manifestations, will stand amazed when the new lights which spirits are preparing, burst upon the world. Every thing is now ready but the mediums through whom these wonders are to be transmitted.

Think it not strange, then, if a number of mediums are not influenced for a time, for we are making our selections from among them.

Many will have severe trials, but those who stand firmly will be blessed indeed. Oh! if I could only make mediums understand how much the influence of spirits tends to raise and expand their own minds, none, I think, would shrink from the ordeal. But the time is coming when Spiritualism will be understood in its true light; and then all will be willing to be co-workers with us.

Scientific and philosophic minds, proud, as they may well be, of their learning, will feel at last they have stepped beyond their depths when they try to explain Spiritualism in any other than a natural way. They will become as little children—hoping and waiting to receive the knowledge which will be showered upon all honest minds freely.

Then will the last bar to our manifestations be removed. Then will be our triumph; but be not afraid, we will use all gently, thanking our God and Father that our efforts have at last been rewarded, and we can travel through the realms of endless space, influencing all, both in your earth home and in our own spheres."

Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ.

Says the Christian Messenger, relative to this invaluable work,—"It is the best arrangement and classification of testimony on this subject ever laid before the public. . . . The writer may surely feel that no apology is due for breaking in upon the easy slumbers of the church with this volume. The voice may be strange, but it is the voice of the Church notwithstanding. It may be stern and rugged,—it may seem like the voice of those that mock, but it is truly the Voice of the Church. . . . We would be glad to have this work find its way especially into the hands of all ministers of the gospel of Christ.

For sale by H. L. Hastings, No. 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., and at this office. Price $1.00. Postage 18 cts.

"Prayer and Fasting."

We would recommend to our Brn. and Srs., that they observe Friday, Aug. 28th, as a day of fasting and prayer, in behalf of our coming camp meeting at Wilbraham. Let us all humble ourselves before God, repenting of our sins, asking him to revive his work in power among us.

Fare to Campmeeting.

The fare to the Wilbraham Campmeeting from Boston and back is $3.00. From Worcester and return $1.75. One third off from regular price from intermediate stations between Worcester and the campground.

Tickets to be had of Bro. Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. Boston. Our brethren will please inform Bro. Adams how many tickets they wish, and forward the money to him, according to the prices named.

Those who take the cars at Boston can get their tickets by calling at Bro. Adams' store, 167 Hanover St. Remember, the R.R. Co. will sell no tickets at their depots, at reduced prices, for the campmeeting.

N.B. The campmeeting is near the Wilbraham depot and, not North Wilbraham as has been advertised. The campmeeting is in North Wilbraham, but there is no such depot. Get tickets for Wilbraham.

Tickets.—Tickets for campmeeting good on any train, (except express) during the meeting. Trains leave Boston 6.45 A. M. and 1.30 P. M.

Tickets.—Observe the instruction given concerning tickets for campmeeting. Send for them in season. Cash must accompany the order if you wish them forwarded.

Remember, you should always take your overcoat, overshoes and shawl when you go to campmeeting.

Every one should have a copy of Dr. Ramsey's great work entitled, "Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion." It is a book for the times. See our book list.

"Discourses on Faith."

Bro. Grant:—I desire to call the attention of the readers of the Crisis, to the "Discourses on Faith," by W. H. Starr. Edited by Bro. Hudson.

Having read the book with some care, and much profit, I have a strong desire that others may do the same. Although like everything else in this world, it has its errors and defects, yet I can truly say that of all the religious books that I have ever read, this is one of the best. It is plain and simple in its teachings, free from dogmatism and sectarianism, those kindred evils that so generally mar the pages of religious books, and I much mistake if any who love to see the exhibitions of a meek and quiet spirit, under difficult and trying circumstances, are not profited by a careful reading of its pages; and I can but say of its author, judging of him by the spirit of the discourses, that his friends have spoken the truth concerning him, in the closing line of his epitaph, when they say,

"We entertained an angel unawares."

This book ought to be read by every lover of Christ in our land.

Ophir Haynes.

Roxbury, Mass.

[We have had time to read but little in the book referred to, but were deeply interested in what we have perused. It can be had at this office. Price 75 cts. Postage 16 cts. Ed.]

For the Crisis.

And Yet Another!

Bro. Grant:—I take my pen to inform you of the death of our sister, Eliza Mathewson. She died Aug. 10th, 1857. You will recollect conversing with her at the time you attended Sr. Anna's funeral during your last visit to Ct. She has gradually declined since that time. About a week previous to her death, she was attacked with a distressing hemorrhage of the lungs or chest; which attack was repeated three times before her death, discharging in all between two and three quarts. She manifested that sound reason and judgment—her peculiar characteristic—until the last.

It was mine (as to relatives) to stand alone by our aged mother in that moment of affliction, my husband having left the day before to attend his appointment for preaching. What a moment! I had never witnessed the death of a near relative before. It was a scene calculated to increase the value of our blessed hope, and make one feel that THAT was ALL truly valuable. Her exit was so sudden I could not know her particular thoughts at the moment of her decease; but I had conversed freely with her during that day and found her trust was in God. She particularly requested husband and myself to pray that she might not be left to murmur, as she desired to heartily acquiesce in the will of her Heavenly Father.

My husband returned about fifteen hours after Sr. Eliza had ceased to breathe, and as it appeared quite in harmony with the desire of friends and neighbors, he addressed the people on the occasion of her funeral, from 2 Sam. 14: 14; to which the audience listened, apparently with profound interest. The scene was solemn and deeply impressive; and God grant it may prove a lasting benefit to us as a family as well as to those kind neighbors who have manifested such affectionate regard during the protracted illness of our family.

B. Mathewson.

P.S. Perhaps I ought to remark that Sr Eliza died at the old homestead in South Coventry, Ct., where she had long resided with our dear aged mother. We were with her nearly a week before her death. B. M.

Bakerville, Ct., Aug. 19th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Help the Weak.

Nothing is so much needed at present, as looking after the weak, and wounded, in this time of struggle and battle. It is a merciful duty in time of war, to take care of the wounded in the Hospital. Some are there from wounds received from their enemy; others from getting hurt by their right-hand-man's carelessness; others from fatigue, and some are sick, perhaps with a contagious disease; all are weak, and need help, and must have it, or die. To save a soldier is better than to wound or kill an enemy. We have had a hard struggle, and lost a good many men. This has frightened many, who have run and hid. Some have turned traitors and but few are in the field contending for the faith. It is as much duty to take care of the weak, as it is to keep fighting, and more merciful. Suppose we kill twenty and lose thirty by neglect, where is the gain? It is loss on both sides. It is a great deal to know when to fight and when to nurse. Nursing is needed when sickness prevails. If ever there was a time when the church of God needed help since the dark ages, it is now. You cannot go amiss of those that are weak and need helping and restoring.

Many, who used to be engaged in testifying to the goodness of God, are silent now. Those, I mean, who are with us now. Not the deserters. These weak ones need help to stand and walk. Those that are healthy and strong should turn their attention this way and bear their infirmities, and get them at work again, speaking and laboring for God in their way. Some of the same class will be benefited by their labors more than ours. I don't care what these old hard-hearted, no-spirit back-sliders say about it. I know that there is to-day a deadly form of Godliness, that the Devil always loved better than downright wickedness, for it is a surer killing machine to revivals, when put into operation by professors. There always has existed a class who want no excitement, and measure every body's religion by their half converted hearts. This class are always busy when there is a trial in the church. I have picked up a few that seemed worth saving, and have got the substance of their testimony as follows. After asking one how she got along, she said;—"I gave up trying. My husband told me I must see this truth, or be lost. I couldn't, and gave up speaking or praying before him as he had no confidence in me." I encouraged her to go to work, and God blessed her again. Another case. "Bro. B. says 'there is no spirit separate from the word, and all I have enjoyed was excitement without knowledge.' He has made me afraid of excitement, and I am down." This case needed a little exercising unto godliness. After praying and speaking he soon got blessed.

Another case. "Bro. C. thinks class-meetings are not called for, since we have so much light." I don't care for Bro. C. nor anybody else. God always has blessed open testimony, and those that oppose it either in men or women, are like old dried up vessels which hold no water, and if you go to meeting to-night we will see whether God blesses our class-meeting or not. Our object is to get the weak ones to exercise their gifts, and testify for God. I don't care for Bro. C., he has done hurt, either by carelessness, or some other way. You are all struck with death, and a shock to start the blood is needed. God is pleased with any way to bring it about. We all went to class-meeting and Bro. C. was present to watch what was said, as usual, and remark upon the propriety of such and such things, and killed the meeting down to a form suitable to sing, "Hark from the tombs." Just then the class-meeting was needed, and in a few minutes God blessed some, and the dark, cold fog began to move off, and the light, warm in fluence of his Spirit took its place. The weak ones began to get strength; and the drones began to scowl, and feel for their hats, and left muttering something about bedlam, while six of eight got blessed and praised the Lord. Many desired prayers, acknowledged their backwardness, coldness, and weakness, by not doing duty for fear of Bro. C., who has so often reproved them. These facts all leaked out in the class-meeting. The weak ones saw what kept them down and determined hereafter to improve the talent which God had given them, instead of hearing to Bro. C. Liberty is so much better than bondage, no wonder the captives rejoice. God is pleased with it, Bro. C. is mad. There are many brethren like Bro. C., who have lost the vitality of godliness, if they ever had it, and are now down in the dark, hunting up something to make an easy bed of, while others are dying for spiritual food. I love to see the weak strengthened and rejoice, if others do scold. God's judgment day will reward all according to their works.

I will state one more case. "Bro. M., what have you got new for light? we are all starving."—Ans.—You probably need heat, more than light, or to use the instruments you have, instead of lying still until you get more.—Q.—"What do you think of the return of the Jews, &c.?"—Ans. I don't care if Jerusalem is built up in two months, that is not my work; there are enough at work at it now to make confusion.—Q.—"What do you think of the Seventh day, &c?"—Ans. I think we must work six days. We must not make a hobby of our peculiar views, make the seventh day a year-long-rest, and not labor for others. God will curse our truth if he does as he has done before.—Q.—"What do you think of the gifts, are they in the church?"—Ans. If they are, things will never be developed among such a set of cold, calculating criticisers as I find here. Your meeting was all debate last evening.—Q.—"What do you think of the ending of the days, is it so, or not?"—Ans. The days of the work of God in the heart seem to be ended, and this kind of itching of ears to get something new to dote upon has brought it about. These are some of the things which stand in the way of a reformation of heart in our churches. They cannot all be right, although each corporal thinks he is a general, and waves his little flag and cries victory is mine. We see many in these days, acting as though God's cause depended wholly upon them, and it is time for those that do see what is duty to go to work helping the weak. I like the proposition—"Pray for the Campmeeting." Our future success depends upon strengthening the weak things that remain.

H. Munger.

For the Crisis.

"My Servant Caleb."

Num. Chap. 13th and 14th.

We have recorded the command given by Jehovah to Moses, and the obedience of Moses in appointing the spies to go and spy out the land of Canaan, and their success; also, the false report of the majority of the spies. At the 30th verse of the 13th chapter, we have the testimony of Caleb, and also in chap. 14: 6–10. In these two chapters we see fully delineated the character of Caleb.

We will first consider the difference between the spirit of Caleb and of the other spies. These spies had to confess that the land was glorious, yet they did all they could to discourage the children of Israel from venturing into this land. Not so with Caleb. He, having quelled the tumult, proceeds to tell them that, notwithstanding the terrible appearance of the tall sons of Anak, in the strength of the Lord they were fully able to go up and possess the land. And here we can see how Caleb followed the Lord fully, when there was opposition, as we find by reading the tenth verse of chap. 14. We see this man of God standing up in the fear of God, and boldly maintaining the cause of his Master. And, in consequence of his obedience, we find God calling him—"my servant Caleb." Besides this, we find God promises to give him, and his seed after him, an inheritance in this land flowing with milk and honey.

We can see by the example of Caleb that decision of character is essentially necessary for every christian. Here we have the reward of obedience, and the consequence of disobedience set before us in prohibiting the rest of the spies from entering the promised land. Num. 13: 25,—"And they returned from searching of the land after forty days. . . . And they told him (Moses) and said, we came unto the land whither thou sendest us, and surely it floweth with milk and honey; and this is the fruit of it. Nevertheless, the people be strong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled and very great; and, moreover, we saw the children of Anak there." Here let me make a simple remark. It is an easy matter to discourage the weak and timid, whose faith is wavering, and in their hearts have turned back to Egypt. While they remember the flesh they ate there freely, they could not have a true love and relish for the better land, and are willing to believe every evil report respecting it. Ver. 30–31,—"And Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it. But the men that went up with him said;—We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we. And they brought up an evil report of the land, which caused a great tumult and disturbance in the camp; so much so, that the children of Israel wept, and said; "Let us make a captain, and let us return to Egypt." Num. 14: 6.—"And Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, rent their clothes; and they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, "the land which we passed through to search it, is an exceeding good land. If the Lord delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey. Only rebel not ye against the Lord, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread for us; their defence is departed from them, and the Lord is with us; fear them not." But we see that Caleb's and Joshua's words were like idle tales; and they attempted to stone them, which displeased the Lord greatly. And after Moses had entreated the Lord in behalf of the people to spare them from his anger, and not to destroy them; "the Lord said, I have pardoned according to thy word: but as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." And the Lord said, furthermore, that this people which had seen all his glory, and his miracles he had performed in Egypt and in the wilderness, and had tempted him so many times, and would not hearken to his words, "surely," he said, "they shall not see the land; . . . but my servant Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully; him will I bring into the land whereunto he went; and his seed shall possess it."

And now in conclusion, my brethren and friends, let us be found with the same spirit Caleb had; let us be following the Lord fully; for soon he that is to come, will come, and will not tarry. Soon, if faithful, we shall enter in through the gates into the city, and have right to the tree of life. Ere long we shall see, yea, and I hope be with those who shall return and come to Zion, with everlasting joy upon their heads. The world may scoff; we may be derided for our hope, and the church may try to stifle the voice of the herald of the gospel of the kingdom; but God will be with us if we follow in the steps of Caleb, the man of God; for God is stronger than all who are against us. O that God may keep us and preserve us, and save us at last in his everlasting kingdom, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Joanna Vancleeck.

Portland, Me.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. VI.

Bro. Grant:—After many days of almost constant labor in preaching the glad tidings of the Kingdom, I reached this city on Tuesday night, July 14th. We cannot hold any meetings here now, at least, there is no prospect of effecting any thing if we should begin. The city appears to be "given to idolatry" as fully as ever Athens was. Not the same gods, indeed, are worshiped, but the same earnest devotion is manifested. I had just been engaged for ten days' preaching to brethren, and all who would come, at several places in Laporte Co., Ind., and felt refreshed with labor; for labor is refreshing when we have the word to preach and the spirit of it in our hearts, with the sympathies and prayers of praying brethren. I have been so situated several times since I left N. E., that I could value the praying, sympathy and association of those in "like precious faith." I have come to the conclusion that brethren East know but little how to prize their privileges.

It is a pity there is, in this great and groaning city—the grand centre of trade in the West—no meeting where our views are preached. I started meetings here in 1855, and for a while there seemed some prospect of good, but for want of laborers, and the number of brethren being limited, after a while they ceased. Untoward influences prevail, affecting all our churches, with few exceptions, in the great West; and I fear that where they have not been secured, by the employment of pastoral labor, and by the timely presentation of liberal views, they are only getting worse. Bro. Storrs will be here, it is expected, bye and bye; then an effort will be made on the question of "Immortality!" but other truths are needed as well as that.

Yours truly, W. S. C.

Chicago, Ill., July 17.

Longevity and Posterity.

There is an old lady living in North Hermon, Me., who was eighty years old in June last, and who is the mother of twelve children. All but two are living. She has ninety-eight grand-children, and seventy-eight great grand-children. The whole number one hundred and eighty-eight. She enjoys good health, takes delight in visiting her friends, and can walk a mile or two with ease. She earns her living. Her name is Mary Clark, widow of Ichabod Clark. Her former name was Mary Lancaster.

N. F. Nason.

From Eld. J G. Hook.

Bro. Grant:—My health has much improved. I feel much better in body and mind.

I have been holding grove meetings for a few Sundays past, and God has blest the feeble efforts, far beyond my expectations. Many have an ear to hear the word of God, and some seem to have a heart to obey it. There are indications of the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit in various places. People are anxious to hear the pure Gospel preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from Heaven. Brn., let us cease to dote about words that gender strife, and feed the flock of God. Amen.

I feel that I must praise the good Lord, by telling you what a good meeting we had at the old Chapel in Concord, last Sunday evening, Aug. 9th. It was our third meeting, prayer and conference, and but few brethren and sisters present; but such a blessed season I have not enjoyed for two years. Glory to God, his precious Spirit was there indeed, and our sorrowing hearts were made glad. Bro. Merriam said it was the best meeting that he had enjoyed since he had been in the place.

My Bro., God is just as ready to fill us with his Spirit now as in time past; then let us ask in faith. Amen. Your Bro.,

John G. Hook.

Concord, N. H. Aug. 16th.

Begin Right.

"Live as long as you may, the first twenty years form the greater part of your life. They appear so when they are passing; they seem to have been so when we look back to them; and they take up more room in our memory than all the years that succeed them.

If this be so, how important that they should be passed in planting good principles, cultivating good tastes, strengthening good habits, and fleeing from all those pleasures which lay up bitterness and sorrow for time to come! Take good care of the first twenty years of your life, and you may hope that the last twenty will take good care of you."

Give not thy tongue too great a liberty, lest it take thee prisoner. A word unspoken is like the sword in another's hand. If thou desire to be held wise, be so wise as to hold thy tongue. Quarles.

Foreign News.

FROM EUROPE.

Quebec, August 23.

Steamer Anglo-Saxon, Captain McMasters, arrived at this port this morning. She left Liverpool at 2 P.M. of the 12th inst.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

The Anglo-Saxon came too far north to fall in with the telegraph fleet, and reports thick weather and constant head winds. Owing to an accident on shore the telegraph fleet did not sail from Valentia until Friday evening.

The latest report from Valentia was on the 10th, 4 P.M. The work of laying the cable is going on as satisfactorily as its best friends could wish. About 300 miles have been laid, and the depth at which the cable is now being submerged is two miles. The signals from on board the Niagara are everything that an electrician could desire. The steamers are heading west with a moderately fair breeze, and the cable is running out at the rate of five miles an hour. Messages are being constantly received on shore.

Latest from the Niagara.—All well on board—moderate westerly wind. All are more and more trustful of complete success.

The Emperor and Empress of France have returned to Paris.

John Bright has been returned to Parliament from Birmingham, without opposition.

Lord John Russell, from the Parliamentary Select Committee, reported that Jews could be admitted as members of Parliament under the existing act for modification of oaths.

TURKEY.

A despatch from Vienna states that the representatives of France, Russia, Prussia, and Sardinia, have announced, to precisely similar notes, their cessation of diplomatic relations with the Porte, and their approaching departure from Constantinople.

The Russian Ambassador struck his flag on the 6th.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says the pending difficulties will be submitted to a Conference composed of representatives from the various powers.

Poetry.

HOPE ON.

BY JOSEPH HENRY TURNER.

Though many cares shall flood the soul,
And many sorrows spurn control;
Though troubles like a storm shall lower
And hang upon thee for the hour—
Hope on! the rainbow's lovely sheen
Shall yet upon the cloud be seen!

Though fickle friends shall turn away,
When Fortune leaves thee for a day;
Though hearts grow cold thou thought thine own,
When mild Prosperity hath flown—
Hope on! there's some true souls the while,
Shall cheer thee with their lightsome smile!

Though from thy bower the rose depart,
Flowers still may blossom in thine heart;
Though trials thick shall fill thy way
And darkened night shut out the day—
Hope on! the murky shades of night
Shall flee before the morning light! [Ex.

Boston, July 9, 1857.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

General Campmeeting at North Wilbraham!

Our brethren abroad have made a demand on us, or rather have expressed a great desire for another "Independent Campmeeting" at North Wilbraham, Mass. What shall we do? Shall we respond to their desire? I think we must, or perhaps do more harm than good. We have concluded to commence the meeting on Monday the 31st day of August.

We call this an Independent Campmeeting, because we intend that it shall be independent of all sectarianism and partyism. We invite all to attend it who are interested in, and love the immediate appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ. We expect at this meeting a general gathering of the "waiting ones." It seems to us that it cannot be otherwise, as this will be centrally located for the friends of the cause.

Come, Brethren and Sisters, in the Lord's name, help! Make all the preparation you consistently can to attend, we beseech you, for "is there not a cause?" We feel lonely and pilgrim-like, and it will be well to meet, and greet, and cheer each other once more on the journey. Will you come from the East, and West, and North, and South, and sit down once more in the anticipation of the kingdom?

The objects of this meeting are twofold.

1. To comfort and strengthen one another.
2. To endeavor to benefit, with the truth, all who will attend the meeting, who are not yet ready for the kingdom of God.

We shall expect each Brother and Sister at this meeting, to speak and act as he, or she may think God requires, with a view to the best good of all concerned. We desire no public debates or controversy, but let each speak independently of others, and in the spirit of Christ. ——We would say in conclusion, that it will be well for our friends in all parts, where they can, to associate and prepare tents and bedding, &c., for themselves, so as not generally to be dependent, as many individual cases must necessarily be. The cloth which is used for tents can be taken by the several families which purchase it, after the meeting, and be used for domestic purposes. In some cases, tents may be more cheaply hired.

Get tickets for Wilbraham—the Campground is near the Wilbraham depot.

And now, Brethren and Sisters, we submit this matter to you in the Lord. Act right.

Edwin Burnham,
For the Brethren.

P. S. Provision for man and beast will be made as usual. E. B.

New Hampshire State Conference.

Bro. Grant:—Being appointed at the last Conference, to fix on the time and place for holding the next State Conference, I take this method to notify the friends that the time for holding it, will probably be somewhere from the first to the middle of Oct.; but in regard to the place, it is not yet decided. A few brethren at Loudon Village have expressed a wish to have it holden with them. Shall it be there? or is there some place better calculated to convene the meeting?

Will those interested write me on the subject that I may be able to fix on the best place? Hope the friends will speak soon, that I may have time to give seasonable notice.

T. M. Preble, Committee.

East Weare, Aug. 17, 1857.

Grove Meetings.

Providence permitting, there will be Grove meetings as follows:

Sunday, Aug. 30th, at Loudon Mills.

Sunday, Sept. 6th, at Marden's Corners in Epsom.

If the weather is not pleasant on the above days, the meetings will be held in barns, houses, or halls.

All are invited to attend who have ears to hear the gospel of Jesus Christ.

John G. Hook.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, a tent meeting will be held in Lanesville, Conn., on the line of the Housatonic R. R., 30 miles north of Bridgeport, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 16th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. All, who can, are invited to attend. Provision will be made for the accommodation of all those from other places, as far as possible. The ministering brethren are invited to attend as the way may be opened, and preach the Word as the Lord shall direct. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductor that they wish to stop at Lanesville Station. The 6.15 A. M. and 6.35 P. M. train from Bridgeport, arrive and stop at Lanesville at 10 o'clock, A. M. and 8.45 P. M.

Levi R. Teeple, and L. Mills,
For the Brethren.

I have appointments to preach as follows: The 4th Sabbath in Aug. at Waterloo; the 5th at Canterbury, in the Town Hall; the 1st in Sept., at Loudon Ridge; the 2d Sabbath in Sept., at New Loudon, at the red school house, in the northeast part of the town, near Hemphill's Mills; 3d Sabbath at the Free Meeting House at East Weare Village. T. M. Preble.

Conference at North Hermon, commencing Thursday, Sept. 17th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day.

Edwin Burnham.

P. S. Friends generally invited to attend.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at Portland, Sept. 13th. If supplied, please write immediately.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Chester Factories, Thursday eve'g, Aug. 27th
Jawbuck, Sunday, (where Bro. Hall may appoint,) Aug. 30th

H. F. Carpenter.

[Give Bro. Carpenter a hearty welcome. He is a worthy brother.—Ed.]

Bro. Israel Damman appoints to preach at Portland, Me., the fourth Lord's day in Aug. Dover, N. H., Aug. 30th, where the Brn. may prepare.

Will some one meet him at the depot, Saturday, on the arrival of the train connected with the boat.

Providence permitting, I will preach at the Town Hall, in Williamsburg, Mass., Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, (Aug. 27th, 28th and 29th,) and over the following Lord's day.

Brn. and Srs. from the neighboring towns are requested to attend. M. Grant.

Br. E. Bellows appoints to preach at South Killingly, where Bro. Spaulding may appoint Friday evening, Aug. 28th
Axe Factory, Ct., Sunday, Aug. 30.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Northfield, Aug. 30th

C. Goodrich.

Bro. Grant:—If my health will admit, I propose to be with the Brethren at Kennebunkport the 22d and 23d of August.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29th and 30th
Roxbury, Mass., Sept. 3d
Providence, R. I., Sept. 5th and 6th

Communications from Brethren will be thankfully received at either place.

N. F. Nason.

Campmeeting.—Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at South Adams, commencing on Monday, the seventh day of September next, to continue over the following Sabbath. The believers of the Second Advent of the Lord are invited to attend. Necessary provision will be provided for man and beast. Further notice will hereafter be given. Brn. invited—R. V. Lyon, H. L. Hastings, R. E. Ladd, and M. Bachelor.

Wm. F. Stitt
Z. Campbell,
A. Cummings.

Discussion.—A discussion is to be had in North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, between Elder Andrew Burns of Ashland Co., Ohio, and L. P. Judson of Victor, Ontario Co., N. Y., commencing Aug. 25, 1857, and continuing during the pleasure of the parties,—probably three or four days. The questions will be, whether the Kingdom of Heaven, or reign of Christ has yet been set up on the Earth? and what is the true nature and destiny of man?

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

John Chapman,
In behalf of the Brethren.

Bro. Couch appoints to preach in Worcester, Aug. 30th

Bro. Boutell will preach in Salem the first Sabbath in September. Temple Hardy.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at or near Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, and continuing over Sunday.

Also a conference to be held in the Advent Chapel, Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 11th, to continue over next First day. We earnestly solicit the friends of our soon coming King to come and enjoy this feast with us. Our hearts are open to receive, and our homes to entertain you. J. Wendell.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.:—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of the conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread free, and to preach the word of life, and hope, others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Missisipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber,

Peter S. W. Dayo.

Providence permitting, I will be at
Auburn, N. H., Aug. 30th
Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 6th

Should there be an appointment for the latter place, will some Bro. drop me a line at Exeter? J. G. Smith.

Providence permitting, I will preach in
Granby, Mass., Sunday, Aug. 30th

D. E. Moulton.

Bro. Burnham appoints to preach in Boston, Aug. 30th.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

S. Case 130, S. Leonard 129, C. Alden 118, F. Hutchins 128, L. C. Johnson 128, A. S. Libby 128, Mary Washburn 129, L. A. Tallamshee 133, Dr. E. S. Robbins 130, B. Ross, 106, J. C. Shaw 130, R. W. Neale 126, H. Trumbul 78, A. W. Taylor 133, F. Converse, 130, G. W. Chisman 143, J. G. Smith 130, J. Clark 130, S. Boardman 130, T. Chase 130, T. Leavitt 114, J. M. Howard 146, Mrs. E. Marsh 118, W. H. Porter 126, E. Duncan 130, S. Tucker 130, G. L. Rice 130, S. Harding 130, E. C. Field 104, $1.00 each.

M. M. Lyman 156, T. P. Hodgdon 130, A. Smith 138, S. Bliss 130, $2.00 each.

W. Dicanson 117, A. Hall 117, A. Miller 117, E. Tanner 117, J. C. Libby 107, A. P. Hyde 117, 50 cents each.

W. Draper 251, $5.00.

For the Poor.—F. Converse $2.00.

To Correspondents.

S. Bliss—The books were sent to Florella Bliss.

Bro. R. R. York—the tickets for the Campmeeting are good for any day during the meeting.

Bro. H. Cornell, you have paid No. 104, which is the present number.

G. L. Humphreville—The Jubilee Harp was sent you by mail.

Acknowledgment.—I would take this opportunity to return my thanks to the friend in Maine who had the kindness to send me the copy of the Crisis which I requested some time since. O. P. Allen.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Three Kingdoms, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and [illegible]—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great [illegible]—[illegible] 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

Bro. Grant:—The following Lines were written to a Sister, when fast wasting away with the consumption. Although now dead, I have thought they might now perhaps be somewhat applicable to some such suffering one. If you think so, you can publish them if you please. D. D. C.

Christian sister, patient suff'rer,
Eking out the last of life,
Does the beam of fu'ure glory
Rest o'er thee with sweet relief?
Canst thou feel its drawings upward,
Weaning thee from earth and toil,
Loosing bands which bind thee downward,
E'en this earthly mortal coil?

Let that strong hope-anchor enter,
Clear within the heavenly veil,
Whither Jesus sure will guide you,
If to Him you yield your all.
Feel that you are his forever—
He is thine in life and death—
That it is your sweetest pleasure
To resign to him your breath.

He is Jesus, now and ever,
And his mission is to save,
Not from death, the curse on Adam,
But to ransom from the grave.
He hath entered just before us,
To unlock the silent tomb,
And ere long will show his power
To redeem each trusting one.

Let no earthly fetter keep thee
From a full surrender now;
All that's good and all that's lovely,
He is ready to bestow;
Peace, that floweth like a river,
In your last expiring breath,
And eternal life beyond it,
As He ransoms you from death.

Will not all the joys that wait us
In that blissful world to come,
Pay us well for all we suffer
In this briefly trial one?
As the little helpless infant
Lay with feeble head on thee,
So let thine recline on Jesus,
All in faith and purity.

Art thou feeling so unworthy,
That you dare not venture near?
Just the one whom Jesus loveth;
Venture on him; never fear.
You can tell him you have nothing
E'er to pay for grace divine;
That he knows, and knowing asks you,
Evermore on him recline.

He will hear thee when strength faileth;
He will soothe thee in that hour,
When the conflict is severest,
When the spoiler draweth near.
Lean upon him, frank and freely,
With abiding hope and trust;
Nothing could so highly please him;
O embrace him to the last!

D. D. Chaffee.

So. Wilbraham.

Original Articles.

From B. L. Clark.

Bro. Grant:—As I am far away from all my Advent friends, and have no privilege with them, only through the Crisis, therefore it is a privilege to converse with them in the silent language of the pen. Methinks I hear the scattered lambs bleating on the mountains, looking and waiting, sighing and praying to be delivered from the enemies which surround them. Let us that are scattered ever be praying this prayer,—Lord, keep us through thy truth; thy word is truth. We know that unless God keeps us and upholds us by his love and power, we wander away from him. O is he not the Great Shepherd of the sheep? do we not hear him say, "My sheep hear my voice and they follow me?"

Brethren and sisters, let us follow him in all his examples; in his humility, in his meekness, in his love to us while we were enemies to him. So let us exhibit the same love to those which are enemies to us, who, if it were in their power, would destroy us. But I rejoice that Jesus goes before his people to be a lamp to their feet and a light to their path. May we keep our eye upon him and fall not out by the way, but lift up our heads and rejoice knowing that our redemption draweth nigh.

Pray for me, that I may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, that the truth may shine in me brighter and brighter until the perfect day.

Your sister in Christ,

B. L. Clark.

Maquoketa, Iowa.

From Sr. A. Stark, to Bro. Pratt.

Bro. Pratt:—I feel it to be duty to confess before God and man, the power and goodness of him who suffereth not a sparrow to fall without his notice. And should we not gladly "confess him in all our ways," knowing that his word declares by our so doing "he will direct our paths?" O, his promises are precious to me.

I write you this to let you know that God heard your prayer in my behalf; for you know when you called at our house I was suffering from the effects of a severe cold, which had settled upon my lungs, in such a manner that respiration had become laborious and distressing. I had also a heavy pain in my head so that I was unable to sit up but a few moments at a time. You prayed and left. Immediately after, I was seized with vomiting, and quite a quantity of phlegm was discharged from the lungs which rendered breathing easy and natural; also the pain in my head was removed. Soon after, I sank into a quiet and refreshing sleep, and to-day I am able to resume my domestic affairs as usual. To God be the power and glory who has been mindful of such an unprofitable servant as I. All ye that love and fear him join with me to magnify and praise his holy name who "himself took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses."

Dear Bro., may heaven's richest blessings rest upon thee, who art called to be a chosen servant in the ministry. May all thy labors be prospered, and many rise up to call thee blessed; and finally an abundant entrance be administered to thee into the glorious and everlasting kingdom for which we pray and earnestly look, is the heart-felt wish of your unworthy sister,

Amanda M. Stark.

Green River, Vt., July 2.

From M. T.

Brethren and Sisters:—In the language of the Apostle, "Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Let us hold fast our profession without wavering, until the end, for the vision will speak and not lie; for the trial of our faith worketh patience. Let us hold fast whereunto we have already attained, that no man take our crown; for it is by patient continuance in well doing we shall inherit the promised rest. "Seeing we look for these things what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness." Let us prove faithful a few days more, and He that is to come will come and will not tarry.

Yours, looking for the coming of Christ,

M. T.

From Bro. B. Ives.

Bro. Grant:—Through the tender mercies of our Heavenly Father I am permitted to live, that I may make my calling and election sure. I feel that I ought to praise his holy Name that he has seen fit by his grace to call me out from the world; that he has ever led me to understand some, at least, of the truths of his word, which are being brought out in these last days, for the perfecting of the saints, that they may be ready and waiting the return of Zion's King to reign on David's throne forever. O how blessed it is to have eyes to read, hearts to understand, and not be left to follow the commandments of men. Praise the good Lord for the Comforter, who leads the humble and obedient child into truth, taking the things of God and showing them unto us. It seems that the blessed pages of holy writ never shone so clearly before.

Brethren and sisters, are we doing all we can for God and truth? are we sure that when our Lord comes into his kingdom we shall be remembered? When he separates the sheep from the goats, shall we hear the welcome plaudit—"well done?" Are our works of the right kind?" Do we sympathize with the tried and afflicted? Do we search out and help the poor and needy? in short, are we Christ-like? Remember, if we "have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his." To be Christlike is to strive to do as he did. Let us read the record and see how he lived. Let us do what we do with an eye single to God's glory. Let love be without dissimulation, that we may be sharers of the reward held out for the faithful.

Yours, hoping soon to see the King in his beauty,

Butler Ives.

Chateaugay, N. T.

From Bro. B. P. Manning.

Bro. Grant:—I am still striving for the Kingdom, and desire to have it established in the New Earth. I am glad that the good Lord has put it into the hearts of some of his dear waiting children to have one more Campmeeting in Lynn, Mass., so that the dear children in N. H. can have the privilege of meeting with the saints from other States of like precious faith, to comfort one another. If ever there was a time when such a meeting was wanted, I do believe it is now, when there are so many drawing back. Dear brethren, let us remember what the apostle Paul says in Heb. 10: 25,—"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." 37th verse. "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." O, my dear brethren and sisters, how many have drawn back; only here and there a traveler to be found. Well, the Lord is the same to-day as he ever was; he will save all that put their trust in him.

I have been looking over the past fifteen years, since God for Christ's sake forgave my sins, which was on the fifth day of June, 1842. O what changes have taken place. What a falling away there has been. But, praise the Lord, there are a few that will endure unto the end.

There is some interest in Warner, N. H., about having a Conference, or Grove Meeting. I do believe it would be the means of doing good, and my prayer is that God will speed the right. Dear brethren and sisters; I hope that you will make those meeting a subject a prayer, that God will approve of the course the brethren are taking to save our fellow-men and glorify God.

My health is poor at this time, but my faith rests in the power of God. Pray for me, brethren, that my faith fail not. Your brother in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

B. P. Manning.

Gaffstown, N. H., Aug. 10, 1857.

Choice Selections.

Religious Mission of Woman.

It will be seen that many of those women whose religious experience is here related, were class leaders and leaders of bands, and as the practice of appointing females to the office of leaders does not obtain in this country, and band meetings are obsolete; and as the practice of praying in prayer meetings by our gifted sisters is nearly so in most places, some apology for the practice, as it existed among the Methodists in the mother country, may not be out of place. It is universally admitted that the battle-field is not the place for woman to display her courage, unless it be when the storm is over, as a ministering spirit, an angel of mercy, acting the part of the good Samaritan, binding up the wounds of the fallen, wiping the cold sweat from the brow of the dying, or pouring the oil, the balm, and the wine of consolation into the mind of the sufferer. Nor is it in the counsels of the nation, in the arena of stormy debate, that we expect to hear her voice. That woman in her first creation was inferior to man in physical strength is cheerfully admitted, and in this sense, perhaps, more than in any other, is she to be regarded as the "weaker vessel." But is she inferior in mental endowments and moral courage, in spiritual attainments and in holy enterprise? No, indeed; far from it. What saith the scripture? What saith reason? Reason would say, that that which by universal consent is esteemed the better half, cannot be the worse; that which was twice modeled and fashioned by the Creator, and, of course, doubly refined, cannot be inferior. The Holy Book seems to intimate most clearly that in these cases where the trial was a fair one, the "weaker vessel" was the stronger reasoner. Witness the case of Deborah and Barak, Manoah and his wife, Abigail and David, Huldah and Josiah, the wise woman and Joab, 2 Sam. 14: 14; 20: 22. Are they then inferior in literary capabilities and attainments? Never, where they have had equal opportunities with men. Witness the instances of a Hannah More, a Mrs. Somerville, a Mrs. Sigourney, and others whose works are read, if not with everlasting wonder, yet with perpetual delight. Neither are they inferior in spiritual gifts. Experience shows that many women are equally gifted, and more acceptable in their religious exercises in social meetings than their brethren. They may not be as strong in argument, nor as fierce in controversy, but their improvements are often far more edifying whenever they pray, or speak in the name of the Lord.

The supposition that, under the gospel dispensation, women are prohibited from exercising their spiritual gifts is entirely gratuitous, and is completely set aside by the plain declarations of the New Testament.

The author of the Acts of the Apostles informs us, (Acts 1: 14,) that all "the apostles continued with one accord in prayer and supplications with the women." To suppose that the men prayed in presence of the women, and not the women in presence of the men, seems to be a far-fetched and overstrained interpretation of the text. The same author says that Peter, in explaining the circumstances of the day of Pentecost, refers to a prophecy in Joel, where God, by the mouth of his prophets, promises to pour out his Spirit upon the "daughters" and "handmaids," as well as upon the sons; and that "Philip, the Evangelist, had four daughters that did prophesy;" and forasmuch as none of their predictions are recorded, and as St. Paul, when speaking of "prophesying," says, in effect at least, that it means "speaking to men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort," (1 Cor. 14: 3,) therefore, Philip's daughters did speak in the public assemblies.

St. Paul says, also, that "every woman, praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head," which certainly means, if it mean anything, in the presence of men; for, surely it is no dishonor to a woman to pray in secret "with her head uncovered!" The same apostle says expressly in another part of his writings, that "in Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female," that is, there is no inferiority in the woman, nor superiority in the man. (See Macknight.) "Under the blessed spirit of Christianity," says Dr. Clarke on this text, "they have equal rights, equal privileges, and equal blessings; and, let me add," says the doctor, "they are equally useful."—Coles' Heroines of Methodism.

"HIM THAT COMETH TO ME I WILL IN NO WISE CAST OUT."

JOHN 6: 37.

Just as I am—without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bid'st me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come!

Just as I am—and waiting not
To rid my soul of one dark blot,
To Thee whose blood can cleanse each spot,
O Lamb of God, I come!

Just as I am—though toss'd about
With many a conflict, many a doubt,
Fightings within, and fears without,
O Lamb of God, I come!

Just as I am—poor, wretched, blind;
Sight, riches, healing of the mind,
Yea, all I need, in Thee to find,
O Lamb of God, I come!

Just as I am—Thou wilt receive,
Wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve,
Because Thy promise I believe,
O Lamb of God, I come!

Just as I am—Thy love unknown
Has broken every barrier down;
Now, to be Thine, yea Thine alone,
O Lamb of God, I come!

Just as I am—of that free love,
"The breadth, length, depth and height" to prove,
Here for a season, then above,
O Lamb of God, I come!

The Love of the World.

Another way in which a departure from God very often operates, is by the love of the world. It is not uncommon for persons, who once appeared to be zealous, affectionate, and devoted to God, when they come to be settled in life, and to enter into its necessary avocations, to lose all heart for religion, and take no delight in any thing but saving money. This, it is true, is not generally considered by the world as disreputable: on the contrary, provided we be fair in our dealings, it is reckoned a mark of wisdom. Men will praise thee when thou doest well for thyself. Such an one, say they, is a discreet man, and one that knows how to secure the main chance. Yet the scriptures are very decisive against such characters. This is the sin which they denominate the "lust of the eye." 1 John 2: 16. The cares, and riches, and pleasures of this life, are described as choking the word, and rendering it unfruitful. It is worthy of special notice, that when our Lord had warned his followers to "take heed and beware of covetousness" the example which he gives of this sin is not of one that was a plunderer of other men's property, an unfair dealer, or an oppressor of the poor; but of a "certain rich man whose ground brought forth plentifully," and whose only object appeared to be, first, to acquire a handsome fortune, and then to retire from business and live at ease. Luke 12: 15–21. This also appears to be the character which is blessed by wicked men, but abhorred of God. Ps. 10: 3. A man who deals unfairly with men gains not their blessing, but their curse. Men in general regard only themselves; so long, therefore, as any person deals justly with them, they care not what his conduct is towards God. But it is affecting to think that the very character which they bless and envy, God abhors. The decision of heaven is nothing less than this: "If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2: 15. So far is the love of this world from being the less dangerous on account of its falling so little under human censure, that it is the more so. If we be guilty of any thing which exposes us to the reproach of mankind, such reproach may assist the remonstrances of conscience and of God, in carrying conviction to our bosoms; but of that for which the world acquits us, we shall be exceedingly disposed to acquit ourselves.

It has long appeared to me, that this species of covetousness will, in all probability, prove the eternal overthrow of more characters among the professing people than almost any other sin; and this because it is almost the only sin which may be indulged, and a profession of religion the same time supported. If a man be a drunkard or a fornicator, and adulterer or a liar; if he rob his neighbor, oppress the poor, or deal unjustly, he must give up his pretensions to religion; or if not his religious connections, if they are worthy of being so denominated, will give him up. But he may "love the world, and the things that are in the world," and at the same time retain his character. If the depravity of the human heart be not subdued by the grace of God it will operate. If a dam be placed across some of its ordinary channels, it will flow with greater depth and rapidity in those which remain. It is thus, perhaps, that avarice is most prevalent in old age, when the power of pursuing other vices has in a great measure subsided. And thus it is with religious professors, whose hearts are not right with God. They cannot figure away with the profane, nor indulge in any gross immoralities; but they can love the world supremely to the neglect of God, and be scarcely amenable to human judgment.

And whatever may prove the overthrow of a mere professor, may be a temptation to a good man and greatly injure him. Of this the case of Lot, when he parted with Abraham, furnishes an affecting example. When a situation was put to his choice, "he lifted up his eyes, and beheld all the plain of Jordan, and it was well watered everywhere," and he took up his residence in Sodom. He had better have dwelled in a wilderness than among that debauched people; but he consulted worldly advantage, and the spiritual well-being of his family was overlooked. And what was the consequence? It is true, he was a righteous man, and his righteous soul was grieved with the filthy conversation of the wicked from day to day; but he could have very little influence over them, while they, on the contrary, found means of communicating their odious vices to his family. Some of his daughters appear to have been married while in Sodom; and when the city was to be destroyed, neither they nor their husbands could be persuaded to make their escape, and so probably perished in the overthrow. The heart of his wife was so attached, it seems, to what she had left behind, that she must needs look back; for which she was rendered a monument of Divine displeasure. And as to his two single daughters, though they escaped with him to the mountains, yet they had learned so much of the ways of Sodom as to cover his old age with infamy. This, together with the loss of all his substance, were the fruits of the "well-watered plain," which he had fixed his eyes upon, to the neglect of his spiritual interest. Yet how frequently is the same part acted over again! In the choice of settlements for ourselves, or our children, how common is it to overlook the immorality of the place, the irreligiousness of the connections, or the want of a gospel ministry; and to direct our inquiries only to temporal advantages. From the same principle also many have dealed largely in speculation, and plunged into engagements far beyond their circumstances. The hope of making a fortune, or, as it is termed by some, a lucky hit, draws them into measures which ruin not only themselves but many who confide in them. That mere worldly men should act in this manner is not a matter of surprise; but that men professing to fear God should imitate them—"this is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation."

Farther; many have fallen sacrifices not only to the love of the world but to a conformity to it. These are not the same thing, though frequently found in the same person. The object of the one is principally the acquisition of wealth; the other respects the manner of spending it. That is often penurious: this wishes to cut a figure, and to appear like people of fashion. The former is "the lust of the eye," the latter is "the pride of life." We need not affect singularity in things indifferent; but to engage in the chase of fashionable appearance is not only an indication of a vain and little mind, but is certainly inconsistent with "pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The desire of making an appearance has ruined many people in their circumstances, more in their characters, and most of all in their souls. We may flatter ourselves that we may pursue those things, and be religious at the same time; but it is a mistake. The vanity of mind which they cherish eats up every thing of a humble, serious, and holy nature; rendering an easy prey to temptation, when solicited to do as others do in an evil thing. The christian's rule is the revealed will of God; and where the customs of the world run counter to this, it is his business to withstand them, even though in so doing he may have to withstand a multitude, yea, and a multitude of people of fashion. But if we feel ambitious of their applause, we shall not be able to endure the scorn which a singularity of conduct will draw upon us. Thus we shall be carried down the stream by the course of this world; and shall either fall into the gulf of perdition, or, if any good thing should be found in us toward the Lord God of Israel, it will be almost indiscernible and useless. In short, such characters are certainly in a backsliding state, whether they be ever recovered from it or not. The case of the Laodiceans seems to approach the nearest to theirs of any thing which in scripture occurs to us. They were neither cold nor hot; neither the decided friends of Christ, nor his avowed enemies; they could not relinquish the world in favor of religion, yet neither could they let religion alone. They were vainly puffed up with a notion of their wealth, their wisdom, and their finery; saying, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; but in the account of the faithful and true witness they were poor, and wretched, and miserable, and blind, and naked. Such a decision ought to make us tremble at the thought of aspiring to imitate people of fashion.—The Backslider.

Spirit Rappers.

Keep away from them. Keep your children away from them. Do you ask why? Because,—

1. They certainly do no good. They teach nothing worth knowing, they forgive no sin, they sanctify no heart, they save no soul. If they rap on tables, they do not supply them with food; if they shake and lift them, they do not servants' hire in moving them nor washing dishes. A man might have forty thousand such spirits in his house, yet be no better off, either in soul, body, or estate.

2. They have done much mischief. Many have become insane by running after these spirit rappers. The young have been led to trifle with serious and sacred things. The Bible has been brought into contempt. Some who professed to be disciples of Christ have avowed infidel sentiments, by the influence of these rappings. Their tendency is to turn the mind from God, the concerns of the soul and eternity.

3. Let them alone, because it is wicked and dangerous to meddle with them. God has forbidden us to "seek unto familiar spirits that peep and mutter," or to have any thing to do with witches, necromancers and devils. He has, in all ages, allowed devils to do some strange and wonderful things, to try and prove men. He has forewarned us of this. If he has given "lying spirits" leave to tempt this generation, will you run into temptation? No. Let all who value their own peace and safety keep away. Do not invite the Devil to ruin you.—Western Watchman.

SIGNS OF PROSPERITY.

Where spades grow bright, and idle words grow dull;
Where jails are empty, and where barns are full;
Where church-paths are with frequent feet out worn;
Law court-yards weedy, silent and forlorn;
Where doctors foot it and where farmers ride;
Where age abounds, and youth is multiplied;
Where these signs are, they clearly indicate
A happy people and well governed state.

For the Children.

For the Crisis.

Take Care of your Thoughts.

It is an old, but a true adage;—"take care of the cents, and the dollars will take care of themselves;" so in this case, take care of your thoughts, and the words and actions will be right. Then, if you want to be kept from evil, take care of your thoughts. It is in the heart evil begins. If you will only keep your thoughts pure, your life will be blameless. The indulgence of sinful thoughts and desires produces sinful acts. The pleasurable contemplation of a sinful deed is usually followed by its commission. I would advise you, my friend, to never allow yourself to pause and consider the pleasure or profit you might derive from this or that sin. Close the mind against the suggestion at once and forever, as you would lock and bolt your doors against a robber! No one becomes a thief, a drunkard, or a murderer at once. The mind must be corrupted. The wicked suggestion must be indulged, and revolved in the thoughts, until it loses its heinousness, and the anticipated gain or pleasure comes to outweigh the evils of transgression.

The imagination of the young is very apt to paint forbidden pleasure in gay and dazzling colors,—it is the serpent's charm,—look out for him! Gaze not upon the deceitful picture. Suffer not the intruder to get the advantage over you. Meet the enemy at the door and drive him from your heart. As a rule, the more familiar you become with sin the less hateful it appears, so that the more completely you preserve your mind from unholy and wicked thoughts the better.

Now, my young friends, one and all, avoid the society where obscenity and profanity is heard and practiced; choose the society of the good and virtuous. Read no immoral books or papers. Make a covenant with your eyes. As a man thinketh so is he. Take care of the thoughts, and the actions will take care of themselves.

P. Tandy.

Moravian School.

In the island of Barbadoes, West Indies, there are several schools, taught by the missionaries. A naval officer who visited one of them, containing two hundred colored boys and girls, gives the following account of it.

A sign was made by one of the children, by holding up the hand, that he wanted to speak to the master. On going to the child, who was just eight years old, the master asked what was the matter.

"Massa," said he, with a look of horror and pointing to a little boy of the same age, who sat near him, "Massa, this boy says he does not believe in the resurrection!"

"This is very bad," said the master, "but do you, my little boy, believe in the resurrection yourself?"

"Yes, massa, I do."

"But can you prove it from the Bible?"

Yes, massa; Jesus says, 'I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.' And in another place, 'Because I live, ye shall live also.'"

The master added, "Can you prove it from the Old Testament?"

"Yes; for Job says, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.'"

"But are you sure these passages are in the Bible? Here is a Bible; point them out to us."

The little boy instantly turned to all the passages and read them aloud. The officer examined several of the classes, and received answers from the greater part of them, that might make many a white child, and white parents, too, blush, amid all the privileges of their own land.

Mankind may be divided into three classes—those who do what is right from principle; those who act from appearances, and those who act from impulse.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE, | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1857. | WHOLE NO. 105. VOL. VI. NO. 1.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

ETERNITY.

Eternity! Who can unfold thee?
Who number now thy myriads
Of vast and slow revolving cycles?
Or measure now thy periods?
Who fathom now thy depths unbounded?
Who draw the veil of night away,
That hides thy shores from mortal vision,
And ope to us the gates of day?

The dying leaves, which oft in Autumn
Strew wide the dark and gloomy plain;
The sands that bound the swelling ocean,
And ev'ry drop that fills the main,—
Are but a grain weighed 'gainst the mountains,
With thee compared, whose endless light
Came forth and was with God coeval,
And saw creation rise to sight.

The mind is lost amid the ages
That circle round Jehovah's throne;
It vainly strives to pierce the darkness,
Which God can comprehend alone.
Made sensible of mortal weakness,
Man upward lifts his longing eyes,
To Him who governs all with wisdom,
Lost in deep wonder and surprise.

Eternity! What depth of meaning
Is in that solemn word contained!
It bids thee trifle not, O mortal!
For time once lost is ne'er regained.
It bids thee shape thy journey upward,
Above alluring scenes of life,
That sweet may be thy long reposing,
Beyond this world of pain and strife.

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

Vernon, Vt.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Speak Gently.

Speak gently. O! speak kindly to that erring one; thou mayest yet win him back to the path of rectitude and righteousness. Perhaps thou mayest, through the power of gentleness, lead him, step by step, to the feet of Jesus. O! let no harsh and unkind word escape from thy lips to mar the good that thou mayest do. Remember, there is a power in kindness which cannot long be resisted. Is thy brother passionate? Soothe the roughness and unevenness of his temper by thine own meek and gentle spirit. Meekness may subdue him to a like temper. Thine own lovely example may win him to goodness. Does he cause the pearly drop to sparkle in thine eye by his unkindness? Does he speak harshly and cruelly to thee? O! speak gently in return. Does he laugh to derision thy truthfulness and piety? Let nothing but the spirit of the meek and lowly Jesus manifest itself in thee. He may for a time appear self-willed and almost unapproachable; but, ah! beneath that cold and haughty exterior lies a heart that is not entirely devoid of the tender feelings of humanity. Think you he can long remain unmoved while under such influence? No; he may appear to scorn your gentle and Christ-like spirit, but thy goodness is fast winning the admiration of thine erring brother, and he may ere long acknowledge the irresistible power that is contained in one kind word. Speak gently! Why cast a blight on all that is fair and beautiful, by those harsh words! Gentle words are a healing balm to the heart that is bruised. They spread sunshine and joy around all who may chance to come under their enlivening influence. Then be lavish of thy gentle words, but spare those cruel ones.

"Speak gently, 'tis a little thing
Dropped in the heart's deep well;
The good, the joy that it may bring,
Eternity will tell."

M. A. M.

Conesus Centre, N. Y.

[We hope to receive many articles like the above, all baptized in the love of Jesus.—ED.]

For the Crisis.

The Friendship of Jesus.

"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."—JOHN 15: 14.

The friendships of this life and the principles which constitute them are not only the same, but are as numerous as the classes among whom they exist. The thief and the liar, the robber and murderer, the sensualist and the libertine, the man of ease and of pleasure, of joy and song, of avarice and luxury, of ignorance and letters, of commerce and mechanics, of poverty and wealth, as well as of chastity and virtue, all have their friends, whose characters are the exact counterpart of the principles by which they have constituted their friendships. Indeed, where is the man so base, so low in moral degradation as not to find one congenial to his tastes and condition, with whom he can secure a friendship? Men who all their life time have been strangers, and but for a very trivial cause would have always remained so, now meet, form an acquaintance, are on terms of intimacy and constitute friendships for the purpose of engaging in some new enterprise, or of prosecuting one of the various avocations of life. Their pursuit may be characterized with vice as well as virtue. Perhaps to swindle their neighbor out of his honest earnings; to wrest from the widow and orphan their substance; to betray the virtue of the innocent and unsuspecting; to crush forever the hopes of the confiding and the affectionate, and even, if possible, to annihilate the embodiment of mercy, purity and love, as in the person of our Savior Jesus, over whom Pilate and Herod were made friends. Lk. 23: 12. Indeed, an almost endless variety of principles constitutes an equal variety of friendships, and gives rise to the numerous disorders of society. How vividly and beautifully does the harmony and the blessedness, the oneness and perpetuity of that friendship required of the christian and expressed in our text, contrast with the multiplicity, deformity and fickleness of this life's friendships.

"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you," saith Jesus.

Let us then, in the discussion of our subject, carefully observe

I. Seven characteristics of the friendship of Jesus.

1. His friendship possesses the characteristic of Sincerity. One has well remarked—"the first law of friendship is sincerity." It is free from every appearance of dissimulation. The profession of it never exceeds the reality. There exists no overdrawn picture of Jesus' friendship. His whole heart is in it. He makes no false pretense. In every vicissitude he abides faithful. No consideration would induce him to forfeit his friendship with one of his "little ones," for the purpose of more fully availing himself of a friendship with another, and especially when no real cause for such a forfeiture existed in them. No! bless his name, his is a sincerely loving friendship to all those who are the recipients of it; and ought not the friendship of his followers to bear a close resemblance to his for them? O could we only discover in every manifestation of christian friendship an unblemished sincerity, how blessed, how very desirable would such a friendship be. It would be real friendship or no friendship, that would exist between those who professed any friendship at all for each other. And indeed its existence would not depend upon individual caprice, but upon the nobler, firmer basis of Jesus' friendship. The sincere friendship of Jesus, logically and truthfully demands an equally sincere friendship between his friends. Do we possess it?

2. It possesses the characteristic of Benevolence. Indeed, his friendship originated in benevolence, and for benevolent purposes. So very benevolent are his sympathies and interests for those who are his friends, that he delights in the acknowledgments of their virtues, and reckons himself as a participator in the wrongs and injuries done to them by their foes. Never, no, never has he joined the cause of the enemy against them. He lavishes upon them his favors, and never enters a complaint of having done too much for his friends. Indeed, his friendship far exceeds all that he has ever required of us. He laid down his life for his enemies, (see Rom. 5: 6, 10,) and announces in John 15: 13, that, "greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." And in 1 John 3: 16, it is urged that, in consideration of the fact that Christ "laid down his life for us, we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." Is that christian friendship which some very trivial circumstance will cause to tremble, and perhaps to be severed forever, adequate to such an emergency as this? to observe such requirements as the above? But we will notice that the friendship of Christ,

3. Has the characteristic of Perpetuity. No jealousy, no evil surmising, no misunderstanding can ever disturb the harmony of the friendship existing between Jesus and his friends. Ye talebearers, whisperers, traducers, backbiters, and slanderers, can accomplish none of your infernal purposes here. You may possibly disturb the peace of communities, destroy the progress of piety in the church, injure the usefulness of the ministry, and separate the friends of Jesus by setting on fire of hell the whole course of nature, but you can never separate Jesus and his friends. Nay, you dare not, as you fear his wrath, pour your falsehoods, surmisings and innuendoes into his ear. No, never! and if there were not such an unaccountable tendency in those even who claim to be religious to take up a reproach against their neighbor, you would all be very soon out of business, or be obliged to be decent. Come, then, ye friends of Jesus, cheer up, cheer up! No longer fear that you have forfeited the friendship of the Son of God, because bigotry, whispering and slander has wrested from you one you still dearly love. None but yourselves can ever break the friendship you have formed with Jesus. Reports, with enemies to circulate them, may multiply in swarms, but they have no power here. Jesus abides faithful, and he never, no! never will yield his friendship with you voluntarily. If it is ever broken you must do it, for you are the only party who will or can.

4. The friendship of Christ possesses the characteristic of Equality. "God is no respecter of persons." Acts 10: 34. Jesus practiced none. Paul knew no man after the flesh: no, not even Christ. 2. Cor. 5: 16. The gospel, instead of inculcating respect of persons, denounces divine judgments against those who are guilty of it. James 2: 1–10. There is no aristocracy in scripture piety. All are to be estimated according to their relation to Christ, and not by their rings or their apparel. Jesus smiles with equal complacency upon those who are truthfully his friends. Ought not all those who are the unmistakable friends of Jesus to observe the same principle in their intercourse with each other? A hearty recognition of christianity in any individual should be a sufficient reason for a hearty reception of him as one of the personal friends of Jesus. Is not this the basis of Jesus' friendship? and should we not imitate him? And should we not be exceedingly cautious how we suffer a trivial circumstance to disturb its harmony? "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." Matt. 7: 1, 2; Rom. 2: 1.

5. Another characteristic of this friendship is, it is universally available; none are excluded. The promise is free, the call general, the access always open. It appears, indeed, quite strange, that those who have nearly all their lifetime experienced the treachery of earthly friendships, should so long neglect a friendship with Jesus; and more especially when they may delay too long. O, dear reader, if you have a heart to appreciate a friend, avail yourself of the best, the most loving and permanent. Jesus is such a friend. He is a tried friend, a friend indeed. Come, O come, and receive his friendly embrace. Come and experience the rich favors of his free and heavenly friendship.

6. An additional characteristic of Jesus' friendship is, that it is Confidential. By one it has been truly affirmed, that, "there can be no friendship without confidence, and no confidence without integrity." How frequently have we desired to find one with whom we could trust our secrets. And when we have ventured to unburden our grief-stricken hearts to those who, we thought, would never betray our confidence, we have at times had cause to regret it, and we have almost involuntarily inquired, "Who is my friend?" But respecting the friendship of Jesus, we need entertain no fears. Jesus will hear it all, hear it willingly; yea, hear it over again if we are disposed to repeat it, and in his bosom he will keep it safely, and lavish upon us blessings adequate to secure to our burdened hearts comfort and consolation. His name is Jesus, and with it comes every conceivable good. O what a precious friend is he. How untiring, how constant, how devoted! Go, ye wayworn, heart-burdened pilgrim, even to his mercy seat; go, and enter your complaint. His ear is open, his heart pulsates with infinite sympathy for you, and also for your race. He has been touched with the feelings of your infirmities and knows how to succor you. Friends have denied, deserted, and betrayed him. He knows your loneliness. Fear not then to avail yourself of his friendly sympathy and encouragement. He will also make you his confidant. John 15: 15.

The last characteristic which we shall now notice is, that Jesus' friendship has he Divine approval. How blessed thet thought. While enjoying the pure, heavenly friendship of our Savior Jesus, we also possess the friendship and approval of his, yea of our Father; for friendship with the Son of God secures the Father's love. How unlike earthly friendships. It is not unfrequently the case that a friendship is formed between families; and when it is discovered that they are likely to result in a permanent alliance, there is such an expression of the parents' enmity as to prohibit all further friendly intercourse. Not so with the Father of the Son of God. Every permanent friendship made with Jesus so perfectly meets his Father's approbation that he imparts to such the spirit of adoption, of sonship, and bestows upon him a Father's benediction, expressive of his divine approval. It makes no difference who you are or have been; whether high or low, rich or poor, highly intellectual or otherwise; if you will, you can be Jesus' friend and obtain the divine approval of his Father, who will in consequence of your friendship for his Son be your Father also. O thrice blessed thought! Come one, come all, and be the friends of Jesus Christ our Lord.

II. Let us make a brief reference to the advantages of a friendship with Jesus.

These are already more than anticipated. However we will make a few suggestions, for the advantages of such a friendship are incalculable. Who has ever sustained a permanent injury in consequence of a friendly alliance with the Son of God, and the espousal of christianity? The expenditures and sacrifices essential to the attainment of any great good in this world are never recognized as losses, providing the good is attained, but as good investments. Thus is it in religion. No friend of Jesus ever sustains any really permanent loss in consequence of his devotion to his Savior, for those sacrifices which are essential to secure religious good are never made in vain. They are indeed good investments. They are in themselves very necessary means to the certain attainment of a very desirable end. Indeed, friendship with Jesus insures godliness to his friends, and therefore a living profit is realized; for "godliness is PROFITABLE unto ALL things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Tim. 4: 8. How profitable then is Jesus' friendship.

Think of it, dear reader. Two lives are the nett proceeds of that godliness which results from the friendship of Christ. "The life that now is,"—embracing every conceivable good arising from divine blessings and adapted to our comfort, peace, encouragement and benefit here; "and of that which is to come." Who can reach any just estimate of that life which is to come? Perfect, complete, eternal. There is no deficiency here which is not infinitely supplied there. There will be peace and plenty, health and comfort, honor and glory, wealth and blessings of such infinite and never ending variety as to beggar all description. O blessed life! It is a life without a pain, without a sorrow, without a sigh, without a care, without a tear, or without the experience of any thing to which the term evil is applicable in this life; not for a limited period, but eternally. O what does it avail to attempt the enumeration of the blessings of Jesus' friendship, the multiplicity of which outvies enumeration, and their magnitude defies all measurement? Come, all ye who have never experienced the sweets of Jesus' friendship, cast your eye toward Calvary. Behold the five sealing demonstrations of his perpetual friendship in the five wounds he bears in his own body. You cannot doubt. They bid you come to him with a persuasive eloquence intensified by the blood which they emit. And will you not come? Indeed, can you remain away longer? O sinner, come! Yea, come now, and all the advantages of his friendship will accrue to you. The Lord help you.

III. We now invite attention to the principle on which this friendship depends; and also its extent and nature.

The principle is OBEDIENCE to the commands of Jesus. On this point we shall avail ourself of an extract from the writings of one who very clearly comprehended the true nature of christian obedience, and which aptly expresses our own sentiments on the subject. Listen.

"The obedience of love, makes no division of Christ's commandments into essential and non-essential. 'Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you,' whether you think it is important or not. We know that we love him when we have respect unto all his commandments. The obedience of hope says, how much must I do to be permitted to enter the kingdom? The obedience of fear asks, what may I omit to do and yet escape from hell? The obedience of love simply inquires, 'Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?' It does not ask, what must I do; but, what can I do to show my love to Jesus? It does not ask, how far I can venture to disobey, and keep my hope of the kingdom? how far off can I follow Jesus, and yet not be disowned of him? Oh, never, never! He who will obey Christ no further than he may fancy is essential to salvation, has never obeyed him at all. Love of self, not love of Christ, is his controlling motive. He is striving not to please his Savior, but to secure his own personal happiness. Love teaches a different way. Love delights to do his will. Love delights to do all his will. Love never asks, what is essential to salvation, but what does Jesus command? Love never asks, how little may I do, but how much can I do? If he commands that is reason enough. He is no loving child who will obey his father only in those things which he must do, or be disowned and disinherited. He is no LOVING child who will do all he dare to grieve a doting parent whom he believes will pardon all, and love him though he grieves him. He who truly loves him will obey his slightest desires as well as his most peremptory commands. He who truly loves will study to know all his will, and in his very heart delight to do it—not to avoid disinheritance—not to secure his estate—not to enjoy his father's bounty, either present or prospective,—but simply because the father wishes, asks it, and commands it. And yet men call themselves obedient children of God, while they refuse to do what he commands, because he does not add to the command a promise of the kingdom, or a threatening of hell. Oh, it is terrible to think how fearful will be their disappointment! Obeying only to secure salvation is itself sufficient proof that they have not obeyed unto salvation. Omitting all but what they think essential to salvation is of itself sufficient proof that they have omitted all that is essential to salvation. The faith of the gospel works by love, and love is obedient to all his commandments, so far as it is able to know and to do them. . . . It will do whatever Christ commands, and he who stops because there is no penalty of hell-fire attached to the command, is no friend to Jesus. He does not obey from love to Jesus, but from love to self."

In consideration of the above, what is the nature of our obedience? Is there not danger here of making a fearful, a fatal mistake? Hope and fear are two faculties which probably exert a more controlling influence over our minds than any others, and for this reason may influence us more constantly in our activities than we are aware. It is true that the gospel presents motives adapted to excite both fear and hope. And while the former should arouse every energy of the careless and incorrigible sinner, I am quite convinced, that as sacrifice and suffering are always placed in very intimate relation to future blessing and reward, (see Heb. chap. 11,) therefore, the true province of hope is a recognition of future glory and redemption as a motive of encouragement and support; while the true motive to obedience is, love to God, and love to his Son Jesus. John 14: 15,—"If ye love me, keep my commandments."

O, have ye not a great deal of selfishness to overcome, to crucify, in order to a preparation for Messiah's advent? In the cultivation of scripture piety self must be crucified. Can it ever be while we only observe divine requirements to avoid some personal evil, or secure some personal good? May the divine blessing rest upon us and assist us in obeying the commandments of God, that we may thereby prove that we love him. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." 1 John 5: 3.

JOHN HOWELL.

For the Crisis.

Experience.

As the season for campmeetings and tent meetings is at hand, perhaps a few words by way of experience may be of service to some who purpose to attend them. A campmeeting, or large gathering of christians, is a place where we are apt to lose our individuality. We are apt to think that if we meet with those who are full of faith, and hope, and zeal, we shall certainly be blessed, whether we use the necessary means or not; but experience teaches us that if we would have communion with God we must take up our daily cross and follow our Savior. Secret and family prayer is just as necessary at the camp ground as in our dwellings at home. I was once at a Methodist meeting; and while conversing with a man, he said he had backslidden since he came to the ground. He said he had been looking on to see others at work, had neglected his own duty, and had less feeling upon the subject of salvation than when he came. Let us watch and pray, because our adversary "goeth about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour;" and he seizes every struggling soul as his own lawful prey.

D. N. SMITH.

Boston, Aug. 24.

For the Crisis.

Another Objection Answered.

Sometime since a professed minister of the gospel urged 2 Tim: 2, as an objection to female preaching. The scripture thus urged reads as follows;—"And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." He urged that as the Apostle does not mention its being committed to women, therefore, women should not preach!

Now if this rule of exegesis be correct, I ask, what promise or threatening would be left to woman? We cannot learn from the sacred record that God ever threatened woman with death in case of her disobedience. Yet women do die. It appears to have been before the woman was created that God pronounced this prohibition and threatening upon man. "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Yet it is quite apparent the woman understood it referred equally to both sexes, as she makes use of the plural in her conversation with the tempter. Gen. 3: 2.

In communicating his purposes to the human race, our Creator has been pleased to address the man. The reason is obvious. He has denominated him as the HEAD, and woman as his "helpmeet." Now when God creates one being to help another, his infinite wisdom, of course, produces one fully capacitated to help. And if the Creator has stated in what particulars the "helpmeet" shall assist the head, then let such "helpmeet" scrupulously adhere to those particulars. But if nothing definite as to labor is assigned them by their Creator, only they shall be helpers, is it not reasonable to infer they are to render assistance whenever and wherever they are capable, whether in mental, physical, or spiritual labor?

If because woman is not mentioned as having the gospel committed to her, she must be excluded from improving this gift which has been committed to many of her sex, by the same rule she may be excluded from God's ordinances. Hear Paul,—"Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you." Now because the sisters are not mentioned, does it follow they will not share in the commendation of the Apostle if they thus observe God's ordinances? When Christ instituted his supper, he only administered the symbols of his body and blood to males: and in commanding its perpetuity until his second coming he only addressed the male sex. No females were present, and no mention of their ever partaking of this blessed ordinance; and yet who doubts their right to do so, providing they possess the characteristics of a Bible communicant?

When the King pronounces the last final sentence on the righteous and on the wicked, the reason assigned to the righteous is because they have performed acts of kindness to his BRETHREN. And to the wicked, because they had neglected to perform such acts to his BRETHREN. No commendation to those who manifested benevolence towards the sisters; and yet who has any doubt that the kindness bestowed on those women that labored with Paul in the gospel will not meet with the same approbation from the King?

Again, when Paul would administer consolation to those bereft of dear friends, he only addresses the male sex,—"I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep," &c.; and then follows the glorious promise of the resurrection. Now do any have misgivings relative to christian females sharing the consolation here imparted? When inspiration, by the same Apostle, is speaking of the coming of the Lord and the situation of God's church at that time, it speaks thus,—"Ye, BRETHREN, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief," &c. Now because the sisters are not mentioned, does it follow that they will not understand, and be overtaken as a thief? Do not these scriptures, and many more which might be adduced, equally include both sexes, though inspiration pleases to address the male sex as the representative of the human race?

It appears from the sacred record that both sexes will be engaged in spreading the glorious truth of the Lord's coming. Read Luke 12: 45;—"But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and be drunken." The wicked servant that says, "My Lord delayeth his coming," cannot be satisfied by spreading this untruth without beating the "men-servants and MAIDENS" that give the meat to the household in due season. Yes, maidens, who proclaim this unpopular truth, may expect now and then a stripe, and they are not to marvel as though some strange thing had happened; for if faithful in performing what we can in this glorious work, we shall make some inroads on the kingdom of our adversary, the Devil. The greater the inroads the louder will be his roar, but let's never mind;—Jesus is at the helm.

BEULAH MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct., Aug. 23, '57.

Courtesy is the only true mark of nobil-

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 2, 1857.

A Word to our Readers.

As this is the first number of a new volume, and the commencement of the third subscription year of the World's Crisis, it seems proper that we should say a word concerning the past, present, and future.

The past. In the language of Bro. Burnham when speaking of the Crisis, we would say, "thus far we think the Lord has remarkably opened its way." Our paper was commenced in Lowell, Jan. 18, 1854, and was sustained entirely by donations until Aug. 1855, when it was found necessary to change it to a subscription paper. It commenced as such, with about fifteen hundred subscribers, and was moved to Boston in Feb. 1856. In the Spring of the same year, Bro. J. Merriam, our excellent editor, who had gained the love and esteem of all the readers of the Crisis, was unable to continue his arduous duties, on account of great weakness in his eyes, from which he has not yet recovered. The present editor—the pastor of the church worshiping at Chapman Hall, Boston, was persuaded to take Bro. Merriam's place, until he should be able to return. But, as Bro. M—— has decided that he cannot return with safety to his eyes, no change has yet been made, though often requested by your editor. If his services have been of any benefit to the church, he would give the Lord all the glory, and rejoice in Him who can use feeble, erring man, as an instrument in his hands to comfort the afflicted, cheer the disconsolate, warn the unruly, and strengthen the weak. We are conscious of being associated with some of the best people in the world, who would share the last dollar with a poor brother, or defend the truth of the Bible in the presence of kings and emperors at the expense of their lives, before they would give up their blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him. They are men and women who can't be bought and sold by the follies and fashions of the world. Wherever they go, their impress is left. They are bound for the land of glory, and are determined, in the strength of the Lord, to endure to the end, and shout victory forever upon the Eden-plains of glory. Go on, brethren, my whole being is with you;—

"Here's my heart and hand,
To meet you in that happy land."

The present. So far as the interests of the Crisis are concerned, our present prospects are good,—never better. We have secured the aid of several valuable contributors, who will enrich our columns from week to week with their interesting articles. We are favored with excellent help in our office—those who understand their business, and take pleasure in acting for the interests of the paper. We are pleasantly situated over Bro. Geo. T. Adams' clothing store, 167 Hanover Street. Our type and fixtures are all paid for, and if what is due on the last volume is paid, as we expect it will be, there will be funds sufficient to pay the editor for his services, so that we can go on without any extra weight upon our shoulders. We believe our noble hearted and self-sacrificing brethren will do the best they can towards paying what is now due the office, so that our family paper may be as free for the poor as the gospel of the kingdom, that we love so well.

The future. We know not what a day may bring forth, but we feel confident that ere long we shall see the sign of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven. There is a bright prospect that Paradise will soon be restored, and the sleeping millions be raised to enjoy their peaceful and happy Eden home. Our object will be to encourage and comfort the children of the Lord, while on their pilgrim journey in this wicked world, and keep before them the signs of the times and evidences of the Lord's coming, in connection with the other great truths of the Bible, that have been obscured by the fables of these last days. We purpose to make the Crisis just such a paper as every christian will love to read, and lend to his neighbor. We are resolved, in the strength of the Lord, that our paper shall be free from all unkind expressions, all party and sectarian interests, endeavoring to follow the golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." We can see where we have been sectarian in days by-gone, and the very thought of it fills us with remorse, and a firm resolution to avoid in the future that whirlpool of ruin, where so many have been turned from the narrow path to wander in the dark labyrinths of evil surmising, whispering, backbiting, clamor, slander and evil speaking.

Come, Brn. and Srs., let us lay aside all our sectarian prejudices, and go to work for the Lord in good earnest. Let us get the beam out of our own eyes, and then we may try to remove the mote from our brother's eye. We should never throw stones at others, till we are without fault ourselves; but when we become pure, we lose the disposition to attack our brother. We have never yet seen a grumbler, or fault-finder, who did not give abundant evidence that reformation should begin at home first. As Bro. Boutell says, "it is time to let this good religion LOOSE;" it will not hurt any one, let it go free, and shine out before our fellow men. May the Lord help us to live nearer him than ever before, so that our last days may be our best. Brn. and Srs., be GOOD. "The pure in heart shall see God."

Laws of Health.

We purpose to devote a small portion of our paper for articles on the laws of health. It is a christian duty to eat and drink to the glory of God, and avoid every thing that injures our physical systems, and yet how few realize the importance of this subject. Most seem more anxious to get food pleasing to the taste, than that which is healthy. Many indulge themselves in eating and drinking things decidedly injurious, without being aware of the fact; others do it with their eyes open, and, for the sake of gratifying the sense of taste from five to fifteen minutes, three times a day, will take food and drink that will produce unpleasant sensations during fifteen hours out of the twenty-four, besides causing diseases that ruin the constitution and produce premature death. We find but few healthy people, but we are satisfied it is not pleasing to the Lord, nor in harmony with his arrangement, to have so many of his children suffering with disease. We feel it to be our duty to do what we can to benefit our readers and their families, physically, as well as morally. Those who have poor health, frequently lose much of their religious enjoyment, and feel depressed in their minds on account of their sickness; and when their health returns, joy and peace come with it. Because they would not eat and drink to the glory of God, they suffer in body and mind, and do not accomplish half so much good in the world, nor live half so long as they would if they had observed the Bible rule regulating our diet. Unhealthy food is usually most expensive. There is no drink so cheap and healthy as water, and yet most people think they must have tea and coffee, if not beer and brandy. There is no flour so dear as the whitest and finest wheat; and at the same time, there is none so unhealthy. If we would have healthy bread, we should not separate the parts the Lord designed to be held in union. If you would enjoy life, and be healthy, let your food be plain, and your drink pure water.

Boston.

We would say to our friends, that the Lord blesses us from time to time with a new witness, who can testify that there is still mercy for sinners, and pardon for the guilty. Eight have recently been buried with Christ in baptism and others are almost persuaded. We have four prayer meetings every week, which are seasons of much comfort to the weary pilgrims. These meetings are the lungs of the church. When these are faint and feeble, we know that the church is weak. When they are well attended and sustained, we expect to see spiritual growth and health. Brn. and Srs., be faithful in attending your prayer and class meetings. Let nothing but sickness keep you at home. When our friends come to this city, we hope to see them at our meetings, and hear their voices in defence of our blessed hope. Always make yourselves known. Do not come and go as a stranger, for we are all one in Christ Jesus.

Call at our office, 167 Hanover St., and we will give all needed information concerning our meetings.

To the Sick.

If any of our readers wish to take the Cold Water treatment, or Electro Chemical Baths, we would recommend them to Dr. J. S. Brown, at the Hygiene and Dietetic Institute, No. 20 La Grange Place, where we are now boarding, for the purpose of enjoying their very healthy food. Call and see us.

TICKETS TO CAMPMEETING.—The arrangements in regard to tickets have been so far changed that persons can obtain them from Worcester and way stations above, at the Ticket Offices.

For the Crisis.

Tales of Trust.

One of the direst evils that oppress the church of God is a lack of confident reliance upon him for protection and support. Men have come to doubt the fact of God's especial providence,—ministers doubt it,—people doubt it, and hence, instead of doing their duty and trusting in God, they plunge into the train of money seekers, and look "every one for his gain from his quarter." Isa. 56: 11. The result is that God's providence is forgotten. His kind remembrances are changed into "good luck" and his fatherly corrections are "bad luck" which is hated rather than profited by. To such the apostolic admonition is appropriate,—"My son, DESPISE not the chastening of the Lord." Heb. 12: 5. Admonition and reproof from the Lord is lost on such persons; they will not feel the force of it—they will not consider that it is the hand of God. But not so the christian who has learned Christ as revealed in his word and by his Spirit. He knows what it is to be "brought NIGH by the blood of Christ;" he draws NIGH unto God, and God draws NIGH unto him. Then he rejoices in each token of his love, and yields in meek submission to his chastisements. The language of his oft afflicted heart is such as this:—

"I love to see my Father's hand
Though oft it bears a rod,
'Twill lead me to the promised land,
The city of my God."

Thus he walks rejoicingly on in the pilgrim's pathway and endures the cross, despising the shame, hoping by and by to possess the crown and to share the glory which is so soon to be revealed in us.

The promises of God are Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus. They do not outlaw like an old note in six years or six hundred years. And it is by no means proper for backslidden and apostate christians to excuse their own delinquences by intimating that while God's counsels of OLD were faithfulness and truth, they are by any means less so now. We serve the same God that the prophets served, and in him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. Our leader is Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, TO-DAY, and FOREVER. If he cared for his struggling people then, he cares for them now; if he fed them then, he will feed them now. If he numbered the very hairs of their heads then, he will do the same now. If he watched over them with tender and incessant solicitude then, he will do so now. If they were then prized as the apple of his eye, they are so to-day. O that Christians would draw nearer to God, and learn to trust in him with all their hearts.

To encourage such to trust in God will be the object of a few "Tales of Trust," which may be communicated for the Crisis. We shall speak the things that we do know, and testify the things that we have seen.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Tell Jesus.

As long as we, either as the friends of Christ, or not, are permitted to live in the world and commingle in a social, family, or church capacity, we shall find occasion for complaint, it may be just or unjust. Not that we are to allow in ourselves or others the pernicious evil of picking flaws, and espying motes in each other, but we are, mutually, liable to be aggrieved. In such a case, what would wisdom and charity teach us? Not to run hither and thither with our distressing tale, burdening, and often poisoning the minds of others, without effecting any real good to either party concerned; not to allow the feeling of hatred to control our hearts by revolving in our minds the almost always exaggerated grievance, and continually placing the offender in the most unhappy light,—but they, the heavenly guides, would prompt us to go and tell the matter unto JESUS.

He is the safest resort on all such occasions. He will truly sympathize, direct, relieve. No one is injured by our going to him. The rather, our own souls are comforted, and stayed upon him in increased confidence. We cannot harm our brother by telling Jesus our differences and wrongs: by so doing we love the offending one the more. By going to Jesus, and learning of him, his gentle, forgiving spirit is imparted unto us; hence, the more ready are we to conciliate, and again receive to our bosoms the estranged one.

We cannot quarrel long with a brother, sister, or even foe, while the atmosphere of communion with the blessed Son of God surrounds us. It forms an impervious shield to the darts of malice, envy, upbraidings, or injustice of any kind. Strange! that we are so little aware of the secret of our strength. Close the avenue of communication between the christian and his Savior, and he is truly helpless. How unprepared to contend with the mighty struggles of this human life! How unfitted to accomplish any real good. But it is his privilege ever to keep open this heavenly communion; for Christ invites, eternally,—"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—"Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." It remains only for us to go and be received. And these blessed promises are good for the sinner.

Unconverted fellow traveler to the eternal world! have you ever sought access to Jesus? Have you ever told him of your sins, and awful fears, and of your desires to love and fear him? O, no longer delay. Go and tell him,—I repent; I believe; save, or I perish! Tell him how you long for the forgiveness of every sin, the purifying of every vile affection, and that by his grace you will serve him faithfully to the end. Tell him this, forsake your wrong ways and seek the good, and think you he will turn a deaf ear to your entreaties? Nay, verily. He died that you might live! His loving heart cannot turn you empty away. O receive him as he receives you!

O let us, one and all, make the dear Jesus our first, our chiefest confidant!

M. A. G.

For the Crisis.

Our Blessed Hope.

And ours is, indeed, a blessed hope! It is blessed because it is "the hope" given us by the blessed God, through the blessed Redeemer, in the blessed Gospel. Our hope is one hope. The Bible does not inform us of "christian hopes," "hopes of heaven," "an ardent hope of glory in the disembodied state"—nothing of the kind. It informs us of "the hope," "our hope," "good hope," "my hope," "one hope," "hope of life," "hope of glory," "hope of the promise," "hope of Israel," "that blessed hope," "this hope," "hope toward God," "which hope," "a lively hope," &c.,—always in a definite sense.

Hope springs from a two-fold action of the mind—the action of expectation, and desire. We may expect that which we may not desire; as sickness, pain, death, and other evils, and, therefore, may not hope thus. We may desire that which we may not expect; as exemption from all physical annoyance, and, therefore, may not hope for it. But when we both expect and desire an object we must, as a consequence, hope for it. When we desire and expect wealth, we hope for wealth. When we desire and expect health, we hope for health. So, in the case of christian hope, when we desire and expect eternal life, we hope for eternal life. When we expect and desire the kingdom of God, we hope for the kingdom of God.

Christian hope is founded upon the "promise" and "oath" of God. "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." Heb. 6: 17–19. It follows, therefore, that we can only hope for that which God has promised and sworn to us we shall have. Has he promised and sworn, at any time, that saints shall be rewarded at death? that, disembodied, we shall enter the blessedness of "the spirit-world? that we shall inherit a heaven "beyond the bounds of time and space?" No, verily. The objects upon which christian hope takes hold are plainly set before us in the Scriptures.

I. That, by the grace of God, we shall be enabled to pursue a course of holiness before Him, continually, "unto the end."

II. That, at the end, the Lord Jesus Christ will come again, the second time, literally, really, and personally to earth.

III. That, when he thus comes, he will reign on "the throne of his Father David," "over the house of Jacob," after having raised from the dead and glorified his people, and gathered them to himself.

IV. While he reigns thus on the throne of David, he will punish his foes, subject the nations by his mighty power, and "put down," through the interference of his almighty Father, "all rule, and all authority and power" opposed to his government.

V. Subsequently, there shall be "new heaven, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," which shall continue "world without end."

I do not hesitate to say, "these are true sayings of God." In such a hope as this there is something empowering, elevating, comforting, and saving! Whoso possesses such a hope "purifieth himself even as he is pure." Such a "hope maketh not ashamed." This blessed hope gives consolation amidst the perplexities, losses, crosses and evils of life. It binds up the father's breaking heart when laying the children of his fond love in the darksome, silent tomb. It makes the tender-hearted mother smile through her tears, as she stoops to kiss the pale cheeks of her lovely babe, now still in death, and whispers, "it will live again!"

It makes glad the heart of the orphan, and causes "the widow's heart to sing for joy." It solaces the prisoner appointed unto death, and supports the heart of the captive and the slave, in their dreary bondage. It is the companion of the stricken poor in their want, and comforts the wandering outcast in his desolatien. It cheers the fevered moments of the suffering invalid, and helps the disappointed ones of earth, who cry out with pain and sorrow. It is the anchor of the christian's soul, and the foundation of all his desirable joys. It is life, light, and pleasure wherever it comes, and it comes wherever it will be received.

O glorious hope! It points to crowns, palms, robes, songs, glory, life, immortality! It reveals the world made new, and presents the dazzling gates, and resplendent walls of the holy city of God. It points beyond the land of corruption, lifts up the pall of death, and bids us dry our tears, and hush our sighs and groans in the unspeakable beauty of the prospect which invites us onward to our REST. O glorious hope! How dreary would earth be without thy light benign! O praise the Lord, my soul, and all that is within me, for hope—the CHRISTIAN'S BLESSED HOPE!

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Book of Jasher.

This book is referred to in the Bible, in Joshua 10: 13 and 2 Sam. 1: 18. Josephus says, "That by this book are to be understood certain records kept in some safe place on purpose, giving an account of what happened among the Hebrews from year to year, and called Jasher, or the upright, on account of the fidelity of the annals." M. M. Noah, the learned Jew who died a few years since, says, "Everything that we find in Jasher we find recorded in the Bible, with this difference, that in Jasher the occurrences of the Bible are amplified and detailed at length." On this account, the book is of one thrilling interest. The history of the Antediluvians, Noah, Abraham and Isaac, Joseph, the Sodomites and their destruction, is rendered doubly interesting because of minute details. We have never read a work, aside from the Bible, that so completely absorbed our attention, and rendered such delight. It is a history of the world from the creation of man to the death of Joshua.

The Hebrew preface states, "that this book is called the Book of Jasher, because all its transactions are in that order as they had taken place in the world as regards priority and succession, for thou wilt not find in this book any postponement of events that were anterior, or priority of those that were posterior, but everything is recorded in its place and time. Thou wilt thus find that it relates the death of such a one at the particular time of the life of another, and thus throughout."

The curiosity and anxiety to obtain this book have been so great, that several forgeries have appeared from time to time, bearing the same title.

The following from the Hebrew preface will give some idea of the way in which this book was obtained.

It has at this time been ascertained by us that when the holy city Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus, all the military heads went in to rob and plunder, and that amongst the officers of Titus, was one whose name was Sidrus, who went in to search, and found in Jerusalem a house of great extent, and took away all the spoils which he found there. When he wished to go out of the house, he looked at the wall and fancied that he saw treasures there, so he broke down the wall and the building and found a cask full of various books of the Law, the Prophets, and the Hagiographa, also books of the kings of Israel, and of the kings of other nations, as well as many other book of Israel, together with the books of the Mishnah adopted and established; many rolls were also lying there; he also found all sorts of provision and wine in abundance, and dis-

pears to have been before the woman was created that God pronounced this prohibition and threatening upon man. "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Yet it is quite apparent the woman understood it referred equally to both sexes, as she makes use of the plural in her conversation with the tempter. Gen. 3: 2.

In communicating his purposes to the human race, our Creator has been pleased to address the man. The reason is obvious. He has denominated him as the HEAD, and woman as his "helpmeet." Now when God creates one being to help another, his infinite wisdom, of course, produces one fully capacitated to help. And if the Creator has stated in what particulars the "helpmeet" shall assist the head, then let such "helpmeet" scrupulously adhere to those particulars. But if nothing definite as to labor is assigned them by their Creator, only they shall be helpers, is it not reasonable to infer they are to render assistance whenever and wherever they are capable, whether in mental, physical, or spiritual labor?

If because woman is not mentioned as having the gospel committed to her, she must be excluded from improving this gift which has been committed to many of her sex, by the same rule she may be excluded from God's ordinances. Hear Paul,—"Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you." Now because the sisters are not mentioned, does it follow they will not share in the commendation of the Apostle if they thus observe God's ordinances? When Christ instituted his supper, he only administered the symbols of his body and blood to males: and in commanding its perpetuity until his second coming he only addressed the male sex. No females were present, and no mention of their ever partaking of this blessed ordinance; and yet who doubts their right to do so, providing they possess the characteristics of a Bible communicant?

When the King pronounces the last final sentence on the righteous and on the wicked, the reason assigned to the righteous is because they have performed acts of kindness to his BRETHREN. And to the wicked, because they had neglected to perform such acts to his BRETHREN. No commendation to those who manifested benevolence towards the sisters; and yet who has any doubt that the kindness bestowed on those women that labored with Paul in the gospel will not meet with the same approbation from the King?

Again, when Paul would administer consolation to those bereft of dear friends, he only addresses the male sex,—"I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep," &c.; and then follows the glorious promise of the resurrection. Now do any have misgivings relative to christian females sharing the consolation here imparted? When inspiration, by the same Apostle, is speaking of the coming of the Lord and the situation of God's church at that time, it speaks thus,—"Ye, BRETHREN, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief," &c. Now because the sisters are not mentioned, does it follow that they will not understand, and be overtaken as a thief? Do not these scriptures, and many more which might be adduced, equally include both sexes, though inspiration pleases to address the male sex as the representative of the human race?

It appears from the sacred record that both sexes will be engaged in spreading the glorious truth of the Lord's coming. Read Luke 12: 45;—"But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and be drunken." The wicked servant that says, "My Lord delayeth his coming," cannot be satisfied by spreading this untruth without beating the "men-servants and MAIDENS" that give the meat to the household in due season. Yes, maidens, who proclaim this unpopular truth, may expect now and then a stripe, and they are not to marvel as though some strange thing had happened; for if faithful in performing what we can in this glorious work, we shall make some inroads on the kingdom of our adversary, the Devil. The greater the inroads the louder will be his roar, but let's never mind;—Jesus is at the helm.

BEULAH MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct., Aug. 23, '57.

Courtesy is the only true mark of nobil-

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 2, 1857.

A Word to our Readers.

As this is the first number of a new volume, and the commencement of the third subscription year of the World's Crisis, it seems proper that we should say a word concerning the past, present, and future.

The past. In the language of Bro. Burnham when speaking of the Crisis, we would say, "thus far we think the Lord has remarkably opened its way." Our paper was commenced in Lowell, Jan. 18, 1854, and was sustained entirely by donations until Aug. 1855, when it was found necessary to change it to a subscription paper. It commenced as such, with about fifteen hundred subscribers, and was moved to Boston in Feb. 1856. In the Spring of the same year, Bro. J. Merriam, our excellent editor, who had gained the love and esteem of all the readers of the Crisis, was unable to continue his arduous duties, on account of great weakness in his eyes, from which he has not yet recovered. The present editor—the pastor of the church worshiping at Chapman Hall, Boston, was persuaded to take Bro. Merriam's place, until he should be able to return. But, as Bro. M—— has decided that he cannot return with safety to his eyes, no change has yet been made, though often requested by your editor. If his services have been of any benefit to the church, he would give the Lord all the glory, and rejoice in Him who can use feeble, erring man, as an instrument in his hands to comfort the afflicted, cheer the disconsolate, warn the unruly, and strengthen the weak. We are conscious of being associated with some of the best people in the world, who would share the last dollar with a poor brother, or defend the truth of the Bible in the presence of kings and emperors at the expense of their lives, before they would give up their blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him. They are men and women who can't be bought and sold by the follies and fashions of the world. Wherever they go, their impress is left. They are bound for the land of glory, and are determined, in the strength of the Lord, to endure to the end, and shout victory forever upon the Eden-plains of glory. Go on, brethren, my whole being is with you;—

"Here's my heart and hand,
To meet you in that happy land."

The present. So far as the interests of the Crisis are concerned, our present prospects are good,—never better. We have secured the aid of several valuable contributors, who will enrich our columns from week to week with their interesting articles. We are favored with excellent help in our office—those who understand their business, and take pleasure in acting for the interests of the paper. We are pleasantly situated over Bro. Geo. T. Adams' clothing store, 167 Hanover Street. Our type and fixtures are all paid for, and if what is due on the last volume is paid, as we expect it will be, there will be funds sufficient to pay the editor for his services, so that we can go on without any extra weight upon our shoulders. We believe our noble hearted and self-sacrificing brethren will do the best they can towards paying what is now due the office, so that our family paper may be as free for the poor as the gospel of the kingdom, that we love so well.

The future. We know not what a day may bring forth, but we feel confident that ere long we shall see the sign of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven. There is a bright prospect that Paradise will soon be restored, and the sleeping millions be raised to enjoy their peaceful and happy Eden home. Our object will be to encourage and comfort the children of the Lord, while on their pilgrim journey in this wicked world, and keep before them the signs of the times and evidences of the Lord's coming, in connection with the other great truths of the Bible, that have been obscured by the fables of these last days. We purpose to make the Crisis just such a paper as every christian will love to read, and lend to his neighbor. We are resolved, in the strength of the Lord, that our paper shall be free from all unkind expressions, all party and sectarian interests, endeavoring to follow the golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." We can see where we have been sectarian in days by-gone, and the very thought of it fills us with remorse, and a firm resolution to avoid in the future that whirlpool of ruin, where so many have been turned from the narrow path to wander in the dark labyrinths of evil surmising, whispering, backbiting, clamor, slander and evil speaking.

Come, Brn. and Srs., let us lay aside all our sectarian prejudices, and go to work for the Lord in good earnest. Let us get the beam out of our own eyes, and then we may try to remove the mote from our brother's eye. We should never throw stones at others, till we are without fault ourselves; but when we become pure, we lose the disposition to attack our brother. We have never yet seen a grumbler, or fault-finder, who did not give abundant evidence that reformation should begin at home first. As Bro. Boutell says, "it is time to let this good religion LOOSE;" it will not hurt any one, let it go free, and shine out before our fellow men. May the Lord help us to live nearer him than ever before, so that our last days may be our best. Brn. and Srs., be GOOD. "The pure in heart shall see God."

Laws of Health.

We purpose to devote a small portion of our paper for articles on the laws of health. It is a christian duty to eat and drink to the glory of God, and avoid every thing that injures our physical systems, and yet how few realize the importance of this subject. Most seem more anxious to get food pleasing to the taste, than that which is healthy. Many indulge themselves in eating and drinking things decidedly injurious, without being aware of the fact; others do it with their eyes open, and, for the sake of gratifying the sense of taste from five to fifteen minutes, three times a day, will take food and drink that will produce unpleasant sensations during fifteen hours out of the twenty-four, besides causing diseases that ruin the constitution and produce premature death. We find but few healthy people, but we are satisfied it is not pleasing to the Lord, nor in harmony with his arrangement, to have so many of his children suffering with disease. We feel it to be our duty to do what we can to benefit our readers and their families, physically, as well as morally. Those who have poor health, frequently lose much of their religious enjoyment, and feel depressed in their minds on account of their sickness; and when their health returns, joy and peace come with it. Because they would not eat and drink to the glory of God, they suffer in body and mind, and do not accomplish half so much good in the world, nor live half so long as they would if they had observed the Bible rule regulating our diet. Unhealthy food is usually most expensive. There is no drink so cheap and healthy as water, and yet most people think they must have tea and coffee, if not beer and brandy. There is no flour so dear as the whitest and finest wheat; and at the same time, there is none so unhealthy. If we would have healthy bread, we should not separate the parts the Lord designed to be held in union. If you would enjoy life, and be healthy, let your food be plain, and your drink pure water.

Boston.

We would say to our friends, that the Lord blesses us from time to time with a new witness, who can testify that there is still mercy for sinners, and pardon for the guilty. Eight have recently been buried with Christ in baptism and others are almost persuaded. We have four prayer meetings every week, which are seasons of much comfort to the weary pilgrims. These meetings are the lungs of the church. When these are faint and feeble, we know that the church is weak. When they are well attended and sustained, we expect to see spiritual growth and health. Brn. and Srs., be faithful in attending your prayer and class meetings. Let nothing but sickness keep you at home. When our friends come to this city, we hope to see them at our meetings, and hear their voices in defence of our blessed hope. Always make yourselves known. Do not come and go as a stranger, for we are all one in Christ Jesus.

Call at our office, 167 Hanover St., and we will give all needed information concerning our meetings.

To the Sick.

If any of our readers wish to take the Cold Water treatment, or Electro Chemical Baths, we would recommend them to Dr. J. S. Brown, at the Hygiene and Dietetic Institute, No. 20 La Grange Place, where we are now boarding, for the purpose of enjoying their very healthy food. Call and see us.

TICKETS TO CAMPMEETING.—The arrangements in regard to tickets have been so far changed that persons can obtain them from Worcester and way stations above, at the Ticket Offices.

For the Crisis.

Tales of Trust.

One of the direst evils that oppress the church of God is a lack of confident reliance upon him for protection and support. Men have come to doubt the fact of God's especial providence,—ministers doubt it,—people doubt it, and hence, instead of doing their duty and trusting in God, they plunge into the train of money seekers, and look "every one for his gain from his quarter." Isa. 56: 11. The result is that God's providence is forgotten. His kind remembrances are changed into "good luck" and his fatherly corrections are "bad luck" which is hated rather than profited by. To such the apostolic admonition is appropriate,—"My son, DESPISE not the chastening of the Lord." Heb. 12: 5. Admonition and reproof from the Lord is lost on such persons; they will not feel the force of it—they will not consider that it is the hand of God. But not so the christian who has learned Christ as revealed in his word and by his Spirit. He knows what it is to be "brought NIGH by the blood of Christ;" he draws NIGH unto God, and God draws NIGH unto him. Then he rejoices in each token of his love, and yields in meek submission to his chastisements. The language of his oft afflicted heart is such as this:—

"I love to see my Father's hand
Though oft it bears a rod,
'Twill lead me to the promised land,
The city of my God."

Thus he walks rejoicingly on in the pilgrim's pathway and endures the cross, despising the shame, hoping by and by to possess the crown and to share the glory which is so soon to be revealed in us.

The promises of God are Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus. They do not outlaw like an old note in six years or six hundred years. And it is by no means proper for backslidden and apostate christians to excuse their own delinquences by intimating that while God's counsels of OLD were faithfulness and truth, they are by any means less so now. We serve the same God that the prophets served, and in him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. Our leader is Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, TO-DAY, and FOREVER. If he cared for his struggling people then, he cares for them now; if he fed them then, he will feed them now. If he numbered the very hairs of their heads then, he will do the same now. If he watched over them with tender and incessant solicitude then, he will do so now. If they were then prized as the apple of his eye, they are so to-day. O that Christians would draw nearer to God, and learn to trust in him with all their hearts.

To encourage such to trust in God will be the object of a few "Tales of Trust," which may be communicated for the Crisis. We shall speak the things that we do know, and testify the things that we have seen.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Tell Jesus.

As long as we, either as the friends of Christ, or not, are permitted to live in the world and commingle in a social, family, or church capacity, we shall find occasion for complaint, it may be just or unjust. Not that we are to allow in ourselves or others the pernicious evil of picking flaws, and espying motes in each other, but we are, mutually, liable to be aggrieved. In such a case, what would wisdom and charity teach us? Not to run hither and thither with our distressing tale, burdening, and often poisoning the minds of others, without effecting any real good to either party concerned; not to allow the feeling of hatred to control our hearts by revolving in our minds the almost always exaggerated grievance, and continually placing the offender in the most unhappy light,—but they, the heavenly guides, would prompt us to go and tell the matter unto JESUS.

He is the safest resort on all such occasions. He will truly sympathize, direct, relieve. No one is injured by our going to him. The rather, our own souls are comforted, and stayed upon him in increased confidence. We cannot harm our brother by telling Jesus our differences and wrongs: by so doing we love the offending one the more. By going to Jesus, and learning of him, his gentle, forgiving spirit is imparted unto us; hence, the more ready are we to conciliate, and again receive to our bosoms the estranged one.

We cannot quarrel long with a brother, sister, or even foe, while the atmosphere of communion with the blessed Son of God surrounds us. It forms an impervious shield to the darts of malice, envy, upbraidings, or injustice of any kind. Strange! that we are so little aware of the secret of our strength. Close the avenue of communication between the christian and his Savior, and he is truly helpless. How unprepared to contend with the mighty struggles of this human life! How unfitted to accomplish any real good. But it is his privilege ever to keep open this heavenly communion; for Christ invites, eternally,—"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—"Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." It remains only for us to go and be received. And these blessed promises are good for the sinner.

Unconverted fellow traveler to the eternal world! have you ever sought access to Jesus? Have you ever told him of your sins, and awful fears, and of your desires to love and fear him? O, no longer delay. Go and tell him,—I repent; I believe; save, or I perish! Tell him how you long for the forgiveness of every sin, the purifying of every vile affection, and that by his grace you will serve him faithfully to the end. Tell him this, forsake your wrong ways and seek the good, and think you he will turn a deaf ear to your entreaties? Nay, verily. He died that you might live! His loving heart cannot turn you empty away. O receive him as he receives you!

O let us, one and all, make the dear Jesus our first, our chiefest confidant!

M. A. G.

For the Crisis.

Our Blessed Hope.

And ours is, indeed, a blessed hope! It is blessed because it is "the hope" given us by the blessed God, through the blessed Redeemer, in the blessed Gospel. Our hope is one hope. The Bible does not inform us of "christian hopes," "hopes of heaven," "an ardent hope of glory in the disembodied state"—nothing of the kind. It informs us of "the hope," "our hope," "good hope," "my hope," "one hope," "hope of life," "hope of glory," "hope of the promise," "hope of Israel," "that blessed hope," "this hope," "hope toward God," "which hope," "a lively hope," &c.,—always in a definite sense.

Hope springs from a two-fold action of the mind—the action of expectation, and desire. We may expect that which we may not desire; as sickness, pain, death, and other evils, and, therefore, may not hope thus. We may desire that which we may not expect; as exemption from all physical annoyance, and, therefore, may not hope for it. But when we both expect and desire an object we must, as a consequence, hope for it. When we desire and expect wealth, we hope for wealth. When we desire and expect health, we hope for health. So, in the case of christian hope, when we desire and expect eternal life, we hope for eternal life. When we expect and desire the kingdom of God, we hope for the kingdom of God.

Christian hope is founded upon the "promise" and "oath" of God. "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." Heb. 6: 17–19. It follows, therefore, that we can only hope for that which God has promised and sworn to us we shall have. Has he promised and sworn, at any time, that saints shall be rewarded at death? that, disembodied, we shall enter the blessedness of "the spirit-world? that we shall inherit a heaven "beyond the bounds of time and space?" No, verily. The objects upon which christian hope takes hold are plainly set before us in the Scriptures.

I. That, by the grace of God, we shall be enabled to pursue a course of holiness before Him, continually, "unto the end."

II. That, at the end, the Lord Jesus Christ will come again, the second time, literally, really, and personally to earth.

III. That, when he thus comes, he will reign on "the throne of his Father David," "over the house of Jacob," after having raised from the dead and glorified his people, and gathered them to himself.

IV. While he reigns thus on the throne of David, he will punish his foes, subject the nations by his mighty power, and "put down," through the interference of his almighty Father, "all rule, and all authority and power" opposed to his government.

V. Subsequently, there shall be "new heaven, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," which shall continue "world without end."

I do not hesitate to say, "these are true sayings of God." In such a hope as this there is something empowering, elevating, comforting, and saving! Whoso possesses such a hope "purifieth himself even as he is pure." Such a "hope maketh not ashamed." This blessed hope gives consolation amidst the perplexities, losses, crosses and evils of life. It binds up the father's breaking heart when laying the children of his fond love in the darksome, silent tomb. It makes the tender-hearted mother smile through her tears, as she stoops to kiss the pale cheeks of her lovely babe, now still in death, and whispers, "it will live again!"

It makes glad the heart of the orphan, and causes "the widow's heart to sing for joy." It solaces the prisoner appointed unto death, and supports the heart of the captive and the slave, in their dreary bondage. It is the companion of the stricken poor in their want, and comforts the wandering outcast in his desolation. It cheers the fevered moments of the suffering invalid, and helps the disappointed ones of earth, who cry out with pain and sorrow. It is the anchor of the christian's soul, and the foundation of all his desirable joys. It is life, light, and pleasure wherever it comes, and it comes wherever it will be received.

O glorious hope! It points to crowns, palms, robes, songs, glory, life, immortality! It reveals the world made new, and presents the dazzling gates, and resplendent walls of the holy city of God. It points beyond the land of corruption, lifts up the pall of death, and bids us dry our tears, and hush our sighs and groans in the unspeakable beauty of the prospect which invites us onward to our REST. O glorious hope! How dreary would earth be without thy light benign! O praise the Lord, my soul, and all that is within me, for hope—the CHRISTIAN'S BLESSED HOPE!

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Book of Jasher.

This book is referred to in the Bible, in Joshua 10: 13 and 2 Sam. 1: 18. Josephus says, "That by this book are to be understood certain records kept in some safe place on purpose, giving an account of what happened among the Hebrews from year to year, and called Jasher, or the upright, on account of the fidelity of the annals." M. M. Noah, the learned Jew who died a few years since, says, "Everything that we find in Jasher we find recorded in the Bible, with this difference, that in Jasher the occurrences of the Bible are amplified and detailed at length." On this account, the book is of one thrilling interest. The history of the Antediluvians, Noah, Abraham and Isaac, Joseph, the Sodomites and their destruction, is rendered doubly interesting because of minute details. We have never read a work, aside from the Bible, that so completely absorbed our attention, and rendered such delight. It is a history of the world from the creation of man to the death of Joshua.

The Hebrew preface states, "that this book is called the Book of Jasher, because all its transactions are in that order as they had taken place in the world as regards priority and succession, for thou wilt not find in this book any postponement of events that were anterior, or priority of those that were posterior, but everything is recorded in its place and time. Thou wilt thus find that it relates the death of such a one at the particular time of the life of another, and thus throughout."

The curiosity and anxiety to obtain this book have been so great, that several forgeries have appeared from time to time, bearing the same title.

The following from the Hebrew preface will give some idea of the way in which this book was obtained.

It has at this time been ascertained by us that when the holy city Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus, all the military heads went in to rob and plunder, and that amongst the officers of Titus, was one whose name was Sidrus, who went in to search, and found in Jerusalem a house of great extent, and took away all the spoils which he found there. When he wished to go out of the house, he looked at the wall and fancied that he saw treasures there, so he broke down the wall and the building and found a cask full of various books of the Law, the Prophets, and the Hagiographa, also books of the kings of Israel, and of the kings of other nations, as well as many other book of Israel, together with the books of the Mishnah adopted and established; many rolls were also lying there; he also found all sorts of provision and wine in abundance, and discovered an old man sitting there, who was reading in those books. When the officer saw this great sight he was greatly astonished, and said to the old man, why dost thou sit alone in this place, without any person remaining with thee? So the old man answered, for many years past was I aware of this second destruction of Jerusalem, so I built this house and made for myself a balcony, and I brought with me [redacted] upon earth.

to city and from country to country in bitter anxiety, this book, called "The Generations of Adam" together with other books came into our hands, for they came from that house in Sevilia, and they came afterward to our city Napuli, which city is under the sway of the king of Spain, (whose glory may be exalted.) And when we saw these books, that they were books of all wisdom, we resolved in our minds to print them like all the books that came to our hands. Now this book is the best and most valuable of all, and of this book twelve copies have reached us, and we searched in them and found them all of one copy, there was no difference, nothing added and nothing deficient, nor any alteration in letters, words or events, for they were all alike as it were of one copy.

We purpose to give extracts from this book, that our readers may get some idea of its contents. The following are the first thirty-three verses.

EXTRACT NO. I.

1. And God said let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and God created man in his own image.

2. And God formed man from the ground, and he blew into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul endowed with speech.

3. And the Lord said it is not good for man to be alone; I will make unto him a helpmate.

4. And the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept, and he took away one of his ribs, and he built flesh upon it and formed it and brought it to Adam, and Adam awoke from his sleep, and behold a woman was standing before him.

5. And he said, this a bone of my bones and it shall be called woman, for this has been taken from man; and Adam called her name Eve, for she was the mother of all living.

6. And God blessed them and called their names Adam and Eve in the day that he created them, and the Lord God said, be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth.

7. And the Lord God took Adam and his wife, and he placed them in the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it, and he commanded them and said unto them, from every tree of the garden you may eat, but from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat thereof you shall surely die.

8. And when God had blessed and commanded them he went from them, and Adam and his wife dwelt in the garden according to the command which the Lord had commanded them.

9. And the serpent, which God had created with them in the earth, came to them to incite them to transgress the command of God which he had commanded them.

10. And the serpent enticed and persuaded the woman to eat from the tree of knowledge, and the woman hearkened to the voice of the serpent, and she transgressed the word of God, and took from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and she ate, and she took from it and gave also to her husband and he ate.

11. And Adam and his wife transgressed the command of God which he commanded them, and God knew it, and his anger was kindled against them and he cursed them.

12. And the Lord God drove them that day from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from which they were taken, and they went and dwelt at the east of the garden of Eden; and Adam knew his wife Eve and she bore two sons and three daughters.

13. And she called the name of the first born Cain, saying, I have obtained a man from the Lord, and the name of the other she called Abel, for she said, in vanity we came into the earth and in vanity we shall be taken from it.

14. And the boys grew up and their father gave them a possession in the land; and Cain was a tiller of the ground, and Abel a keeper of the sheep.

15. And it was at the expiration of a few years, that they brought an approximating offering to the Lord, and Cain brought from the fruit of the ground, and Abel brought from the firstlings of his flock from the fat thereof, and God turned and inclined to Abel and his offering, and a fire came down from the Lord from heaven and consumed it.

16. And unto Cain and his offering the Lord did not turn, and he did not incline to it, for he had brought from the inferior fruit of the ground before the Lord, and Cain was jealous against his brother Abel on account of this, and he sought a pretext to slay him.

17. And in some time after, Cain and Abel his brother went one day into the field to do their work; and they were both in the field, Cain tilling and ploughing his ground, and Abel feeding his flock; and the flock passed that part which Cain had ploughed in the ground, and it sorely grieved Cain on this account.

18. And Cain approached his brother Abel in anger, and he said unto him, what is there between me and thee that thou comest to dwell and bring thy flock to feed in my land?

19. And Abel answered his brother Cain and said unto him, what is there between me and thee, that thou shalt eat the flesh of my flock and clothe thyself with their wool?

20. And now therefore, put off the wool of my sheep with which thou hast clothed thyself, and recompense me for their fruit and flesh which thou hast eaten, and when thou shalt have done this, I will then go from thy land as thou hast said?

21. And Cain said to his brother Abel, surely if I slay thee this day, who will require thy blood from me?

22. And Abel answered Cain, saying, surely God who has made us in the earth, he will avenge my cause, and he will re-

23. And now, if thou shouldst slay me here, surely God knoweth thy secret views, and will judge thee for the evil which thou didst declare to do unto me this day.

24. And when Cain heard the words which Abel his brother had spoken, behold the anger of Cain was kindled against his brother Abel for declaring this thing.

25. And Cain hastened and rose up, and took the iron part of his ploughing instrument, with which he suddenly smote his brother and he slew him, and Cain spilt the blood of his brother Abel upon the earth, and the blood of Abel streamed upon the earth before the flock.

26. And after this Cain repented having slain his brother, and he was sadly grieved, and he wept over him and it vexed him exceedingly.

27. And Cain rose up and dug a hole in the field, wherein he put his brother's body, and he turned the dust over it.

28. And the Lord knew what Cain had done to his brother, and the Lord appeared to Cain and said unto him, where is Abel thy brother that was with thee?

29. And Cain dissembled, and said, I do not know, am I my rother's keeper? And the Lord said unto him, what hast thou done? The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground where thou hast slain him.

30. For thou hast slain thy brother and hast dissembled before me, and didst imagine in thy heart that I saw thee not, nor knew all thy actions.

31. But thou didst this thing and didst slay thy brother for naught, and because he spoke rightly to thee, and now, therefore, cursed be thou from the ground which opened its mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand, and wherein thou didst bury him.

32. And it shall be when thou shalt till it, it shall no more give thee its strength as in the beginning, for thorns and thistles shall the ground produce, and thou shalt be moving and wandering in the earth until the day of thy death.

33. And at that time Cain went out from the presence of the Lord from the place where he was, and he went moving and wandering in the land towards the east of Eden, he and all belonging to him.

Obituary.

Died at Chester Factories, July 31st, 1857, Emma, daughter of William and Lois Twiss, aged six years five months and nine days.

The subject of this notice was for nineteen weeks an object of pity. Her disease was consumption. She was reduced to a living skeleton, and at times suffered intensely, which she bore with more than child-like patience. She often spoke of death, and seemed perfectly resigned if that should be her fate.

Farewell, my dear parents, farewell,
We'll meet on earth no more;
Till we the song of victory swell,
And reign on Canaan's shore.

Death cannot bind or hold me here,
When Jesus comes to save,—
Shortly in triumph he'll appear,
To raise me from the grave.

May the Lord's blessing attend these afflicted parents, who have been called so soon again to part with another lovely child, and prepare them to meet their little ones in a better land. The funeral was attended by Eld. Samuel Brazee. Text, James 4: 14.

RACHEL W. GILLESPIE.

Died in Winona, M. T., April 5th, of measles and scarlet fever, Joshua Herbert, aged three years and six months. Also, in Garden City, M. T., June 27th, Oscar Dwight aged fourteen years and seven months. Children of Joshua and Susan R. Burgess, formerly of Lynn, Mass.

In consequence of this bereavement we ar thrown into great affliction. But we mour not as those without hope; and we desire b this admonition to be also ready.

S. R. BURGESS.

Died in Dubuque, Iowa, Aug. 12th, of Marasmus, Frank, the beloved child of William and Elizabeth K. Churchill, aged five months and seven days.

"It came upon us by degrees;
We saw its shadows ere it fell,
The knowledge that our God had sent
His messenger for baby Frank!
We shuddered with unlanguaged pain,
And all our hopes were changed to fears,
And all our thoughts ran into tears,
Like sunshine into dismal rain!
Aloud we cried, in our belief;
'O, smite us gently, gently, God!
Teach us to bend and kiss the rod,
And perfect grow through grief.'
Ah, how we loved him God can tell;
His little heart was cased in ours!
Our hearts are broken, baby Frank."

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE COLUMBIA.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.

The steamship Columbia, from Liverpool 5th inst., arrived at this port at half-past 8 o'clock this morning.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Times, in a leader on the visit of the Emperor Napoleon, says:—

"Just now the Northern and Eastern sovereigns of Europe have been meeting at Berlin to discuss the maintenance of their own interests, a visit from a great Ally, who has so much in common with ourselves, is specially opportune. A meeting between the two great Western sovereigns is doubly welcome."

ITALY.

The Italian papers had published Mazzini's defence, but it was suppressed. He declares he will not cease till his object is accomplished.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES, &C.

Steamer Colombo had arrived at Southampton, with the China and India mails.

The Daily News' Southampton correspondent says the passengers from India by the Colombo firmly believe that Delhi has fallen. They state that Bazar intelligence outstrips government news, and that according to Bazar intelligence, Delhi had fallen.

1700 armed men were found about the residence of the King of Oude, although, according to treaty, he was not allowed one armed attendant.

IMPORTANT REPORT FROM INDIA.

A passenger in the steamer Columbia, sent the following telegraph despatch to the Merchants' Exchange News Room:

"CALCUTTA, June 22.—It is reported that the king of Delhi had taken poison, because he could not agree with the mutineers; but in all probability had been assassinated. Another report says he had been hanged."

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, August 19.

The Cunard steamship Arabia, Capt. Stone, with Liverpool advices to the 8th inst., arrived at this port this evening.

The emperor and empress of France were on a visit to Queen Victoria.

The Atlantic Telegraph Cable was landed at Valentia on the 5th inst., and the expedition had sailed.

The Italian conspirators against the life of the emperor of France had been tried and found guilty.

Military preparations continued in Spain.

The steamship Khersonese, which was to have left Liverpool for Newfoundland, simultaneously with the Arabia, had been withdrawn, having been chartered by the government to convey troops to India. Her place in the line will be filled in a few days by the steamship Crimean.

TURKEY.

A despatch from Vienna states that the French ambassador at Constantinople took down his flag on the 5th, but informed the Turkish government that he should not leave his post for some days.

The tribes of the Mutjales had pillaged the Christians in the town of Sour, and the French consul at Beyrout, had gone to the spot to demand a public repression of the outrage.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says that Schamyl, with the main body of his troops, had been beaten at Isalatavia, leaving 400 on the field, while the Russian loss was only 55 killed and wounded.

A letter from St. Petersburg states that Russia has made an application to the Porte, with a view to such modification of the treaty of Paris as would enable her to employ a large number of vessels of war to carry on her present operations on the coast of Circassia.

PERSIA.

There is nothing later from India, but the papers continue to publish details of the atrocities committed by the insurgents, furnished from private correspondents.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, August 20.

The Royal Mail steamship America, Capt. Ryrie, from Liverpool on Saturday, 15th inst., arrived here this morning, en route for Boston.

The Indian mail had arrived with intelligence of great moment.

Contrary to general expectation in England, Delhi had not fallen up to the 29th of June, the date of the latest advices.

Further mutinies had occurred among the native troops.

There are but 13,000 troops for the reduction of Delhi, five thousand of which are natives, who are, however, reported as trustworthy. The city was reported full of sick and wounded and the cholera was prevalent.

An interview between the Emperors of France and Russia, is again stated as certain to take place. Should the event happen, the inevitable Eastern question will be fully discussed, and it may be, that, as at Tilsit, an alliance may be established between the two great continental powers. France and Russia are the most interested spectators of affairs in the East, and watch with greedy eyes every movement.

THE CABLE BROKEN!

The Atlantic Telegraph is, we regret to say, at present, a failure. On the morning of the 11th inst., when 335 miles west from the Irish coast, the cable broke. The vessels were returning to England, with the remainder of the cable, still over 200 miles in length, and, perhaps, sufficient to unite the two Continents.

The Directors of the company were sanguine of ultimate success.

A conference was to be held in London, on Saturday, the 15th inst, for the purpose of determining whether to go on again immediately, with the balance of the cable, or to wait until another summer.

Domestic Summary.

THE EXPEDITION TO UTAH.—We learn from Capt. Lyons, of the steamer W. H. Denny, which arrived here from St. Joseph night before last, that the most extensive preparations are making for the military expedition to Utah under Gen. Harney. No less than five hundred ox teams and four hundred mule teams will accompany the troops. The infantry as they reach the fort are sent forward in detachments, a rendezvous having been appointed at some point on the plains, where Gen. Harney, at the head of the cavalry, will join them in about two months from the present time. The whole force, including teamsters, &c., will not fall short of five thousand men. It is said that Gen. Harney is determined to make short work with the Saints, in case they oppose the least obstacle to the fulfillment of his mission.—St. Louis Democrat.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—It is said that instructions have been finally sent to Gov. Walker, ordering him to collect the taxes under the decrees of the mob Legislature, whatever the consequences. He is authorized to employ all the force necessary to carry out these instructions.

INDIAN OUTRAGE NEAR FORT KEARNY.—St. Louis, Aug. 15.—Advices from Fort Kearny state that a party of nineteen drovers, charged with upwards of 800 head of cattle, destined for the benefit of the Utah expedition, were attacked 21 miles above the fort, on the 1st inst., by a party of 150 Cheyennes. All the cattle and twenty mules were run off, and one man was killed and another severely wounded. Three of the Indians were slain. Col. Luders had started in pursuit of the Indians.

THE UTAH EXPEDITION TO PROCEED.—Washington, Aug. 26.—(N. Y. Herald Correspondence.)—Gen. Scott arrived here this morning. He has been busy all day with the General Superintendent in making out a programme for the movement of troops for Utah. They have finally decided that the expedition to Utah shall proceed. It is not decided yet whether Gen. Harney or Col. Johnson will command the expedition. Gov. Walker is very anxious to retain Harney in Kansas. A messenger will be despatched to Kansas tomorrow, to settle the matter.

FROM KANSAS—Washington, Aug. 28.—Despatches were received to-day from Gov. Walker in Kansas. He reports every thing quiet in the Territory. He is, however, apprehensive that difficulties may arise at the October election, and that it will still be necessary to have a military force stationed in some localities, in case any riot or outbreak should occur.

GREAT BATTLE WITH INDIANS.—Washington, Aug. 27.—The Secretary of War received intelligence that a desperate engagement recently took place between the U. S. troops, commanded by Col. Sumner, and a large band of Cheyenne Indians, in which two officers and one or two privates were killed. The slaughter among the Indians was terrible. Full particulars are expected in a few days. Col. Sumner was sent out on this expedition to chastise the Indians for depredations committed last year.

HOW TO JUDGE OF FLOUR.—The following directions for judging between good and bad flour have been submitted to experienced millers, who pronounce them all right:

1st. Look at its color: if it is white, with a slightly yellow straw-colored tint, it is a good sign. If it is very white, with a bluish cast, or with black specks in it, the flour is not good.

2d. Examine its adhesiveness; wet and knead a little of it between the fingers; if it works dry and elastic, it is good; if it works soft and sticky, it is poor.

3d. Throw a little lump of dry flour against a dry perpendicular surface. If it adheres in a lump, the flour has life in it; if it falls like powder, it is bad.

4th. Squeeze some of the flour in your hands; if it retains the shape given it by the pressure, that too is a good sign. Flour that will stand all these tests, it is safe to buy.

FROM KANSAS.—ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—Advices from Kansas are to the 8th inst. Gov. Walker had returned to Lawrence with his troops, the rumored Indian attack on Fort Riley proving groundless.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

New Hampshire State Conference.

BRO. GRANT:—Being appointed at the last Conference, to fix on the time and place for holding the next State Conference, I take this method to notify the friends that the time for holding it, will probably be somewhere from the first to the middle of Oct.; but in regard to the place, it is not yet decided. A few brethren at Loudon Village have expressed a wish to have it holden with them. Shall it be there? or is there some place better calculated to convene the meeting?

Will those interested write me on the subject that I may be able to fix on the best place? Hope the friends will speak soon, that I may have time to give seasonable notice.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Aug. 17, 1857.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, a tent meeting will be held in Lanesville, Conn., on the line of the Housatonic R. R., 30 miles north of Bridgeport, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 16th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. All, who can, are invited to attend. Provision will be made for the accommodation of all those from other places, as far as possible. The ministering brethren are invited to attend as the way may be opened, and preach the Word as the Lord shall direct. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductor that they wish to stop at Lanesville Station. The 6.15 A. M. and 6.35 P. M. train from Bridgeport, arrive and stop at Lanesville at 10 o'clock, A. M. and 8.45 P. M.

LEVI R. TEEPLE, and L. MILLS,
For the Brethren.

CAMPMEETING.—Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at South Adams, commencing on Monday, the seventh day of September next, to continue over the following Sabbath. The believers of the Second Advent of the Lord are invited to attend. Necessary provision will be provided for man and beast. Further notice will hereafter be given. Brn. invited—R. V. Lyon, H. L. Hastings, R. E. Ladd, and M. Bachelor.

WM. F. STITT
Z. CAMPBELL,
A. CUMMINGS.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

JOHN CHAPMAN,
In behalf of the Brethren.

Bro. Boutell will preachin Salem the first Sabbath in September. TEMPLE HARDY.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at or near Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, and continuing over Sunday.

Also a conference to be held in the Advent Chapel, Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 11th, to continue over next First day. We earnestly solicit the friends of our soon coming King to come and enjoy this feast with us. Our hearts are open to receive, and our homes to entertain you. J. WENDELL.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.:—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of the conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread free, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Missisipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber,

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Providence permitting, I will be at
Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 6th

Should there be an appointment for the latter place, will some Bro. drop me a line at Exeter? J. G. SMITH.

Grove Meetings.

Providence permitting, there will be Grove meetings as follows:

Sunday, Sept. 6th, at Marden's Corners in Epsom.

If the weather is not pleasant on the above days, the meetings will be held in barns, houses, or halls.

All are invited to attend who have ears to hear the gospel of Jesus Christ.

JOHN G. HOOK.

CONFERENCE at North Hermon, commencing Thursday, Sept. 17th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

P. S. Friends generally invited to attend.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at Portland, Sept. 13th. If supplied, please write immediately.

BRO. GRANT:—If my health will admit, I propose to be with the Brethren at Kennebunkport the 22d and 23d of August.

Roxbury, Mass., Sept. 3d
Providence, R. I., Sept. 5th and 6th

Communications from Brethren will be thankfully received at either place.

N. F. NASON.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting holden in Somers, Ct., to commence on Thursday evening, Sept. 10th, and continue over the following Sunday. Said meeting will be held on Bro. Hoods' land, one mile northeast of Somer's Street, near the Burbank road. Those who wish to come with provisions, &c., can do so, as arrangements will be made for lodging, &c. Inquire for Col. Gaius Wood.

W. S. CAMPBELL.
J. TURNER.

P. S. My appointment at Scitico, Ct., the third Sunday in Sept. W. S. C.

Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at South Reading, Mass., the first Sunday in September.

The Lord willing, I will preach the word in Portland, Me., Sept. 6th.

THOMAS SMITH.

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at
Louden Ridge, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 6.
New London, N. H., in the Burpee School House, West part of the town, Sept. 13.
East Weare Village, N. H., at the Free Meeting House, Sunday, Sept. 20.

Bro. I. Damman appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 20.

Bro. L. L. Howard appoints to preach at Lawrence, Mondny Sept. 7; Salem Sept. 8; Portsmouth, Sept. 9; Dover, Sept. 10; Bideford, Sept. 11.

To Correspondents.

J. C. Allen—All right.

Bro. Taylor, the money was received.

J. R. Allen—You have paid up to No. 130.

M. J. White—The money was received and credited in the Crisis.

N. Hanson, Jr.,—We credit you 50 cents on Crisis account, which pays to No. 117.

S. R. Ward—We credit you two dollars, which pays to No. 130, and continue your paper.

J. W. Nute—Your post office is the place at which to pay the postage. It is Canada papers only which are paid at this office.

J. H. Stevens, of Manchester—The dollar credited to "J. H. Stevens" in the Crisis of week before last was not credited to you, but to a brother of the same name in Monroe, Me. A. S. Libby was credited in ast week's paper.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

A. Arnold 130, D. Sawyer 129, J. Burt 130, R. Allen 130, W. Payne 122, J. Phillips 130, A. Edgcombe 130, F. Bailey 130, A. S. Hastings 130, Mrs. J. Hartwell 116, W. White 126, J. Woodruff 130, E. H. Case 130, E. Turner 117, G. L. White 130, N. Furber 130, K. H. Simons 130, W. Jackson 156, J. French 117, J. N. Berry 130, P. Coon 98, R. C. Jackman 130, A. Hunt 130, L. Taylor 130, B. Fifield 130, S. Woodruff 100, Edwin Towne 130, B. Sampson 130, J. S. Brown 130, R. R. Shaw 130, J. Baker 130, Susan Jennings 117, R. Williams 118, A. Richardson 130, W. S. Moulton 130, S McDaniels 126, W. B. Lang 130, B. P. Braley 130, H. W. Nor[illegible] 130, $1 each.

T. W. Titus 130, H. Barnard 236, H. D. Warner 156, T. R. Winn 123, Z. K. Stetson 123, C. S. Barnes 130, J. W. Ireland 169, C. M. Smith 156, J. P. Saunders 130, $2 each.

H. D. Minor 119, M. J. White 117, E. B. Tallmadge 117, S. F. Hubbard 117, Bro. Clark 117, 50 cents each.

J. Richardson 108, 90 cents; L Kinney 130, $1.50; O. R. Leonard 117, $3.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—J. Burt 9 cts; J. Stockwell $1.18; J. Richardson 10 cents; S. Barringer 12 cents.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.—J. Stockwell, J. Burt J. Richardson, S. Barringer.

Elder F. H. Bericks P. O. address is Boston, Mass., through the month of September.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of e Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Com By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

HE LOVED THEM.

"Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end."

"He loved them." They had felt his love,
In smiles that on them day by day
Had rested, cheering each lone heart
As sunshine's glad refreshing ray.

"He loved them." Knew they not his love
When tears were falling o'er their dead?
And when his hand in blessing lay
Upon the tender infant's head?

"He loved them." O, they knew that love,
When on the Cross he prayed—"forgive,"
Nor turned he from the bitter cup,—
Drank, that his ransomed ones might live.

"He loved them." Now had come the hour
[illegible] he should walk earth's paths no more;
Each name, engraven on his heart,
Before his Father's throne he bore.

"He loved them." See! his eye is turned,
From glory bursting on his sight,
To that sad group of Bethany,
Who weeping watch his heavenward flight.

"He loved them." Well; those parting words—
That blessing of their risen Friend—
The hope—the sacred promise given,
Had told he 'loved them to the end."

I ask no more than this to know,
Dear Savior, thee my Friend;
But number me with all thine own,
And love me to the end.

MARIA T.

STOP THAT STORY.

Have you heard an evil story
Of your erring brother man?
Spread it not, 'tis for your glory
That you stop it while you can.
Men are oftentimes mistaken,
Stories often prove untrue;
If a little pains were taken,
Slanderous stories would be few.

Stop the story, then, O stop it!
Even if you think it true;
Better far 'twill be to drop it,
Than to have it go from you.
If you tell it to your neighbors,
You will hear from it again;
And the pay for all your labor,
Will be hardly worth the pain.

Spread it not, 'twill cause much sorrow,
E'en perhaps on your own head;
Friends to-day, made foes to-morrow,
If that story once is spread.
Spread it not, 'twill bring you trouble,
Trouble that may never cease;
Why not, then, as life's a bubble,
Strive to live in love and peace.

L. F. W.—Rambler.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Notes by the Way.

No. I.

In the following articles I propose to note a few of the many incidents met with in my travels and labors in the Lord's vineyard, omitting names and dates. My object is to illustrate, by these items, the present state of the public mind, the lack of faith in God, the tendency to Spiritualism, the power of truth to meet this evil, and the encouragement men of God have to circulate good books, tracts, and papers, while they travel and preach, instruct and exhort, relating to the power of grace through Christ, and the nature of the christian's hope.

While on business in the town of H——, I was obliged to stop at a private house several days; there was a company of business men also detained there. During the first evening the conversation started on political questions. I was soon addressed to obtain my judgment on "the destiny of our nation." This opened the door for me to enter at once on the theme of "the gospel of the kingdom of God;" our whole attention soon turned to it. I quoted scripture freely. Some consented that the Bible taught what I alleged, some mocked, and others disputed. The next day I found the lady of the house to be a pious and exemplary woman, but she did not allude to my previous evening's arguments.

The second evening when the men came in they commenced asking me questions and presenting objections to my former arguments, relating to the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead, eternal life and the kingdom of God. I spent the evening in vindicating this hope, and meeting the Swedenborgian views which one of our company held and advanced earnestly; to meet which I took up the Bible view of the nature of man, nature of death, source of eternal life, penalty of the law of God, &c. This stirred the whole company, to hear that man was only a poor mortal, that death was a state of unconsciousness, that Christ is the author of eternal life, which is the gift of God, and that the wicked shall utterly perish. Some said it was infidelity; some pronounced it heathenism, worse than universalism, &c. &c. The lady said nothing, except to ask questions. The next day, while I sat studying, she asked me what church I belonged to. I told her. She then told me she was convicted that I had presented Bible doctrine, and asked me to to take off a list of texts for her on the several themes I had presented. I did so, giving on paper a list through the whole Bible on the coming of Christ, the restitution of all things, resurrection of the dead, Kingdom of God, eternal life, death, destruction of the wicked, &c. Each day after, while I remained, she was seen carefully examining her Bible upon these passages. A few weeks after she sent me a letter asking for some books on those subjects, and finally subscribed for an Advent paper,—became a firm believer in those blessed truths,—was baptized in the blessed hope of eternal life through Christ, though sprinkled previously, and has since been a devoted and faithful advocate of the soon coming of our blessed Lord, to establish his kingdom.

On another occasion I put up at a house in W——; found them to be Quakers. The lady was a great reader. I showed them some books, and after reading awhile the woman asked if they were not Advent books. I told her they were "books to show the scriptural doctrine of the second advent of Christ, and resurrection of the dead," &c. She then asked if I believed in the personal coming of Christ. I assured her that I did, and gave her Bible reasons. But she was not a believer in the literal fulfillment of the Bible. We argued some time, when she found I was greatly gaining the advantage of her by showing that these scriptures must be fulfilled literally, as all scripture has been heretofore. She then opposed the doctrine of Christ's coming on the ground that it was not necessary, and that as the people of God were rewarded in heaven, it would be strange work to disturb them—to call them back to these clogs of clay. What could I do now but "take the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God," and show her that her ideas were not according to truth, but were of heathen origin; that the Bible taught that man is wholly mortal, and wholly dies,—is to be raised from death or never live again,—that Jesus our Lord is the great Life-Giver, and we must be his disciples or perish forever in the second death. Thus I argued until late at night, sweeping away her infidelity before the word of God. The next morning she asked for books. I sold her one, and gave her "John Milton on the state of the dead," (a tract,) which she promised to examine, and with tears in her eyes asked me to call and see them again, admitting she "might have been improperly instructed from her childhood, for she had been taught that the dead would not rise, and she could not believe they would; but if they were not in heaven, they must be raised, or there would be no future life." I pray God to set home the truth to her heart and lead her to Christ. She never professed conversion, but was brought up as a natural born christian, and professed to believe she would go to heaven at death.

In B——, I spent some time in preaching the good news of the coming kingdom, enduring much opposition. One night I stopped with a family of professors who did not attend my meetings,—talked with them some about the coming of Christ. They believed it, but said they thought but little of it—that it was of no importance, as we went to be with him at death. I opposed this notion,—set the scriptures before them, and gave them some tracts. Their minds were enlightened; they have embraced the hope in the love of it, and are faithful believers in the gospel of the coming kingdom.

From Sr. H. E. Graves.

BRO. GRANT:—I have often in my hours of joy and peace thought of the day when the Son should appear in the heavens; and if serving God in this short life gives us such continual strength, and supplies us with such never-failing friendship, and fills our souls with love toward God and man, what can it be when we enjoy the kingdom, unmolested by the sorrows of earth? when the pains of the sick shall be heard of no more, and the groans of the dying shall never reach our ears again? when the last storm of affliction has burst upon our heads and the last cloud of grief passed forever away? Oh! what can it be? is often the thought of my heart. I try to imagine the beauties of that home; the splendor of that city, the shining of those crowns, and, more than all, the dazzling brightness of our blessed Lord and King. But it is beyond human comprehension. It surpasses every ideal that mortal ever set forth. In fact, it can never be imagined. But, thank God, ere long the ideal will be passed away, and we shall see the glories, realize the happiness, and participate in the joys of that beautiful world for ourselves. Oh! is not this prize worth running for? and that crown worth fighting for? yea, and the losing of this life to obtain?

Satan is going about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour; and now is the time, if ever, that we must fight the good fight of faith, and wield the weapons like valiant soldiers, or be taken in his snares. With what caution our steps must be taken; with what vigilance and care our words must be spoken; and how our every act must be under the guidance of Him who doeth all things well. And yet, our Father is able to lead us through, whatever our situation may be, or however varied the scenes of our life.

This Master is he, beneath whose banner I have enlisted, though at a late hour, yet for life. When I started on this pilgrimage for the last time, I was with a dearly loved band whose hearts were in the cause, alive and at work—not forgetting the assembling of themselves together, but speaking often one to another and so much the more as they saw the time hastening on when the Kingdom should be ushered in. But my tarry was not long with them. He who knoweth all things, saw fit to call me away, and to stand where I trembled to go for fear of falling. But how my feet have been stayed! how I have been comforted! how little I thought that to-day I should be firm as I am! With Spiritualism to shake on one hand, and a cold, formal church on the other gazing at me, seemingly, in astonishment, if I spake of the near approach of my blessed Lord,—what could my prospect be? Bright, yes, bright. I had a God to trust in whose arm of strength I could lean upon and be carried safely through all trials. Ten weeks have passed since I left those cherished ones of Lowell, and though absent in body, yet I have tarried with them in spirit, often and long. But if I can meet the waiting children no more on earth, I will, through the grace of God, meet them in the Kingdom.

From a sister in the Lord,
H. E. GRAVES.

Apponaug, Aug. 13th.

For the Crisis.

CHRISTIAN SIMPLICITY.

BY MRS. A. C. JUDSON.

"But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." 2 Cor. 11: 3.

Christian simplicity—a choice, rare gem
In these degenerate times, yet lovely still
Wherever found. An honor to the name
Of Israel's God—bespeaking that true faith
Which will be found, 'mid all the counterfeits,
Alone to endure the great and burning day!
Simplicity's the garb of piety—
Her native garb. She ever shuns display.
But seeks, by contrast with the gorgeousness
Of earthly pride, to publish to the world
That there is something more substantial, pure
And lasting, than the baubles of the earth,
On which to place the heart.

Where there is love—
That love that prompted Jesus to forego
The bliss of heaven, and to lay down his life
A willing sacrifice—there will be found
No putting on of outward ornaments,
But simple, plain attire, such as becomes
A follower of the Lamb.

How can it be
That God, the Holy One, communes with pride!—
His Spirit dwell within a heart that's fixed
Upon its idols? Vain, presumptuous thought!
Alas! that truth can be perverted thus,
Its Author to blaspheme.

Behold that fane,
Reared high and costly. 'Tis adorned within,
And made to minister to ease and sloth.
Fashion is there, and emulation. Yet,
'Tis called a temple, sacred to His praise
Who hath declared—"I dwell with humble ones,
Contrite in spirit." See the worshipers
Assembled there. In glittering gay attire,
Each with the other vieing who shall be
Arrayed most richly. Prayer to heaven ascends;
But, with the gazing eye, and knee unbent,
They seem spectators only; and the song,
Professedly of praise, is only heard
As if to please, or with the critic's ear.
Behold, around the sacramental board,
The waving plume, and flowers of gaudy hue,
With gold and pearls, and costliest array;
Adorning those who come to celebrate
The dying love of an ascended Lord!
Mark these! and say, is this in unison
With true devotion? Is God honored thus?
Was this the spirit by a Wesley shown,
A Fletcher, Bramwell, yea, a holy Paul,
Or Christ, our true example?

Christian, beware! He, who so wily crept
Into an Eden, and beguiled the hearts
Of our first parents, still is lurking round,
Ready to lure from holiness to sin.
Beware, lest he corrupt your minds away
From the simplicity of godliness.

These lines are too precious to be cast away, so I have them in my scrap book carefully preserved. I love them, not because I am personally acquainted with the author, and know that she does not write what she does not practice in her daily walk, conversation, and dress, but because her admonitions are according to the simplicity of the gospel of the Son of God; and the contrast is given in a few words between the humble child of God, and the proud, PROFESSING child of ——. These lines are for you, brother, sister, who profess to be looking for the soon coming of the Son of God. Are you purifying yourselves even as He (Christ) is pure? Every one who has THE Hope within of being made like him will do it, so John says. Do you believe it? If you do, then cast away your useless, outward adornings, and adorn yourselves with a meek and quiet spirit, which, in the sight of God, is of great price. Take heed to your ways; walk worthy of your calling; be more ready to talk about the kingdom and the coming of Jesus than you are to gossip about your neighbors. Study the word of God more, and those good MORAL romances and novels less, and then you may grow in the favor of God, and in a more perfect knowledge of his word. Yours, believing in Christian simplicity lived out.

G. DILLABAUGH.

Choice Selections.

The Law of Love.

A TALE OF REAL LIFE.*

A striking instance of the irresistible power of the Law of Love, exercised amidst all the difficulties which a selfish and grasping state of society throws in its way, is to be found in the history of one of those small communities in the far West, which have established themselves on the banks of the Mississippi, in the name of the Prince of Peace. The one to which we allude is described by Mrs. Child, who received from one of its founders—a hard-working, intelligent mechanic—an account of its organization, the substance of which is subjoined:

About thirty or forty New Englanders—simple-minded, but earnest men—had for several years been accustomed to meet at each other's houses for the purpose of talking over their duties to God and man, for their mutual support and encouragement. For their enlightenment on these topics there was no need of many books; their library was the Gospel, and whilst studying its precepts by the light of conscience, they felt not the want of a spiritual teacher to enforce them. Anti-Slavery Societies were not then in existence; but having their minds imbued with the spirit of Christian fraternity, and impressed by the Christian doctrine that all men are equal in the sight of God, there was no fear of their arrogating to any one race of human beings a right over the lives and fortunes of another, however naturally inferior to themselves in mental or bodily gifts. Their free discussion of various subjects created amongst them a unity rather than a diversity of opinions; and thus mainly agreeing in belief, and fully accordant in spirit, this little band at length determined to emigrate to the western wilderness, and there, freed from the shackles of bigotry and prejudice surrounding them at home, to found a community which should be governed only by the Christian law. The Peace movement had not at that time any extended influence; and whilst others were only beginning to discuss the principles of non-resistance, these humble men went bravely forth to act upon it, and faithfully did they adhere to their determination.

Having chosen an eligible site to found a colony, their industry soon improved the land, and their frugal habits placed them in a prosperous condition.

And now came the trial of the practical nature of their peculiar faith. Their fold was invaded by wolves, in the shape of reckless and unprincipled adventurers, believers in force and cunning, who acted according to the creed. But they were not ejected from the colony—not even punished for their evil doings—but were gently remonstrated with, and treated with unvarying kindness; and even when this appeared to fail of its effect, the Christians, nothing daunted, openly announced, "You may do us what evil you choose—we will return you nothing but good."

And true to their word, and to their conviction of the ultimate success—or at all events of the righteousness of their line of conduct—they endured all kinds of depredations and of willful mischief. When bars were taken down in the night, and cows let into their cornfields, they would repair the damage as best they could, put the cows in the barn, and at twilight drive them gently home, saying—"Neighbor, your cows have been in our fields. We have fed them well during the day, but we would not keep them all night, lest the children should suffer for want of milk." And rude boys, who would at first have been ready to plan any mischief, would say to one another,—"Don't throw that stone, Bill! When I killed the chicken last week, didn't they send it to mother, because they thought chicken broth would be good for poor Mary? I should think you'd be ashamed to throw stones at their chickens." Thus was evil overcome with good, until this state of things becoming known, some lawyers came into the neighborhood, thinking that here would surely be employment for them, and offered their services to settle disputes; but they were answered with such words as these—"We have no need of you. As neighbors, we receive you in the most friendly spirit; but for us, your occupation has ceased to exist. We will return good for evil, believing this to be the highest truth, and therefore the best expediency." And so at length it proved; and such faithful perseverance found its reward.

By degrees a visible change came over the once troublesome neighbors. They grew ashamed of continuing to annoy those who repaid injury with benefits. As years passed by, not one could be found willing to harm them, and they presented the spectacle of a colony thriving beyond their neighbors, and yet beloved by all; for they stood the test of prosperity with the same constancy as they had done that of adversity, and with their wealth, their generosity increased. They were liberal to a proverb in their contributions for all useful and benevolent purposes, and were the better able thus to indulge their kindly feeling, from having no law-suits to swallow up their hard-earned means.

No case ever occurred to baffle their philosophy—the simple, but all-comprehensive doctrine of universal love. The following conversation took place between a visitor and one of their members: "What would you do if an idle, thieving vagabond came among you, resolved to stay, but determined not to work?" "We would give him food when hungry, shelter him when cold, and always treat him as a brother." "Would not this process attract such characters? How would you avoid being overrun by them?" "Such characters would either reform, or not remain with us. We should never speak an angry word, or refuse to minister to their necessities; but we should invariably regard them with the deepest sadness, as we would a guilty, but beloved son. This is harder for the human soul to bear than whips or prisons. They could not stand it; I am sure they could not. It would either melt them or drive them away; in nine cases out of ten I believe it would melt them."

After the lapse of ten years the public lands, which the settlers had chosen for their farms, were advertised for sale by auction. According to custom, those who had first cultivated the soil were considered to have a right to bid it in at the "government price." But the fever of land speculation ran at that time unusually high; capitalists in various states were sending agents to buy western lands, and adventurers from all parts of the country were flocking to the auction. The first day's sale showed that speculation ran to the verge of insanity, and the Christian colony had small hope of retaining their farms. As first settlers, they had chosen the best land, and persevering industry had brought it into the highest cultivation, so that its market value was much greater than that of the acres already sold at exorbitant prices. In view of these facts, they had prepared their minds for a further move into the wilderness, perhaps to be again ejected by a similar process.

But on the morning when their lots were offered for sale, they observed with grateful surprise that their neighbors were everywhere busy among the crowd, entreating and expostulating on their behalf, with such words as these: "Don't bid on their lands. These men have been working hard on them for ten years, and during all that time they never did harm to man or beast. They were always ready to return good for evil, and are a blessing to the neighborhood. It would be a sin and a shame to bid on their lands."

The rare example had its effect, even amid the feverish excitement of the speculators. When the sale came on, and the cultivators of the soil bid at the government price, no one bid over them, and without an opposing voice the fair acres returned to them. Verily, "the wisest political economy lies enfolded in the maxims of Christ."—[Bible Examiner.

*Frederika Bremer's Homes in the New World.

The Outside Passenger.

Some years ago a young lady who was going into a northern country, took a seat in the stage coach. For many miles she rode alone; but there was enough to amuse her in the scenery through which she passed, and in the pleasing anticipations which occupied her mind. She had been engaged as governess for the grandchildren of an earl, and was now traveling to his seat. At midday the coach stopped at an inn, at which dinner was provided, and she alighted and sat down at the table. An elderly man followed and sat down also. The young lady arose, rang the bell, and addressing the waiter, said, "Here is an outside passenger; I cannot dine with an outside passenger." The stranger bowed, saying, "I beg your pardon, madam; I can go into another room," and immediately retired. The coach soon afterward resumed its course, and the passengers their places.

At length the coach stopped at the gate leading to the castle to which the young lady was going; but there was not such prompt attention as she expected. All eyes seemed directed to the outside passenger, who was preparing to dismount. She beckoned, and was answered: "As soon as we have attended to his lordship we will come to you." A few words of explanation ensued, and, to her dismay, she found that the outside passenger, with whom she had thought it beneath her to dine, was not only a nobleman, but that very nobleman in whose family she hoped to be an inmate. What could she do? How could she bear the interview? She felt really ill, and the apology she sent for her non-appearing that evening was more than pretense.

The venerable peer was a considerate man, and one who knew the way in which the Scripture often spake of the going down of the sun. "We must not allow the night to pass thus," said he to the countess; "you must send for her, and we must talk to her before bedtime." He reasoned with the foolish girl respecting her conduct, insisted on the impropriety of the state of mind that it evinced, assuring her that nothing could induce him to allow his children to be taught such notions, refused to accept any apology that did not go the length of acknowleding that the thought was wrong; and when the right impression appeared to be produced, he gave her his hand.

For the Children.

The Cross.

Blest they who seek,
While in their youth,
With spirit meek,
The way of truth.
To them the Sacred Scriptures now display,
Christ as the only true and living way;
His precious blood on Calvary was given
To make them heirs of endless bliss in heaven.
And e'er on earth the child of God can trace.
The glorious blessings of his Savior's grace.
For them he bore
His Father's frown;
For them he wore
The stormy crown.
Nailed to the cross,
Endured its pain,
That his life's loss,
Might be their gain.
Then haste to choose
That better part,
Nor ever dare refuse
The Lord your heart,
Lest he declare:
"I know you not;"
And deep despair
Forever be your lot.
Now look to Jesus who on Calvary died,
And trust in Him alone who there was crucified.

Scolding.

A little girl who had witnessed the perplexity of her mother on a certain occasion when her fortitude gave way under severe trial, said:

"Mother, does God ever fret or scold?"

The query was so abrupt and startling, it arrested the mother's attention almost with a shock.

"Why, Lizzie, what makes you ask that question?"

"Why, God is good; you know you used to call him the 'Good Man,' when I was little—and I should like to know if he ever scolded."

"No, child, no."

"Well, I am glad he don't; for scolding always makes me feel so bad, even if it is not me in fault. I don't think I could love God much if he scolded."

The mother felt rebuked before her simple child. Never had she heard so forcible a lecture on the evils of scolding. The words of Lizzie sank deep in her heart, and she turned away from the innocent face of her little one to hide the tears that gathered in her eyes. Children are quick observers; and Lizzie seeing the effect of her words, hastened to inquire:

"Why do you cry, mother? Was it naughty for me to ask so many questions?"

"No, love, it was all right. I was only thinking how bad I had been to scold so much, when my little girl could hear and be troubled by it."

"O, no, mamma, you are not bad, you are a good mamma, only I wish there were not so many bad things to make you fret and talk like you did just now. It makes me feel away from you so far, like I could not come near you, as I can when you smile and are kind; and oh, I sometimes fear, I shall be put off so far I can never get back again."

"Oh, Lizzie, don't say that," said the mother, unable longer to repress the tears that had been struggling in her eyes. The child wondered what could so affect its parent, but instinctively feeling it was a case requiring sympathy, she reached up and laid her little arms about her mother's neck, and whispered:

"Mamma, dear, do I make you cry? Do you love me?"

"O, yes, I love you more than I can tell," replied the parent, clasping the child to her bosom. "And I will try never to scold again before my little sensitive girl."

"Oh, I am so glad. I can get so near to you when you don't scold; and do you know, mother, I want to love you so much."

This was an effectual lesson, and the mother felt the force of that passage of Scripture, "Out of the mouths of babes have I ordained strength." She never scolded again.—[Ex

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 107 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1857. | WHOLE NO. 106. VOL. VI. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

A sound of tumult troubles all the air,
Like the low thunder of a sultry sky,
Far-rolling, ere the downright lightnings glare.
The hills blaze red; with challenge and reply,
Treading the darkness, hostile hosts draw nigh:
Behold! The burden of the Prophet's vision—
The thronging hosts! the Valley of Decision!
Day of the Lord!—of darkness, and not light,
Breaking in thunder, and the whirlwind's roar!
Even so, Father! Let Thy will be done;
Turn and o'erturn; end what thou hast begun,
In judgment, or in mercy. As for me,
If but the least and frailest, evermore
Let me be numbered with the truly free,
Who find thy service perfect liberty!
I fain would thank thee that my mortal life
Has reached the hour, (albeit through care and pain,)
When good and evil, as for final strife,
Close dim and dark on Armageddon's plain;
And Michael and his angels once again
Drive, howling, back the children of the night!
Oh, for the faith to read the signs aright,
And, from the angle of Thy own clear sight,
See Truth's white banner floating on before,
And the Good Cause, despite of venal friends
And base expedients, moved to noble ends;
See Peace with Freedom make to Time amends;
And, through its clouds and dust, the threshing-floor,
Flailed by Thy thunder, heaped with chaffless grain!

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Second Advent and Reign of Christ.

Lo, Jesus comes! In glorious state He comes! Seraphic millions crowd around Him, and go before His face. Streams of lambent fire shine forth from His presence, and light up the wide heavens. The earth trembles before His awful majesty. The varied multitudes of unrepented mankind send up an agonizing wail of fear and terror, as the splendor of His glorious form comes to view. Shouts of gladness and thanksgiving, mingled with songs of deep-toned hallelujahs, from the holy throng of waiting saints, welcome the descent of the Blessed One. The legions of infernal spirits, amazed and confounded, stand aghast and expect their final doom. The important morning, which shall introduce the day of great events, now spreads its welcome signals on the mountains.

Thrice welcome day to saints, and angels, and the Lord Himself! Now flee the gloomy shades of earth's long, dreary night away. Now come the general "restitution" times. Now reign, thou Son of Mary and thou Son of God! The three times overturned kingdom of Israel, now take, thou Son of David! Now, "ships of Tarshish," wait to bring the sons of Jacob from afar, well laden with their glittering treasures of silver and of gold, unto the name of the holy One.

Ye monarchs of Sheba, and Seba, and the distant islands, bring now the rich and acceptable offerings of your hands before the Lord's anointed One; and, princes of of the kingdoms of earth, bow down before Him. Serve Him, ye scattered nations, and let Him command your joyful praise. "Judgments" shall now be given to the King, "and righteousness unto the Kings' Son." "He shall judge" His "people with righteousness and" His "poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness. He shall judge the poor of the people, He shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor, He shall come down as rain upon the mown grass; as showers that water the earth. In His days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before Him; and His enemies shall lick the dust. He shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper. And He shall live. His name shall endure forever. His name shall be continued as long as the sun; and men shall be blessed in Him; all nations shall call Him blessed."

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Now or Never.

On the twenty-ninth of December, 1853, the ship Lowell, with nineteen other foundering vessels, was driven ashore at Race point, by a storm that swept the New England coast. The keeper of the lighthouse watching his opportunity, went out between the breaking billows, and extending his arms called upon the poor shipwrecked mariners to fall into them.

Thus one by one he conveyed ashore that helpless and despairing crew. Bravely he trod his tedious pathway, and through the cold spray and the chilling waters rescued every man but one. He was the mate of the ship. The terrors of the scene had turned his brain, and he walked the deck as proudly as when his vessel sat, swan-like, upon the undulating waters. With an air of command he paced the reeling vessel and seemed to have no fear. The brave deliverer of his comrades went to the vessel's side, and amid the roar of the tempest shouted,—"Leave the ship this tide, or you are lost!" The maniac smiled and continued to walk the rocking deck. The last call was disregarded. Soon wave after wave rolled in; the barque was rent and ground in fragments, and the maniac officer perished amid the waves. He might at that time have been saved. He insanely refused the offer, and having refused it there was thenceforth no mortal hand that could rescue him from destruction.

Painful as is the circumstance which we have narrated, it is by no means unparalleled for horror. There are multitudes that inhabit this world, yea, there are those that read this page, whose situations are similar to this. They are in danger. They have launched their barques upon the treacherous tide of time. They have dreamed of safety, and have felt secure. But they are unsafe. The ark of their hopes glides near the lee shore of eternity, and they have never steered for the sunny port of everlasting peace,—the haven of repose. They are far from its quiet scenes. And the tempest is abroad—the tempest that tosses the frail vessels of mortal structure like bubbles on the tide. The deep rolls up its awful swell; the waves lift up their mighty heads; the clouds hang dark on all the arches of the sky; the winds howl in disordered fury o'er the dismal deep; the billows break in thunder on the distant shore; the sea is white with angry foam, and all around tells of ruin, desolation and despair.

But yet, thank God, there is hope. Though you may be without strength—though in you is neither deliverance nor help—though you are all powerless in the storm's dread might,—yet there is hope. There are ebb tides; there are times when circumstances lead us to think; there are times when a rescue is possible. And in such times the life boat of God's mercy is launched, the means of deliverance are set before you. Would you know such a time? Would you find out when you may be saved? "Behold, now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation." To-day, this hour, you may be saved. Now, Jesus stands and calls you to come. Now, he bids you escape for your life. Now, hovering near you, now inviting, beseeching, pleading, he entreats you be saved. Give yourself to him. Fall into his arms. Yield to his requirements. Forsake this wrecked and sinking world. Let go its treasures and its joys,—break away from its thralldom and be saved.

Do you say "I will linger where I am?" If you linger you perish! You are imperilled every moment! The next tide that closes in may be the last. Now you are above the wave,—to-morrow the tempest may howl around and the waves roll as they roll to-day, but they may roll above your head! Why will you remain exposed to the fury of the storm?—why will you still endure the beatings of earth's tempests on your defenceless head?—why will you stay away from peace, and comfort, and quietness?—why will you reject the offered deliverance? Why will you die?

The storm shows no abatement; nothing shall lull its fury,—the pent-up winds of righteous indignation are breaking forth, and soon this world and all its glory shall pass away. Now is the hour of rescue. It may be now or never. Will you "leave the ship this tide," or will you wait till the fierce fury of the tempest rolls above your head and the wild waves of ocean howl your mournful dirge? Will you be saved, or will you perish? God help you to escape now. Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation. "Leave the ship this tide, or you're lost!"

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Clamor.

Uproar and confusion! Often this will be forced upon the humble servants of the Lord who wish to worship in peace. And none of those who are the most inclined to this violation of gospel discipline, (for I am certain that the clamorous person is not, for the time at least, in the spirit of submission to the gospel,) will be willing to admit that they are in fault, or have any evil design. They have some great truth, or vastly important measure, and it must go "if the heavens fall;" and so, like the Jews of our Lord's time, they will clamor and contend for it, as they did for his blood. Such persons find it convenient to put on a holy horror, and shrink with shrieking groans from the touch of such unsanctified allotments; and still must speak and must be heard!

The clamorous person will always have an object, and whether with reason or without, will bend all to that point. The term means speaking without giving a reason, but with a determination to secure the end in view, by continuing to speak and even by preventing others from speaking who could give a reason. See how the old Jews set the example. Pilate, as bad a governor as he was, said, "why? what evil hath he done?" as much as to say, "I require a reason for the action you demand!" "Away with him! crucify him! he is not fit to live!" was the only response—all speaking at once, or drowning the speaker who could and would reason.

How often have we seen this in the church. Sometimes in church meetings; often in prayer meetings, when some propose some doctrine; often in the public service. Is it right? Nay, verily. Some will be continually contending for their own way, and so by exciting sympathy in some others, will secure friends if they make enemies of others, and, at least, have some notoriety.

I have considered it, for years, one of the curses of the cause—the clamoring for points, views and measures, whether they be right or wrong: that is not the way. I have known the best of meetings and sermons all spoiled, as I judge, by a boisterous, clamorous speech at the close. Is there no remedy? Does the person of clamor rule his own spirit? And if not, does he manifest the spirit of the gospel—of christianity? Does loud, boisterous invective, like repeating a demand without argument, look like the Savior, or like his enemies? or like the lynch law executioners of some parts of our country? Answer this, will you, brother, and the next time that minister, or that brother seems to pounce on you, don't reply in a loud, clamorous manner. Keep quiet! Be peaceable! and let the spray and foam dash on; it will dash in vain! The Pharos stands more proudly after all the surf has lashed its base and sides, overleaping its top in vain! So will you, when the boiling wrath of opposers is over.

DELTA.

For the Crisis.

Music.

If you would cheer me in my pilgrimage, let me hear it as it comes gushing forth from away down in the heart's deepest fountain. It is something of a "balm for all my woes." It imparts vigor, renewed vigor to my feeble energies. It lightens my burden, and gives me a sweet foretaste of my heavenly home, and the joys in store for all those who await the coming of ONE long absent. First, the pure, sweet treble notes fall on the ear, then the low, subdued, murmuring tones of the bass commingle; the tenor, to add beauty to beauty, is heard floating in silvery strains through the harmonious air; and last, but not least, the firm, steady, and affectionate alto mingles its melody. All unite—all is harmony, harmony; heavenly, heavenly.

And though our songs are songs of mourning, yet they seem to speak of gladness. They seem to be realized anticipations to the lonely wanderer. They vividly picture to my fancy an innumerable host, and lo! "by the sweet flowing river of life" they are singing a "new song." There the tongue, never here attuned, is chanting immortal anthems in clear, pure, uninterrupted tones, to the Eternal King of glory. Nor man nor angel might add harmony thereto. There the ear that ne'er listened with pleasure to the mingled tones of a choir, now lists with unspeakable delight to the exquisite harmonies of the ransomed ones, as the "immortal notes roll o'er the calm, blue sea." Nor is this all that imagination portrays. Methinks I hear those "golden harps." O, the melody far exceeds that of the "Aolian harp" made by mortal man. It is an ever enduring harp, on which immortal fingers will fall, while new-made domes echo the glorious, heavenly notes. What a scene! It is well worthy its Creator. Well may we devote our time, talents, property, character, and our life even, to be at last accounted worthy a home where all, all are popular, and all is glory.

Do not ask why, amid all sorrow, care, and strife, yon pilgrim smiles. He has a hope man cannot give, nor man can take away. He views the city bright. He has heard the songs they sing there. Brother, sister, are you longing for that glad morn to rise? Are you

"Weary and sick of this world's rude strife?"

Do you often look out upon the pure, blue eastern sky, and sigh that He whom we love tarries so long? Or, when surrounded by friends near, dear, and many, do you rest contented, nor "miss him on earth?" Ah no! not if you love him. O, I long for the night to depart, and the morning to dawn. I am weary of earth and all its present scenes. I do long for unmingled joy. Come, Savior, come! O haste! thou eternal Life Giver! We are dying in the enemy's land. Come quickly!

Come, Savior, come!
Dispel our fears;
Grant us a home
Where fall no tears.

Come, Savior, come!
We long to be
In that blest home,
From sorrow free.

Come, Savior, come!
Creation groans,
While waiting saints
Echo the tones.

Come, Savior, come!
Cries this sad breast,
Grant me a home
Of endless rest.

MARIA.

Danville, C. E.

Do one thing at a time—that's the rule. When you have done slandering your neighbors, then begin to say your prayers.

For the Crisis.

Spiritualism.

The great Apostle Paul informed Timothy that seducing spirits and doctrines of devils should appear in the latter times. The Scripture reads as follows,—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron." I do believe we are living "in the latter times." False teachers, false christ's and false prophets are prophesied of in the Scriptures, and we have had them in the world for many ages; and in addition, we now have "the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth to the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty." Then, says Jesus, "Behold, I come as a thief! Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments."

Seducing spirits appear in new garbs to deceive; they are generally called "rapping" spirits. They appear not very much unlike to European witchcraft which was universally believed in, till the sixteenth century, and are now discoverable in most parts of the earth. That witches and wizards have been found among men is abundantly substantiated by scripture. Let me cite you to a few passages as proof on this point. The first that we notice is found in Lev. 19: 31, "Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards to be defiled by them; I am the Lord your God." In Deut. 18: 10–11 and 12, we have farther proof. "There shall not be found among you, any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observor of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For," the prophet of the Lord says, "all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." By the Jewish law such persons were put to death. Ex. 22: 18; Lev. 20: 27. "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." "A man, or a woman that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall be surely put to death; they shall stone them with stones; their blood shall be upon them."

Witchcraft was looked upon in olden times as a very great crime! It excluded from the kingdom of God! Gal. 5: 20. It is a great sin to place any confidence in persons who profess these powers, to honor, or to aid them by seeking them to interpret dreams, tell fortunes, discover stolen goods &c. Those who thus consult them are abhorred of God.

P. TANDY.

For the Crisis.

Without Hope.

"Without God and without hope"—were the words of fearful import that were impressed on our mind as we gathered with many friends around the coffin and looked in upon the pale still face of one shrouded for the narrow house, who early in life had passed from earth's busy scenes to the region where there is no device, nor knowledge,—where love and hatred are alike perished.

Her life had been, as it were, a summer's day. Affliction and sorrow had never thrown their dark shadows on her pathway. She had left the kind parent's sheltering roof, and the dear home circle, with a tender and devoted husband who could anticipate and supply every want. Her prospects were unclouded. Her plans and hopes stretched far into the future through a long and prosperous life. God was not in all her thoughts. But while eagerly pursuing the baubles of earthly pleasure and wholly engrossed in worldly pursuits, the pale messenger came. That slight indisposition would soon be over—why should she think of dying?—And now she has but a few fleeting hours to live. But the time for the full exercise of reason, and the work of repentance, faith and obedience, is past. Disease grasps every faculty; and with but a dim perception of awful danger and a feeble consciousness of guilt in the sight of her Savior and Judge, she murmurs to the weeping friends bending over her—"I am not prepared as I should be. Don't do as I have done—prepare for death at once." And to her, probation had closed—the day of mercy was ended.

Without the Bible we might have turned away with the infidel exclamation,—"Death is an eternal sleep;" "let us eat and drink for to-morrow we die;" or, with the Spiritualist, have talked of progression and felicity secured to all the human race. But with the revealed will of God to man in our hands, we looked with sadness on the crumbling dust before us, which could not be committed to earth "in sure and certain hope" of a resurrection with the just to glorious immortality.

Strange infatuation!—folly most extreme, to devote the season of health and strength to self and the world, and defer the great work of securing salvation to the hours of pain and weakness,—to hang the hope of heaven on a half conscious prayer gasped with the latest breath!

Alas; how often, how unheeded fall the warning words of the dying upon the ears of the living. Alas; that mortals can forget eternal realities, and chase the mocking phantoms of sinful pleasure,—can neglect the interests of eternity for the concerns of time,—can barter life for death—live without God, and die without hope!

"Hear, O sinner, mercy hails you,
Now with sweetest voice she calls,
Bids you haste to seek the Savior
Ere the storm of vengeance falls;
Hear, O sinner! 'Tis the voice of mercy calls."

A FRIEND.

For the Crisis.

Do You?

Do you pray? I do not mean, do you bow the knee? I do not mean, do you wish merely? I do not mean, do you honor God with your lips, or, in other words, talk at God? I do not mean, do you have the form of prayer, even though eloquent it be, but do you pray?—Are your desires unto God so earnest that you beseech, plead, entreat with your whole heart, wrestling like Jacob of old, unwilling to desist until the blessing comes?

All is not prayer that has the form, that bows the knee and lifts the voice; but this is prayer,—the humble breathings of an anxious heart, as when Job, grievously vexed by Satanic malice, cried unto God, saying, "Hear, I beseech thee,"—as when Nehemiah, weeping o'er Jerusalem's broken walls and burned gates, fasted and prayed, saying, "I beseech thee, O Lord God of heaven, let thine ear be attentive that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant which I pray before thee day and night,"—as when Hezekiah, "sick unto death," turned his face to the wall and entreated for his life, mid sore weeping,—as when Moses besought the Lord for Israel, and chose rather to be blotted from the book of God than be unheard for their forgiveness,—as when the Publican, smiting upon his breast, plead for mercy,—as when Simeon and Anna, just and devout, served the Lord with fastings and prayer, waiting for the consolation of Israel. These were examples of prayer, sincere, fervent, effectual prayer,—prayers that entered into the ears of the Lord God of Sabaoth.

Say now, brother, sister, do you thus pray? When Satan desires you, to sift you, do you, like Job, cry to God? When Christ's cause is suffering, do you, like Nehemiah, sit down to weep and pray day and night? When enemies assault, do you spread the matter before the Lord like Hezekiah when Sennacherib came against him with all his host? When a brother or a sister is overtaken in a fault, do you plead for them as Moses for Israel? When you sin, do you humble yourself like the Publican? While you wait for Israel's Deliverer, are you found where Simeon and Anna were?

Do you pray? Like Daniel do you enter into your chamber three times a day, and do you praise the Lord seven times a day like David? Does your family altar smoke daily with acceptable incense offered unto God? Do you importune God? Are you fervent in your desires? Do you SINCERELY pray? Do you?

[illegible]

From Sr. Crabtree.

Bro. Grant:—I feel again my soul stirred within me to speak to the children through the Crisis. I love God with all my heart. David says, 'I will run in the way of thy commandments, when thou shalt enlarge my heart.' I feel that my heart has been enlarged. It is a cross for me to write, but I feel it to be duty, and I will obey. I wish to speak of what God has done for my soul, commencing at the time that I first found the Lord, which was in the autumn of 1850. I had been seeking him for a long time, and well do I remember the night that I found him. Such peace and joy I never knew before. I was alone. I felt that the yoke of Christ was easy; that whereas once I was blind, now I see; that I could fly to the ends of the earth to serve my blessed Lord and Master. I was then among the Methodists. My sister, who has since fallen asleep, was seeking the Lord at the same time. She united with the Methodists. My joy was so great that I felt that I could not conduct myself with propriety, and I dared not tell any one I had found the Lord, so I only said that I meant to keep seeking. They said, "what makes you laugh so? I wish you would not." I soon left the place and fell into temptation, and when I sought the Lord I found him not. My joy was all gone. My earthly hopes were blighted at the same time, but I felt that but lightly, for I had already sunk into the depths of despair, and only wished that I might find rest in the grave; and I was fully determined to destroy my life. I am thus particular because I do not know but I may comfort some poor child who may have felt as I have.

I went to my earthly home and I believe it was said by some that I was not in my right mind. After a long while I left home, and my mind was taken up with new scenes, being thoughtless about myself, I began to recover from that dreadful state. I then thought I would try to serve and obey God, whether I found him or not; but I soon began to reckon myself the Lord's, and to think about being baptized and joining a church. Then I began to consider, is it my duty to join a church in this world? What church shall I join? There were some good christians in the different churches, and I wished to unite with all that were good. I thought that joining churches created selfishness and a party spirit. Then I beheld their pride and felt that if I joined a church I should uphold them in these things. I felt it duty to be baptized, and wanted to sit down to the table of the Lord. I spoke of this once and was told that I must go to the Freewill Baptist's to communion. I did not know as there was another person that felt as I did, with one exception.

In this way I lived two or three years, and two or three times came near being drawn into as many different churches, but God, as I now see, would not suffer it. Praise his Holy Name. In the autumn of 1853 I was greatly depressed in spirit, and inquired, what does the Lord want of me? where shall I go, and whall shall I do? I could bear it no longer, and, Dec. 23d, I again went to my earthly home. My father was deranged and my mother was taken sick, from which sickness she has never recovered. I then knew it was my duty to remain at home. I began to hear about the Millerites and that they had set another time for the Lord's coming, which was in '54. My mother became very sick and distressed in mind, and almost her continual cry to me and my sister was—"pray for me." Our voices had hardly been heard to call upon God, and our poor father, who had established a family altar, was wandering from home devoid of reason. At this time the Millerites were holding meetings in the place. I felt disposed to take no notice of them. My sister was more favorable and mother said, "send for them to come and pray for me;" and we were all glad to have some one come who could cry aloud unto God. Bro. Ross came, who doubtless remembers it. My sister began to go to meeting and she told me about their singing, &c.; and I began to go. They baptized in the place, and I was baptized, and became a confirmed believer.

I feel that the Lord watched over me as a parent watches over an ignorant, foolish child. Truly he has led me in a way that I knew not. I attended the Carmel Conference last June, but felt tried and tempted, infirm in body and mind—did not enjoy the meeting much, but am glad now that I went. I have enjoyed much of God since. The way grows brighter. My path shines more and more every day. In confidence, I can say, it is the height of my ambition to do the things that please God, and is not that enough? Ye worldlings of the present day, O that you would seek a crown incorruptible, and that fadeth not away. And, to the Brn. and Srs. I would say, if you have any thing to write for the Crisis, write; don't be afraid nor ashamed of your talents. Those that know me would say I had no talent, and I am glad of it. I have nothing but what I received from God, but I mean to improve upon what God has given me that it may not be said of me—"Thou wicked and slothful servant. . . . Take therefore the talent from him and give it to him that hath ten talents."

Maria Crabtree.

South Hope, Me.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 9, 1857.

Campmeeting.

We left Boston, Thursday morning, Aug. 27th, for our appointment at Williamsburg, a town about nine miles west of Northampton. The Lord blessed us during the meetings at W——, and considerable interest was awakened. Two were baptized, and we left some under deep conviction for sin. Many seemed almost persuaded to be christians, but the enemy of all righteousness will spare no effort to prevent the truth from becoming fruitful.

Early Monday morning we left for the Campmeeting at Wilbraham. The day was spent in erecting tents and making other preparations for the reception of our dear Brn. and Srs. who were coming to this feast of tabernacles.

Monday evening, we assembled for the worship of the God of our fathers, and we felt most sensibly that we enjoyed his approbation. The burden of feeling resting upon the minds of those present was expressed by ardent prayer for the salvation of sinners, and earnest exhortation well calculated to arouse to activity in the vineyard of the Lord. All seemed to be of one heart, and fully resolved to unite in laboring for the welfare of all that might come upon the encampment.

Tuesday morning, we listened to an interesting discourse from Bro. H. F. Carpenter, from Rochester, N. Y., well calculated to lead those who listened to seek for more of the spirit of God, and to turn more fully to the Lord for help, and to lean less upon man.

Tuesday afternoon, Bro. A. Ross, from Skowhegan, Me., interested the congregation with evidences showing that the day of the Lord is at hand, and with important practical instruction adapted for these times of peril in which we are now living.

Tuesday evening, Bro. Israel Damman preached a stirring and seasonable discourse, urging all the followers of Jesus to deny themselves of every thing that is not for the glory of God. Those who listened, expressed their approval of the doctrine of holiness by most hearty responses. It is encouraging to see our brethren so anxious to hear pointed, practical preaching.

Wednesday morning the prayer meetings were deeply interesting. Several resolved to become followers of the blessed Jesus, and publicly requested prayers, and the good Lord heard and answered. It is a long time since we attended a campmeeting where such interest was manifested for the conversion of sinners. Bro. George Burnham preached a soul stirring discourse on practical religion, which produced a deep effect upon the congregation.

Wednesday afternoon, Bro. D. T. Taylor preached a most interesting and instructive sermon on the Gospel of Christ, showing very clearly the plan of salvation, as presented in the Bible, and it was evident that the truth took effect in some hearts, from the happy results that followed.

Wednesday evening, Bro. M. Batchelor, from Pownal, Vt., fed the flock of God, and most faithfully warned the sinner, while showing to the audience that Christ had died to give us life, and that none would have eternal life unless they received it from Christ, by obedience to his commandments. The prayer meetings at the close of the sermon were deeply interesting, and several were brought into the liberty of the gospel.

This far our campmeeting has been one of the best we have ever enjoyed. There are some twenty-five tents, and a large gathering of Brn. and Srs. from Maine to Penn., from Rhode Island to Ill., whose bright, beaming countenances, and high sounding praises to the Lord, made the place most heavenly to all the lovers of Jesus. Our meeting is in a delightful grove on a verdant hill, at the base of which flows the limpid waters of the Chickopee river, while the thunder of the railroad engines echo afar, shaking the earth around as they speed on their lightning way. More in our next.

For the Crisis.

Boldness.

In the work of God, if anywhere, men should be bold. Why not? Inspiration calls upon us to "come boldly to the throne of grace," that we may receive the blessing of grace. One of the wisest of men declares, that "the righteous are bold as a lion." One of the primitive servants of God is represented as preaching the Gospel with great boldness. The unbelieving community, at one time, were constrained to confess that certain men "had been with Jesus," when they saw their boldness, and knew them to be unlettered men.

Read the history of the people of God from the beginning. Have they been a shrinking, cowering race? No, verily. A Noah stands boldly forth, the preacher of righteousness, in his time. An Enoch boldly walks with God three hundred years, and proclaims the second advent of the Son of God. Abraham boldly separates himself from his father's house, and, at the call of the Lord, goes forth a stranger into a strange land, and dwells among a sinful people, attending, all the while, to the simple worship of the true God. Moses boldly chooses "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God" than to roll in the luxury and splendor of Egypt "for a season." Joshua boldly declares, "as for me and my house we will serve the Lord." Daniel will hold fast the worship of the true God, against the odds of an entire kingdom. The three worthies will boldly declare, "we will not fall down and worship the golden image." The apostles will preach "with great boldness" the doctrine of the resurrection. The martyrs will boldly confess Christ in the face of fire, fagot, and death. Luther will defend the cause of Christ at Worms, "though there be as many devils there as tiles upon the house tops."

Such is the disposition God loves. Such a disposition makes us God-like. O, children of God, assert your divine right. Hold up your heads. Be bold. Never cower to the Devil or the world. You are kings anticipant! You are, by gift, the owners of "all things." Look the world out of countenance. Put hell to the blush! Ride over all opposition. Unfurl your holy banner on high. Lift up your standard, and triumph in your God. Eternal is your joy. The full measure of essential glory is yours!

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

What a Prayer!—Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper on the ends of them! You don't call that a prayer, do you? Why, you have just made the throne of grace a whipping post, and walked all your neighbors up there with their jackets off to give them a basting. You have'nt just exactly thanked God that you were not as other men are, but then, he might infer as much from your tone and manner. Why, sir, you have been so busy confessing the sins of all your neighbors and brethren that you entirely forgot your own and you have "flung the braid" so constantly about the devoted backs of others, that I am really afraid you will yet be beaten with many stripes yourself.

Such prayers as that never ascend, that's certain; they move horizontally, like clubs, or come down, vertically, on people's heads, like shillalahs. If you want a prayer to reach God's throne just confess your own sins, and ask in humble penitence for forgiveness, and for blessing, and you will find there's more peace brought to your own heart by one publican-like cry—"God be merciful to me a sinner," than by a whole legion of these thorny, cross-grained, pugnacious, snarling, fault-finding, horizontal prayers.

O, draw nigh to God! Get above the clouds, and bask in the sunshine of that love which worketh no ill to its neighbor, which is the end of the commandment, and the fulfulling of the law. Let this be pure and deep, and you can pray without ceasing, without scolding, I assure you.

H. L. H.

Bro. Grant:—I am still striving to do my Master's will in all things, that I may meet with the applause of high heaven. Praise the good Lord for what he has done for me. He is soon coming to reward his faithful ones. Dear Brn. and Srs., let us be faithful to our charge. Be perfect christians, and the blessing of God attend you.

Your brother waiting and hoping for his soon coming Lord,

Geo. A. Streeter.

No. Dana.

For the Crisis.

A Wonder—and yet Essential.

It is a wonder to see even a christian (so called) who acts in obedience to the great, the "new commandment." This precept to love our neighbor, contains the vital and the only full expression of practical Christianity, in its relations to mankind. The forms of its expression vary, however, according to the conditions and relations of those to whom it applies; whether to parents, neighbors, or adversaries. The world will act in opposition to this. They require "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." But Jesus says,—"Resist not evil." Let the assailant "smite thee on the one cheek," and then "the other, also!" If he "take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak, also!" Matt. 5: 38-48.

"Recompense to no man evil for evil. . . Avenge not yourselves. . . . Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord!" Rom. 12. This word obeyed, is practical religion, in our relation to willful and unreasonable men. For, "on the side of the oppressor there is power." The willful bear rule. Hence, every time we strike back, rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing, we provoke violence, and act as do those in power. This is not Christian. It dishonors and denies the Lord as the avenger of all such.

It is a wonder, in one view, seeing this truth is so simple, so essential, and so replete with consolation to the waiting "remnant," that it is so difficult to be learned. Yet no one does learn it, only as he overcomes the world—the flesh and the devil, and becomes, through grace, "a new creature." The principle, however, is divinely true. Its practical importance can not be over-estimated; for all who assume to avenge themselves do forfeit the promise of divine vindication.

The cross consists (often, at least,) in maintaining this "new commandment," in this relation to unreasonable and wicked men. The whole framework of human opinion, action and association, is constructed in opposition to it; and hence nothing seems so hard for flesh and blood, at times, as to be thought wrong, when surely in the right—as unable to justify the right, when conscious of being altogether able to do so to all candid minds. Yet we must "bear the cross." We must be thus "crucified to the world." Professors generally judge like other men—"outward appearance." They judge by the eye of sense, and not by faith. They are governed by popular opinion, and not at all by the word of God, as such. Crucifixion to the world involves feeling, action and a life based on this Gospel precept. This must bring us out into direct collision with the world and all mere formal profession; and, of course, all who disobey Christ, and "return evil for evil," will mis-judge us by their anti-Christian standard.

